BOOK REVIEW DIGEST

1945

LIBRARY
OF THE
SAN FRANCISCO THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY
SAN ANSELMO
CALIFORNIA

103

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2026

https://archive.org/details/book-review-digest_1945-1946

THE BOOK REVIEW DIGEST

FORTY-FIRST ANNUAL CUMULATION

MARCH 1945 TO FEBRUARY 1946 INCLUSIVE

EDITED BY MERTICE M. JAMES
AND DOROTHY BROWN

Property of Graduate Theological Union
Return to
San Francisco Theological Seminary

NEW YORK
THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY
1946

Published 1946
Printed in the United States of America

PREFACE

The forty-first Annual volume of the Book Review Digest contains in one alphabet information on approximately 2850 books, published in the United States or Canada, which were contained in monthly numbers of the Digest from March, 1945, to February, 1946. No single number for February is issued, but new material for that month appears in this volume. No books of 1946 imprint are included here, but reviews from January and February 1946 periodicals for books issued in 1945 have been used when possible.

The list of periodicals from which reviews are excerpted have suffered one casualty: the Boston Globe. One new periodical has been added: The United States Quarterly Book List.

In view of the fact that many books on World war II were entered in the monthly numbers of the Digest of March to August, the subject heading World war, 1939-1945 will be found in this cumulative volume in two forms: for earlier books the heading World war, 1939— is used; for later books the date is closed. It was thought inadvisable to reset so many lines of type. In the index all books will be under the heading: World war, 1939-1945.

Publications from which Digests of Reviews are made

Am Anthropol—American Anthropologist. $6. American Anthropological Association, B. Weitzner, American Museum of Natural History, New York

Am Chem Soc J—Journal of the American Chemical Society. $8.50. American Chemical Society, 1155 16th St, NW, Washington 6, D.C.

Am Econ R—American Economic Review. Paul T. Homan, managing ed. $5; free to members. American Economic Assn, Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill.

Am Hist R—American Historical Review. Guy Stanton Ford, managing ed. $5; free to members of the American Historical Assn. Macmillan Co, 60 Fifth Av, New York 11

Am J Psychol—American Journal of Psychology. $6.50. Morrill Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y.

Am J Pub Health—American Journal of Public Health and The Nation's Health. C.-E. A. Winslow, ed. $5. American Public Health Assn, 1790 Broadway, New York 19

Am J Soc—American Journal of Sociology. Herbert Blumer, ed. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

Am Pol Sci R—American Political Science Review. Frederic A. Ogg, managing ed. $5; free to members. American Political Science Assn, 450-458 Ahnaip St, Menasha, Wis.

Am Soc R—American Sociological Review. $4 (to libraries $3; to students $2.50) American Sociological Society, C. Taeuber, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D.C.

Ann Am Acad—Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. Thorsten Sellin, ed. $5; free to members. 3457 Walnut St, Philadelphia 4

Atlantic—Atlantic Monthly. $5. Atlantic Monthly Co, 8 Arlington St, Boston 16

Book Week—Chicago Sun, 400 W. Madison St, Chicago, Ill.

Booklist—Booklist. $3. American Library Assn, 520 N Michigan Av, Chicago 11

Bookmark—Bookmark. 50c New York State Library, University of the State of New York press, Albany

Canadian Forum—Canadian Forum. Eleanor Godfrey, managing ed. $2. Canadian Forum, Ltd, 16 Huntley St, Toronto 5

Canadian Hist R—Canadian Historical Review. $2. University of Toronto Press, Toronto 5

Cath World—Catholic World. James M. Gillis, ed. $4. Missionary Society of St Paul the Apostle, 401 W 59th St, New York 19

Chem & Eng N—Chemical and Engineering News. $2. American Chemical Society, 1155 16th St, NW, Washington 6, D.C.

Chem & Met Eng—Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering. $3. McGraw-Hill Publishing Co, Inc, 330 W 42d St, New York 18

Christian Century—Christian Century. Charles Clayton Morrison, ed. $5. Christian Century Press, 407 S Dearborn St, Chicago 5

Christian Science Monitor (Atlantic ed)—Christian Science Monitor. $12. Christian Science Publishing Society, 1 Norway St, Boston 15

Churchman—Churchman. Guy Emery Shipler, ed. $5. Churchman Co, 425 Fourth Av, New York 16

Class Philol—Classical Philology. $4. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

Commonweal—Commonweal. Edward Skillin, Jr. and Philip Burnham, eds. $5. Commonweal Pub. Co, Inc, 386 Fourth Av, New York 16

Crozer Q—Crozer Quarterly. $1.50. Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester, Pa.

Current Hist—Current History. D. G. Redmond, ed. $3. Events Pub. Co, Inc, 135 S Second St, Philadelphia 6

Economist—Economist. £3. Economist Newspaper, Ltd, Brettenham House, Lancaster Place, Strand, London, WC 2

El School J—Elementary School Journal. R. W. Tyler and others, eds. $2.50. Dept. of Education Publications, University of Chicago, 5835 Kimbark Av, Chicago 37

Eng N—Engineering News-Record. $5. McGraw-Hill Publishing Co, Inc, 330 W 42d St, New York 18

Eng Hist R—English Historical Review. 30s. Longmans, Green & Co, Ltd, 43 Albert Drive, London, SW 19 ($7.50. 55 Fifth Av, New York 3)

Ethics—Ethics. $4. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

Foreign Affairs—Foreign Affairs. Hamilton Fish Armstrong, ed. $5. Council on Foreign Relations, Inc, 58 E 68th St, New York 21

Geog R—Geographical Review. $5. American Geographical Society, Broadway & 156th St, New York 32

Harvard Business R—Harvard Business Review. $5. Harvard Business Review, Soldiers Field, Boston 63

Hibbert J—Hibbert Journal. 10s. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd, 40 Museum St, London, WC 1 ($2.50. Leroy Phillips, 178 Tremont St, Boston)

Horn Bk—Horn Book. Bertha E. Mahony, ed. $2.50. Horn Book, Inc, 248 Boylston St, Boston 16

J Geol—Journal of Geology. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

J Home Econ—Journal of Home Economics. Helen P. Hostetter, ed. $3. American Home Economics Assn, 620 Mills Bldg, Washington 6, D.C.

J Philos—Journal of Philosophy. $4. 515 W 116th St, New York 27

J Phys Chem—The Journal of Physical Chemistry. $10. Williams & Wilkins Co, Mt Royal & Guilford Avs, Baltimore 2

J Pol Econ—Journal of Political Economy. Jacob Viner and F. H. Knight, eds. $3.50 University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

J Religion—Journal of Religion. $4. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

Kirkus—Bulletin from Virginia Kirkus' Bookshop Service. Service basis. 38 Bank St, New York

Library J—Library Journal. Karl Brown, ed. $5. R. R. Bowker Co, 62 W 45th St, New York 19

Library Q—Library Quarterly. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

Management R—Management Review. James O. Rice, ed. $5. American Management Assn, 330 W 42d St, New York 18

Manchester Guardian—Manchester Guardian. 78s. Manchester Guardian, 3 Cross St, Manchester; Guardian Newspapers, Inc, 220 W 42d St, New York

Mod Philol—Modern Philology. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

Nation—Nation. Freda Kirchwey, ed. $5. Nation Associates, Inc, 20 Vesey St, New York 7

New Eng Q—New England Quarterly. $4. M. Ellis, 200 Stevens Hall, Orono, Me.

New Repub—New Republic. Bruce Bliven and others, eds. $5. Editorial Publications, Inc, 40 E 49th St, New York 17

New Statesman & Nation—New Statesman and Nation. 32s 6d. 10 Great Turnstile, London, WC 1 ($7 International News Co, 131 Varick St, New York 13)

N Y New Tech Bks—New York Public Library New Technical Books. 25c N Y Public Library, Fifth Av & 42d St, New York

N Y Times—New York Times Book Review. $2. N Y Times Co, Pub, Times Square, New York 18

New Yorker—New Yorker. H. W. Ross, ed. $6. F-R. Pub. Corp, 25 W 43d St, New York 18

Pacific Affairs—Pacific Affairs. $2. 1 E 54th St, New York 22

Poetry—Poetry. Peter DeVries and Marion Strobel, eds. $3. 232 E Erie St, Chicago 11

Pol Sci Q—Political Science Quarterly. John A. Krout, managing ed. $5; free to members. Academy of Political Science, Columbia University, New York 27

Sat R of Lit—Saturday Review of Literature. Norman Cousins, ed. $5. Saturday Review Associates, Inc, 25 W 45th St, New York 19

School & Society—School and Society. William C. Bagley, ed. $5; free to members. Society for the Advancement of Education, Inc, 15 Amsterdam Av, New York 23

School Arts—School Arts. Pedro deLemos, ed. $4. School Arts, Printers Bldg, 44 Portland St, Worcester 8, Mass.

School R—School Review. R. W. Tyler and others, eds. $2.50 University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

Scientific Bk Club R—Scientific Book Club Review. Subscription. Scientific Book Club, Inc, 80 Lafayette St, New York

Social Educ—Social Education. $2. 1201 Sixteenth St, NW, Washington 6, D.C.

Social Forces—Social Forces. $4. Williams & Wilkins Co, Baltimore 2

Social Studies—Social Studies. Arthur C. Bining, ed. $2. McKinley Publishing Co, 809-811 N 19th St, Philadelphia

Special Libraries—Special Libraries. $5. Special Libraries Assn, 31 East Tenth St, New York 3

Spec—Spectator. The Spectator, Ltd. 30s. 99 Gower St, London, WC 1 ($7 International News Co, 131 Varick St, New York 13)

Springf'd Republican—Springfield Republican. $14. Republican Publishing Co, 32 Cypress St, Springfield, Mass.

Subscription Bks Bul—Subscription Books Bulletin. $2. American Library Assn, 520 N Michigan Av, Chicago 11

Survey—Survey Midmonthly, Paul Kellogg, ed. $3. Survey Associates, Inc, 112 E 19th St, New York 3

Survey G—Survey Graphic. Paul Kellogg, ed. $3. Survey Associates, Inc, 112 E 19th St, New York 3

Theatre Arts—Theatre Arts. Rosamond Gilder, ed. $3.50. Theatre Arts, Inc, 130 W 56th St, New York 19

Time—Time. Henry R. Luce, ed. $5. Time, Inc, 330 E 22d St, Chicago 16

Times [London] Lit Sup—Times Literary Supplement. 17s 4d. Times Publishing Co. Ltd, Printing House Square, London, E.C. 4; $4.15. The Times (London), North American Office, 280 Broadway, New York

U S Quarterly Bkl—United States Quarterly Book List. Joseph P. Blickensderfer, ed. $1.25 Supt. of Documents, U S Govt Printing Off, Washington 25, D.C.

Weekly Book Review—New York Herald Tribune Books. $1. N Y Tribune, Inc, Publisher, 230 W 41st St, New York

Yale R n s—Yale Review. Helen MacAfee, managing ed. $3. Yale Review, 143 Elm St, New Haven 7, Conn.

In addition to the above list the Book Review Digest sometimes quotes from Cleveland Open Shelf; Columbia Law Review; Harvard Law Review; Publishers' Weekly; Review of Scientific Instruments; Wisconsin Library Bulletin; Yale Law Journal; and other bulletins and papers.

Explanations

The descriptive note is separated from critical notices of a book by a dash.

The plus and minus signs preceding the name of the magazine indicate the degree of favor or disfavor of the entire review.

In the reference to a magazine, the first number refers to the volume, the next to the page, the letters to the date and the last figures to the number of words in the review.

Publishers' Directory will be found at the end of this number.

Book Review Digest

Devoted to the Valuation of Current Literature

Cumulation of monthly numbers March, 1945—February, 1946

ABBETT, ROBERT WILLIAM. Engineering contracts and specifications. 188p $2.25 Wiley

620.03 Engineering—Contracts and specifications 45-1122

"The purpose of this book is to present some of the legal and business aspects of the engineering profession in compact form suitable for reference and textbook use. The scope of the book was determined by a course in Contracts and Specifications taught by the author in the School of Engineering, Columbia University." Pref

Booklist 41:205 Mr 15 '45

"Prepared primarily as a textbook, this small volume will be found useful by those concerned with preparation of contracts and specifications for buildings and heavy construction."

+ Eng N 134:143 My 3 '45 150w

Library J 70:32 Ja 1 '45 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:7 Ja '45

ABBOTT, JANE LUDLOW (DRAKE) (MRS FRANK ABBOTT). Mary Patten's daughters. 256p $2 Lippincott

45-4142

Character study of a proud, hard woman, and her two daughters. Mary Patten never wanted anything she could not own, so when her beloved younger daughter married for love a man not of Mary's choosing, a subtle war was on. But her unloved older daughter, who had had her eyes opened thru contact with an understanding friend, took a hand in the family affairs, and helped her young sister to break the silver cord.

"Easily flowing, adroitly put together novel which, if essentially shallow, is nevertheless skillful light fiction and there isn't much of that. . . The story moves with a breezy zest. Mrs. Abbott's characters speak as you would expect them to and react to situations in an animated fashion so that for the most part they come alive, although the dimension of depth is lacking. Perhaps it is for that reason and the fact that the plot, despite its well balanced scenes, is too weighted with coincidence, too obviously manipulated, that the story is not a deeply moving one even in a sentimental sense." Dorsha Hayes

+ — Book Week p12 Je 3 '45 230w

Booklist 41:302 Je 15 '45

Kirkus 13:114 Mr 15 '45 90w

Reviewed by Andrea Parke
N Y Times p16 Je 10 '45 110w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p14 Je 3 '45 90w

ABEND, HALLETT. Treaty ports. 271p map $3 Doubleday

382 China—Commerce. China—Foreign relations. Harbors—China 44-7250

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"While the book makes no pretensions to being the product of original research, it is a serious work which reveals substantial use of standard histories. It is neutral in tone but not without forthright comment upon events and policies." H. S. Quigley

+ Am Hist R 50:539 Ap '45 650w

"Among the best informed, most objective and most uniformly interesting correspondents now busily engaged in making the American reader acquainted with foreign lands is Hallett Abend. His latest book depicts the pageant of the great Oriental cities, known as treaty ports because first opened to Europeans by the treaty of Nanking in 1842. His pictures are fascinating; but he gives us much more than a superficial description of what meets the eye, speaking plainly even upon such touchy subjects as religion and politics."

+ Cath World 160:571 Mr '45 160w

Foreign Affairs 23:342 Ja '45 30w

"Possessing a keen eye for local color and unusual skill in transferring it to paper, Mr. Abend has also exceptional knowledge of Far Eastern life. His book deserves a place on the shelves both of the specialist's and the general reader's collection of modern books on China." E. M. Gull

+ Pacific Affairs 18:194 Je '45 280w

"Often amusing, this book is a good corrective for the sentimental nonsense about China which unsophisticated Americans have absorbed in such vast quantities of late." Bruno Lasker

+ Survey G 34:134 Ap '45 150w

ABERCROMBIE, LAURENCE ALLEN, and PRATT, FLETCHER. My life to the destroyers. 157p il $2.75 Holt

940.545 World war, 1939—Naval operations. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 44-51271

Captain Abercrombie was skipper of the destroyer Drayton when the war began. His ship was the first American warship, after Pearl Harbor, to come in contact with the Japanese; she was present at Midway, Cape Esperance, and the massacre at Tassafronga. Besides describing personal experiences of the captain, the book pictures life aboard this type of vessel in war.

"Throughout his book, Abercrombie indicates a sharp knowledge of human beings. Obviously, he knew his crew to a T, and he etches many a picture of these fine Navy men as he observed them in the stress of months of alertness awaiting the enemy's appearance. There are passages of delightful humor, as well as some of somber thoughtfulness. And there are pages that read like a thriller. Those who know Capt. Abercrombie, as is my good fortune, will see that man in every page of this excellent book. This is his story as I have heard him tell it. Fletcher Pratt, Abercrombie's associate in this venture, has done well

Subject and title index at end of alphabet

ABERCROMBIE, L. A.—Continued
to give the good captain his head with not even a perceptible check on the reins. The result is a corker of a story." W. H. Fetridge

+ Book Week p8 Ja 21 '45 500w

Booklist 41:136 Ja 1 '45

"The Commodore is a human being first and a Navy man second, but he's all the more an excellent officer because of that fact. He knows how to get along with his men—he and his bos'n teamed up to buy phonograph records on some sort of a coupon arrangement. He knows how to talk to you and me about naval action. This is the best book about destroyers we know of." E. A. Laycock

+ Boston Globe p15 Ja 24 '45 400w

Foreign Affairs 23:693 Jl '45 30w

Kirkus 12:475 O 15 '44 150w

"A fine combination of naval experience and classic reporting with the result—a sound, graphic but human picture of what makes the Navy. The sketches, brief but vivid, of the responsibilities of the different officers and the relation of the preliminary detail to the final action provides a revealing picture of this phase of naval service. The quality of the personnel as shown here is a cause for pride. For all libraries and for anyone who knows or wants to know what the Navy means." M. C. Manley

+ Library J 70:32 Ja 1 '45 70w

"The one kind of war book of which there can never be a surfeit is the war memoir, the narrative of personal experience. The two qualities required of the author are an above-average sensitivity and a record of participation in events worth relating. The latter is not likely to be lacking in a man who led destroyers during the first year of the Pacific war and who won the equivalent of three Navy crosses; and so far as sensitiveness is concerned the chief author of the present volume, Capt. A. L. Abercrombie is clearly not a run-of-the-mill naval officer. . . Mr. Pratt's contribution to the book is apparent in the writing style, which is typically spirited and vivid, though sometimes careless." Bernard Brodie

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 7 '45 1100w

"All in all, this brisk, colloquial compendium and adventure tale can be highly recommended." Roger Shaw

+ Sat R of Lit 28:32 F 17 '45 150w

"Such an experience should make good reading, and so it does, in part. There are some amusing and intimate accounts of life aboard destroyers, eccentricities of officers and crew, problems of liberty, hygiene, food and pay, and one chapter describes brilliantly just what a destroyer is and does. On the other hand, there are too many references to people, incidents, habits which will interest only the actors. And narratives of engagements are given in matter-of-fact style which tends toward prosiness." P. J. Searles

+ — Weekly Book Review p10 D 31 '44 370w

Wis Lib Bul 41:37 Mr '45

ABERLY, JOHN. Outline of missions. 306p $3.50 Muhlenberg press

266.09 Missions 45-8367

"After a general survey of the expansion of Christianity in ancient and medieval times, and of the Catholic and Protestant missionary movements since the discovery of America, the second and principal part of the book is devoted to a field-by-field account of foreign missionary activities, achievements and prospects." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 62:1259 N 14 '45 80w

"There are too many details packed into this book to make for extended reading, but the material is well organized and the result is a useful handbook on the spread of Christianity and a good jumping-off place for an intensive study of Christian beginnings in any part of the world. In which connection, the author has appended a reading list of more specialized books." N. K. B.

+ — N Y Times p14 D 23 '45 230w

ABRAHAM, HERBERT. Asphalts and allied substances; their occurrence, modes of production, uses in the arts and methods of testing. 5th ed 2v il $20 Van Nostrand

665.4 Asphalt 45-2528

"Fifth edition of a standard text and reference book. Details of every method and process for producing, utilizing and testing asphalts, tars, pitches and derived products. Sources of material, raw materials and industrial products. Manufacturing processes and methods of analysis described. Bibliography. Indexes to subjects, specifications, names and patents." (Library J) For fourth edition see Book Review Digest, 1938.

"The fifth edition of this treatise maintains its eminent position as the most important and valuable book in its field. It has been expanded so greatly since the fourth edition that it now is published in two volumes. Many references are of as recent date as 1944. The division is a happy one, since in one volume it would have been very unwieldy." J. S. Miller

+ Chem & Eng N 23:1028 Je 10 '45 300w

Reviewed by D. L. Katz

Chem & Met Eng 52:215 Je '45 200w

Library J 70:307 Ap 1 '45 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:4 Ja '45

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:49 Je '45 240w

ABRAHAMS, WILLIAM MILLER. Interval in Carolina. 181p $2 Simon & Schuster

45-9572

Brief love story of a young army sergeant, just out of Harvard, and a nice Southern girl. For six weeks while Sergeant Young was stationed at the Carolina camp he tried to forget Nora, the northern girl who had never worked at all, and found it very easy, when Jeanie, who worked in a store, was near. Then because he realized that it was too difficult to reconcile his two worlds, the sergeant gave up Jeanie.

"Shattering banality told in a style that is sometimes silky and glib, sometimes breathless with unfinished sentences, sometimes misty with sophomoric rhetoric." Paul Peters

— Book Week p4 S 9 '45 500w

"A not too sentimental interlude, presented with no pretense and no illusion, with no justification but some poignancy. . . None of the shock tactics of Shore Leave nor of its more sensational appeal, this is a modulated, clean-cut transcript of today."

Kirkus 13:207 My 15 '45 170w

"A first novel, better written than most. Promising perhaps, but not important." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 70:530 Je 1 '45 70w

"A fine short novel, with a freshness and a poignancy all its own." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p6 S 2 '45 550w

"The reader will have to be fairly grim not to take some pleasure in the author's surprised discovery that there is good to be found so far from the avant-garde circles of Cambridge, but his well-wishers will regret that somebody (his publishers, for instance) didn't advise him just to scribble the episode in a notebook and let it go at that. It will be pleasant to hear again from Mr. Abrahams once he has settled down."

+ — New Yorker 21:62 Ag 25 '45 100w

"'Interval in Carolina' is a sensitively remembered and beautifully written story of the war Mr. Abrahams and twelve million others fought when they were young. It possesses, as few war books do, the full sense of youth and love and war and the impermanence of them all." Jonathan Daniels

+ Sat R of Lit 28:27 O 13 '45 220w

Reviewed by Herbert Kupferberg

Weekly Book Review p8 Ag 26 '45 500w

ABRAHAMSEN, DAVID. Crime and the human mind. 244p $3 Columbia univ. press

364.34 Criminal psychology A45-403

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Reviewed by W. C. Reckless
Am J Soc 51:352 Ja '46 400w
Reviewed by E. H. Sutherland
Ann Am Acad 238:226 Mr '45 400w

"Students of criminology and psychiatry will find it a plainly worded, unstilted document."
+ Current Hist 8:440 My '45 70w

"The publisher's blurb to the contrary, 'Crime and the Human Mind' is neither 'the first volume to deal comprehensively with the psychiatric aspects of crime' nor is it 'a revolutionary approach to the problem.' This is not to say that the book is devoid of merit, though its virtues are more apt to appeal to the professional worker in criminology than to the layman interested in the aberrations of the criminal mind. . . As for the author's notion that criminals have an unconscious itch to be punished . . . it can be argued just as plausibly that ineptness or inexperience is the real reason criminals leave clues. But why expect perfection from criminals when it exists nowhere else? Dr. Abrahamsen is much more reasonable when he is making practical suggestions for the psychiatric examination of criminals and outlining procedures for their classification. In these respects, at least, the author's book is a contribution to the literature of criminal psychiatry." S. G. Kling
— + N Y Times p26 F 11 '45 340w

"Thoughtful and useful book. . . Dr. Abrahamsen's ample and varied experience and an uncommonly rich familiarity with the extensive literature of criminology, psychiatry, and anthropology in many languages qualify him to speak with authority." Sheldon Glueck
+ Sat R of Lit 28:12 Ap 7 '45 1000w
School & Society 61:79 F 3 '45 30w

"Many teachers in the field of criminology, especially those interested in juvenile offenders, will value this volume highly as a reference work." L. M. Brooks
+ Social Forces 24:122 O '45 800w

"Space limitations make it difficult to do justice to so deserving a book. The author is well-equipped for the task he has set himself. . . The exposition is illuminated throughout by relevant and pointed case-history summaries. The author's provision of a rich bibliography of references to important works in many languages deserves the reader's thanks." Sheldon Glueck
+ Survey 81:158 My '45 750w

"While certain portions of the book deal with technical problems of the medical and psychological professions, the volume as a whole will nonetheless be of great value to members of other professions concerned with crime."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:39 Mr '45 160w
Reviewed by Carl Binger
Weekly Book Review p12 F 4 '45 800w

ABRAHAMSEN, DAVID. Men, mind, and power. 155p $2 Columbia univ. press
914.3 National characteristics, German. Germany—Nazi movement A46-263

A psychiatrist, a student particularly of the criminal mentality, examines the psychology of the German people, the Nazis, their leaders, and their collaborators in other countries. In conclusion the author presents some general principles to be followed in the re-education of Germany.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 D 16 '45 230w
Kirkus 13:487 N 1 '45 170w
Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 N '45 360w

ADAMIC, LOUIS. A nation of nations. 399p il $3.50 Harper
325.73 U.S.—Foreign population. U.S.—Race question 45-9644

An informal rewriting of American history stressing the part played by races and nationalities other than Anglo-Saxon. The author's thesis is that, consciously and unconsciously, historians, essayists, novelists, and editors have looked upon the American way of life as White-Protestant-Anglo-Saxon in origin whereas it is actually founded on a wide diversity of cultures and beliefs.

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson
Book Week p32 N 11 '45 700w
Booklist 42:103 D 1 '45
Christian Science Monitor p16 N 17 '45 600w
Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '45
Kirkus 13:387 S 1 '45 250w
Reviewed by E. N. Saveth
Nation 161:666 D 15 '45 480w

"Adamic wants to give everybody ancestors, everybody an emotionally warming background which will make them feel as much in rapport with their surroundings as the townspeople of Slovenia. In an attempt to do this, he has written the kind of history that stirs the inverted inferiority complex, the Chauvinism latent or more than latent in all minority groups. His basic organization makes it hard for him to avoid producing such an effect. Instead of dividing the history of the United States by periods—periods of immigrations, to follow his thesis—he divides it into chapters which chronicle one nationality at a time. These chapters frequently read like a catalogue of claims for self-congratulation on the part of the particular minority. . . Adamic's concern to give everybody ancestors as edifying as William Bradford bends his major thesis toward an extreme which the facts simply will not permit." E. F. Goldman
New Repub 113:680 N 19 '45 1500w

"The first thing to be said about Louis Adamic's 'A Nation of Nations' is that it contains fascinating material on every page. The second thing to be said about it is that Mr. Adamic persists in raising issues that were threshed out and presumably settled as far back as a generation ago. . . Mr. Adamic's book is filled with splendid stories. But the net effect of it may be to retard development of what Crèvecoeur called 'the American, this new man.' " John Chamberlain
+ — N Y Times p7 D 2 '45 1550w

"Without question, 'A Nation of Nations' makes for exciting reading; it pulsates with the story of what the men from the mines and the universities, from the farm and the mart have done here. All is written from Louis Adamic's usual sympathetic viewpoint as a lover of mankind. In this book, as in his other volumes, he evidences his ability to sense the nobler spirit of his fellowman to present it dramatically." Harold Fields
+ Sat R of Lit 28:38 N 10 '45 1350w
School & Society 62:327 N 17 '45 60w

"While Mr. Adamic's book performs a valuable and praiseworthy service, it seems to me that he comes dangerously close to over-playing his hand. Being as completely non-Anglo-Saxon as he is I have no sort of objection to his walloping English complacency with both fists; but when he considers the Jews only under national categories without regard to their racial culture, I think he goes a little far, although I am no Zionist. More than that, when he says that the Scotch-Irish are mythical and that all the Irish are the same, he implies that there is no difference between, say, Bishop O'Leary and an Orangeman. Well, he can tell that to the Bishop if he likes; I would be afraid to." G. W. Johnson
+ — Weekly Book Review p3 N 11 '45 800w
Wis Lib Bul 41:124 D '45

ADAMS, ANSEL EASTON. Born free and equal. 112p il $2; pa $1 U.S. camera 940.547273 Japanese in the U.S. Concentration camps. Photographic books 45-2975

This large-size pamphlet in text and photographs "tells the story of several thousand loyal Americans who, because they happen to have Japanese faces, have been locked up for three years—unconditionally—in the Manzanar Relocation Center in Inyo County, Calif. The Manzanar Center is one of several concentration camps established for this purpose; and while they have been humanely administered

ADAMS, A. E.—Continued
by some of the finest people who ever served as government officials, they are, none the less, concentration camps." (Weekly Book Review)

Christian Science Monitor p14 F 17 '45 450w
Foreign Affairs 23:695 Jl '45 20w
Springf'd Republican p4d F 11 '45 240w

"Ansel Adams does a graphic, exciting job in which clear, cogent writing and expert photography complement each other. It should be widely read." Louis Adamic
+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ja 28 '45 550w

ADAMS, ARTHUR STANTON, and HILDING, GEORGE DEWEY. Fundamentals of thermodynamics. 289p il $4 Harper
536.7 Thermodynamics 45-4888

"This text for engineering students is a revision of the authors' earlier work of the same title (1937). It presents the basic principles and methods of thermodynamics, without emphasizing their application in any particular field. The topics covered include: Heat and work; Availability of heat energy; Thermodynamic properties of gases; Compressed air; Internal combustion engines, and Steam cycles. Problems are given at the end of each chapter." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Library J 70:636 Jl '45 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:31 Ap '45

ADAMS, JAMES TRUSLOW, ed. Album of American history: [v2] 1783-1853. 418p il maps $7.50 Scribner
973 U.S.—History—1783-1865. U.S.—Social life and customs (44-706)

The second volume in this pictorial history of the United States covers the years from 1783 to 1853, roughly the period of westward expansion. In some 1300 pictures of various types, with brief text, it presents a chronological panorama of American politics, social life and customs, and economic development. For first volume see Book Review Digest, 1944.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 S 30 '45 180w
Booklist 42:54 O 15 '45
Christian Science Monitor p14 O 6 '45 350w
Reviewed by W. P. Sears
Churchman 159:15 N 15 '45 150w
Reviewed by C. B. Palmer
N Y Times p3 S 16 '45 1000w

"The book is literally crammed with good pictures and, with all its faults, it is one that no lover of American history, life, or manners will want to be without." Roger Butterfield
+ Sat R of Lit 28:38 O 6 '45 700w
Springf'd Republican p4d S 23 '45 350w

"Mr. R. V. Coleman, who prepared the running text, has permitted the pictures to tell their own story. His own commentary is marked by that wit which is characteristic of intelligent brevity. Seldom does he err by failing to give the reader sufficient information concerning an illustration. . . It is difficult to understand why schools and schoolteachers are so lightly dismissed and why no attempt was made to exploit the great riches of political cartoons. Perhaps both omissions will be corrected in the next volume of the 'Album.'" J. A. Krout
+ — Weekly Book Review p2 S 16 '45 900w
Wis Lib Bul 41:111 N '45

ADAMS, JAMES TRUSLOW. Big business in a democracy. 291p $2.75 Scribner
338 U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Industries and resources. General motors corporation 45-7653

"This book is a brief study of American 'big business' as a function of American democratic conditions. The book is not on economics or on history. . . It is solely on the American type of big business as not only a characteristic but an integral and functional part of the whole complex of American facts." (p 3) Index.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 S 16 '45 550w
Booklist 42:31 O 1 '45
Christian Science Monitor p14 S 13 '45 420w

"From start to finish it's pretty shallow stuff—so shallow that I challenge even the vigilant editors of the New Yorker to duplicate the following little gem from any author of equal stature and equal reputation: 'Perhaps our big business is, after all, the Mount Arrarat on which the ark of free civilization is to rest after the world flood.' . . I apologize for writing a partisan review of a very partisan book, and now, while Mr. Adams climbs to the security of Mount Arrarat to scan the wreckage of the flood, I think I'll go out to the garden." G. J. Higgins
Commonweal 42:530 S 14 '45 1300w
Kirkus 13:289 Jl 1 '45 340w
Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 161:378 O 13 '45 550w
Reviewed by Daniel Aaron
New Repub 113:379 S 24 '45 1350w

"Mr. Adams is an urbane proponent of his special point of view. He is good company. And no fair-minded reader, whether or not he wholly agrees, will doubt Mr. Adams' statement that these are his 'personal, honest and unpaid-for opinions.'" R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p6 S 9 '45 1350w

"If his reasoning at times shows a ravelled sleeve, if he tends to breeze past some of the more serious allegations against big business, at least Mr. Adams' enthusiasm is boundless and, as he carefully points out, entirely gratuitous. It adds up to a very pretty compliment indeed, and industry, never exactly surfeited with unpaid-for valentines, ought to be very proud."
+ — New Yorker 21:86 S 15 '45 160w
Reviewed by A. M. Lee
Sat R of Lit 28:36 S 22 '45 1050w
Reviewed by Alzada Comstock
Springf'd Republican p4d D 16 '45 420w

"A hurried, highly personal, somewhat repetitious and admittedly inadequate attempt to make twins out of big business and democracy." E. S. Grant
Survey G 34:453 N '45 600w
Wis Lib Bul 41:109 N '45

ADAMS, SAMUEL HOPKINS. A. Woollcott; his life and his world. 386p $3.50 Reynal
B or 92 Woollcott, Alexander 45-4915

Detailed biography of Alexander Woollcott, by the Hamilton alumnus who got the younger man his first job with the New York Times. The work is based on personal acquaintance and many interviews. It is filled with anecdotes covering the whole of Woollcott's life from 1887 to 1943.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 176:127 Jl '45 550w
Reviewed by Dorothy Parker
Book Week p1 Je 10 '45 1600w
Booklist 41:321 Jl 1 '45

"'I had an affection for Aleck Woollcott,' writes Samuel Hopkins Adams, 'often admiring, sometimes complicated with shudders.' As one reads Mr. Adams's A. Woollcott: His Life and His World, the author's shudders may at times become for the reader positive convulsions. Yet the book is fascinating. For it explains much about one of the most spotlighted figures of American public life of the last 30 years, who, while indubitably a poseur, a vulgarian, and an exhibitionist, was a courageously outspoken liberal, a champion of the downtrodden, and an encourager of promising and talented young people, both verbally and financially—a fact he was often at pains to conceal. Practically no one, Mr. Adams shows, had anything but extreme opinions about his hero." M. W. B.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 2 '45 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '45

Reviewed by Cuthbert Wright
Commonweal 42:290 Jl 6 '45 1200w

"A better rounded portrait emerges than from The Woollcott Letters, in this examination in the light of personal liking and knowledge, which is neither prettified nor knife-in-the-back, but gives a detailed picture of the man, friend and enemy, showman and salesman."

+ Kirkus 13:104 Mr 1 '45 300w

Reviewed by H. G. Kelley
Library J 70:529 Je 1 '45 110w

"Although there are a few inevitable but unimportant errors in the book . . . Mr. Adams has done his job ably and interestingly. Alexander Woollcott, despite everything, supplied an enlivening moment in a racy and enlivening chapter of American culture, and the Adams biography serves him well." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 112:795 Je 4 '45 800w

"The immediate temptation, of course, is to review the flamboyant Mr. Woollcott, rather than the sober, well-considered book that Samuel Hopkins Adams has written about him. The writer of a good biography—and Mr. Adams has written a very good one—dooms himself to obscurity. The fuller his research, the deeper his comprehension of his subject, the more rounded the portrait that emerges, the less you see of the biographer. Biography, in the end, is journalism; and Mr. Adams is a good journalist." Russell Maloney

+ N Y Times p1 Je 3 '45 1550w

"Mr. Adams' biography of Woollcott is not precisely a brilliant job. It is not in the least well written and it does not do much, as they say, to recapture the atmosphere of the period. Mr. Adams was too old to be a part of the period—he belonged to an earlier era—but this has, in some ways, its advantages: it gives him a sober detachment. He succeeds in seeing around his subject, without either allowing himself to be irritated by Woollcott's unpleasant traits or catching his contagious sentimentality. The book is written in good spirit, yet not in the spirit of a Woollcott fan." Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 21:73 Je 9 '45 1350w

"Mr. Adams has written an orthodox, old-fashioned, born-lived-died chronicle, full of names of people and places—a chronicle which makes vivid reading and presents, as near as may be, a complete picture of one human being acting out his part against the backdrop of his day. That that day was, and still is, Mr. Adams's, and that Mr. Adams knew his subject as intimately as many of the sources he consulted, and had for that subject an affection and admiration that did not rob him of discretion, understanding, and detachment, are factors which have augmented his capacity to do the sound job he has done. . . As is inevitable with the biographer of a contemporary, Mr. Adams has put himself at the mercy of those among the continuing contemporary who remember that such-and-such an incident occurred not on February 28, but on February 29." J. T. Winterich

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:9 Je 2 '45 1300w

"In trying to figure out what made the Woollcott personality tick in the exasperating way it did, Samuel Hopkins Adams has brought together a vast number of more or less intimate details concerning a world which was once a source of vicarious delight to large segments of the nation and which is now to a considerable degree dissolved." Sanderson Vanderbilt

+ Sat R of Lit 28:15 Jl 7 '45 1100w

Theatre Arts 29:606 O '45 750w

Time 45:99 Je 11 '45 1900w

"It is a friendly biography, done with Mr. Adams's usual competence and skill, and yet it is inevitable that many of Woollcott's admirers will regard parts of it as unfair. The Adams appraisal is judicious, but there are many schools of thought about Woollcott." Stanley Walker

+ — Weekly Book Review p4 Je 3 '45 900w

Wis Lib Bul 41:82 Jl '45

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel
Yale R n s 35:168 autumn '45 490w

ADDAMS, JANE. Peace and bread in time of war; with a new introductory essay by John Dewey. anniversary ed 267p pa $2 King's crown press

940.312 European war, 1914-1918—Peace. Peace. Woman's Peace party A45-1967

"Published first in 1922 [Book Review Digest, 1922] this book is now reprinted on the thirtieth anniversary of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. In part it is the story of the efforts of pacifists (of whom Miss Addams was one) first to keep the country out of World War I and then to get it out, and of the treatment of pacifists by the government. But in a larger sense it is an argument, which has again become timely, for international cooperation in the interest of the world's economic and social welfare." Christian Century

Booklist 41:271 My 15 '45

"First published in 1922 and long out of print, Miss Addams' book is strikingly modern in its insistence upon the inevitable relationship between peace and bread. . . The value of the book is greatly enhanced by the introductory essay on 'Democracy Versus Coercive Organizations' by John Dewey: the only statement he has made on international organization since the outbreak of war." E. Fowke

+ Canadian Forum 25:72 Je '45 400w

Christian Century 62:630 My 23 '45 100w

ADDISON, HERBERT. Treatise on applied hydraulics. 3d ed rev & enl 614p il $6.50 Wiley [32s Chapman]

627 Hydraulic engineering. Hydraulic machinery. Pumping machinery [45-4060]

"Part one of this volume presents a summary of the fundamental principles of hydraulics. In this edition, a chapter on liquids in motion has been added, and the sections on flow through open and closed channels have been expanded. Part two, intended for engineers not directly connected with hydraulics and stressing the performance rather than the mechanical details of hydraulic equipment, now includes numerous explanatory notes. These additions together with an eight-page bibliography have increased the size of the book by more than one hundred fifty pages." N Y New Tech Bks

---

Library J 70:890 O 1 '45 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:25 Ap '45

AFANAS'EV, ALEKSANDR NIKOLAEVICH. Russian fairy tales; [tr. by Norbert Guterman; folkloristic commentary by Roman Jakobson]; il. by A. Alexeieff. 662p $7.50 Pantheon bks.

398.2 Fairy tales. Folklore—Russia 45-37884

"In the preface to the 'Russian Fairy Tales' it is explained that the tales endured for centuries by word of mouth, in a country and time when only sacred, orthodox matters were put down on paper. . . Afanasiev, the man who finally made a collection of the stories about the time the brothers Grimm worked in Germany, happened to be a lawyer. The hundreds of stories in this book come from his exhaustive collection and are translated, many for the first time, by Norbert Guterman." N Y Times

---

Book Week p46 D 2 '45 250w

Booklist 42:185 F 1 '46

"The new book seems better suited to the college library than to the children's bookshelves. Admittedly interesting and instructive to the student of Russian life, manners, and psychology, the stories, in general, not only seem destined to have little appeal for children but in certain instances are distinctly unsuitable in their present form."

AFANAS'EV, A. N.—Continued
Cath World 162:379 Ja '46 150w

"Certainly one of this year's outstanding publishing achievements." H. L. Binsse
+ Commonweal 43:293 D 28 '45 140w

"We wish we could see this as a successor to the beautiful Grimm of last season, but neither in text nor illustrations do we feel that it has equal appeal. . . An enormous number of these fables have been included, few of them having conspicuous distinction."
— Kirkus 13:492 N 1 '45 80w

"An excellent collection of some 700 pages of Russian folk tales. Like the Pantheon Grimm, it is as much for the adults' library as the children's. A treasure house for the story-teller and for children who love 'fat' books of fairy tales." J. D. Lindquist
+ Library J 70:1190 D 15 '45 60w

"These Russian tales are rambunctious, full-blooded and temperamental. They are tense with action, magical and human, and move in a kind of cyclone of speed. . . Mr. Alexeieff's illustrations are witty and individual. . . Ought a fairy tale book be expensive? Or weigh too much for a little girl to hold up? . . Perhaps this is quibbling, as is a faint feeling that the 'folkloristic commentary' is a little too mighty, too learned and long, coming in front of these gorgeous tales themselves." Eudora Welty
+ N Y Times p7 N 11 '45 360w

"This book is a companion volume to the excellent edition of Grimm brought out by the same publishers last year, and, like the Grimm, it is a first-rate job and a most attractive book, of interest both to children and to adults." Edmund Wilson
+ New Yorker 21:104 N 24 '45 280w

"Like last year's complete edition of Grimm, this handsome collection of Russian fairy tales and fables will be a splendid addition to every home library. The Russian stories have a wit and spirit as well as a vigorous prose style which the German tales sometimes lack, but they are also often violent or even sinister. Therefore the book is not for young children unless it is read aloud by a discriminating adult."
+ New Yorker 21:128 D 8 '45 80w

"There are so many kinds of stories that the book will fill almost any need. Little children will love the animal fables. . . Girls, as they grow older, will lose themselves in the noble princes, the lovely princesses, the wicked old Baba Yaga. Grownups cannot afford to miss the commentary by Roman Jakobson. If it is a bit disillusionihg in that he considers the Pushkin stories not characteristic of the true Russian folklore, it is very convincing. All the broken threads of the many versions are gathered up here and woven into one rich and satisfying whole. The value of this dignified book with its strange, lovely illustrations can hardly be estimated. In this particular time it is a triumph to have edited, illustrated, and printed it." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:52 N 10 '45 650w
Springf'd Republican p4d D 2 '45 420w
Time 46:94 D 31 '45 600w

"The year's most distinguished volume published for children."
+ Weekly Book Review p7 N 11 '45 450w

AGETON, ARTHUR AINSLEY. Mary Jo and little Liu; pictures by Olive Bailey. (Whittlesey house publication) 52p $1.75 McGraw

Story of the friendship of Mary Jo, a little American girl, and Liu, a little Chinese boy, who lived next door to each other in China.

Booklist 42:185 F 1 '46
Kirkus 13:525 D 1 '45 100w

"Recommended for ages six to ten." V. W. Schott
+ Library J 71:57 Ja 1 '46 70w

"This is a fascinating book to be read to a small child or by an older child to whom these glimpses of other children in another land will become a cherished story book which has that best of all attributes, that of being true." E. H. D.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 9 '45 210w

AGRICULTURAL ECONOMICS RESEARCH INSTITUTE. See Oxford. University. Agricultural economics research institute

AHRENS, LOTHAR, comp. Dictionary of aeronautics: English, French, German, Italian, Spanish. 562p $5 Ungar

629.1303 Aeronautics—Encyclopedias and dictionaries. Dictionaries, Polyglot 44-3018

"This pocket aviation dictionary in five languages is 'intended to assist technical translations bearing on the subject by facilitating the rapid discovery of the most important and latest terms conforming to actual usage. At the same time it is envisaged as an assistance to the interpreter. The contents have therefore been compiled . . . by the careful extraction of technical terms and words from current trade books and periodicals (see bibliography).' Published originally in 1939 in Germany, it has been reprinted in the United States by authority of the Alien Property Custodian. . . Three thousand six hundred and sixty German words and terms on related subjects are grouped under large headings, e.g., Classification of Aeroplanes, Model Aviation, Air Raid Precautions, etc. The arrangement is not alphabetic. Equivalents in English, French, Italian, and Spanish follow in parallel columns. . . The vocabularies include terms concerning classification and types of planes, structures, engines and equipment, principles of flight, aerodynamics, model study, the airplane industry, military aeronautics and air raid precautions." Subscription Bks Bul

---

"Coverage of terms, both military and engineering, seems quite complete, except, of course, for words developed since 1939, e.g., radar. One handicap for American use is that the English terminology is that of Great Britain rather than of the United States, e.g., petrol instead of gasoline, and aerobatics instead of acrobatics. However, these variations are not numerous. Of the one-volume, concise, polylingual dictionaries of aviation terms at present available, this one seems, in spite of its date, the most useful. It is recommended."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 16:36 Jl '45 340w

AIRMAN'S almanac, 1945; ed. by Francis Walton. 512p $2; pa $1 Farrar

629.13 Aeronautics—Yearbooks (45-3244)

"This is the first issue of a factual aviation manual. . . It may be described as a book of aviation facts useful to many persons from experts to laymen who from time to time need a handy volume to refresh their memories or to ascertain specific data. The almanac will be equally helpful to teacher and student for information or verification on aviation topics." Social Educ

---

Booklist 41:264 My 15 '45
Library J 70:530 Je 1 '45 70w

"Immense and painstaking research evidently lies behind this first issue of what is to be an annual publication. It is research, however, which has been illuminated by expert editing. Essentially a book of facts and of reference, principal categories are highlighted by terse, lucid, and informative paragraphs and pages of background material." R. M. Cleveland
+ Sat R of Lit 28:30 Ap 28 '45 550w

"It is obviously not possible to itemize or adequately indicate the content of The Airman's Almanac. As a manual it is not completely adequate in every respect, but the editor and publishers are to be commended for their efforts in putting it on the market, particularly when much useful data is difficult to get or unavailable as a result of the war. It is of primary significance to users that the material is quite consistently international rather than national in character." R. L. Tuthill

+ — Social Educ 9:235 My '45 500w

ALAN, MARJORIE. Dark prophecy [Eng title: Masked murder]. 188p $2 Mill [8s 6d Hale, R]

45-8334

Detective story.

Kirkus 13:350 Ag 15 '45 60w

"This is a love story with murder and detection on the side or, if you prefer it the other way, a detective story with love on the side. There are a few tense moments in it, but for the most part it is soporific." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p32 O 28 '45 90w

"Pretty good."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 O 6 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p20 O 21 '45 100w

ALARCON, PEDRO ANTONIO DE. The scandal; tr. from the Spanish by Philip H. Riley and Hubert James Tunney. 382p $2.50 Knopf

45-4133

First English translation of a novel about mid nineteenth century Madrid, by the author of The Three Cornered Hat. It gives a picture of high life in Madrid of that time which is both sardonic and realistic. Its chief characters are two sets of very mixed-up lovers and a lovable Jesuit priest.

Book Week p7 Je 24 '45 180w

Booklist 42:18 S '45

Cath World 161:444 Ag '45 120w

"There are extremely eloquent passages in the writing and also a great deal of wit; the story is an exciting story."

+ Commonweal 42:243 Je 22 '45 1000w

Kirkus 13:113 Mr 15 '45 160w

"Book deserves place in fiction collection representative of world literature." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 70:488 My 15 '45 80w

" 'The Scandal' is a much larger and more serious book than 'The Three-Cornered Hat'; but it reveals the same dramatic, sometimes even theatrical, handling of swift incident and passionate character, and the same fundamental moral awareness. In 'The Scandal,' however, this latter note is so stressed that the novel verges at times on a heavy, almost a pietistic, didacticism. Even in its tempestuous action it is a thoroughgoing narrative homily." Richard Sullivan

N Y Times p4 Je 3 '45 600w

"Although this is an interesting picture of high society in Madrid and is presented in classic prose, readers who chuckled over the author's 'The Three-Cornered Hat' will almost certainly be disappointed. Beautifully translated, nonetheless."

New Yorker 21:77 My 26 '45 80w

"Pedro Antonio de Alarcon (1833-1891) was, as everyone knows, the author of that famous and delightful tale, 'The Three-Cornered Hat,' but he was also a couple of other fellows; and it seems advisable that intending readers of 'The Scandal,' first printed some seventy years ago, should be warned that this novel, unreservedly recommended by its American publishers, was written by one of the other fellows. Without such warning, readers will certainly be surprised and probably disappointed. Not because 'The Scandal' is not good of its kind, but because it is of a very special kind, a kind that does not speak the timeless and international language spoken by 'El Sombrero de Tres Picos.' " B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 28:12 Je 30 '45 1050w

"It is written with fervor, richness of invention and complication of plot, but the characters and their actions are too patly shaped to illustrate the virtues and vices that demonstrate the thesis." B. D. Wolfe

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 Je 3 '45 700w

ALBERTI, RAFAEL. Selected poems; tr. by Lloyd Mallan. [32p] $1 New directions

861 45-1783

"Lloyd Mallan, in his translator's note, offers the mantle of Garcia Lorca to Rafael Alberti, who, since the Spanish Civil War, has been living in exile in Argentina. Alberti was a friend of Lorca and both wrote elegies to the bullfighter, Ignacio Sanchez Mejias. A comparison is made between both elegies, from which comparison Lorca emerges as a writer of more musical lines. Alberti uses the flamenco variation of sound and repetition, a sort of Spanish ballad effect, with force and great pleasure." N Y Times

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p13 Mr 11 '45 130w

"An occasional surrealist tone emerges, but it is, fortunately, perhaps, an active exercise. A mimic's eye, a musician's ear, a mathematician's mind mingle together in Alberti. In a sense he is a modern Rimbaud, juggling all the acute terrors of the world, word and mind on a tight-rope." Harry Roskolenko

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 4 '45 130w

"These translations (the originals are not given) suggest that he lacks the wit and brilliance without which a surrealist technique becomes tedious and repetitive in effect. A naïve tenderness and charm often come through, however."

+ — New Yorker 21:78 F 24 '45 50w

Reviewed by Ruth Stephan

Poetry 67:166 D '45 600w

ALBRAND, MARTHA. None shall know. 184p $2 Little

Short novel about the activities of a young Swiss girl who smuggles children out of Nazi hands and into Switzerland. A Swiss reserve officer, also engaged in underground work, falls in love with the girl, but the two keep their underground affiliations from each other. When they are both seized by the Nazis they are saved by a dramatic incident.

"A nicely written, moving, and exciting story." Elizabeth Bullock

+ Book Week p8 Jl 8 '45 130w

Booklist 41:322 Jl 1 '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 22 '45 450w

Kirkus 13:165 Ap 15 '45 170w

"Engrossing instead of moving, intriguing instead of too believable, it is still first class reading entertainment. As usual the author sews her story together expertly with that quiet air of authenticity that makes the incredible seem at least possible. Although pace and excitement make up for surface-smooth characterizations, the ending (with the children playing the key part) achieves only a neat theatrical effect." Andrea Parke

+ — N Y Times p8 Je 24 '45 140w

"On the whole, this book looks like a hasty job."

New Yorker 21:72 Je 16 '45 90w

"A novel must be as actual and convincing as the dispatches and letters from the front. But if it is to justify itself as fiction, it must also go deeper into character and emotions than spot reporting can. 'None Shall Know' does not meet that challenge fully. While the events are so close in time and emotion, probably it will be only the very exceptional novel that gives depth and perspective to the incredible story of what Nazism has meant in almost any corner of Europe in the last dozen years. But this competently told story of two young people who were drawn into danger in neutral Switzerland has excitement and suspense and interest in showing how the tentacles of the crooked cross reached across into even the sturdy little republic." Mary Ross

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 Je 17 '45 500w

Wis Lib Bul 41:84 Jl '45

ALDANOV, MARK, pseud. See Landau, M. A.

ALEXANDER, FLORENCE BIBO. Nancy and Jane; pictures by Harriet Sturtevant. 45p $1 Howell, Soskin

45-4377

Story of two little girls who had to stay home from school one day, and how with the help of a resourceful mother they made paper dolls and clothes for them. Book includes cutouts of the dolls and their clothes.

"This is good for rainy days or convalescent times." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p11 Ap 29 '45 130w

"A 'dress-up doll story' for little girls which should prove to be a great success. . . It should keep the most restless child happily occupied for at least one rainy day." W. H. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 22 '45 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 22 '45 130w

ALEXANDROV, VICTOR. Journey through chaos; foreword by Upton Sinclair. 437p $3 Crown

B or 92 45-6314

Autobiography, in fictionized form, of a Russian member of the wealthy professional class, born in St Petersburg in 1908. He was sent to the Caucasus to escape the dangers of the revolution, but was deserted by his attendants, became one of a band of "wild children" and wandered in abject misery for months. His later journeys took him to Finland, Germany, France, Greece, and Spain, and everywhere he found himself in trouble. After Munich he came to the United States, is now an American citizen and lives in Hollywood.

Reviewed by Elliot Paul

Book Week p3 Jl 15 '43 700w

Booklist 42:15 S '45

Reviewed by C. V. Terry

N Y Times p8 Ag 19 '45 500w

"No review of this book would be complete that failed to comment on the needless references to the brothels that the author introduces as he travels through cities and countries. And yet unnecessary though they are, they cannot rob the book of its Odyssean character or of its interesting portrayal of life in the 1920's and 1930's on the European continent." Harold Fields

Sat R of Lit 28:24 Jl 21 '45 1100w

"In terms of his own highly colored career, Mr Alexandrov has delineated the violent social conditioning to which his generation has been subjected. His story reads like fantastic melodrama, but history books and newspaper headlines of recent years reinforce its plausibility." J. S. K.

Springf'd Republican p4d O 14 '45 270w

"Alexandrov's book is more about the survivors of this world horror than its victims. It leaves the impression that there are countless men and women like him who have suffered, survived and are prepared to carry on, but not in the old vicious way. A reading of 'Journey Through Chaos' will make it understandable to the most ignorant isolationist why elections in France may go to the Left, why some Belgians are not eager to take back their king, why the Greeks wish to get out from under England, why free Italians assert themselves in spite of the democracies." Elliot Paul

Weekly Book Review p2 Ag 5 '45 950w

ALGER, HORATIO. Struggling upward and other works; with an introd. by Russel Crouse. 570p $3 Crown

45-7407

"Horatio Alger, Jr. died almost 50 years ago, yet he is slowly but surely becoming one of the phenomenons of American literature. His 135 books for boys have sold a total of almost 200,000 copies, his name is familiar in almost every literate home, and despite the literary offenses he is accused of perpetrating, he has won what is apparently a publishers' accolade by being starred in an omnibus." (Springf'd Republican) Contents: Struggling Upward; or, Luke Larkin's Luck; Ragged Dick; or, Street Life in New York; Phil, the Fiddler; or, The Young Street Musician; Jed, the Poorhouse Boy.

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson

Book Week p7 Ag 19 '45 400w

Booklist 42:59 O 15 '45

Commonweal 42:461 Ag 24 '45 160w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 113:319 S 10 '45 1750w

N Y Times p22 Ag 26 '45 270w

"Mr. Crouse, in his introduction, is amusing at times, but he couldn't have done a better job of missing the importance and significance of Alger if he had tried."

New Yorker 21:75 S 1 '45 120w

Reviewed by W. R. Benét

Sat R of Lit 28:15 S 1 '45 1250w

"While true Alger fans might wish other choices had been made, the collection does give a reasonably accurate perspective on his work—or as accurate as is necessary. . . As the Alger books contain no Supermen or Superforts, they obviously would not attract the millions of boy admirers they won in their heyday, but to a surprising extent they retain the old magic. This reader was as pleased with a reunion with 'Phil the Fiddler' as he was at the first reading 30 years ago, and was again made happy when Phil achieved success —even though it was sheer luck and not through honesty. Perhaps there was more to your philosophy than you dreamed, Horatio." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 26 '45 600w

Time 46:98 Ag 13 '45 1550w

Weekly Book Review p31 S 23 '45 450w

ALICO, JOHN. Introduction to magnesium and its alloys. 240p il $5 Ziff-Davis

669.7 Magnesium. Magnesium alloys

45-10035

"First comprehensive book on fabrication and use of magnesium. Chapters cover occurrence of magnesium and production of magnesium metal, metallurgy of magnesium and its alloys, casting of magnesium alloys, forging, rolling, forming, extruding, heat and surface treatment, machinery and joining magnesium alloys. Economic aspects and postwar design are considered. Chapter bibliographies." Library J

"The author is to be congratulated on having prepared the first American book on this subject and on having done it so well. Engineers and plant executives considering the manufacture of magnesium parts and products—and they must be legion—will find it well worth their study." F. P. Peters

+ Chem & Eng N 23:2388 D 25 '45 450w

"It is always a happy circumstance when one is justified in applying the word 'timely' to a new book. Many authors have turned out praiseworthy work, but they don't often drop it in our laps at the very moment we were awakening to the need for it. However, Mr Alico does have that good fortune. Up to now the story of magnesium had been told only in scattered bits and pieces. It remained for Mr. Alico to gather up the fragments and consolidate the ground covered to date by the magnesium industry and magnesium technology." E. C. Fetter

+ Chem & Met Eng 52:263 D '45 250w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 70:1134 D 1 '45 70w

ALLAN, DENNIS. Born to be murdered. 214p $2 Mill

45-4225

Detective story.

"Best of the week."

+ Boston Globe p17 My 16 '45 40w

Kirkus 13:167 Ap 15 '45 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p19 My 6 '45 110w

"A little loosely arranged but all right for a hammock and a warm Sunday afternoon." B. I.

Springf'd Republican p4d My 6 '45 210w

ALLAN, FRANCIS K. First come, first kill. 188p $2 Reynal

45-6548

Detective story.

"An intricate and swift-moving tale." Elizabeth Bullock

+ Book Week p9 S 9 '45 130w

"A newcomer with a first rate mystery, and a detective who is at times as inadequate and mistaken as the most puzzled of his reading public."

+ Kirkus 13:168 Ap 15 '45 110w

"The story abounds in tense situations which make it difficult for any reader to lay the book down before the final page has been reached." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 Jl 8 '45 130w

"Well planned, and featuring a detective who looks as if he would shape up well in future mysteries."

+ New Yorker 21:68 Jl 7 '45 60w

"Mr. Allan's main weakness seems to lie in the writing department, which might include the goofy plot. Hardly for the carriage trade, the story does contain surprises for less fussy customers." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p10 Jl 15 '45 60w

ALLAND, ALEXANDER, il. See Wise, J. W. The Springfield plan

ALLEE, MARJORIE (HILL) (MRS WARDER CLYDE ALLEE). Smoke jumper; il. by Manning de V. Lee. 160p $2 Houghton

45-7578

Vocational story for junior and senior high schools. Bill Herold finds himself the youngest member of a squad of fire fighters, in a Montana camp. At first he has to do all the odd jobs and stand plenty of teasing, but his opportunity comes, and he becomes a full fledged smoke jumper.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p12 O 14 '45 230w

Booklist 42:22 S '45

"Fire fighting is always exciting reading, and Mrs. Allee has made an especially gripping story from this new aspect of it." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:351 S '45 120w

"One first rate boys' adventure story, with a career angle. Credible, varied characters and honest adventure."

+ Kirkus 13:300 Jl 1 '45 80w

"Contagious enthusiasm, high courage and good fellowship are emphasized." Miriam Snow

Library J 70:1028 N 1 '45 70w

"Tale sounds definitely contrived and falls completely flat in spite of introduction of a girl and a bear. Written chiefly for boys, but Bill, the hero, is not sufficiently a real live boy with whom they could identify themselves. Not recommended." Alice Vielehr

— Library J 70:1028 N 1 '45 70w

"There isn't any real plot to this book. It is a brief packed-full-of-action period in a smoke jumper's life. Boys will like it." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times p26 N 11 '45 100w

"It is a good story that offers a new career for boys who like adventure."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:68 N 10 '45 40w

Springf'd Republican p4d S 30 '45 120w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p6 S 16 '45 450w

Wis Lib Bul 41:103 O '45

ALLEN, EDWARD FRANK, ed. Modern humor for effective speaking. 468p $1.98 Citadel

808.87 Humor 45-6031

"Here, carefully cross-indexed to fit every occasion, is the wit and wisdom of the centuries, from Socrates to Bob Hope, from Voltaire to Dorothy Parker, from Coolidge to Hemingway, from Ben Jonson to Harold Ickes, from Ben Franklin to Anon—who, as always, turns out to be responsible for many of the Better Ones, after all. Dedicating himself to the herculean task of leavening the after-dinner speaker's message, the editor has prefaced a jumbo collection with an introduction and a modus operandi." N Y Times

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '45

"Inevitably, there are several hundred quickies you've laughed at once, and a few that will distress you—but what else can one expect in an anthology of these dimensions?" James MacBride

+ N Y Times p15 Jl 8 '45 250w

ALLEN, JAMES. We always come back. 223p $2.50 Peyton Paul, 14 E. 90th st, N.Y. 28 [8s 6d Allen, W.H.]

45-9734

"During a particularly perilous and adventurous attack on Hamburg, an American Liberator is hit by flak. Leaks develop in the oxygen supply, and suffering damage to two of its engines the aircraft is forced to drop out of formation. German fighters pounce upon the crippled machine. The pilot is mortally wounded and several members of the crew are killed. During these momentous happenings the navigator relives his experiences since coming to England to fight in the European theatre with the 8th Air Force. He recalls moments at the English base and on previous bombing missions." Times [London] Lit Sup

"The narrative is sparked by terse, racy dialogue, piles up dangers and deaths in nerve-jangling sequence, and contains some of the most graphic descriptions ever written of a doomed bomber being coaxed home on two engines and no elevator cables. . . With so much of importance to write about, one can only wonder why Mr. Allen confined himself to the lowest levels of Anglo-American relationships. If his wholesale debasement of American servicemen and Englishwomen serves any purpose, that purpose is nowhere apparent in his book. He draws no conclusions, makes no significant remarks, and seems to be unaware of anything except the sensual side of war." E. L. Jones

— Atlantic 177:161 Ja '46 420w

"Not pleasant reading for the tender-skinned, but authentic, alive."

Kirkus 13:442 O 1 '45 170w

"Mr. Allen's book is horrible. It is the first account I have read of an American soldier's experiences in wartime England, and if this is to be the standard of their curiosity and behaviour, I hope it will be the last. . . This book will do some harm, though it is too silly to do much." Philip Toynbee

— New Statesman & Nation 30:112 Ag 18 '45 210w

"Mr. Allen has a neat style and you feel sure that things happened just the way he says; it isn't his fault that his story has already served as the theme for too many novels."

New Yorker 21:98 N 3 '45 90w

"This story of a bomber and its crew merits a place with the best first-hand reporting of the war. The adventures in the air, however, are only a portion of this novel. By the device of interpolating the random thoughts of the men as they make their perilous flight, we get down to earth again. . . The realism of 'living' as it is described here is sordid and depressing, but the reader cannot help being sympathetic to the efforts of these American fliers to relieve the tension of their existence." Donald Armstrong

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:49 N 17 '45 400w

Reviewed by John Hampson

Spec 175:138 Ag 10 '45 180w

Reviewed by G. W. Bragdon

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 6 '46 420w

"His novel would have gained considerably in effect had Mr. Allen been willing to concede to his airmen a few moral scruples in their periods off duty."

Times [London] Lit Sup p389 Ag 18 '45 240w

ALLEN, JAMES—Continued

"On the whole, the reader never has the feeling that he has come to know these people, or been permitted to enter sympathetically into their lives." Jennings Rice

Weekly Book Review p8 N 4 '45 650w

ALLEN, JOHN STUART. Astronomy; what everyone should know. 199p il $2.50 Bobbs

523 Astronomy 45-10177

The author "has taught astronomy and celestial navigation, and at present he is Director of the Division of Higher Education of the New York State Education Department. He first describes the solar system and then the constellations, presenting many interesting facts in a lively, readable style. The third part of his book deals with telescopes and mountings, the fourth with the moon, and the fifth with meteors, meteorites, and comets. Finally he discusses the distances of the stars and comments on the conditions that would be encountered by a rocket ship 'sky-rocketing through space." (Scientific Bk Club R)

"This is no primer but a worthwhile introduction for intelligent beginners."

+ Kirkus 13:290 Jl 1 '45 70w

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 O '45 120w

"An excellent introduction to a fascinating subject with just enough information to whet the appetite and not enough to leave the impression that you know all about astronomy now." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 12 '45 240w

Reviewed by James Stokley

Weekly Book Review p12 Ja 6 '46 130w

ALLEN, MERRITT PARMELEE. Mudhen; decorations by Stephen Voorhies. 201p $2 Longmans

45-8459

The Mudhen was a tall, lazy schoolboy, whose active mind could contrive many a clever plan, but to whom bodily action was a sign of weakness. This story of life in a boys' school is centered around the Mudhen and his schemes.

" Mr. Allen has written a really funny school story, full of entertaining dialogue, candid opinions and surprising pranks." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:458 N '45 80w

"Harmless enough as a school story, with clearcut characterization, brisk pace, bright dialogue."

+ Kirkus 13:253 Je 1 '45 90w

"A good book." Phyllis Fenner

+ Library J 70:956 O 15 '45 40w

"Each of the twelve lively chapters, contrived upon the Mudhen's clever machinations, is complete in itself, combining to make a jolly school story for boys from eleven years up." E. M. Gordon

+ Library J 70:1192 D 15 '45 60w

"A modern school story for boys with clever dialogue and some amusing situations. However, humor is often forced, trickery lauded and too many roguish pranks grow rather tiresome. Not recommended." Sonja Wennerblad

— Library J 70:1192 D 15 '45 40w

"This is an out-of-the-ordinary school story for older boys, genuinely funny, and, even though some of the tricks stretch one's credulity a bit, basically realistic." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p35 S 30 '45 180w

"This is a very funny story. In fact, the whole book is fresh and amusing and healthy. The boys are varied and natural and their feeling for the Old Guard, as they call the headmaster, is the feeling that most boys have for a wise and understanding 'head.' This is a school story that can be warmly recommended." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:45 O 20 '45 290w

Springf'd Republican p4d N 11 '45 90w

"The Mudhen is no Stalky, but each of these triumphs of brain over brawn is funny enough to bounce a laugh out of anybody if taken one at a time, and only the insatiate appetite of small boys—who will eat this book up—would set out to read it all at once. For reading aloud to convalescent and restless small boys, I may add, this arrangement by episodes is just the thing." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 O 14 '45 330w

ALLINGHAM, MARGERY (MRS P. YOUNGMAN CARTER). Pearls before swine [Eng title: Coroner's pidgin]. 240p $2 Doubleday [8s 6d Heinemann]

45-35093

Detective story.

"There is many a witty and erudite paragraph you will relish, even though you may not get your fill of suspense." Elizabeth Bullock

+ Book Week p15 Je 10 '45 130w

Booklist 41:302 Je 15 '45

Boston Globe Je 6 '45 60w

Kirkus 13:116 Mr 15 '45 60w

"Unlikely, but a lot of fun."

+ New Repub 112:718 My 21 '45 70w

"Miss Allingham, of course, is never dull. Her Albert's virtuosity is bound to hold our attention, but his easy triumphs will hardly command our respect. I fear the black market is so black that no respectable writer can touch it without becoming defiled." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 29:262 Ap 21 '45 120w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 My 27 '45 110w

"A good, solid story that ought to satisfy almost any reader."

+ New Yorker 21:91 My 12 '45 90w

"Good hunting."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 My 26 '45 30w

"Besides being a most ingenious puzzle it mingles a sense of the grim with a lively humor and the authentic atmosphere of bombed London with pig-keeping in the square. . . There is a preposterous plot which somehow becomes almost alarmingly real."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p202 Ap 28 '45 120w

"Miss Allingham has stepped up the comedy this time, as if inspired in spots by the American screwball school, even to frequent intimations that everybody must be crazy. Campion corners an unexpected fiend, with splendid cooperation by Oates and Yeo of the C.I.D., after a lavish display of mystery gambits. This is smooth, riddlesome at all points and thoroughly Campionesque." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p16 My 6 '45 180w

ALLIS, MARGUERITE. Charity Strong. 281p $2.75 Putnam

45-7214

In the early part of the nineteenth century Connecticut was still the state of the diehards, and Captain Noah Strong was harder than most. His only daughter, Charity, was determined to become an opera singer, and in those days no decent woman could be both decent and in opera. Charity married and went to New York, only to discover her marriage was no true marriage. After the cholera had solved her marital tangle, Charity returned to her father, in some trepidation, finding to her great surprise a welcome understanding.

Reviewed by Dorothy Sparks

Book Week p4 S 2 '45 360w

Booklist 42:37 O 1 '45

"Miss Allis has a real gift for reproducing the Connecticut vernacular and the psychology behind it, and an ability to re-create places as they were more than a century ago, New York as clearly as High Haddam. She has succeeded in bringing to life the urge of genius, stifled by the prejudices engrained in the New England character, as it was in the earlier 1800s." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 S 18 '45 650w

"Possibly Miss Allis' very sense of authenticity hampers her characterizations, her pace of plot, and for this reason she is unlikely to roll up big sales. But her novels have a quiet charm, and this is, perhaps, her best."
Kirkus 13:229 Je 1 '45 170w

"Whether Miss Allis has played up the ludicrous intentionally is hard to tell, for along with it there is much meticulous backgrounding of life in a small Connecticut village and in New York in the days when pigs literally roamed the streets. But for this reader the mock-serious sections seemed the best, if only because the way to fame so often involves just such tragi-comic alternations as Charity complained of. In the Connecticut of Charity's day, a would-be 'genius' must have been particularly hard put, and reading of it here is illuminating and amusing." Nona Balakian
+ — N Y Times p22 S 23 '45 550w
Springf'd Republican p4d S 23 '45 420w

"'Charity Strong' is a rich book; warmer and probably with a wider appeal than 'All in Good Time,' as firmly grained as Peregrine's beloved oaks from which he carved ships' figureheads and shot through with more than one shaft of bright humor—neither the humor of the guffaw nor of the grin, but of the shrewd, twinkling eye." Jennings Rice
+ Weekly Book Review p7 S 2 '45 650w

ALLPORT, NOEL LIONEL. Chemistry and pharmacy of vegetable drugs; dealing with the derivation and properties of all the principal vegetable drugs; for practitioners and students. 252p il $4.75 Chemical pub. co. [17s 6d Newnes]

615.32 Materia medica, Vegetable. Chemistry, Medical and pharmaceutical 45-6807

"The origin, physical characteristics, chemistry, methods of analysis, and pharmaceutical use of the major drugs of vegetable origin are discussed in this reprint of a British book for pharmacists. Drugs such as opium, cinchona, and ergot are discussed from the viewpoint of their pharmaceutical use." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Laymen who wish to acquire a general knowledge of the vegetable drugs will find interesting reading." L. E. Warren
+ Chem & Eng N 23:758 Ap 25 '45 200w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:6 Ja '45

ALLSTON, ROBERT FRANCIS WITHERS. The South Carolina rice plantation, as revealed in [his] papers; ed. by J. H. Easterby. (Am. hist. assn. publication) 478p $5 Univ. of Chicago press

975.7 Rice and rice culture. Plantation life. South Carolina—Social life and customs. Allston family A45-4597

"The Allston family planted rice in the Georgetown district. Their acres were wide, their problems difficult and their success a bit above average. Robert F. W. Allston, whose papers predominate in this collection, also served his district long in the State Assembly and, in 1856, was elected Governor. He was a man of serious intent and his connections and interests touched nearly every phase of South Carolina life. For this reason the Allston family papers, which cover the period from 1810 to 1868, offer an unusually rich source for understanding a people and a region. From them Professor Easterby, in his introduction, has been able to tell the story of the building of the plantations, the relations between planter and overseers, the life and labor of the slaves, the production and marketing of crops, the profits and losses and much of every-day affairs on a rice plantation." Weekly Book Review

"A fascinating and important contribution to our economic history, providing many illuminating sidelights on the political and social life of the half-century prior to 1868." R. A. Brown
+ Nation 161:559 N 24 '45 70w

"The best treatises on rice were written in antebellum days and few raw documents, dealing directly with the social-economic side of rice-plantation life, have found their way into print. It is this fact which gives importance to Professor Easterby's excellent volume." Avery Craven
+ Weekly Book Review p38 N 11 '45 800w

ALMEDINGEN, MARTHA EDITH VON. Dasha. 278p $2.50 Harcourt [8s 6d Lane] 45-35056

By the author of Frossia (Book Review Digest, 1944). "Dasha, the heroine of this book, was a cripple child in Frossia, and was sent to the Crimea in search of cure. Now she is cured, and begins her life in Leningrad as a student of sculpture at the Academy. She renews her long friendship with the wise and gentle Frossia, finds her mother again, and an eccentric, unpleasant stepfather, makes many acquaintances of her own age among the students, falls in love, marries, and eventually faces the war, with bereavement and renewal of private and general sacrifice." (Spec)

"The total effect of the novel is a strong (if rather nebulous) realization of the unshackled Russian's overpowering hunger for knowledge and advancement. More than one episode comes alive with Chekhovian warmth and charm. . . Sensory impressions of food and the flavor of Leningrad's streets are well suggested. The war's ending seems tacked on with little justification, and the fearful mortality rate among the principal characters (few are left alive at the end of the book) doesn't seem to add up to much save an attempt to inject pathos or tragedy." Jack Conroy
+ — Book Week p4 Ap 15 '45 450w
Booklist 41:255 My 1 '45

Reviewed by Ray McPartlin
Boston Globe p17 Ap 11 '45 350w
Christian Century 62:792 Jl 4 '45 280w

"There is perhaps too much trivial detail which adds little to the story. If you enjoy the tale of aristocrat turned peasant, 'Frossia' will be your favorite, but, if you prefer the more familiar story of the unfortunate waif restored to comparative comfort, then Dasha will be your appropriate heroine." Harold Hobson
Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 17 '45 100w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 21:279 Jl '45 80w

"A quite pointless book, in my opinion, and one that certainly does not warrant the concentration required to try to sort out motives and plot patterns and character development from the rather confused shifts of focus from one set of characters to another, or from the long and tenuous conversations which are typical of Russian novels, it would seem, but which in this book get nowhere."
— Kirkus 13:139 Ap 1 '45 170w

"This is not a sequel to Frossia, though she herself reappears. Nor does this cover so large a social canvas. But it is an engrossing story, and its purity makes it suitable for high school libraries. Recommended for public libraries." Jean Ross
+ Library J 70:306 Ap 1 '45 80w

"A very charming and, so far as can be judged, truthful picture of the Russia that persists through all changes in politics. Though the men are firmly presented this is pre-eminently a novel about women." Charles Marriott
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 5 '45 200w

"The story of Dasha has no particular structure or dramatic cohesion. It is sentimentally told, and not without an occasional crudity of taste or solecism of language. But it is told with an intimacy, a softness and sweetness that quickly persuade into acceptance. Speech and thought among its characters fluctuate between the sentimental and the truly poetical, but are always on the plane of feeling rather than on the plane of logic. The materialist approach is referred to now and then, obliquely,

ALMEDINGEN, M. E.—Continued
as a kind of moral duty, acknowledged but not inescapable. Dasha is pleasurable reading." John Midgley
+ — New Statesman & Nation 29:45 Ja 20 '45 300w

"Though her sentiments are involved, Miss Almedingen is not writing propaganda. She has asked us neither to admire nor condemn. The stern resolve, the stoic renunciation that seep through these pages leave us only with an overwhelming compassion for all that the Russian has suffered and must still endure. In giving the 'miracle' human dimensions 'Dasha' becomes a novel in the best tradition of Russian literature." Nona Balakian
+ N Y Times p4 Ap 15 '45 700w

" 'Dasha' is an honest and interesting enough account of life in Petrograd and in a small Russian town just before the war. That it seems far less exciting, vivid, and moving than its predecessor is partly because Russian life in the thirties was far less exciting, vivid, and moving than in the chaotic post-revolutionary period in which the first novel was laid, partly because there is no portrait in it comparable to that of Frossia (who plays a very minor rôle in this book), but mainly because the author apparently has not felt very strongly the events she is now writing about."
+ — New Yorker 21:90 Ap 14 '45 120w

"This will, in all probability, prove to be a strangely two-faced review, just as the novel it has to deal with is an amazing mixture of routine and naiveté, romantic clichés and genuine emotions. Miss Almedingen has, without any doubt, a very definite idea about the ingredients that have to be used in order to brew a successful novel. . . To add 'color' to her story, Miss Almedingen has reverted to the old trick of sprinkling the dialogues with words and whole sentences in a foreign idiom. . . But in spite of these annoying elements which time and again tend to evoke the impatience and even irritation of the reader, Miss Almedingen manages to keep him interested to the last page, and to have him part with her and her book as a friend." F. C. Weiskopf
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:50 Ap 14 '45 700w

"Dasha is an unusually good piece of writing. . . The book is very rich in character and atmosphere, and full of the true, continuous Russia that has flowed out to us always from the best Russian novels and plays. Miss Almedingen writes of her country with detachment, patience and great love, and she has no immediate axe to grind; her plea is for human life, human love, and her argument is the survival of idiosyncrasy and personality everywhere, and the unconquerableness of the free spirit and the ranging mind." Kate O'Brien
+ Spec 174:64 Ja 19 '45 550w

Reviewed by Emanuel Slotnick
Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 22 '45 420w

"The small fragments of Russian life and character that Miss Almedingen throws together in this new novel carry something of individual emphasis or overemphasis, but otherwise bear so erratic a relationship to one another as to defeat the reader's curiosity. There is, in fact, too little substance in the novel to make its continuous display of soul and temperament seem rewarding."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p29 Ja 20 '45 360w

" 'Dasha' is delightfully, robustiously written. It has the vitality, the amplitude and lavishness of any really good Russian novel. It is trimmed down rather more neatly, however, to the essentials than was its predecessor 'Frossia,' which bulged with good things like an over-stuffed knapsack. Neither politics nor the war, but life as it is lived in Russia, that bitter-sweet blend of joy and sorrow, of discomfort and exultation, is the field of Miss Almedingen's study in 'Dasha.' " F. H. Bullock
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 22 '45 850w

Wis Lib Bul 41:53 My '45

ALSBERG, HENRY GARFIELD. Let's talk about the peace. 324p $2.75 Hastings house 341.1 World war, 1939-1945—Peace. Reconstruction (1939-). International cooperation 45-8140

"Mr. Alsberg has written this book in the form of a series of twenty-five conversations between a lecturer on international affairs and a G. I. His purpose is to criticize the plans for world organization which were drafted at Dumbarton Oaks and the San Francisco Charter, with an alternative plan of his own." (Weekly Book Review) The author's conclusions are based upon twenty-five years of study and personal contact with world politics. He covered politics for the New York Evening Post during the last war, and has traveled considerably in the Near East and Europe since then. Index.

Christian Science Monitor p16 O 27 '45 600w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard
Nation 161:500 N 10 '45 430w

"Truth to tell, this is an impetuous thrust in a field of collective endeavor which requires at least three virtues, cumulative in their impact: patience, patience, patience. . . The book is an egoistic reaction to what is necessarily a joint affair, an affair so grandly collective that nothing save intellectual modesty is appropriate and nothing less than humility and patience is likely to serve. Otherwise, this book is excellent." T. V. Smith
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:11 S 29 '45 1050w

"Many of Mr. Alsberg's comments on international affairs are interesting and acute, although the conversational form in which he has chosen to express them is not handled very successfully. But as he himself admits, his own proposals contain 'certain Utopian elements'; and it is arguable that under present conditions, utopianism may do more harm than good. Mr. Alsberg's reconstruction of the world is less drastic than some other schemes which have been put forward, and it is probable that if it could be put into effect, then peace would follow. On the other hand, if the great powers were willing to make such concessions as Mr. Alsberg would require, then almost any of the alternative schemes of world organization would probably be equally effectual." H. B. Parkes
+ — Weekly Book Review p10 S 30 '45 850w

ALTROCCHI, JULIA (COOLEY) (MRS RUDOLPH ALTROCCHI). The old California trail; il. from phot. by the author. 327p $4 Caxton printers
917.8 West—Description and travel. Overland journeys to the Pacific 45-35040

Basing her work on her own travels over the trail, on documents, and on verbal accounts and legends, the author tells again the story of the caravans which journeyed from Independence, Missouri, to Sacramento, California over the old California trail, thru desert heat and mountain snows.

Reviewed by J. A. Brandt
Book Week p3 Ap 15 '45 600w
Booklist 41:251 My 1 '45

"This sparkling story, told by a born raconteur, swings the spotlight upon the highway from Independence, Mo. (apparently a pivotal point for journeys east and west), to Sacramento in the Golden State. For the first time, legend, fact and road-map information have been distilled, with scholarly exactitude, into a single volume." J. F. Thorning
+ Cath World 161:279 Je '45 360w
Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '45
Kirkus 13:14 Ja 1 '45 170w

"An organized poetic account whose charm derives not only from the subject, but from the author's feeling for it. However, the book is both less factual and less readable than its competitor [Paden's The Wake of the Prairie Schooner, Book Review Digest, 1943], and consequently is herewith less recommended for the general public. Those with a special interest will find it well worth-while." E. L. Lewis
+ — Library J 70:117 F 1 '45 100w

"It will be a useful book for tourists when (come the day) Americans again drive out to explore the country for themselves along the highways which for so many miles parallel the route once taken by the covered wagon." G. R. Stewart

+ N Y Times p6 My 13 '45 320w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
Social Studies 36:369 D '45 420w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 1 '45 310w

"Mrs. Altrocchi has brought to her task a great energy and a scholarly curiosity. She herself refers to her considerable prowess as an asker of questions. She doesn't seek to prove anything in particular. Her book, moreover, may strike some readers as being somewhat, in its manner, like an academic thesis, with poetic overtones. However, if one can glide over the purple passages, the bulk of Mrs. Altrocchi's volume will be found to be rewarding, brimming with facts and now and then sparkling with revealing anecdotes." Stanley Walker

+ — Weekly Book Review p14 Ap 8 '45 360w
Wis Lib Bul 41:53 My '45

AMADO, JORGE. The violent land; tr. from the Portuguese (Terras do sem fim) by Samuel Putnam. 335p $2.50 Knopf

45-4925

"The story of a bloody feud between two landowning Brazilian families for the possession of a tract of virgin forest to which neither has any right. The background is the wild, lush countryside of eastern Brazil during a boom in the rich cocoa-growing district." New Yorker

---

"It may not be too rash to claim that through 'The Violent Land' U.S. readers will become acquainted with a first-rate literary talent from Latin America as well as with some of the problems which agitate our neighbors. Samuel Putnam deserves admiration for his honest and virile translation." Angel Flores

+ Book Week p11 Jl 1 '45 500w
Kirkus 13:164 Ap 15 '45 150w

"It isn't likely that this book has lost very much in translation. Too much is left: too much style for style's sake, too much indignation with the powerful and pity for the poor, too many excited, shadowy characters, too much love and lust and greed and arson and killing. . . The only deficit is humor, but perhaps that is made up for by one master stroke: an amateur theatre group in the boomtown of Ilhéos produces a play, and gives it the definitive post-Ibsen title, 'Social Vampires.' " Nancy Flagg

N Y Times p8 Je 24 '45 380w

"Interesting of its kind, but you may find it difficult to decide just what kind it is."
New Yorker 21:69 Je 23 '45 80w

"Mr Amado has a gift for capturing the essence of his country, his people and the period he presents, with his own ruthless Latin kind of realism. If we are to know our neighbors better we must among other things read their literature, and novels like this one make that a pleasurable task." Edrie Van Dore

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 24 '45 230w

"To the raw violence and action of one of our gold-rush, claim-jumping, frontier tales, this novel adds an exuberant, tropical lyricism. Only study of one or more characters in depth is lacking to complete the full humanity of the work—largely because its true concern is not the individual human being but a society, a region and an industry. It is one of the most important novels to have come North in some time, and, because of its frontier character and crowded action, one of the most accessible to the American reader. The translation by Samuel Putnam is an admirable example of sympathetic interpretation and recreative skill." B. D. Wolfe

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Je 17 '45 800w

AMBROSE, KAY. Ballet-lover's pocket-book; technique without tears for the ballet-lover; il. by the author. 64p $1.50 Knopf [5s Black, A. & C]

792.8 Ballet 45-2862

"The reader will find here simple and compact explanations of the various steps, positions, and attitudes; the nature of performance and the role of the ballerina, the danseur, and the corps de ballet; the problems and methods of choreography; the costumes and their uses and traditions; the problems of lighting; and, finally, the way to a full appreciation of the spectacle as a whole." (Publisher's note) Copiously illustrated. Index.

Booklist 41:221 Ap 1 '45
Bookmark 6:7 N '45

"Americans now are writing for the ballet; Americans are dancing in the ballet; Americans are supporting the ballet. The ballet will create its own American associations and there will be American ballets danced in Paris, in Moscow. That is why it is extremely useful to know something about its permanent and classical structure. 'The Ballet-Lover's Pocket-Book' contains numerous sketches of dancers performing the fundamental steps and a concise text explaining the sketches. It is delightful and useful."

+ Commonweal 41:628 Ap 6 '45 600w
Kirkus 13:49 F 1 '45 80w

"The definitions are clear and informative, but one wishes many more, even of the elementary sort, could have been included, or that one could discover some observable principle of selection. The book (first published in England) has just enough of the afflatus of the balletomane to amuse those to whom ballet is not the only art dance worth caring for."

+ Theatre Arts 29:378 Je '45 130w

"Never has so much the outsider wants to know about the ballet from the inside, been put into such small space with so deft a blend of humor and sound sense. . . All statements and suggestions are crisp and snapping with humor."

+ Weekly Book Review p18 Mr 25 '45 180w

AMERICA and the new world, by Norman Angell [and others]. (Ohio Wesleyan univ. Merrick lectures, 1945) 155p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. World politics. Reconstruction (1939-) 45-9457

Contents: America and Britain, by Norman Angell; Germany, by Hans Kohn; U. S. A. and U. S. S. R., by Bernard Pares; China, by M. S. Stewart; Southeast Asia, by R. A. Smith; Relations with Japan, touchstone of our destiny, by Charles Iglehart; America and the new world, by J. H. Ball.

Book Week p5 O 21 '45 140w
Booklist 42:141 Ja 1 '46

"Keen insight and calm wisdom, with reasonable unanimity of judgment, are offered the Western reader in this volume. How much we need to know! . . These lectures wrestle with these pressing problems, and although they do not solve them they offer us historical and contemporaneous perspective for our use today as we look out on the world and serve it in the hope that the spirit of truth and the spirit of freedom will be the groundwork of secure society." J. C. Archer

+ Christian Century 63:15 Ja 2 '46 1000w

AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EDUCATION. Commission on teacher education. College and teacher education. See Armstrong, W. E.

AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EDUCATION. Commission on teacher education. Helping teachers understand children, by the staff of the Division on child development and teacher personnel. 468p $3.50 The council

136.7 Child study. School management 45-9188

" 'What would you do with a child who steals? How would you handle lazy children? . .' These are some of the questions asked by teachers in one of the fourteen school systems collaborating with the staff of the Division on Child Development and Teacher Personnel of the Commission on Teacher Education. The result is a story of the experiences of these teachers in a three-year study of their own students, utilizing the services of local leadership as well as those of the consultants representing the Commission." El School J

AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EDUCATION—Continued

Reviewed by E. S. Johnson
Am J Soc 51:354 Ja '46 400w

"This report is highly meaningful, enriched as it is with a wealth of illustrative materials. Teachers who read it will feel that they have shared in many similar situations. It gives a technique by which teachers, working either as individuals or in groups, can learn to understand children better and to solve their own classroom problems." Helen Nichols
+ El School J 46:115 O '45 850w
School & Society 62:207 S 29 '45 20w

"This book belongs on the 'must' reading list of all in-service teachers who desire a better understanding of children and who wish for themselves a happier and more successful professional experience. It could also be used to advantage as a textbook in pre-service teacher training if the anecdotal records presented in the volume were supplemented by readings and lectures that would make available to the students the experimentally derived facts by means of which adequate principles to explain the anecdotally described behavior could be developed."
+ School R 54:58 Ja '46 1050w

AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EDUCATION. Committee on the study of teaching materials on inter-American subjects. Latin America in school and college teaching materials; report of the Committee [ed. by Howard E. Wilson]. 496p $3; pa $2.50 The council

980.07 Latin America—Civilization—Study and teaching. Latin America—History—Study and teaching 44-51284

"This study reports the results of a critical survey of those texts and reports prepared in the United States which contain materials on inter-American relationships. . . Part I presents a brief history of the effort to secure better international understanding through textbook analysis and revision, describes the scope and methods adopted in carrying on this study, summarizes the essential conclusions reached, and presents a series of recommendations concerning desirable changes. Part II presents the results of analyses made by competent specialists concerning the inter-American content of textbooks in such fields as United States History, General History, Latin American History, Biography, Modern Problems, Foreign Policy and International Relations, Current Events Magazines, Geography Textbooks, Social Theory and Institutions, and the Spanish and Portuguese Languages." U S Quarterly Bkl

Booklist 41:266 My 15 '45

"This is the most authoritative and penetrating study of its kind made thus far concerning textbooks prepared in the United States. The discussions are frank and critical, and point out the mistakes made. They describe also the changes essential if the books provided for students in the future are to present a more accurate and realistic picture of basic facts underlying inter-American relations, and are to be successful in promoting better understanding and more cordial relations throughout the Americas."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:20 Mr '45 300w

AMERICAN COUNCIL ON PUBLIC AFFAIRS. Our American neighbors. See United States. Office of the coordinator of inter-American affairs. Our American neighbors

AMERICAN PHILOSOPHICAL ASSOCIATION. Commission on the function of philosophy in liberal education. Philosophy in American education: its tasks and opportunities, by Brand Blanshard [and others]. 306p $3 Harper

107 Philosophy—Study and teaching 45-8954

Results of a study made by the American philosophical association of the present status of philosophy in America and the probable role of philosophy in the future. The book is in three parts: The contemporary situation; The task of philosophy; The teaching of philosophy—things that can be done. The contributors to the volume are Brand Blanshard, Curt J. Ducasse, Charles W. Hendel, Arthur E. Murphy and Max C. Otto.

Booklist 42:69 N 1 '45
Kirkus 13:455 O 1 '45 110w

"The members of the commission have now raised questions publicly which philosophers have long been asking of one another in private. In some instances the answers are given haltingly or with less clarity than might be wished for; but the questioners have not 'winced nor cried aloud' at the possibility that the day of philosophy, at any rate as an important and independent part of the college curriculum, may be drawing to a close. . . The book is written, for the most part, in a more vigorous style and contains more incisive discussions than we have come to expect from joint inquiries into American education." H. D. Aiken
+ New Repub 113:650 N 12 '45 1450w

"I do not share many of the opinions expressed in this book, but I have had much pleasure from reading it. First, for the style of it. Although beside the sinuous clarity and wit of Brand Blanshard, the homely yet high eloquence of Max Otto, Curt Ducasse, and Charles Hendel seem pedestrian and Arthur Murphy seems ministerial, not one commits a phrase that need give pause to a radio announcer or even a college fraternity brother. The book of itself refutes the common notion the philosophers must, in writing, employ an occupational argot instead of a viable English. These, at least, can express themselves frankly and clearly and beautifully when they have a mind to." H. M. Kallen
+ Sat R of Lit 28:60 D 1 '45 2000w
Springf'd Republican p4 O 1 '45 480w

AMERICAN RUSSIAN INSTITUTE. The U.S.S.R. in reconstruction; a collection of essays [Harriet L. Moore, editor]. 160p $1 The institute

940.5314447 Reconstruction (1939-)—Russia. Russia—Economic policy 44-6806

"Essays on a variety of problems connected with reconstruction plans and activities in the Soviet Union—by a dozen contributors, Russian and American." Foreign Affairs

Reviewed by Charles Prince
Am Econ R 35:172 Mr '45 750w

"Admirable collection of essays." S. R. Tompkins
+ Ann Am Acad 235:136 S '44 700w
Foreign Affairs 23:340 Ja '45 20w

Reviewed by O. V. Field
Pacific Affairs 18:109 Mr '45 350w

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF PHOTOGRAMMETRY. Manual of photogrammetry (preliminary edition); ed. by P. G. McCurdy and others. 841p il $8.50 Pitman

526.91 Photographic surveying 45-2155

"This comprehensive treatise on methods, equipment, and procedures consists of thirty-seven articles written by experts on various phases of the subject. The topics include photogrammetric optics, the design of aircraft cameras, the planning and executing of an aerial photographic job, the characteristics of photographic films, plates, and papers, the geometry of vertical photographs, stereoscopic plotting methods, photo-interpretation, mosaics, mapping methods, and miscellaneous use of air photographs. The chapter on Training and education discusses a course of study in photogrammetry and recommends an annotated list of sixteen current books for collateral reading. . . A list of terms used in photogrammetric surveying and mapping (p. 774-810) includes about three hundred definitions." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 70:118 F 1 '45 90w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:64 O '44

AMISS, JOHN M., and SUTTON, TRAVER C. Industrial supervisor; a training guide for improvement of skill and leadership. 243p $3 Ronald

658.3124 Employment management. Factory management 44-47486

"A practical discussion of certain subjects which constitute background knowledge for a departmental manager's attitudes and methods. Among these topics are the qualifications and responsibilities of a supervisor, the need of co-operation, discipline and morale, the problems of attendance and punctuality, fitting a man to the job, promoting a safety program, directing fire protection and prevention, use of time and motion study, reducing labor turnover, care of equipment, controlling overhead expense, and the ethics of supervision. The book is planned for home study as well as group conferences. There are questions at the end of each chapter, and a self-scoring test of supervisory ability." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Practical course developed in conference work with supervisors who received training in group discussion. Written in clear, simple language."
+ Library J 69:1001 N 15 '44 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:61 O '44

ANDERSEN, HANS CHRISTIAN. Fairy tales; il. by Tasha Tudor. 273p $3.50 Oxford

398.2 Fairy tales 45-10494

Thirty-one of the famous tales in the Lucas translation, illustrated in color and in black and white by Tasha Tudor.

"I know of no present-day artist whose talents for presenting the delicate charm of childhood are more suitable to make her an illustrator of Andersen's fairy tales than Tasha Tudor. . . Her color illustrations for 'The Wild Swans,' 'The Snow Queen,' 'The Little Match Girl' are unforgettable in their beauty. For sheer Christmas gaiety the picture of 'The Fir Tree' is perfect. There are other color plates and many black and whites, and the overall result is the sort of Andersen collection to treasure and keep, to remember with affection long after one has grown up." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p23 D 9 '45 130w

"I have rather mixed feelings about this new edition of Andersen—new in the selection of 28 not unduly hackneyed stories—and new in the type of illustration. Tasha Tudor has done better work than this; some of the drawings are exquisite, with a real sense of the fantasy quality of the stories as in the picture for The Snow Queen; some seem standardized derivative Kate Greenaway, as in The Ugly Duckling, some are distinctly unchildlike, as in The Mermaid and The Real Princess."
Kirkus 13:524 D 1 '45 150w

"One of the truly distinguished books of the past few seasons. . . Ten exquisite illustrations in color and thirty-one in black and white and a beautiful design make this a gift book to be cherished by old and young." Dorotha Dawson
+ Library J 71:57 Ja 1 '46 70w

"After Tasha Tudor's charming Mother Goose of last year, her illustrations for Andersen are a disappointment. The full-page pictures in color are in a totally different style from the black and white drawings and also from each other persuading the reader that the artist was not certain of what she wished to say." A. T. E.
N Y Times p13 D 16 '45 60w

"This will be a favorite gift-book, and not for this season only." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 N 25 '45 300w

ANDERSON, CLARENCE WILLIAM. A touch of greatness [il. by the author]. 96p $2.50 Macmillan

798.4 Horses. Horse racing Agr45-337

"Stories with fine lithographs of horses in action and studies of their noble heads. . . [Here] we have, in large pictures and text that moves in more senses than one, Display, the bad boy who made good; Marriage; Market Wise, whose story is a 'true fairy tale'; Dark Secret; Dawn Play; Bee Mac, the daughter of War Admiral; Marguerite, mother unique among brood mares; gallant Billy Barton, Bolingbroke, and Wise Counsellor, the phenomenal sire." Weekly Book Review

Book Week p22 N 11 '45 90w
Booklist 42:78 N 1 '45

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:353 S '45 70w
Kirkus 13:300 Jl 1 '45 90w

"Few writers can 'talk horse' as authoritatively and few artists can draw horses so exactly as C. W. Anderson whose new book presents lithographs and personality sketches of ten great horses who performed magnificently in spite of various handicaps. . . For horse-lovers of all ages and recommended for young people's collections where there is interest in horses and racing." M. C. Scoggin
+ Library J 70:1093 N 15 '45 90w

"Anderson's books have a wonderful combination of things for young people: lovely lithographs of horses and an exciting, easy-to-read style of writing." P. F.
+ N Y Times p16 N 11 '45 80w
New Yorker 21:76 Ja 5 '46 40w
Sat R of Lit 28:73 N 10 '45 30w

"The Anderson horse books have reached an excellence that defies age-levels: children love them and so do elderly veterans. They are 'juveniles' because they come from the juvenile department and because they are favorites of small boys—if they love horses, as most children do. You are safe in using this as a Christmas present for any one who can be so described." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 N 4 '45 300w

ANDERSON, EDWIN P. Audels questions and answers for electricians examinations for all grades; covering the national electrical code, questions and answers for license tests, OHM's law with applied examples, hook-ups for motors, lighting and instruments. 238p il $1 Audel

621.3 Electric engineering—Examinations, questions, etc. 45-7627

"A collection of over three hundred and forty review questions and their answers. About one-fourth of the questions have been taken from previous license examinations given by the Municipal Civil Service Commission, New York City." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 70:890 O 1 '45 30w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:35 Jl '45

ANDERSON, L. A. Hunting, fishing, and camping. 214p il $1.95 Macmillan

799 Hunting. Fishing. Camping Agr45-315

Handbook of concise information for amateurs on hunting, fishing, and camping. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

"Of course, there are better individual tracts on how to take fish or bag a deer. The handbooks of Lee Wulff, nationally known angler and lecturer, and others, are more exhaustive and satisfactory. But for a book that blankets the field in little more than 200 pages, Sportsman Anderson's offering is fine." Peter Quinn
+ — Book Week p9 Je 24 '45 230w
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '45

ANDERSON, L. A.—Continued

"A useful reference book for anyone planning trips of the sort, as its know-how material is easily followed and described."

+ Kirkus 13:51 F 1 '45 40w

ANDERSON, ROBERT EARLE. Merchant marine and world frontiers. 205p il $3 Cornell maritime

387.5 Merchant marine—U.S. U.S.—Commercial policy 45-4931

"Provocative, authoritative history of the United States Merchant Marine in World Wars I and II, relates work done by the United States Maritime Commission, the WSA, the shipbuilding companies and shipping lines. Author discusses steamship vs. airplane cargo carrier. We now control one half of the world's shipping so this will be a major factor for peace. Author believes that we should first provide for national defense, further our commerce, then redistribute wealth by peaceful means." (Library J) No index

Booklist 42:3 S '45

Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 30 '45 650w

Library J 70:636 Jl '45 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:26 Ap '45

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 8 '45 950w

"Whether all his conclusions are accepted or not, he has furnished a maximum of light with a minimum of heat on a subject of concern to every American." H. W. Baehr

Weekly Book Review p10 Jl 29 '45 550w

ANDERSON, ROBERT GORDON. Biography of a cathedral. 496p $4 Longmans

282.44 Paris. Notre Dame (cathedral). France—Church history 44-9848

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"To any one familiar with Henry Adams' classic Mont-Saint-Michel and Chartres, or Sartell Prentice's The Heritage of the Cathedral, this book will prove disappointing. It attempts to do for Notre Dame of Paris what Prentice does more broadly for 'the cathedral,' but lacks Prentice's understanding of the Middle Ages, his effective eclecticism, clarity, and charm. Mr. Anderson's account is more concerned with ancestry than biography. It is only in the sixteenth of thirty-one chapters that we are introduced to old Notre Dame, and in the twenty-sixth that the cornerstone of the present structure is laid. Evidently intended for the 'general reader,' the 'pageant' portrays striking scenes enacted on or near the site of the cathedral (52 B.C.-1235 A.D.), and combines with these the evolution of doctrine, liturgy, vestments, music, and architecture—all that was ultimately symbolized in the great church of 'Our Lady.' " Faith Thompson

Am Hist R 50:605 Ap '45 310w

Bookmark 6:3 Ja '45

"Mr. Anderson—who, by the by, is not a Catholic—writes in a style which swings from poetry to journalism, and there are moments when he mixes history and legend with truly medieval robustness. There are other moments when we could wish his book both shorter and longer; for the thrilling story of St. Louis and the whole subsequent biography of Notre Dame down to our own time show haste and somewhat disproportionate compression. But the field covered is so prodigious, the total effect so fascinating and the underlying feeling so beautifully right that there is only one criticism which does not seem a work of supererogation. This is in the matter of illustrations—for never did the printed page call out so hungrily and imperiously for its complement in the mirrored picture." Katherine Brégy

+ — Cath World 160:476 F '45 410w

"Taken for what it is, not as objective history but as a partisan and romanticized view of 'the pageant that led to Notre Dame' and to the other manifestations of Catholic life and action down to the middle of the thirteenth century, this is a very excellent book. Mr. Anderson has gathered a great story of interesting and picturesque details. He puts much color and concreteness into his narrative, though not without indulging in some fanciful elaborations which could have no place in serious history. There are curious disproportions in the allotment of space. For example, half as many pages are devoted to the love story of Abelard and Heloise as to the building of Notre Dame—even though the latter includes a long and admirable section on the technique of making stained glass windows and a general summary of the origin and nature of Gothic." W. E. Garrison

+ — Christian Century 62:367 Mr 21 '45 850w

Wis Lib Bul 41:35 Mr '45

ANDREWS, EVANGELINE (WALKER) (MRS CHARLES MCLEAN ANDREWS), ed. See Dickinson, J. Journal

ANDREWS, JOHN PAUL. Your personal plane; with an introd. by Henry A. Wallace; il. by Robert Lindgren. 230p $2.50 Duell

629.13334 Airplanes 45-6847

Analysis of the probable future of private ownership of airplanes. The author discusses such subjects as costs, flight equipment, ground services, small business aviation opportunities, vacationing by plane, and types of planes. Includes a directory of small airports.

Book Week p2 Jl 29 '45 200w

Booklist 42:33 O 1 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '45

Kirkus 13:237 Je 1 '45 110w

"Recommended." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 70:486 My 15 '45 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:34 Jl '45

ANDREWS, ROBERT HARDY. Burning gold. 403p $3 Doubleday

Dover, Thomas—Fiction 45-7217

Novel of eighteenth century England, in which three historical figures appear: Daniel Defoe, the explorer Captain William Dampier, and Dr Thomas Dover. Dr Dover is the central character. He goes as surgeon on Captain Dampier's ship to the West Indies, falls in with buccaneers on Tortuga, crosses the Isthmus of Panama, rejoins Dampier, and arrives back in London a wealthy man.

Reviewed by Edith Roberts

Book Week p9 Ag 19 '45 450w

"It is inevitable that everything should be a little larger than life in a story like this. Captured silks are of richer hue, captive ladies more golden, ordeals harder, villains blacker; but Tom Dover, the devoted servant of his profession, even while he was a privateer and captain but not quite a pirate, manages to keep understandingly human, perplexed, and honest." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 8 '45 600w

"Elaborately plotted and overwritten historical romance of the seas."

Kirkus 13:227 Je 1 '45 170w

"Much better than ordinary pirate story. Recommended for small libraries." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 70:635 Jl '45 110w

"The animation of Molly Tawne, the brilliant, crowded picture of the curious buccaneers' commonwealth on Tortuga, and the vivid delineation of a host of subsidiary characters —including Dampier and Defoe—combine to raise 'Burning Gold' far above its framework; and the style, though ornate and difficult, is rewarding." J. F. Smith

+ N Y Times p25 Ag 19 '45 250w

Reviewed by Phil Stong

Sat R of Lit 28:29 Ag 18 '45 450w

" 'Burning Gold' will fit into a scene built round a lawn chair and a shady spot as naturally as any tall beaded glass, and it can be confidently predicted that it will find and delight a host of readers." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 29 '45 750w

ANDREWS, ROY CHAPMAN. Meet your ancestors; a biography of primitive man. 259p il $3 Viking

573.3 Man, Prehistoric. Man—Origin 45-9305

The author's purpose in this volume is "to present . . . what is known to date, from actual specimens, about the physical development, home life, and environment of primitive man." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Clip Boutell
Book Week p11 N 4 '45 360w
Booklist 42:105 D 1 '45

"When Roy Chapman Andrews started out to write his present book it is obvious that he firmly intended to write for the benefit of the layman. During the first part of the book the results are disappointing; he does not succeed. When his handling of his topic is not elephantinely coy, it is simply elephantine, and the reader does not quite know whether the work is addressed to his six-year-old son or himself. After this awkward stage is past, Mr. Andrews relaxes and becomes interesting." L. G.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 O 26 '45 240w
Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '45

"Many of the best sources are drawn upon and descriptions of the actual discovery of the bones of our 'ancestors' are enlivened by reference to personal experiences of the author when visiting the sites. . . The chapter on cave exploration is excellent as is also the one detailing the difficulties in natural environment with which Neanderthal man had to cope. . . In view of the complex and highly controversial nature of some of the questions involved in the evergrowing body of scientific evidence bearing on human bodily evolution, it would seem only fair that one who presents this material to the public should stick scrupulously to the facts and, in stating conclusions from the facts, should indicate clearly which are scientifically probable, which are possible, which are tentative, only, and which are highly imaginative. In this the author often fails. The resulting hodgepodge of facts and fancy is more likely to confuse than to enlighten the unsuspecting reader." Regina Herzfeld
— + Commonweal 43:240 D 14 '45 400w
Kirkus 13:333 Ag 1 '45 150w

"Dr. Andrews is particularly at ease when writing of people and places. However, the very personal quality of the narrative, which makes it readable, creates confusion on the scientific side. No clear picture of human evolution is presented. Fossil men are grouped sometimes by geography, sometimes by time, sometimes by anatomical similarity. The result is confusing to one who does not have some knowledge of fossil men and geological periods." S. L. Washburn
+ — N Y Times p10 O 28 '45 440w
New Yorker 21:98 O 27 '45 150w

"In writing a summary of human evolution for general reading, Roy Chapman Andrews has followed a memorable precedent. Henry Fairfield Osborne . . . did this same job for the last generation with his 'Men of the Old Stone Age.'. . Although the new book is only half the size of the old one, recent discoveries have given Andrews plenty of new tales to tell. His is the first account, in a general work, of the huge jaw from Java and even huger teeth from China which make it apparent that there really were giants in those days. And Peking man, one of the most notable finds of all, was discovered since Osborne wrote. Andrews is at his best in that story. . . In fact, this book stands out from others of its kind not so much for what it says about our remote ancestors —though that picture is well sketched in—but for what it tells of the adventure involved in finding what is left of them. . . One or two careless phrases may make the fastidious wince." E. G. Burrows
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:10 N 17 '45 1200w
Reviewed by A. H. Compton & others
Scientific Bk Club R 16:1 N '45 950w
Springf'd Republican p4d O 21 '45 450w
Reviewed by H. M. Parshley
Weekly Book Review p3 N 25 '45 1050w

ANDRIEUX, RAYMOND. Tux 'n tails; il. by Garth Williams. 222p $2.50 Vanguard

817 45-10353

Story of the life which goes on inside a de luxe restaurant. There are anecdotes about the staff and the clientele, all told with the Gallic touch and illustrated with line drawings.

"It's a gay volume which shows a keen appreciation of the men and women who live the kind of lives about which Andrieux displays expert knowledge and appreciation. Andrieux knows the restaurant business—and the writing business. . . The Garth Williams illustrations are lots of fun, too." D. H.
+ Book Week p2 D 16 '45 180w
Kirkus 13:354 Ag 15 '45 170w

"Such fondling of experience is more than a little remindful of Bemelmans, of course. But the reminder can hardly be considered an objection in the case of 'Tux 'n Tails' and Garth Williams' delightful illustrations. The Café Riche may not be many blocks distant from the Hotel Splendide, but it is almost equally deserving of a reader's stop-over." William Kehoe
+ N Y Times p22 N 25 '45 500w
Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 13 '46 270w

ANGELL, SIR NORMAN. America and the new world. See America and the new world

ANGOFF, CHARLES. Adventures in heaven. 120p $2 Ackerman

45-9503

A volume of short stories, fables or parables in form, which relate incidents of man's life in the hereafter.

Book Week p9 N 4 '45 60w

"The stories are written in a graceful, poetic prose that first and foremost brings tranquility, but they give a slight stimulant in the clever stressing of values and ultimate goals as against the day-to-day rush of the earth-child. . . Not great writing, nor even powerful reading; still, these dainty fantasies are provocatively pleasant." J. Z. Nichols
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d D 30 '45 180w

ANSON, MORTIMER LOUIS, and EDSALL, JOHN TILESTON, eds. Advances in protein chemistry. v 1 341p il $5.50 Academic press

547.8 Proteins (44-8853)

"This is the first of a series of annual volumes intended to 'provide a useful and comprehensive picture of the changing and growing field of protein chemistry', and to meet 'an increasing need for thoughtful and critical evaluation of the results achieved and of their implications'. . . Volume I embraces eight contributions by authors well qualified in their respective fields, under the following titles: Lipoproteins; Structural Proteins of Cells and Tissues; Some Contributions of Immunology to the Study of Proteins; The interaction between the Alkali Earth Cations, Particularly Calcium and Proteins; Purification and Properties of Certain Protein Hormones; Soybean Protein in Human Nutrition; Nucleo-proteins; The Proteins of Skeletal Muscle." Chem & Eng N

"This new series is to be welcomed as an important addition to the body of chemical literature in a most important and active field." Linus Pauling
+ Am Chem Soc J 67:886 My '45 260w

"This volume, and others to follow, will meet a real need by those who want to keep abreast of the changing and growing field of protein chemistry in its various aspects." D. B. Jones
+ Chem & Eng N 22:2217 D 25 '44 400w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:64 O '44

ANSPACHER, LOUIS KAUFMAN. Story of liberty. 232p $2.75 Island workshop

323.44 Liberty. National characteristics, German 45-408

"Earnest effort to awaken us to realization that liberty—'the heritage of all men in all lands everywhere'—is preserved only by constant vigilance and effort on the part of an informed citizenry has a definite bias which will be heartily accepted by many but will be challenged as an oversimplification by many more. Historical incidents are continually cited to show how the Teutons unlike their Anglo-Saxon brethren have submitted to tyranny throughout the ages and in so doing have periodically 'let loose the dogs of war.' " Library J

"A rather sketchy and unorthodox interpretation of the conflict between liberty and tyranny."
Foreign Affairs 24:159 O '45 20w

Reviewed by Eileen Riols
Library J 69:812 O 1 '44 80w

Reviewed by Cyril Clemens
Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 2 '45 360w

ANTHEIL, GEORGE. Bad boy of music. 378p $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 45-10435

Memoirs of an American composer, covering the years of his boyhood, his European concert tours, his marriage in Paris, his contacts with Stravinsky, James Joyce, Gertrude Stein, Stokowski and others, and his Hollywood days. He would rather not be remembered only as the man who wrote Ballet Mécanique, but he includes the story of its disastrous introduction here. Index.

"What a living! His account of it, in 'Bad Boy of Music,' is simply delightful—racy, generously intimate, gorgeously gossipy, richly informative, sophisticated in the broad, important sense of the word. If you want to know what is modern about modern music, modern art, the modern world, he will help you no end." Wendell Johnson
+ Book Week p14 N 25 '45 400w

Booklist 42:163 Ja 15 '46

Reviewed by L. A. Sloper
Christian Science Monitor p17 Ja 12 '46 340w

"The amusing, sometimes amazing autobiography of the modern musician, George Antheil, which lacks the bright, smart touches of Oscar Levant's Smattering of Ignorance but has a considerable, irresponsible vivacity."
+ Kirkus 13:413 S 15 '45 150w

"A singularly unwicked but rather wistful tale. . . His book, proposing 'to let you in on the inside of Antheil' without any 'esthetic mushing about,' is written all in lyrical one-sentence paragraphs or else in the style that makes conversation pleasant at cocktail parties but is afterward very hard to remember." Marjorie Farber
N Y Times p4 N 18 '45 1050w

"Memoirs of a cheerful egocentric whose uninhibited life story . . . should keep you interested more than half the time."
New Yorker 21:114 N 24 '45 80w

"There's a good deal of sound and serious musical material, as well as showy and shallow gossip, in this book." D. B. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 2 '45 800w

"George is an extremely likable person as well as an exciting one. He has friends and well-wishers everywhere and none of them, so far as I know, resents the giant whoppers he likes to tell. I am sorry that he has made George Antheil, the imagined hero, more than a little cheap, with none of his own personal charm." John Erskine
Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 13 '46 600w

ANTHONY, KATHARINE SUSAN. The Lambs; a story of pre-Victorian England. 253p il $3.50 Knopf

B or 92 Lamb, Charles. Lamb, Mary Ann 45-2653

A study of the lives of Charles and Mary Lamb, which delves into the causes of Mary's insanity. "The 'new' aspect, and presumably the book's raison d'être, is Miss Anthony's guess that 'the love of Charles and Mary Lamb for each other, salvaging and creative though it was in many ways, contained a morally forbidding element.' On Mary's side 'the love which could not be admitted to consciousness was bound up with a jealousy which had also to be suppressed.' The result of this supposed conflict was that Mary spent her adult years in recurrent fits of madness, while Charles did a lot more drinking than was good for him." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by W. D. Clark
Book Week p6 Ap 1 '45 380w

Booklist 41:223 Ap 1 '45

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 21 '45 800w

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt
Commonweal 42:315 Jl 13 '45 1350w

"This is a modern evaluation, clinically corrective, which adds many new facets to the story of the famous brother and sister, without detracting from the old charm of mutual loyalty. It is, too, a picture of the Georgian world, the many cross currents of the times and their meanings. Noteworthy—if controversial."
+ — Kirkus 13:28 Ja 15 '45 250w

"Katharine Anthony writes of the group from the psychologist's point of view. She has done it very skillfully, just scientific enough to give it flavor. The general reader of biography will enjoy it." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 70:264 Mr 15 '45 70w

"To set forth Miss Anthony's conjectures in detail, and to provide the counter-arguments that will inevitably spring to every Lamb-lover's mind, would require more space than the matter deserves. Prospective readers will find her 'case,' such as it is, mostly in two chapters, 'Electra and Orestes' and 'The Furies.' Up to a point, despite her mauling of Greek mythology, they may be willing to follow her. But when she dives off into the deep waters of amateur psychiatry they may prefer, like this reviewer, to call a halt." Carlos Baker
N Y Times p4 Mr 18 '45 800w

New Yorker 21:98 Mr 24 '45 180w

"I am afraid that Charles Lamb's prejudice against female authors would be increased by this monograph on himself and his family. . . I admired Miss Anthony's 'Margaret Fuller' and am the more distressed at the grave faults in this volume on Charles Lamb, Mary, and their brother. . . In more passages than I can enumerate Miss Anthony displays a brilliant unacquaintance with the thought, manners, and beliefs of the period and the London of which she writes." R. E. Roberts
— Sat R of Lit 28:10 My 26 '45 1600w

"As a popular biography it is written in a quickly moving style. It lays stress on the narrative rather than the critical aspects of its characters and sketches in the many friendships of this couple with the great figures of the English romantic period. It aims at no new interpretation but rather sums up the more exciting reports of scholarship on these two people."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 11 '45 600w

"Miss Anthony has not allowed herself to forget that her biography is only the latest in a long series. Consequently she has reduced to a minimum the routine chronological substance and sheer anecdotage of her story and has employed a technique which effectively heightens the accents. . . The interplay of a temperament marked by positive convictions with material that possesses strong dramatic value results in an uncommonly dynamic book. A certain amount of chronological overlapping is involved in the topical arrangement, but Miss Anthony has skillfully avoided any needless repetition. The texture of her writing is compact and nervous. There is not a dull moment in her narrative." G. F. Whicher
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 18 '45 1600w

ANTOINE, pseud. See Cierplikowski, A.

APEL, WILLI. Harvard dictionary of music. 824p il $6 Harvard univ. press

780.3 Music—Dictionaries A44-5729

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Booklist 41:206 Mr 15 '45

"The format is excellent with good margins and clear, readable type. A unique and extremely valuable feature of the dictionary is the extensive and up-to-date bibliographies which cover English and foreign books and periodicals. Frequently cited books and periodicals are abbreviated to conserve space. The Harvard Dictionary of Music is valuable as an historical dictionary and bibliographic guide to history and criticism in the field of music. Because of the wide range of subjects included and its unusual bibliographic features, it is recommended as a practical and useful reference book for college, university, and public libraries."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 16:39 Jl '45 500w

"Dr. Apel is not only the editor but primarily the author of the Harvard Dictionary of Music, thus making it basically a one man book. While it necessarily suffers in spots because of this, it nevertheless bears evidence of extraordinary knowledge on the part of one man. The material is so selected that the volume appeals both to the amateur and to the experienced scholar, and includes articles of a general character as well as 'master articles containing references to others'. . . The reader must be warned, however, against a relatively large number of errors, many of which could have been eliminated by more careful editing."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 1:58 Mr '45 200w

APPLEBY, PAUL HENSON. Big democracy. 197p $2.75 Knopf

353 U.S.—Executive departments. U.S.—Politics and government 45-3861

"Out of a wealth of experience gained in the Departments of Agriculture and State and in the Budget Bureau, the author presents his reflections upon the process of government and administration in modern America. Briefly summarized, his thesis is that government in a democracy, unlike other organizations of lesser scope, must be motivated by the public interest; that its size is determined not by the wishful thinking of nostalgic individualists, but by the decision of the body politic as to whether a given function has or has not acquired sufficient public interest character to necessitate its being handled governmentally; that over the years an increase rather than a decrease in the sum total of governmental activity can be anticipated." Weekly Book Review

"This is one of the most perspicacious books on democratic government that has come out in a long time. It embraces the penetrating and philosophical reflections of a shrewd observer who has participated in top-level administration for some thirteen years." C. S. Ascher

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1207 D '45 850w

Reviewed by Willard Shelton

Book Week p2 Jl 8 '45 500w

Booklist 41:281 Je 1 '45

"Just how widely and how thoughtfully Mr. Appleby's book will be read cannot be known. It may be that many who do read it will feel that its author is a graduate from a school of political philosophy which too many should not attend. Bureaucracy itself, as an adjunct or necessary component part of organized government, even in a democracy, cannot be summarily condemned. It is the known abuses, practiced and perpetuated in its name and under its protection, that hardly admit of or deserve serious defense. No adjunct or branch of government is above or more powerful than government." F. L. P.

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 25 '45 500w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 42:341 Jl 20 '45 450w

"The book is an analysis of statesmanship in administration by a statesman who here records the fruit of his experience. It is a unique contribution about the top level of administration where technical issues fall into the background and general problems press for consideration." L. D. White

+ Ethics 56:73 O '45 1150w

Foreign Affairs 24:164 O '45 40w

"Criticism is implied and indicated, but the overall picture of government activity, functioning in all its expansion, is hopeful in contrast to its predecessors' pessimism."

Kirkus 13:104 Mr 1 '45 40w

"The extent to which Mr. Appleby draws upon the Department of Agriculture for his illustrations may dull the book for some readers. But this department is a good laboratory, and his conclusions are general in their application. The book is meaty and cogent: it contains no tabloid formulas or Sunday-supplement solutions to federal problems." P. S. Broughton

+ Nation 161:113 Ag 4 '45 500w

"Big Democracy is in no sense an apologia for bureaucracy. It is, rather, an impressive appeal for more understanding on the part of the American people. As such it is a significant contribution. Although deeply analytical and a bit too heavy for popular consumption, it deserves reading by every one of the millions in government service—it could do much to dispel the sense of frustration that the average civil servant feels about his job. It further should be required reading in the colleges. Too few qualified young graduates are today electing public service as their lifework—Mr. Appleby shows that being a 'bureaucrat' is a worthy calling." H. J. Bresler

+ New Repub 112:796 Je 4 '45 650w

Reviewed by John Desmond

N Y Times p6 Je 3 '45 1000w

"Mr. Appleby, who has had considerable experience as a government official, has a point to make . . . but he makes it so ineptly and spins out such snarls of officialese that he is more likely to convince his readers that the harsh things said about bureaucracy and bureaucrats are true."

— New Yorker 21:82 My 26 '45 100w

"The book is full of sentences and paragraphs that with extraordinary clarity and eloquence present insights, reflections and speculations covering a wide range of vital administrative issues. The volume is a tonic, not a treatise. In these terms it provides that stimulus to the reader's thought that can be produced only through keen thinking by the author." Pendleton Herring

+ Pol Sci Q 60:456 S '45 600w

Reviewed by A. M. Lee

Sat R of Lit 28:34 Je 30 '45 1100w

"The political no less than the technical aspects of administration are shrewdly and incisively assessed."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:32 S '45 160w

"Although Mr. Appleby, in your reviewer's opinion, has definitely underestimated the influence that the Chief Executive can exercise upon the tone of the Administration, and has failed to consider as fully as he should the consequences which might follow if a leadership insensitive to the wishes of the country should by chance gain office and use the stupendous resources of the Administration for its own ends, he has nevertheless performed a signal service in realistically describing the processes of Administration, as he has observed them, in suggesting ways and means by which they might be improved and in driving home the fact that, given those who believe in democracy at the top, there is no necessary antithesis between bureaucracy and democracy. Indeed, one lays down his book with the feeling that under proper leadership the operations of bureaucracy can be made to complement and strengthen democracy in the great society that lies ahead." S. C. Wallace

+ — Weekly Book Review p12 My 27 '45 1100w

APTHEKER, HERBERT. Essays in the history of the American Negro. 216p $2 Int. pubs.

325.26 Negroes 45-9454

"An attempt to counteract the present tendency to regard the ante-bellum days of the South as an era of slow, pleasant life for the

APTHEKER, HERBERT—Continued
Negroes on the plantations, as depicted in romantic movies and novels. It is a record, supported by statistics and documentary facts, of grim living conditions of the Negroes, their revolts against their lot, their patriotism in the Revolutionary War, from the 17th century through the Civil War. It is a book for the research student." Christian Science Monitor

Christian Science Monitor p17 Ja 12 '46 110w
Springf'd Republican p4 O 22 '45 420w

ARAGON, LOUIS. Aragon, poet of the French resistance; ed. by Hannah Josephson and Malcolm Cowley. 167p $2 Duell

841 World war, 1939-1945—Poetry. World war, 1939-1945—France 46-275

Translations from the prose and poetry of one of the most important members of the French resistance movement, whose inspiring work was known all over France, and spread to other countries during World war II.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p4 D 23 '45 300w

"'The poems, translated by Rolfe Humphries, Louis MacNeice, Malcolm Cowley—have lost little in translation. They combine artistry and direct emotion, and represent perhaps the finest in French literature today. . . For an intellectual market, chiefly."
+ Kirkus 13:447 O 1 '45 160w

"The editor of the poetry section of this book has made an excellent choice, though I think he should have included 'Ombres' and excluded 'Elsa, I Love You.' He has drawn principally upon the first two books, and La Diane Française and Le Musée Grévin, which again and again reminds one of Dryden. The translators have taken the proper liberties. Aragon himself has perhaps indicated that they might have taken a greater liberty than they have done. . . My remark, I add, is not meant as adverse criticism, for in exactness of meaning and in tone of voice they have done astonishingly well. . . But I must make one strong complaint. Surely it is understood by now that volumes of translations of poetry should always include the text of the original. The personalities of the translators have shown up in the text to some extent." Ralph Bates
+ — New Repub 113:842 D 17 '45 1500w

"Louis Aragon represents such a miracle—brilliance and hope born out of war, defeat, despair. I wish there were some way to get the average American to read about this 'Poet of the French Resistance.' The understanding this volume creates would be a further step toward One World. It might even convince the average American that good things may come even out of surrealism and communism, where Aragon began. . . Malcolm Cowley and Hannah Josephson have done everything that can be done to present in another language and within one volume some notion of Aragon's accomplishments. Eleven translators have worked over his poems. . . In the main the translations are adequate, and sometimes (particularly when Louis MacNeice is at work) they become poems in their own right." Donald Stauffer
+ N Y Times p6 D 16 '45 750w

"Few readers would fail to agree that the poems are by far the most important items in the table of contents. What Mr. Cowley has to say is informed, informative, and interesting. What Mr. Rhodes has to say is engrossing and astonishing. . . What there is here of Aragon's own occasional prose is still alive with the passions that first fired it. . . But it is the poems that matter, after all. If Aragon had not been a poet, there would almost certainly have been no volume edited by Malcolm Cowley and Hannah Josephson, and quite certainly the band of English and American poets gathered here would never have come together to do the Frenchman honor, great patriot though he might have been." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 29:21 Ja 19 '46 1350w

"This book, a latecomer to the poetry of World War II, is in many respects the most extraordinary example of poetic creativity to emerge from the struggle. With its thrilling lyricism, its inspired translations, and its fine emotionality, it forms a collection which is simultaneously a tribute to Aragon and an Aragon triumph. . . The range of his pen is astonishing to a reader who has searched the poetry of this war for the love poem free of bitterness, cynicism, perversion or intellectualization; for the patriotic poem free of hysteria and tin; for the political poem free of fuzzy abstraction and cant; for the moral poem free of nasal rectitude. Little wonder that these illegal songs spread throughout France from hand to hand and crossed to England and America to become examples of the foremost poetry of the war." Karl Shapiro
+ Weekly Book Review p3 D 16 '45 1250w

ARASON, STEINGRIMUR. Golden hair; the story of Signy's Iceland; il. by Gertrude Howe. 223p $2 Macmillan 45-10156

Signy, whose father was born in Iceland, leaves her South Dakota home to spend a year with her Icelandic relatives. There she takes part in the life of the community, and learns much about modern Iceland. For sixth graders.

Booklist 42:132 D 15 '45

"Well-drawn characters hold the interest in this timely picture of Icelandic life." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:351 S '45 130w
Kirkus 13:339 Ag 1 '45 150w

"Useful as collateral reading, fairly interesting as fiction, and most satisfactory as to format." Gertrude Andrus
+ Library J 70:1191 D 15 '45 70w

"Mr. Arason's thesis—the needed modernization of Iceland—detracts from the spontaneous charm of his story, but the picture of folkways on the island is carefully detailed and should interest readers from 9 to 12." A. T. E.
+ — N Y Times p10 D 23 '45 110w

"This is a good story for the whole family to read together during the holidays." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:42 D 8 '45 310w

"Mr Arason is an Icelander himself, although he is living in New York at present, and his love for his country and its people, 'none of them perfect, but every one good at heart,' makes this story a charming tale for 6th grade girls." P. H. S.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 9 '45 120w

ARCHARD, THERESA. G. I. Nightingale; the story of an American army nurse. 187p $2.50 Norton

940.547673 World war, 1939—Medical and sanitary affairs. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. U.S. Army nurse corps 45-3557

"The author, head nurse in a surgical hospital unit, went ashore with the troops the first day of the African invasion, and for the next 15 months she served in the African and Sicilian campaigns. Near the front lines, advancing with the troops and retreating hastily when they were repulsed, the nurses set up hospitals and manned them in spite of inadequate help, limited equipment, and disrupted supply service that often meant little food and clothing. Danger, overwork, and unlimited endurance were taken for granted; their pride was the low death rate and the comfort they provided, under incredible difficulty, for the wounded who streamed through their hospitals. Briskly told, with humor and a refreshing lack of heroics." Booklist

Booklist 41:251 My 1 '45
Christian Century 62:583 My 9 '45 140w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '45

"She is a good storyteller. Her humor and unflagging cheerfulness, her loyalty to the girls under her direction, her resourcefulness through unspeakable conditions of weather and dirt, trials of red tape, exasperating delays in supply, her poise in the midst of overwhelming casualties, are a marvelous revelation of her courage and character. Yet Captain Archard shows herself thoroughly feminine through it all." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:277 Jl '45 160w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 21:278 Jl '45 40w

Kirkus 13:83 F 15 '45 220w

"Lieutenant Archard's experiences in the African campaign and in Sicily will interest the general reader as well as those with hospital training and experience. Sufficient humor and human interest to balance the tragedy and hardships. A timely book because of the present need for nurses. Recommended for public and for senior high school libraries." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 70:353 Ap 15 '45 60w

"This is an honest, eyewitness, almost day-by-day account of an all but incredibly heroic saga. Unfortunately, it is a badly written one. Miss Archard has told it in a style reminiscent in spots of the Bobbsey Twins, her people not so much speaking as making statements in quotation marks. For what she and her nurses did, of course, one can offer only an unqualified salute. But Miss Archard is not a reporter nor a story teller. It must be left to others more qualified as writers to bring home the terrific impact of her great story." Annette Robin

+ — N Y Times p8 Jl 1 '45 550w

Reviewed by H. J. Sloan
Springf'd Republican p4d Je 10 '45 360w

"Read it without fail, but read with imagination and slowly enough to picture the grim scenes and realities the author's pen has refrained from coloring." Dorothy Deming

+ Survey 81:215 Ag '45 300w

"Apart from its story of wartime nursing, the book brings a vivid picture of the fighting front through the eyes of the relatively few American women who see it first hand. Here is grimness and grinding fatigue and suffering, but also occasional fun and, above all, the compensation of doing one's part in a job that must be done. American women who have not had the skill or fortitude or opportunity to play a part like Captain Archard's—and those who can but have not—should read her story." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p3 My 6 '45 850w

ARENSON, SAUL BRYAN, and RIEVESCHL, GEORGE. Introduction to quantitative analysis. 386p $2.75 Crowell

545 Chemistry, Analytic—Quantitative 44-7033

"A modern, informal college text. It provides some seventy experiments, a large selection of all types of problems and a comprehensive list of special reference materials." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Library J 70:33 Ja 1 '45 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:57 O '44

ARMSTRONG, CHARLOTTE. Innocent flower. 185p $2 Coward-McCann 45-3289

Detective story.

"Considerable coyness and an unstable plot are offset by Duff and the kids—who are made of admirable stuff. This one may be on the mild side, but if you don't expect too much you'll be more than amply rewarded." Elizabeth Bullock

+ — Book Week p18 Ap 22 '45 120w

"Unless you are completely devoid of sentiment you will probably follow Duff's example and fall in love with the entire Moriarity family." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 18 '45 270w

"Very pleasant once you get used to your old friend Duff in his rôle of family man."

+ New Yorker 21:96 Mr 17 '45 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p18 Ap 1 '45 90w

ARMSTRONG, WILLIAM EARL, and others. College and teacher education; prepared for the Commission on teacher education. 311p $2.50 Am. council on educ.

370.73 Teachers, Training of 44-51264

"This report is based upon the activities of the twenty collegiate institutions participating in the 1939-42 cooperative study sponsored by the American council on Education's Commission on Teacher Education. After describing the study in general the book treats separately the changes concerning student personnel, general education, advanced subject-matter preparation, professional courses, student-teaching, and in-service education made by particular faculties. The study emphasizes student needs as a focus for attention in teacher education, urges the importance of integrating the various parts of programs of preparation, and is concerned throughout with cooperative techniques making for continuous improvement. Administrative as well as curricular implications are developed." U S Quarterly Bkl

---

"The book itself is so laboriously written, and with such detailed elaboration of much that is commonplace, that it is exceedingly difficult to dig out the significant ideas. It is unfortunate that results of a study that should have awakened widespread interest in the exceedingly important problem of educating teachers should be so overwhelmingly smothered in verbiage." M. M. Willey

Ann Am Acad 242:203 N '45 500w

"This book is particularly interesting because it concentrates on the education of educators. It is a report prepared for the Commission on Teacher Education, and is a sort of co-operative venture giving the results of discussion and experiment in twenty colleges and universities (only one of them a Catholic college). Because of this diversity of sources the book is quite disjointed in spite of the authors' attempt to force unity of treatment." J. H. Fichter

+ — Cath World 162:282 D '45 450w

School & Society 61:80 F 3 '45 30w

Reviewed by G. W. Blackwell
Social Forces 24:128 O '45 450w

"The book is a contribution to the literature of higher education and group enterprise generally, not merely to teacher education."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:20 Mr '45 240w

ARNDT, H. W. Economic lessons of the nineteen-thirties; a report; issued under the auspices of the Royal inst. of int. affairs. 314p $3.75 (12s 6d) Oxford

330.904 Economic conditions. Economic policy 45-1712

"Mr. Arndt's report discusses causes and results of inter-war economic developments and the lessons which they teach, both in national economies and in international economics. . . Description of conditions in the 1920's gives the general background. Detailed studies of four major nations—the United States, Britain, France, Germany—whose economic policies were of decisive importance, and a suggestive account of Swedish trade cycle control follow, preceding treatment of international economic activities. Finally 'the lessons' deal separately with national and international questions, while stressing their interdependence. Solution of the trade cycle problem, for example, is 'an essential condition of reintegration of world economics.' Conversely effective international stability is necessary to solve domestic difficulties." Times [London] Lit Sup

Foreign Affairs 24:160 O '45 20w

"Without detracting from the undoubted industry and ability of the author, there is much reason to regret that the single-handed work of a young research assistant should have been sent forth into the world with the whole prestige of a 'report' of Chatham House attached to it. It certainly has none of the authoritative and judicious character which such a publication ought to have and which, for instance, the similar publications of the Economic and Financial Department of the League of Nations so admirably maintain. It adds practically nothing to knowledge, but merely brings together views expressed by authors of one particular view." F. A. Hayek

ARNDT, H. W.—Continued

— Spec 174:112 F 2 '45 600w

"In method and outlook the presentation is excellent. . . The writer generally achieves objectivity, and brings out clearly the qualifications by which planning must be accompanied."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p62 F 10 '45 750w

ARNE, SIGRID. United nations primer. 156p $1.25; text ed 95c Farrar

940.531 World war, 1939-1945—Congresses, conferences, etc. United nations, 1942-45-8624

Brief discussions of the various international conferences and meetings which took place during the war years. Includes full texts of important documents. Contents: The Atlantic charter; The United Nations declaration; Casablanca; The Food conference; The first Quebec conference; Moscow; The United Nations relief conference; Cairo; Tehran; The Ilo meeting; Bretton Woods; The second Quebec conference; The Aviation conference; Yalta; The San Francisco conference.

"The primer is both remarkable and admirable in that it panders neither to the red-baiting reactionary nor the capitalist-killing Communist. Authoress Arne recognizes that there are two sides to every question and she can be impartially sympathetic toward both." David Karno

+ Book Week p4 O 7 '45 450w

Booklist 42:92 N 15 '45

Canadian Forum 22:223 D '45 70w

Reviewed by George Jaffin

Columbia Law R 46:163 Ja '46 90w

"The style is straight journalese, highly colloquial—perhaps a deliberate bid for popularity with the man-in-the-street."

Kirkus 13:353 Ag 15 '45 170w

"Even for those who consider themselves more than ordinarily well-informed this book has merit. If they chose their news sources badly, or neglected them for a single day, or were led to lose sight of the forest by too great absorption in the trees, Signe Arne will give them the gist of what they lost. How extraordinary is her performance only those will know who combined close study of the events with efforts at explaining their implications to the cook or the taxi driver." Mildred Adams

+ N Y Times p4 N 11 '45 600w

School & Society 62:256 O 20 '45 30w

"Miss Arne has a thorough grasp of her subject and a gift for making complicated matters understandable."

+ Weekly Book Review p16 N 4 '45 150w

ARNOLD, ELLIOTT. Tomorrow will sing. 308p $2.50 Duell

45-1136

The experiences of an American airman, serving at a base near Foggia in 1944. Eddie Amato's father had been born in Italy, and his uncle still farmed the family land, which was not far from the American air base. The story concerns the farm cooperative which Eddie started, and the machinations of a young ex-fascist cousin.

"The arm of coincidence was very long when it set American-born bombardier Eddie Amato down practically on the farm of his uncle, Gennaro Amato, in southern Italy. Though the probability of such an event seems pretty remote, its possibility exists, and this makes plausible the somewhat hard-to-believe framework on which Elliott Arnold builds his fine, understanding novel. . . A book which is going to bring a tiny corner of a foreign land very warmly into American hearts. Another sincere gesture toward 'one world.'" Edith Roberts

+ — Book Week p3 Ja 21 '45 600w

Booklist 41:185 F 15 '45

"Without reading too much significance into the political aspects of 'Tomorrow Will Sing,' it is nevertheless apparent that Lt Arnold has turned out a first rate novel about the war in Italy—a simple tale, told with warmth and sympathy in the terms of people of two lands. It will not suffer in the inevitable comparison with 'A Bell for Adano.' 'Tomorrow Will Sing' rings a bell of its own." Ray McPartlin

+ Boston Globe p15 Ja 24 '45 300w

Christian Science Monitor p14 F 14 '45 400w

"A very pleasant story to read."

+ Commonweal 41:591 Mr 30 '45 650w

"A sympathetic, tender, occasionally terse story of a bomber base in Italy."

+ Kirkus 12:546 D 15 '44 170w

"Slight love interest and some good character delineation. Lacks excitement and suspense of author's The Commandos." M. J. Messler

Library J 70:32 Ja 1 '45 70w

"The author of 'Tomorrow Will Sing,' a novelist and newspaper man who enlisted in the Air Forces, knows how to give the civilian the feeling of being there himself. Other novelists have plumbed the mystic fatalism set up in airmen by the probability of sudden death. Or they have been fascinated by the crudities of language and recklessness of conduct through which aviators relax from the stress of their dangerous business. It is the distinction of Elliott Arnold that he writes from the mean position between these extremes of the unconscious fear or the superficial compensation. . . Unless we reject it altogether as oversimplification of the facts, this story awakens our awareness of the wealth of good intention within ourselves." E. B. Burgum

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 21 '45 1150w

Reviewed by Russell Maloney

New Yorker 20:69 Ja 27 '45 300w

"Elliott Arnold's novel of Italy today is shrouded everywhere in a sort of dream quality, as though in cotton batting. The sounds that come through are not the clear, direct notes of realism that Arnold may have intended to strike, but something else, the echoes of a consummation devoutly wished for and here prefigured in ideal form." N. L. Rothman

— Sat R of Lit 28:16 F 24 '45 400w

"'Tomorrow Will Sing' has many pages of poignancy and humor, but it is almost as episodic as a volume of short stories. . . Nevertheless, this book possesses a humanity that many, even good ones like 'The Commandos,' lack. For in this account of how a few American flyers and a few Italian farmers reached an understanding about themselves and their countries we can see forces at work more potent than the peace makers." Herbert Kupferberg

+ — Weekly Book Review p4 Ja 28 '45 650w

ASCH, SHALOM. One destiny; an epistle to the Christians; tr. by Milton Hindus. 88p $1.50 Putnam

296 Christianity and other religions—Judaism. Jews—Political and social conditions 45-7787

In this "epistle to the Christians" a Jewish writer reviews the history of anti-Semitism from its beginnings to its culmination under Hitler, and pleads with Christians for their acknowledgement of "one destiny" for the inheritors of the Judeo-Christian faith.

Reviewed by J. M. Yard

Book Week p4 S 16 '45 360w

Booklist 42:51 O 15 '45

"Here is a book that should be read and pondered. A fearless book. An unpalatable book for many readers."
+ Kirkus 13:267 Je 15 '45 260w

"Readers will disagree as to validity of and justification for the criticism, nevertheless, book deserves thoughtful, careful reading by wide public." E. P. Nichols
+ — Library J 70:683 Ag '45 110w

Reviewed by Alfred Werner
New Repub 113:474 O 8 '45 800w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
N Y Times p8 O 7 '45 500w

"The author of this book has performed a service of historic importance. In 'The Nazarene' and 'The Apostle,' he reassimilated, into the Jewish tradition itself, that great revolution in orthodoxy which became Christianity. No one has a better right to address an Epistle to the Christians, to call them his brothers, and to speak to them, with a wrath chastened by grief, of the wrongs that have been done to the Jews, with the passive consent of Christians, if not with their active connivance." Lewis Mumford
+ Sat R Lit 28:12 S 29 '45 700w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:15 D '45 240w

ASHBROOK, FRANK GETZ, and SATER, EDNA N. Cooking wild game; foreword by Jay N. Darling. 358p il $4 Judd

641.69 Cookery (game) 45-7271

" 'Meat from forest, field and stream and how to prepare it for the table—432 recipes.'—Subtitle. Preparation and cooking of big game, small game, birds, and unfamiliar varieties of fish, with a chapter on the domestic rabbit." Booklist

Booklist 42:6 S '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '45

ASHLEY-MONTAGU, MONTAGUE FRANCIS. Man's most dangerous myth: the fallacy of race; with a foreword by Aldous Huxley. 2d ed rev & enl 304p $3.25 Columbia univ. press [22s Oxford]

572 Race. Race problems A45-3363

A revised edition of a work on the "race" theory which first appeared three years ago (Book Review Digest, 1942, 1943). This edition has four new chapters and two new appendices. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by L. J. Lee
Am Pol Sci R 39:1054 O '45 360w

"A book of international importance and timeliness, as well as one of especial value to the American reader. It is a thorough, scientific examination of the modern conception of race." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p4 Ag 12 '45 500w

"It is now, more than ever, the most useful single book on the subject for the interested student of race in its relation to society. The professional point of view is that of an anatomist with full command of the scientific data."
+ Christian Century 62:935 Ag 15 '45 150w

"Man's Most Dangerous Myth: The Fallacy of Race has been called the most important current book on the subject of race, its meaning and its effects. If this were true of the first edition, it is even more so of the second, although the original thesis may be severely doubted. . . The book is important because it surveys in a rather popular fashion many of the features of the race problem which have needed systematic, yet popular, treatment. To this end, Professor Montagu's attack on the very concept of 'race' as a usable term outside of the smallest circles is commendable. . . For the careful reader, however, there are numerous points regarding the book which are disturbing. For one thing, Professor Montagu is inclined to speak too warmly and generally (and thus loosely) about many of his ideas. The book suffers from a too emphatic stress on many points—points on which the evidence seems hardly as optimistically suggestive as is made out. This kind of treatment of a far-reaching social problem tends to oversimplify, if not to distort, both the nature of the problem and its consequences." H. H. Stroup
+ — Crozer Q 23:89 Ja '46 950w
Foreign Affairs 24:161 O '45 20w

ASHTON, HELEN (MRS ARTHUR JORDAN). Yeoman's hospital. 271p $2.50 Viking [8s 6d Collins]

45-1831

Twenty-four hours in the life of a provincial English hospital in December, 1943, forms the basis of this novel. Doctors, nurses, patients, hospital routine, and something of the history of the hospital and the surrounding country all enter into the novel.

"For all the grimness and the pain in its pages, 'Yeoman's Hospital' is a surprisingly jaunty and consoling book." F .H. Bullock
+ Book Week p13 Mr 11 '45 270w
Booklist 41:237 Ap 15 '45
Boston Globe p6 F 21 '45 120w

"The unpretty detail is so well done that the squeamish will hardly enjoy it, but the curious layman will. And anyone with the notion of entering any of the professions involved in the civilian medical world will find the book an informative and entertaining introduction."
+ Cath World 161:188 My '45 150w

"There's a theory that books about hospitals are generally popular, but I confess to have found this pretty remote, perhaps because it is so utterly English. Helen Ashton usually seems to cut fairly deep in her psychological probings as she cross-sections communities or households, but this book has a very surface handling of multiple personalities."
Kirkus 12:539 D 1 '44 170w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford
Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 25 '44 210w

"Mrs. Ashton's most worthwhile achievement is in the creation of single lens-like scenes whereby all the processes of the hospital may be seen in confluence and the organization of these points made into an intelligible design. It is by the reduction of our astigmatic bewilderment at the alien complexity of our institutions that this and similar novels find a justification and a rationale." William Poster
+ New Repub 112:429 Mr 26 '45 210w

Reviewed by James Pope-Hennessy
New Statesman & Nation 28:188 S 16 '44 300w

Reviewed by Nona Balakian
N Y Times p14 F 18 '45 500w

"An unusually interesting novel well off the beaten track. Nice clean writing, and the technical detail is done in a style that is quite effective."
+ New Yorker 21:78 F 17 '45 60w

"Miss Ashton has used much skill in selection of events and in making them all seem perfectly probable and a convincing part of a hospital day. The pattern and atmosphere of routine, which are very important in the book's realism, are made to contain the personal dramas of a few characters without any sense of strain or hurry. This is much more deftly managed here than in the usual cross-section novel. And one gets to know the hospital, its appearance, smell and character, very well indeed in the course of one day." Kate O'Brien
+ Spec 173:248 S 15 '44 360w

Reviewed by G. C. Kaynor
Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 11 '45 240w

"A brisk, humane and always readable record of the commonplaces, perhaps the slightly dramatic commonplaces, of hospital existence, mainly from the point of view of the medical and nursing staff."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p413 Ag 26 '44 550w

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
Weekly Book Review p6 F 18 '45 750w

ASHTON, WINIFRED. See Dane, C., pseud.

ASSOCIATION FOR CHILDHOOD EDUCATION. Literature committee. Told under the stars and stripes; stories selected by the Committee; il. by Nedda Walker. (Umbrella bk) 347p $2 Macmillan 45-10364

"A collection of stories intended for older children than those who enjoy the early 'Umbrella' books. [It] is designed to stimulate an all-American feeling among racial groups in the United States. The selection, all from modern writers, is a good one, comprising chapters from books by Marguerite de Angeli, Doris Gates, Ann Nolan Clark, Arna Bontemps and others who have written of Bohemian, Russian, Syrian, and Chinese children among a larger group of those possessing a proud inheritance of diverse racial strains. A number of Christmas stories may be found in the collection." Horn Bk

---

Book Week p20 N 11 '45 270w
Booklist 42:151 Ja 1 '46

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:454 N '45 120w

"The book measures up well with this very excellent series, and makes its own contribution to expanding cultural relations and understanding among children."
+ Kirkus 13:421 S 15 '45 90w

"The 'Umbrella Books' have established themselves in respect of librarians, admiration of parents and guardians, and warm affection of children for whom their contents have been so thoughtfully collected."
+ Weekly Book Review p12 N 11 '45 310w

ATHERTON, MRS GERTRUDE FRANKLIN (HORN). Golden Gate country. (American folkways ser) 256p $3 Duell
979.4 California—History. San Francisco—History 45-2766

Historical sketch of the life and customs of the section of California around San Francisco, from the early days of the Spaniards to the present. Map on end papers. Index.

"This history is told entertainingly, spontaneously: it is perfectly clear that to the author these are really the things that seem important. Much of the material would seem appropriate in the pages of a popular magazine for women. But the book will be a shock and a disappointment to readers who expect in the American Folkways Series another volume marked by social insight and contemporary importance." J. T. Frederick
Book Week p6 Mr 18 '45 350w
Booklist 41:251 My 1 '45

"A scholar, a sharp observer of the times, or a reader who insists only on a diet of social (not 'society') significance will find much lacking. Mrs. Atherton has never depended upon these particular types for her success. One assumes that she has been assigned to tell stories, and she does so in a popular, human way which her readers will find convincing." R. K. S.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 24 '45 500w

"This is a fascinating account of the area surrounding San Francisco. . . It is not a balanced account, but it is a tremendous story." R. C. Miller
+ Churchman 159:18 Je 15 '45 150w

"A most interesting volume, which will aid, it is hoped, a multitude of readers to appreciate the character and importance of San Francisco not only in national but international affairs." Michael Williams
+ Commonweal 41:594 Mr 30 '45 750w

"The book reads like a delightful collection of stories of the region, against a dramatic historical backdrop. But—from the earthquake and fire on, the interest drops. Modern San Francisco never comes alive."
+ — Kirkus 13:50 F 1 '45 170w

"The authentic smack of the place is in it. Mainly it is a panorama of tumult, boiling up in and around that parish empire, history-girt and isolated, San Francisco." Idwal Jones
+ N Y Times p3 Ap 1 '45 600w

"This item, one of an otherwise estimable series of books about regional America, doesn't seem to amount to much. It is a rewrite of practically everything you have ever read about early California, with an overemphasis on San Francisco society, which the author has adorned for many, many years, and political small talk of four and five decades ago. However, Mrs. Atherton has written a great many books on these very subjects, so she may well be running short of material."
— + New Yorker 21:95 Mr 17 '45 80w

"Readers will find the last third of the book by far the most interesting, for here the author parts company with purely historical writing and treats of events of which she has first hand knowledge. . . Her recollections of so extended a period of San Francisco life will prove fascinating to any native and, one suspects to many who know little of the city and its characteristic humors and prejudices. . . 'Golden Gate Country' is not one of Gertrude Atherton's major books, but she has seldom written a more persuasive tribute to the city she has known—and with quite a few reservations—loved for three-quarters of a century." Oscar Lewis
+ Weekly Book Review p12 Mr 18 '45 600w

ATKINSON, CARROLL. Pro and con of the Ph.D. 172p $2 Meador
378.24 Degrees, Academic 45-6182

"The author has presented 40 criticisms selected from the 400-odd previously published in American professional magazines which he considers to be most typical of dissatisfaction felt over the present method of awarding the highest academic degree. Included is the 'sour-grape' type of contributions from disappointed candidates as well as the more serious efforts to bring about a reform movement." School & Society

---

Current Hist 9:326 O '45 10w
School & Society 61:432 Je 30 '45 60w

ATKINSON, CARROLL. True confessions of a Ph.D. and recommendations for reform. rev and enl ed 88p $1 Meador
378 Education, Higher. Degrees, Academic A45-4181

"The author's views of the 'diploma mills,' the meaningless academic titles, and what should constitute proper qualifications for the honor." Current Hist

---

Current Hist 9:326 O '45 10w
School & Society 61:432 Je 30 '45 30w

ATWOOD, WALLACE WALTER. Rocky mountains. (American mountain ser) 324p il map $3.75 Vanguard 917.8 Rocky mountains 45-11388

This third volume in the American mountain series is by the president of Clark University, who is also a former geologist with the United States Geological survey. Various chapters deal with such matters as: Climbing to high places; From the air and from the saddle; Understanding mountain scenery; The art of camping; A day in Wind River mountains; Bonanza in the Rockies; Indians, ranchmen, farmers, and tourists; The National parks in the Rocky mountain region. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by David Karno
Book Week p22 N 18 '45 230w
Booklist 42:93 N 15 '45
Kirkus 13:194 My 1 '45 150w

"Dr. Atwood's wide experience with mountain study, especially in the Rockies, and his matter-of-fact, nontechnical treatment of the topic, makes this volume one of wide appeal, especially for the lover of the out-of-doors. . . A popular treatment for the lay reader." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 70:585 Je 15 '45 120w

"Not since the days of Clarence King and John Muir has any geologist revealed so perfectly the rare combination of sound scientific lore and superb literary style that is displayed in this third volume of Roderick Peattie's American Mountain Series. Dr. Atwood . . . knows and loves the Rockies with keenly intelligent comprehension and deeply established emotion. . . The many beautiful and striking photographs, the artistic sketches by Eugene Kingman, and the maps and diagrams drawn by Erwin Raisz make this a book to delight the eye. Combined with the lucid text, they tell the story of the Rockies as it has never before been told."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:2 N '45 420w

"The present volume is by an eminent geologist and geographer, now president of Clark University, of Worcester. He has been walking and riding the Rockies these last thirty-five years, looking into their structure, collecting evidence as to how they came into being, and having, one feels certain, a mighty good time of it. But there are a little too many stones in his account, except for real rock hounds. . . Much of the book is done in an old-fashioned intimate travelogue manner, a method which may be found irritating by some readers, and which, in any case, has its limitations." Stewart Holbrook

Weekly Book Review p14 O 28 '45 650w

Wis Lib Bul 41:126 D '45

AUDEN, WYSTAN HUGH. Collected poetry. 466p $3.75 Random house

821 45-3302

"In 'Collected Poems' Auden has preserved most of what has appeared in the earlier books of poems, except that very little of 'The Orators' has been retained: some of the 'Six Odes' and a few shorter pieces, but of the prose in that book, only the 'Letter to a Wound.' Poems appearing first in the two books of travel are reprinted here, and there are twenty-four poems previously uncollected." (N Y Times) No index, but there is a full table of contents.

"The selection is excellently made, and the volume firmly establishes Mr. Auden as the most exciting poet of his generation. He is that rare being among contemporary poets—a real professional." Theodore Spencer

+ Atlantic 175:127 Je '45 360w

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p4 Ap 29 '45 550w

Booklist 41:266 My 15 '45

Bookmark 6:9 My '45

Reviewed by Pearl Strachan

Christian Science Monitor p13 My 12 '45 230w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 42:141 My 25 '45 2250w

"To judge by the contents of the 'Collected Poetry,' Auden regards as rubbish, or something like it, the longer works of his early period. Without exception he bans from this book the fantastic dramas of his youth. . . And on the other hand, the shorter pieces of all periods are liberally represented. This emphasis in favor of brevity seems to me right; for in Auden, I think, the heart that perceives is superior to the mind that formulates, the rhetoric is better than the architecture; and he is at his best in works requiring a minimum of organization. For the rest, this collection certainly confirms Auden's great reputation." F. W. Dupee

+ Nation 160:605 My 26 '45 360w

"This is a convenient edition of Auden, and those previously unacquainted with him would do well to begin with it. However, persons wishing to make a thorough study of him must still obtain the earlier separate volumes." F. C. Flint

N Y Times p1 Ap 8 '45 2600w

"Auden, it has for some time been apparent, has succeeded Eliot as the strongest influence in American and British poetry. And he has managed, in this collection, by skillful arrangement and deletion, to present himself to the reader as he exists at this moment. He does not draw attention to his growing pains or take us step by step through stage after stage of his development. He begins the book with one of those poems ('Musée des Beaux Arts') which announced, a few years ago, the beginnings of his maturity—a poem that seems as simply composed as a passage in conversation. It is not filled with Anglo-Saxon compression, or clogged with modern apparatuses and machines, or trimmed with off-rhymes. Earlier poems on his favorite subjects and in the special manner of his youth are included in the book. But they never leap out at us. The general tone is one of composure and simplicity, of that ease wherein, for a time, a young master can rest." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 21:86 Ap 14 '45 900w

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner

Poetry 66:204 Jl '45 3500w

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer

Sat R of Lit 28:10 Ap 28 '45 1150w

"Perhaps Mr. Auden's facility has sometimes driven him a little too quickly past what might have been the true poetic crux. Even the poet who develops a deeply original style must at times be the victim of his own style, must depend too much on the style to do the thinking for him. But Mr. Auden has not often surrendered to this temptation, and many pages of this volume will solidly support his reputation."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 1:11 S '45 240w

"What above all this book reveals is its author's profound preoccupation with the task to which both scientists and poet are dedicated. The word that recurs with hammering insistence below and above the noises of the factory, the war and the juke box in the bar that fill his verse is 'order.' . . It may be that in the end his very virtuosity will redeem his poetry from the vice of one of its virtues: its cleverness. For Auden's definition of poetry does not take pyrotechnics into account. . . It is in those passages where he is neither dazzled by his own percipience nor betrayed by his ethical preoccupation into didacticism that he shows his powers at their fullest and gives us some of the most remarkable poetry written in our time." Babette Deutsch

+ — Weekly Book Review p2 Jl 8 '45 1700w

Reviewed by D. A. Stauffer

Yale R n s 34:733 summer '45 900w

AUDEN, WYSTAN HUGH. For the time being. 132p $2 Random house [8s 6d Faber]

821 44-7545

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Curiously enough for a writer whose verse too often labours with a lumbering, club-footed gait, he has chosen to label his title-piece an oratorio; and it must be admitted that one or two passages attain a true lyrical beauty. But on the whole, I found the reading of this volume a baffling business; and without reluctance I leave it to posterity to assess the value of such bamboozling stuff." Wilfrid Gibson

— + Manchester Guardian p3 My 23 '45 150w

Reviewed by G. W. Stonier

New Statesman & Nation 29:175 Mr 17 '45 1600w

New Yorker 21:96 N 3 '45 340w

" 'The Sea and the Mirror' is a real work of dramatic extension and adds something to our knowledge and appreciation of the play. But the Christmas Oratorio, 'For the Time Being,' leaves us cold." Sheila Shannon

+ — Spec 174:433 My 11 '45 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p140 Mr 24 '45 750w

AUGER, PIERRE. What are cosmic rays? tr. from the French by Maurice M. Shapiro. rev & enl Am ed 128p il $2 Univ. of Chicago press

535 Cosmic rays A45-725

Story of cosmic rays from their discovery to the latest stratospheric balloon flights. The

AUGER, PIERRE—Continued
book was first published in France in 1941 and is here revised and translated. "This book is written primarily for the reader who lacks a technical knowledge of physics but who wants to keep in touch with current developments in science. It is not intended for the specialist but should provide a good perspective for the physicist who wants to get a quick view of what has been done in this new field." (Pref)

Booklist 41:181 F 15 '45
Bookmark 6:6 My '45
Library J 69:1001 N 15 '44 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:5 Ja '45

"To the scientific investigator, research into the unknown is seldom lacking in romance, but seldom has an able physicist been able to convey that feeling to the general reader in the same degree as that achieved by Pierre Auger in this fascinating little volume. The scientifically minded public without technical knowledge of physics, for whom this narrative was intended, will find here a thought-provoking account of an investigation which, though still in its infancy, has never in the annals of science been equalled either in the extreme measures taken to collect the data or in the boldness of its conclusions." T. H. Johnson
+ R of Scientific Instruments 16:83 Ap '45 500w

"A certain background of physics will add to the reader's appreciation of this clear exposition of our present knowledge of cosmic rays. There is a Jules Verne quality to the story of the adventurous scientists who have scaled mountain tops, penetrated deep mines, sent recorders to the bottoms of lakes, and made balloon ascents almost to the stratosphere to observe data on which knowledge of this mysterious radiation is based. No one knows its source, except that it is the most penetrating form yet discovered and comes to us in a fairly uniform manner from interstellar space."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:2 F '45 360w

"Here is an up-to-date and authoritative account of one of the most remarkable discoveries of modern science. It is so clearly written, and so admirably translated that very many English readers—even those without any technical knowledge of physics—will find it of absorbing interest."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p284 Je 16 '45 180w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:48 Je '45 240w
Reviewed by James Stokley
Weekly Book Review p12 Jl 8 '45 180w

AULAIRE, MRS INGRI (MORTENSON) D', and AULAIRE, EDGAR PARIN D'. Too big [il. by the authors]. [32p] $1 Doubleday 45-8208

A picture book with very simple text about a small boy who outgrew all of his clothes and his pets. He decided to solve his difficulties by growing big enough to ride an elephant.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p27 N 18 '45 140w
Booklist 42:78 N 1 '45
Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:451 N '45 40w
Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 21:446 N '45 40w

"The assured audience for the d'Aulaires will be delighted with this book aimed at a younger audience than they have reached in recent years."
+ Kirkus 13:395 S 1 '45 70w

"In subject matter and humor suitable for the preschool child. Attractive and bright." Kathleen Dunham
+ Library J 70:892 O 1 '45 70w
Reviewed by M. C. Skinner
Library J 70:951 O 15 '45 70w

"Pleasant nonsense story. . . The gentle absurdity of the story and its lively action will please and satisfy 3 to 5 year olds." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p35 O 7 '45 70w
New Yorker 21:122 D 8 '45 40w

"The end-papers are enchanting and the drawings all through the book as lovely as those in the earlier books of these two artists. . . This would be a nice book to send abroad to the children who cannot yet read English. There are English words, but one could easily do without them. Certainly the little boy would grow up just as fast if there were no words at all." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:52 N 10 '45 210w

"The colors are particularly attractive, the animals as jolly as the little boy." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 30 '45 240w

AUSTEN, JANE. Emma; a dramatization. See Glennon, G.

AYLING, KEITH. Old Leatherface of the Flying Tigers; the story of General Chennault. 274p il $2.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Chennault, Claire Lee. World war, 1939—Aerial operations 45-5627

Biography of Major General Claire Lee Chennault, who was responsible for the organization and success of the Flying Tigers in China, and who has recently resigned as commander of the fourteenth air force of the United States army air forces. Maps on end papers. Index.

"The life story of Maj. Gen. Claire Lee Chennault is timely now but it will be even more valuable in the years to come when our memories may need a little prodding to recall just how much we owe to such air power prophets. . . The story of the Russians, Frenchmen, Germans, British and Americans who flew with Chennault in China has been written again and again but in this book Ayling tells it from the viewpoint of the man whose theories on combat tactics made possible the success of the Tigers, and that of their successors in the 14th Air Force." G. A. Scheuer
Book Week p7 Jl 8 '45 400w
Booklist 42:16 S '45

"Mr. Ayling tells the story of Chennault's career with sympathy, directness and a knowledge of the technical aspects of air tactics. From his book it is possible to get an adequate, if superficial, idea of the type of man his hero is and of the extent of his achievements. But it is frankly a job of hasty journalism and as such it suffers from the fact that it is unable to supply a proper answer to the journalistic questions that the recent rush of events in the Orient has brought up concerning its central figure." Richard Watts
+ — New Repub 113:293 S 3 '45 950w

"This detailed study of [General Chennault's] life gives unvarnished accounts of his troubles with Gen. 'Vinegar Joe' Stilwell and Lieut. Gen. Clayton Bissell, although it does not carry down to the recent episode that led to his retirement from the Army Air forces for a second time. It is interesting reading, both for the light it throws on the air war in the Far East, and the picture it gives of a most unusual and forceful personality." Francis Scott
+ N Y Times p12 Ag 12 '45 500w

"The book gives an accurate picture of Chennault throughout a life full of adversity. It is factually excellent, it does not bog down in statistics, but the author's approach is too abstract for warmth. Neither General Chennault nor Mr. Ayling really leaks through. At no time does one feel well acquainted with Chennault for there is little or no reader participation. . . 'Old Leather Face' is not a great piece of literature but it serves as a good factual biography of one of this war's most colorful figures." Edmond Burke
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:43 Jl 7 '45 550w

"The author, himself a veteran pilot of World war I, has given a readable and colorful book about a picturesque soldier, and a great group of airmen—the Flying Tigers, and their successors, the officers and men of the little-publicized 14th air force." Cyril Clemens
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 20 '45 300w

"Various war books have dealt with the incredible feats of Lieutenant General Claire Lee Chennault and his miniature air force which caused such discomfiture to the Japanese in Burma and China, but no book has given so satisfying a picture of that remarkable man and his problem children—the tough, often rebellious Flying Tigers." Marcus Duffield

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ag 5 '45 750w

AZCARATE Y FLOREZ, PABLO DE. League of nations and national minorities; an experiment; tr. from the Spanish by Eileen E. Brooke. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of int. law. Studies in the adm. of int. law and organization) 216p $2 Carnegie endowment; Columbia univ. press
323.1 League of nations. Minorities [45-7989]

A discussion of the so-called "problem" of the minorities of Europe. In his Preface the author says: "Where national minorities are concerned, what is needed is the establishment of adequate juridical and political institutions—according to the circumstances of the moment—in order to prevent the existence of these minorities from becoming a threat to peace, both internal and international. The most detailed experiment which has been made up to now in this field was that entrusted to the League of Nations by the treaties signed after the first World War. In the following pages an attempt has been made to examine the results of twelve years' personal experience in the task of insuring that this experiment should achieve a positive outcome."

Nation 162:83 Ja 19 '46 150w
Reviewed by M. R. Konvitz
Sat R of Lit 29:10 Ja 5 '46 600w

"Dr. Azcárate was for twelve years Director of the Minorities Questions Section of the League of Nations, and his book has all the interest and value that come from first-hand knowledge of the practical difficulties which the previous experiment entailed. . . The book adds little to either the information or the suggestions contained in Mr. C. A. Macartney's authoritative study of 'National States and National Minorities,' published by Chatham House in 1934. But by reason of the author's penetrating comments based on personal acquaintance with the question, it serves as a useful and topical supplement to Mr. Macartney's study."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p579 D 8 '45 420w

B

B. B. pseud. See Watkins-Pitchford, D. J.

BABSON, ROGER WARD, and ZUVER, DUDLEY DE FOREST. Can these bones live? 254p $2 Harper
261 Christianity 45-8578

"A financial expert and an editor of religious books have combined forces in this work, the essence of which is that religion must be taken out of its private preserve and made a part of everyday life. . . Our authors denounce theologians, put science severely in its place, speak scornfully of educators generally, declare roundly that the movies are a 'religious abomination'—tartly find fault with most things as they are. . . But, in all their excursions and their laying about and head-cracking, their eye is single. The time has come when man's salvation depends upon return to the Bible as the basis of faith." N Y Times

"John Haynes Holmes and Edwin McNeil Poteat have given the book fervent praise. I can only conclude that these responsible thinkers skipped about every other paragraph. For the book is the most amazing mixture of wisdom and foolishness to appear between covers in many a year. It would not have required much more discrimination and intellectual discipline to make it worth reading, but it would have required more than it got." H. F. Reissig
— + Christian Century 63:17 Ja 2 '46 1050w

"Babson and Zuver find little but dry bones in the life of the church and doubt if they can be made either to live or to bring life to a needy world. Anyone who knows the church life of America well would have to admit that there is all too much truth in the indictment brought by these authors. Those who do not know the church will have their indifference or prejudice or antagonism intensified. Who will benefit by reading it, it is hard to say, unless it be that there are some churchmen who are unaware of or complacently indifferent to the conditions in the church which make for formality, professionalism and clericalism and so keep many people away from the church. One could wish there had been more by way of constructive remedy."
Kirkus 13:510 N 15 '45 260w
Reviewed by H. I. Brock
N Y Times p30 D 2 '45 400w

BACHNER, LOUIS. Dynamic singing; a new approach to free voice production; with an introd. by Marjorie Lawrence. 144p $2.75 Fischer, L.B.
784.93 Singing and voice culture 45-2660

A book by a teacher of singing who, after living in Berlin for twenty-six years, returned to his native land, the United States, in 1935. Among his pupils listed by Marjorie Lawrence in her introduction, are Heinrich Schlusnus (Berlin State opera), Karin Branzell, Frieda Leider, Lily Djanel, and others. "This book is concerned primarily with the development of freedom of voice production. Other phases in the art of singing are briefly touched upon." (Foreword)

Booklist 41:335 Jl 15 '45

"The book is designed for persons who are engaged in the profession of singing in a pretty big way. It is no mere 'course' for an amateur who wants to sing a little to entertain his friends. The adjective, Dynamic, in the title means actual business." W. P. T.
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 7 '45 550w
Weekly Book Review p10 F 18 '45 90w

BACON, PEGGY. Starting from scratch; an album of drawings. $3 Messner 741.91 Cats—Pictures, illustrations, etc. 45-9237

An album of drawings of many kinds of cats, from hardboiled alley haunters to pampered darlings. The book is loose-leaved so that drawings can be detached.

"Definitely for the cat lover, showing all kinds of cats. Occasional digs at their human brethren and sistern vary the pattern, but in the main this is the cat's own book."
+ Kirkus 13:417 S 15 '45 60w
Springf'd Republican p4d O 28 '45 360w

"Cheerfully admitting that the dog is man's best friend, I yet insist that the cat, his severest critic, can do something for him. It may be from the cat that Peggy Bacon, who is on good terms with all the race, learned to look at life with the interested detachment invaluable to an artist. In these enthralling sketches she looks at cats in just the way cats look at human beings; they may love you but they never lose their balance over it, and neither does she. . . Anything called cat is good enough for her to draw, but she draws best the predatory back-yard tom who howls like a minor prophet and fights like the Children of Israel smiting the Philistines." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p2 D 9 '45 300w

BAILEY, ALTON EDWARD. Industrial oil and fat products. 735p il $10 Interscience

660 Oils and fats 45-7841

"A technical survey of the various fatty products of commerce, their uses, and the processes used in their manufacture. The general chemical and physical characteristics of oils and fats are briefly reviewed. Raw materials are considered with respect to their composition, availability, and consumption. In connection with edible fats and oils, considerable material, not hitherto published, is supplied on plastic shortening agents and bakery products, and on the practical operations of refining, bleaching, deodorization, and hydrogenation. Numerous references are provided in footnotes, and there are author and title indexes. The author is Senior Chemical Technologist in the Southern Regional Research Laboratory of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, New Orleans, La." N Y New Tech Bks

"'Industrial Oil and Fat Products' is a very valuable addition to the literature relating to oils and fats. . . Without reservations the book is recommended to all as an outstanding treatise on the technology of oils and fats." J. H. Sanders

+ Chem & Eng N 23:2146 N 25 '45 300w

"The bibliography and index have been carefully prepared and increase the utility as a reference treatise. Throughout the book much new material not hitherto published is presented, particularly in some of the unit processes. The writing is critical and analytical of processes and uses; and the evaluations are helpful in understanding the best of modern practice. This carefully prepared and edited book brings up to date the subject and will be of very real help to everyone engaged in any way in the manufacture or use of fatty materials." D. F. Othmer

+ Chem & Met Eng 52:269 O '45 300w

Library J 70:489 My 15 '45 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:37 Jl '45

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:63 D '45 280w

BAILEY, FRANK. It can't happen here again; as told to Hannah Geffen. 176p il $2 Knopf

B or 92 44-47854

Autobiography of a successful American, born and brought up in a doctor's family in Chatham, New York. After graduating from Union college in 1885, the author came to New York, and was employed by the Title Guarantee and Trust Company of New York. Later he moved to Brooklyn and from then on he and Brooklyn prospered together. It is Mr Bailey's contention that the present high taxes prevent a young man from personal savings.

Kirkus 12:525 N 15 '44 180w

"It is a warm, inspiring chronicle of personal achievement, told with modesty, sincerity and humor. But it differs from similar narratives in the nature of its theme, for it is the author's conviction that unless taxes are sharply reduced there will no longer be the same opportunity for today's poor young men to get ahead." S. I. Pomerantz

+ — N Y Times p16 F 11 '45 320w

Springf'd Republican p6 F 14 '45 350w

"Mr. Bailey has written a personal narrative that illuminates the mental processes of that extraordinary company of men who industrialized and urbanized the United States."

+ Weekly Book Review p17 F 4 '45 400w

BAILEY, HENRY CHRISTOPHER. Wrong man. 252p $2 Doubleday

45-8328

Detective story.

Booklist 42:77 N 1 '45

Kirkus 13:304 Jl 15 '45 60w

"Mr. C., in excellent form, untangles the threads of a neat and nasty piece of work. Only a so-so job."

New Repub 113:382 S 24 '45 90w

"It is easier to bear with Clunk's slimy hypocrisy when one has a straight shooter like Colonel Baker working with him." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p26 S 9 '45 110w

"Rather difficult going, even for Clunk's admirers."

New Yorker 21:90 S 15 '45 80w

"Standard brand."

Sat R of Lit 28:38 S 22 '45 50w

"What with multiple murder, several villains of almost equal wickedness and detection by various hands, especially those of outrageous Josiah Clunk, Mr. Bailey's new mystery somewhat resembles a big tent show, well worth the price of admission." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p18 S 9 '45 180w

BAILEY, JOSEPH CANNON. Seaman A. Knapp, schoolmaster of American agriculture. 307p $3.25 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Knapp, Seaman Asahel. Agricultural extension work A45-4744

A biography of a nineteenth century farmer, agricultural journalist, and college president who was the founder of the agricultural extension service of the United States.

Booklist 42:147 Ja 1 '46

Reviewed by R. A. East

Sat R of Lit 28:34 S 15 '45 1200w

School & Society 62:175 S 15 '45 30w

BAILEY, MARGARET EMERSON. Good-bye, proud world. 408p $3 Scribner

B or 92 45-2822

"The author's story of her own girlhood in Rhode Island around the turn of the century offers a picture of the times and of a sensitive, intelligent child growing to womanhood in the midst of an eccentric but entertaining household." Publisher's note

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 Ap 15 '45 270w

Booklist 41:253 My 1 '45

"Margaret Bailey has a prodigious memory and has peppered the continuous conversation in her volume with colloquialisms, humor, and a distinctive sharpness of perception." E. W.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 4 '45 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '45

"One of the most refreshing autobiographies I've read in some time. And important not because it deals with famous people—for it doesn't—nor with vital events that made history—for it doesn't do that either. But because, in the tracing of the development of one 'rebel' against the mores of her world, one sees a bit of America in the making, one glimpses another bit of America in its passing."

+ Kirkus 13:77 F 15 '45 340w

Reviewed by Nona Balakian

N Y Times p12 Ap 29 '45 420w

"All this is fascinating. However, I shall go against the usual critic's dictum which says that it is wrong to fictionalize a biography, or even an autobiography. I think Miss Bailey should have written her story as a novel. In writing so intimately about herself and her family she comes awfully close to what her Providence ladies would consider not quite good taste. She, as Our Heroine, takes herself awfully seriously, and there is more than a little conceited arrogance in her scorn of the people with whom she grew up. A novelized account would have made her readers forgive, to some extent, her intolerant attitude and her holier-than-thou sureness." K. S. Rosin

Sat R of Lit 28:25 Ap 21 '45 600w

"It is an unusual book, an exciting book, for someone in it is always on the rampage, and it illustrates vividly how early influences shape one's life." M. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 1 '45 800w

Time 45:104 Ap 9 '45 30w

"'Good-Bye, Proud World' reveals such a sensitive, intelligent, dignified, high-principled soul in the making that it is difficult to say just why it proves so unsatisfying a book. Perhaps it was the author's very earnestness that bogged her down. All the romances of young womanhood came to her as deadly serious encounters—all the friendships as fraught with momentousness. No spark of humor, in fact, entered Margaret Emerson Bailey's life during the first twenty-three years, and one can only hope that she later learned to laugh at herself as well as at the world." Marion Sturges-Jones

+ — Weekly Book Review p12 Ap 1 '45 600w

Wis Lib Bul 41:52 My '45

BAILEY, TEMPLE. Red fruit. 202p $2 Houghton

45-1222

The romance of a good, dependable girl who almost lost her handsome soldier to a prettier, cleverer woman. The time is the present; the scene Washington, D. C. and Florida.

Reviewed by Clip Boutell

— Book Week p9 F 18 '45 250w

Booklist 41:210 Mr 15 '45

"Superficial picture of wartime Washington as setting for a cardboard romance along guessable lines."

Kirkus 12:547 D 15 '44 100w

N Y Times p20 F 11 '45 150w

Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 4 '45 240w

"The story is skillfully told." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p19 F 18 '45 220w

Wis Lib Bul 41:38 Mr '45

BAILEY, THOMAS ANDREW. Woodrow Wilson and the great betrayal. 429p il $3.50 Macmillan

940.3141 Versailles, Treaty of. Wilson, Woodrow. U.S.—Foreign policy 45-5994

An account of what happened when the United States failed to ratify the Treaty of Versailles and join the League of Nations. It is a study of events in this country from the time of Wilson's return from Paris to the death of Warren Harding. In a final chapter the author draws up a list of fourteen betrayals which according to him add up to the one big betrayal. The book follows the author's Woodrow Wilson and the Lost Peace (Book Review Digest, 1944). Bibliographical notes. Index.

Reviewed by C. A. Berdahl

Am Pol Sci R 39:1208 D '45 650w

Reviewed by Walter Johnson

Book Week p3 Jl 22 '45 490w

Booklist 42:11 S '45

Reviewed by T. F. Opie

Churchman 159:17 O 1 '45 160w

Foreign Affairs 24:163 O '45 90w

"Companion study to Woodrow Wilson and the Lost Peace and once again an explicitly detailed, cleanly detached retelling of the failure of his last crusade."

+ Kirkus 13:82 F 15 '45 170w

"Extremely readable, with fully documented bibliographical notes, it emphasizes role of public opinion played in keeping America out of League." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 70:353 Ap 15 '45 110w

"Bailey's analysis will displease Wilson enthusiasts nourished upon the reverent biographies of Baker, Dodd, and more recently Bell. Some of his conclusions they will not be able to deny, but there are others to which they might well take exception. Perhaps Wilson has been too much admired for those traits which made his course all the more difficult—his unwillingness to compromise, especially when a moral issue was involved, and his stubborn clinging to principle in the face of a reality that demanded more moderate tactics. Bailey, however, seems to have overemphasized their role in bringing about the League's defeat." E. N. Saveth

+ — Nation 161:135 Ag 11 '45 400w

New Repub 113:164 Ag 6 '45 650w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p4 Jl 15 '45 1800w

"Mr. Bailey, in his indictment, probably overstates his cases and makes the United States more of a villain than it actually was (there were a lot of other betrayers in the international woodpile, after all), but his book, an examination of certain mistakes it might be well for us not to make again, has an immediate as well as a historical value."

+ — New Yorker 21:64 Jl 7 '45 230w

"The deserved approbation with which Professor Bailey's previous volume on Woodrow Wilson and the Lost Peace was received is due also to this sequel." D. S. Muzzey

+ Pol Sci Q 60:465 S '45 1800w

"It is apparent that Professor Bailey has mingled history with speculation, and has become himself a critic. Since this is so, it is fair to criticize him as a critic, although not ungenerously, and with recognition of his own fairness as a researcher who has dug up anew and presented in good order the ensemble of the most miserable scene in American history. . . But he is wrong, one believes, in his treatment of the primal, thundering issue. He discounts the only real power upon which Wilson depended—that of the voice and support of the American people." E. G. Sisson

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:9 Je 30 '45 1550w

"This is not just another book about Wilson and the League. The author presents many new interpretations and emphasizes certain incidents which fit into a pattern frequently neglected by other writers on the subject. In addition, the book is impartial, readable, dramatic, without the sacrifice of dignity and scholarliness." L. B. Hill

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 22 '45 850w

"The book is by no means a definitive history of this important period, and many readers will undoubtedly object to the immoderate partisanship of the final chapter in which fourteen specific 'betrayals' are listed as consequences of the treaty failure."

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:28 S '45 200w

"Thomas A. Bailey, who is a professor of history at Stanford University, is by long odds the ablest of the resenters of Woodrow Wilson, and his new volume, 'Woodrow Wilson and the Great Betrayal,' is his ablest book." G. W. Johnson

Weekly Book Review p3 Jl 15 '45 1100w

"Thoughtfully considered, ably and clearly presented, Professor Bailey's appraisal deserves a wide reading. However, one major objection may be stated: Bailey places Wilson's mistakes in defending the League almost on a par with the activities of the irreconcilables in defeating it. Granted that, in effect, both contributed to the result, it would still seem valid at all times to maintain a clear distinction between the primary responsibility of those who carry through a ruinous policy, and the secondary responsibility of those who, because of tactical errors, fail to prevent it. Professor Bailey exhibits, but does not really explain Wilson's mistakes." D. M. Potter

+ — Yale R n s 35:162 autumn '45 550w

BAIRD, ALBERT CRAIG, ed. Representative American speeches: 1944-1945. (Reference shelf) 328p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

815 Speeches, addresses, etc. (38-27962)

"These 300 pages of recent American addresses illustrate many varieties, from after-dinner speeches to campaign oratory. Radio is not omitted. Religion is represented by the now famous speech of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and sermons by Benjamin E. Mays and Bernard Iddings Bell." (Christian Century) Speeches are grouped under headings: End of the European war; America and international collaboration; America and national defense; Fourth term campaign; End of a regime; American ideals; Social and economic principles; Education and the war; America and religion. Contains biographical notes. Cumulated author index 1937-1945.

Booklist 42:130 D 15 '45

"The book is a useful addition to the documentary history of these two years."

+ Christian Century 62:1259 N 14 '45 70w

BAIRNSFATHER, BRUCE. No kiddin'! [112p] il $2 Putnam

940.5497 World war, 1939—Humor, caricatures, etc. 45-2122

Another collection of this English artist's cartoons, made while he was with the U.S. Eighth air force. Similar to his Jeeps and Jests (Book Review Digest, 1943).

Booklist 41:207 Mr 15 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '45

"These cartoons bring many a chuckle—the old humor is still there, British (not too much) but keyed to our own AAF."

+ Kirkus 13:127 Mr 15 '45 40w

"Bruce Bairnsfather has lost none of his skill, and his humor is warm and wise and unforced. There are many fine cartoonists depicting military life today, but this artist's work is still something special, 'has hit were.'" Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 22 '45 200w

BAITSELL, GEORGE ALFRED, ed. Science in progress, by Walter R. Miles [and others] fourth series; foreword by Lorande Loss Woodruff. 331p il $3 Yale univ. press

504 Science (39-14778)

Contents: Psychological aspects of military aviation, by W. R. Miles; The physical structure and biological action of nerve cells, by D. W. Bronk; Energy and vision, by Selig Hecht; Chemical transmission of nerve impulses, by Otto Loewi; The mathematical nature of physical theories, by G. D. Birkhoff; The magnetic approach to the absolute zero of temperature, by Peter Debye; The drift toward equilibrium, by Henry Eyring; Streams of atoms, by I. I. Rabi; Adventures in vacuum chemistry, by K. C. D. Hickman; Present status of the vitamin B complex, by C. A. Elvehjem; Blood and blood derivatives, by E. J. Cohn. Index.

Reviewed by Bruno Gebhard

Am J Pub Health 35:962 S '45 180w

Booklist 41:296 Je 15 '45

Reviewed by Watson Davis

Chem & Eng N 23:2148 N 25 '45 400w

Christian Century 62:1385 D 12 '45 280w

"An invaluable technical work." Roy Hillbrook

+ Current Hist 8:543 Je '45 90w

Kirkus 13:49 F 1 '45 40w

Library J 70:308 Ap 1 '45 80w

"'Science in Progress' is not designed for arm-chair reading. Nevertheless, the inquiring layman can benefit from the non-mathematical areas of the text. For the scientist, of course, it is a book to be recommended without reservation. Editor Baitsell has organized the material admirably, supplied biographies of the contributors and appended first-rate bibliographies and an index. In sum, it is a book for Americans to be proud of and to own." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p27 S 9 '45 420w

Reviewed by Harlow Shapley

Sat R of Lit 28:19 Je 9 '45 1150w

"This report of progress on the far-flung frontiers of science was prepared by the very men who were responsible for the advances of knowledge. It is not a second-hand account by writers who had to secure their information from others. Knowing the technical nature of most scientific achievements of modern times and the habits of most specialists with regard to vocabulary, the contributors to this volume are to be warmly congratulated upon their success in presenting their material in such interesting and comprehensible manner." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:1 My '45 1200w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:50 S '45 280w

Reviewed by James Stokley

Weekly Book Review p20 S 16 '45 310w

Reviewed by J. H. Bradley

Yale R n s 35:367 winter '46 950w

BAKELESS, MRS KATHERINE (LITTLE). Glory, hallelujah! 100p il $1.50 Lippincott

784.71 Howe, Mrs Julia (Ward)—Battle hymn of the republic 44-8061

An account of the writing of the Battle hymn of the republic and its rise to prominence as the most-loved song of the Civil war period.

"Entertainingly told."

+ Kirkus 12:481 O 15 '44 130w

"Recommended for large libraries and for smaller ones where funds will permit." E. D. Briggs

+ Library J 69:1005 N 15 '44 60w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 21 '45 60w

Wis Lib Bul 41:31 F '45

BAKER, CHARLOTTE. Necessary Nellie; il. by the author. 96p $2 Coward-McCann

"[This] book printed in brown and red tells the story of a family of children living near an old Spanish Mission in Texas and their white dog, Nellie." Sat R of Lit

"Every year brings its own crop of dog stories—some of them ordinary, some of them very special. 'Necessary Nellie' is one of the special ones."

+ Book Week p4 N 11 '45 230w

Booklist 42:112 D 1 '45

"Humor and a happy spirit permeate the drawings and text of this Texas story, which is placed near an old Mission, where a kindly Mission Father lives. A completely satisfactory ending proves how a little white dog justifies his adoption." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:453 N '45 70w

"It is a story that might well have degenerated into sentimentality. . . But never for a moment does the story lose a rather casual, friendly, unsentimental quality. I liked it."

+ Kirkus 13:471 O 15 '45 150w

"One of the most charming, sure-fire stories for the difficult fourth-grade level to appear in a long time. . . A must book for all libraries." G. M. Williams

+ Library J 70:1137 D 1 '45 70w

"This is an amusing and natural story, with light-hearted illustrations by the author. For children 7 to 12." M. F.

+ N Y Times p18 N 11 '45 90w

"Attractive."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:62 N 10 '45 30w

BAKER, ELIZABETH WHITEMORE. Stocky, boy of west Texas; il. by Charles Hargens. 188p $2 Winston

45-3045

In 1878 a buffalo hunter going thru Comanche territory to get to the hunting grounds found an orphan boy of twelve, trying to live alone in that wild country. The two joined forces, and Stocky learned to hunt and shoot and skin buffaloes, avoid the Indians, and kill rattlesnakes. For boys of twelve to fourteen.

"The author is possessed of a wealth of material, and, it seems, is determined to give all. The result—top-heavy melodrama. Such authentic material deserves better treatment. The illustrations are outstanding and almost save the story." F. N. Litten

— + Book Week p14 Je 3 '45 310w

Booklist 41:273 My 15 '45

"Elizabeth Baker writes vividly of exciting days in the Southwest, about 1878, not long before the great herds of buffalo were exterminated. With her thrilling tale of hunting and ranch life, encounters with Comanches and cattle rustlers, she successfully conveys a sense of the glory and color of the mountains of west Texas, to which Stocky's innate love of beauty gave heartfelt response. Charles Hargens's drawings are realistic and informing."

+ Horn Bk 21:195 My '45 120w

"Good straightforward, well-written stuff."

+ Kirkus 13:87 F 15 '45 170w

Reviewed by Nelle McCalla

Library J 70:493 My 15 '45 70w

"Miss Baker has made her characters three dimensional. Without detracting from the pace of her story, she has filled in a vivid background of rolling prairie, feathery mesquite and prickly pear, canyons, bluffs and acres of brilliant wild flowers. The drawings help to make the book a genuine contribution to the stories of the days when the West was young." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 29 '45 180w

"There is little originality in the story and the writing is full of hackneyed expressions, but the Texas background gives it its place among pioneer stories. The drawings, too, give a good picture of the locale." R. A. Hill

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:34 Ag 11 '45 320w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p5 My 6 '45 310w

Wis Lib Bul 41:85 Jl '45

BAKER, EMILY VERONICA. Children's questions and their implications for planning the curriculum; with special reference to the contribution of the natural and social sciences in the intermediate grade curriculum. 172p $2.35 Teachers college

372 Interest (psychology). Education, Elementary—Curricula. Science—Study and teaching. Social sciences—Study and teaching 45-6856

The author's thesis is that children's interests as expressed in their questions are important for teachers and curriculum planners in elementary schools. "The purpose of the study is threefold: (1) to call attention to the rich resource which lies in the questions children raise; (2) to indicate to faculties of teachers colleges the fields of knowledge with which elementary teachers should be well acquainted; (3) to suggest means by which children's questions may give direction to the curriculum of the intermediate grades and the teachers college. Over 9200 questions were collected from approximately 1400 children in grades three to six." (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography. Index.

"The questions themselves make interesting and informing reading. This study is a significant one." H. J. Carman

+ Sat R of Lit 28:24 S 15 '45 270w

"A study of especial value to supervisors and teachers in planning the elementary curriculum."

+ School & Society 62:47 Jl 21 '45 20w

BAKER, FRANK. Mr Allenby loses the way. 262p $2.75 Coward-McCann 45-5840

An imaginative story with a hint of allegory. A middle-aged London newsdealer who believes in fairies is given five wishes by a strange old man. In answering the questions needed for the granting of the wishes the whole shape of the man's life is changed. The scene of the story is London in wartime; the theme is the power exerted by one individual over another.

"Part fantasy, part mystery, with a background of wartime London, it might, however, have been turned into a moving parable had Baker been less concerned with entertaining his readers. As it stands, the book is a hybrid." Marion Strobel

Book Week p3 Je 24 '45 270w

"The artful trickery of plot, motive and character hold the interest, though the story itself falls short of the potentialities."

+ — Kirkus 13:115 Mr 15 '45 130w

"Mr. Baker has approached his idea from two different angles, with the result that whimsy intrudes self-consciously on weighty philosophy, and deep talk falls feebly from the mouths of characters who are more shadow than substance." Nona Balakian

N Y Times p13 Jl 8 '45 360w

"The whole story is so hopelessly muddled, and so much of the supernatural is brought in to no purpose, that it is hard to be sure who is human and who isn't, and the reader will probably give up in honest bewilderment long before the hero finally disappears into the same fairy ring in which he started life. All this isn't nearly as whimsical as it sounds, but it is so many worse things that, by comparison, whimsy seems an engaging quality."

New Yorker 21:69 Je 23 '45 120w

"Like Mr. Baker's previous novels and like some of the works of Anatole France, 'Mr. Allenby Loses the Way' is difficult to classify. . . Nevertheless, his peculiar wit, even when bitter rather than humorous, decorates every page, and the reader is constantly titillated by graceful writing, provocative suggestions, and an audacious juxtaposition of improbables." Grace Frank

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:27 Jl 21 '45 650w

"Mr Baker has written a most confusing novel because he has chosen to try for a successful fusing of fantasy, psychology and individual rebellion into what turns out to be a most adventitious, almost cloying, plot." V. H. Fuller

— Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 12 '45 480w

"Immensely readable, the book is still not wholly a success. For one thing coincidence grows a very long arm; but this is hardly to be objected to, since here coincidence is lifted from the plane of chance to that of destiny and Mr. Baker's consummate handling of atmosphere makes it acceptable. More serious is the clash in mood between the opening incidents and the body of the book. It is as if Mr. Baker had set out to write one kind of story and ended by writing a much more serious kind. . . But if the book has faults, it can still be sincerely recommended. Original in treatment, entertaining, it will keep the reader poised on his chair edge wondering what is going to happen next, and as he chuckles or shudders, as he often will, he will also pause sometimes to think." Jennings Rice

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 Je 17 '45 750w

BAKER, HELEN E. More about Africa. 122p pa 50c Friendship press

266 Missions—Africa

"A missionary study book for junior high school grades. It gives a good general view of Africa and its people, as well as sound teaching about the Christian enterprise in the continent." Christian Century

+ Christian Century 62:709 Je 13 '45 30w

Foreign Affairs 24:170 O '45 10w

BAKER, JOHN RANDAL. Science and the planned state. 120p $1.75 Macmillan [7s 6d Allen, G]

507.2 Research. Science and state 45-9151

"At the present time, the old argument of 'pure' against 'planned' science is far more than just an academic debate. Scientific progress in wartime—for example, the control of atomic energy—has presented problems of tremendous importance to the public welfare and international politics. Thoughtful men everywhere, whether in science or out, should be concerned with the question of national planning and its implications for the future of scientific research. In [this book] John R. Baker, a lecturer in zoology at Oxford university, argues for free, unplanned, art-for-art's-sake scientific research." Springf'd Republican

Christian Century 62:1321 N 28 '45 100w

Current Hist 9:550 D '45 80w

"Enlightening book by an English scientist. . . It is a timely theme on the right for freedom in science." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:55 Ja 1 '46 80w

Reviewed by Michael Polanyi

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 27 '45 230w

Reviewed by Benjamin Harrow

Nation 162:76 Ja 19 '46 950w

Reviewed by Bernard Jaffe

New Repub 113:720 N 26 '45 1100w

"The low level of debate at which this book is written is all the more disappointing because there is a real need, as Dr. Baker

BAKER, J. R.—Continued
has recognised, for a study of the kind and quantity of freedom which scientists require for their work. It is true, as he says, that most recent discussions have emphasised the importance of planning and direction—which are also needed, and in my opinion, more pressingly at present. But the other side of the case also requires thinking out and stating. The only sensible object to aim at is to increase both planning and freedom at the same time. Mutual accusations of intellectual treason are not a promising line of advance towards this." C. H. Waddington
— + New Statesman & Nation 29:40 Je 23 '45 550w

"Written and announced early this year, before the explosion of the atomic bomb or the furor created in scientific circles by the Johnson-May bill, it now has a timeliness which the author could hardly have anticipated, and a particular pertinence on this side of the Atlantic, to which the struggle for freedom in science seems in process of being transferred." P. W. Bridgman
N Y Times p3 D 2 '45 1500w

Reviewed by Harry Roberts
Spec 175:18 Jl 6 '45 700w

"By tarring central planning with the totalitarian brush, Dr. Baker thinks he demolishes it. This is invidious reasoning. The question is not whether there should be central planning in science, but rather how much. To assert that scientific research should be sufficient unto itself, like music, art and literature, with only an incidental relationship to human welfare, is to deny all social values." Harry Daum
Springf'd Republican p4d O 21 '45 550w

" 'Science and the Planned State' is a refreshing book which pricks the bubble of much pseudo-scientific propaganda by many who do not, and some who should, know better."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p292 Je 23 '45 650w

Reviewed by James Stokley
Weekly Book Review p14 Ja 20 '46 700w

BAKER, MRS LOUISE (MAXWELL). Party line; il. by Stephen J. Voorhies. (Whittlesey house publication) 273p $2.50 McGraw 818 45-2994

"To the list of entertaining, nostalgia-soaked books about small-town life in America, add one more. This time the setting is Mayfield, Calif., but it might as well have been a town in Illinois or Massachusetts. The tale is told partly from the reminiscences of the author whose own girlhood was spent in a Mayfield, but mostly it is gleaned from the earphones of Miss Elmira, for forty-three years switchboard custodian and petty tyrant of the town's party lines." Weekly Book Review

---

Reviewed by Rosemary Taylor
Book Week p6 Mr 25 '45 270w

Booklist 41:284 Je 1 '45

Bookmark 6:14 My '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '45

"Old fashions in 'listening-in'—fine points—the good and the bad of it. Placidly pleasant commentary on community life—then and now—which has a bit of possibility of Country Lawyer market."
+ Kirkus 13:28 Ja 15 '45 200w

"Book has charm, laughter, variety. Those who remember the party line will become a bit nostalgic and the younger generation [which] has known only the impersonal dial phone will find in Party Line an important bit of Americana. Recommended." H. P. Bolman
+ Library J 70:265 Mr 15 '45 100w

"This is a heart-warming book full of chuckles and human nature. . . Several scenes of tragedy and pathos are excellent bits of writing. Small towns can be cruel as well as friendly and Miss Baker is to be commended for giving a complete picture. 'Party Line' is a friendly, candid portrayal of a period in American history." H. P.
+ N Y Times p29 Mr 18 '45 150w

" 'Party Line,' an appealing collection of American made portraits, will give good solid entertainment and is guaranteed to make the reader heave many a nostalgic sigh." C. K. Bausman
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 18 '45 470w

Time 45:104 Mr 12 '45 30w

"Mrs. Baker writes as you like to hear people talk: cleverly and without apparent effort. Her deft descriptions of the numerous characters peopling her pages make you not only fond of them, for most are basically lovable, but also make them stick in your mind. 'Party Line' is a book to put almost any one in a good mood. If you're faced with a three-hour train trip and spot it in a station bookstall—by all means, buy it." B. A. Thacher
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 18 '45 650w

BAKER, MRS NINA (BROWN). Lenin; il. by Louis Slobodkin. 257p $2.50 Vanguard
B or 92 Lenin, Nikolai—Juvenile literature 45-10074

"An objective life of the Russian leader which makes no plea for Communism but which is, rightly enough, colored by the author's enthusiasm for Lenin himself. The chapters on his bourgeois childhood are fictional in form, but from then on the book is, for the most part, a factual, non-argumentative, and dramatic political history of Russia since 1887." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 42:169 Ja 15 '46

"It is high time there was a good teen age level biography of Lenin, but somehow this doesn't quite fill the bill. It seems spotty and insufficiently dramatic in the light of available material."
— Kirkus 13:400 S 1 '45 110w

"[Mrs] Baker dedicates her pen to the task of introducing great figures of history to older boys and girls. Having done biographies of Garibaldi, Peter the Great, Juarez and Bolivar she has now tackled her most difficult figure. She cannot here content herself with the mere popularization of fairly well established facts. Lenin's role in history and its significance are so fiercely disputed that the author is obliged to make up her mind regarding matters on which not all the evidence is yet in. . . But [Mrs] Baker has a special predisposition to making errors of her own. More than a man of action Lenin was a man of doctrine and controversy, matters in which the author is not at home and which do not lend themselves readily to her special type of romanticizing for young people. And wherever there are gaps in her factual knowledge, she gives way to a misleading kind of romantic conjecture." B. D. Wolfe
— + N Y Times p13 D 16 '45 600w

"The author's lack of first-hand source material prevents it from being in any sense an intimate biography, but she has written a useful and exciting book for readers of fifteen or older."
+ New Yorker 21:139 D 8 '45 80w

"The book is likely to interest only those already sympathetic to the movement. There is a great array of information, and while the author's sympathies are plain, this information is presented with admirable fairness. But her book is no more a personal portrait than one of those photomontages that in the earlier years of Soviet history used to cover the walls at international expositions with vast numbers of anonymous, unidentified faces."
+ — Weekly Book Review p14 N 11 '45 400w

BAKER, RAY STANNARD (DAVID GRAYSON, pseud). American chronicle; the autobiography of [the author]. 531p $3.50 Scribner
B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. U.S.—Politics and government—1865-. Wilson, Woodrow 45-2441

The second volume of the autobiography, of which the first volume was Native American (Book Review Digest, 1941). The present section covers the years from 1892, when the author began his career as a journalist, to the death of Woodrow Wilson, in 1924. Index.

"American Chronicle is disappointingly meager in its treatment of muckraking and Progressivism. Not so in the lengthy section devoted to the first World War. To read Mr. Baker's chapters on his mission to England and France as an observer for the State Department during this time is once more to recapture the spirit which made McClure's the unofficial organ of the Square Deal. Here indeed are England and France as the man in the street saw them." Louis Filler

Am Hist R 51:139 O '45 600w

Reviewed by Ellery Sedgwick

Atlantic 175:127 Je '45 360w

"'American Chronicle,' covering as it does the rich period from 1892 to 1925, is a treasure house for the historian and for the lover of literature. Baker writes easily, familiarly, and his book may well be ranked as one of the great American autobiographies." J. A. Brandt

+ Book Week p3 Mr 18 '45 1050w

Booklist 41:223 Ap 1 '45

"What makes 'American Chronicle' a deep, authentic slice of American life is the brilliant reporting of Baker's earlier years." L. M. Lyons

+ Boston Globe p15 Mr 7 '45 450w

"Reporters do not make history. They see it made, disclosing in the process of the incubation and the development and disclosure of the event itself, only those facts permitted to be disclosed under the rule of the self-imposed censorship. It is only with the fact accomplished that those who have watched from trend to finale can tell the story in its completeness. In writing an autobiography, Ray Stannard Baker has written history. He has sought, apparently, to avoid pointing a moral to adorn a tale. But he has done just that, and more." F. L. Perrin

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 12 '45 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '45

Foreign Affairs 24:163 O '45 90w

Kirkus 13:25 Ja 15 '45 210w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

Nation 160:677 Je 16 '45 400w

Reviewed by E. F. Goldman

New Repub 112:484 Ap 9 '45 800w

"Besides its valuable historical matter, this 'Chronicle' is full of shrewd and vivid little character sketches, flashlights cast upon people with whom he was thrown. . . The autobiographer's own character, albeit never thrust forward, gives life and color to every chapter; his broad tolerance, his immovable intellectual probity, his cheerful idealism, rooted not in chimera and roseate hopes but in knowledge of erring humanity and the sad lucidity of that logic; and, pervading it all, the warmth and charity of the man." S. H. Adams

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 4 '45 1200w

New Yorker 21:91 Mr 10 '45 140w

"Ray Stannard Baker's autobiography is three books in one—a chronicle by a super-reporter of great events which he witnessed either as an actor or from a seat in the front row; a vivid record of personal experience; a self-analysis of a large mind and an idealistic soul in process of development. That last aspect of the book is the one which will most interest a professional writer." Will Irwin

+ Sat R of Lit 28:68 Ap 14 '45 1300w

"In presenting the story of his life, Mr. Baker has written an autobiography which will probably take a place beside those of Franklin, Henry Adams, and Lincoln Steffens in the front rank of American biography." R. A. Brown

+ Social Studies 36:276 O '45 1450w

Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 25 '45 550w

Reviewed by R. B. Scandrett

Survey G 34:136 Ap '45 500w

Time 45:99 Mr 12 '45 800w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:12 D '45 360w

"His book is charming, but it all seems far away and long ago." G. W. Johnson

Weekly Book Review p3 Mr 4 '45 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 41:47 Ap '45

BALCHIN, NIGEL. Small back room. 216p $2.50 Houghton [8s 6d Collins]

45-2273

Novelized attack on the bungling of politicians and civil servants and their hampering of the war effort. The scene is England; the time, the present. The narrator is a crippled scientist who is set to discover the workings of a dangerous German booby bomb which continues to fall on England.

"This story is the first book Marshal Montgomery bought on his return to England—a book which I know has been relished by the ranking members of our OSRD and one which I believe will grow in our imagination as we begin to mull over the maunfacture of the ultimate in weapons." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 176:143 O '45 650w

Reviewed by J. A.Brandt

Book Week p10 Mr 25 '45 650w

Booklist 41:225 Ap 1 '45

"A substantial, saddening characterization lends stature to this—an original and holding tale."

+ Kirkus 12:552 D 15 '44 170w

"This is a book that continually holds our interest and, perhaps a great achievement, leaves us with a sense that it was worth reading." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 17 '43 180w

New Repub 112:598 Ap 30 '45 150w

"Love interest fails, as so often, to add anything of value, and the brief intervention of a young pilot contributes an episode of sharp embarrassment. But Mr. Balchin is a writer of real skill, and he has a vivid perception of the artistic possibilities in technical information. He has established a firm monopoly on his peculiar but admirable territory." Philip Toynbee

+ — New Statesman & Nation 27:29 Ja 8 '44 500w

"In an expertly written novel of wartime England, Nigel Balchin has combined a savage attack on British Civil Service bureaucracy-as-usual, a number of believable characters, and a palpitating climax." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 8 '45 270w

"A sharp, brief novel developed with great skill."

+ New Yorker 21:86 Ap 7 '45 200w

"For style, for tension, for reality, this is a fresh and striking book about the war." R. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 28:24 Ap 21 '45 400w

"[The] climax is magnificently written and worked out. The love-affair apart, however, which ought to be good—the girl is a pet and most sympathetically drawn—[the book] is marred, I think, by a kind of coyness and offhandedness which is supposed to be very, very bitter and sophisticated, but which at least one reader found embarrassing and not at all like truth. But, taken as a whole, the book is witty, trim, hard and beautifully made—an accomplished and exciting entertainment." Kate O'Brien

+ — Spec 171:560 D 10 '43 270w

Time 45:104 Mr 12 '45 20w

"It is lively, amusing and exciting stuff and very good reading for pleasure. . . Not a profound piece of fiction, but live, topical and lightly absorbing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p593 D 11 '43 1200w

"There is subtlety to this compact novel, particularly subtlety of character. Even the minor characters are always people. . . Nigel Balchin's acute characterization and skillful use of suspense point up the need today to open the windows of many small back rooms. Rice's difficulties have a message for Washington as well as London." Colby Walworth

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 11 '45 550w

BALDWIN, FAITH. Arizona star. 307p $2.50 Farrar 45-2330

Using a vacation spot in Arizona as a focal point, the book gathers a large group of assorted natives and visitors, and tells their stories.

"One gathers from this collection of short stories . . . that Miss Baldwin feels sorry for these poor rich people and their servitors and hangers-on. But they leave me cold, and even an occasional training plane flying overhead in token of the war fails to bring the semblance of reality to these slick tales. Still, the thought of wonderful Arizona in midwinter may cause your pulse to quicken." D. S.
Book Week p5 Mr 25 '45 150w

Booklist 41:286 Je 1 '45

"Well tailored to popular demand, but not Faith Baldwin at her best."
Kirkus 13:19 Ja 15 '45 90w

"Varied, often diverting, reading." Anne Richards
+ N Y Times p24 Ap 8 '45 110w

"A lively and diversified chronicle of a region variously inhabited by pleasure seekers, health seekers and their sturdier predecessors, the empire builders and the fortune builders." Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 25 '45 130w

BALDWIN, FAITH. A job for Jenny. 218p $2 Farrar
45-7980

Jenny was twenty and red headed and full of pep. Her job was secretary to the manager of a big wartime shipbuilding concern. When her older sister, married to a marine who was overseas, got into a jam with a married man Jenny had another job, and one which nearly cost her the man she herself loved.

"The whole story is as delightful as a warmed-over omelet." Olive Carruthers
Book Week p6 S 16 '45 50w

Booklist 42:38 O 1 '45

Kirkus 13:279 Jl 1 '45 130w

"Jenny is one of Miss Baldwin's most impetuously feminine and unpredictable heroines, but she has the aura of victory right from the start." Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p20 O 7 '45 110w

BALL, MARY MARGARET. Problem of inter-American organization. 117p $2 Stanford univ. press

341.1 American republics. International co-operation. Pan Americanism A44-5383

"A concise, reliable description of the organization and operation of the various bodies which have been created, or proposed, among the republics of this hemisphere." Foreign Affairs

"The volume is eminently successful in presenting the history and functions of the organizations named; a carefully prepared index, bibliography, and list of agencies add to the book's indispensability." W. F. Barber
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:398 Ap '45 370w

"Miss Ball deserves the thanks of every student of Pan-American affairs for the clear and illuminating presentation of the development of the Pan-American system. The author has approached the subject in a broad and constructive spirit and has given us by far the best description of the various organs through which Pan-American activities have been expanded. The volume also contains many valuable suggestions for improved co-ordination of the activities of the inter-American organizations that have been established from time to time by successive International Conferences of American States." L. S. Rowe
+ Ann Am Acad 238:201 Mr '45 450w

Foreign Affairs 23:521 Ap '45 20w

"M. Margaret Ball is a specialist in certain phases of European diplomacy who managed to obtain an award from the Social Science Research Council. A newcomer blown into the Latin-American field by the recent winds of Pan-American enthusiasm, she started with little previous preparation. Although her work is not without merit, one cannot help wondering why some expert was not selected for the task. Hers seems to be another case illustrating the evils of centralization in the control of research funds. Miss Ball's knowledge of the history of Inter-American relations is naturally quite limited." J. F. Rippy
— + Pol Sci Q 60:475 S '45 370w

Times [London] Lit Sup p243 My 26 '45 220w

"The book is well documented and has an extensive bibliography. It will be especially useful to students of administrative and international law."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:32 Mr '45 100w

BALLEISEN, CHARLES EDWARD. Principles of firearms. 146p il $2.50 Wiley

623.44 Firearms 45-4684

"Basic engineering explanation of war weapons. Principles and operating characteristics. For persons interested in firearms, as well as engineers engaged in gun design and manufacture." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 41:334 Jl 15 '45

Library J 70:307 Ap 1 '45 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:24 Ap '45

"The book is intended primarily for engineers, but is suitable for student officers of the Army and Navy who need to be familiar with the operation of automatic firearms."
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:53 S '45 160w

BALLOU, ROBERT OLESON. Shinto: the unconquered enemy. 239p $2.75 Viking

299.56 Shinto. Japan—Politics and government. Japan—Religion 45-9650

"A careful examination of Japan's doctrine of racial superiority and world conquest, as set forth in Japanese writings from the beginnings of Japanese literature down to and including statements made in Tokio during the week of August 12, 1945, when Japan finally gave in. That surrender mustn't be permitted to fool anybody, according to Mr. Ballou, for the ideological struggle hasn't been really joined yet. Shintoism is still the true religion of Japan, and until it is supplanted by another there can be only temporary, uneasy periods of peace." (New Yorker) Annotated bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson
Book Week p10 N 18 '45 360w

Booklist 42:103 D 1 '45

"This is, by any standard, an admirable and a timely book." Homer Metz
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 16 '45 550w

Reviewed by W. F. Sands
Commonweal 43:218 D 7 '45 700w

"A monumental piece of research, fully documented, valuable as reference, but superficial as opinion."
+ — Kirkus 13:389 S 1 '45 110w

"The problems raised by Mr. Ballou's discussion are obviously far from academic. They should be debated by all Americans. This volume, if read with critical attention, gives valuable material on which to base such debate." Helen Mears
+ N Y Times p5 N 4 '45 1600w

"The author, like most of those who have written about what to do with Japan, is better at uncovering what's wrong than he is about setting it right. This does not detract from the merit of his book. It's the first of its kind written for the general reader, and an extremely able job."
+ New Yorker 21:106 N 3 '45 180w

Reviewed by Frederick Reinstein
Springf'd Republican p4d D 16 '45 600w

Reviewed by F. R. Dulles
Weekly Book Review p22 N 18 '45 650w

BARBER, WILLETTA ANN, and SCHABELITZ, RUDOLPH FREDERICK. The noose is drawn. 252p il $2 Scribner 45-9159

Detective story.

"Lighthanded, easy entertainment."
+ Kirkus 13:281 Jl 1 '45 60w

"The sketches form an interesting feature of the book, although they do not, as a matter of fact, reveal anything that could not be told equally well in words or is not so revealed in the accompanying text. It is merely that Kit, being an artist, prefers to work in that way. The sketches are aids to his visual memory. The existence of motives for each of the suspects and the complete absence of alibis make this an unusually rewarding crime puzzle." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p14 S 23 '45 200w

"Storm's sketches are of course incorporated in the narrative, which is the work of his bride, a lady overfond of the exclamation point. Nicely done, though, in its breathless way."
+ — New Yorker 21:87 S 29 '45 130w

"Good."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:26 D 22 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p26 O 14 '45 100w

BARBOUR, THOMAS. A naturalist in Cuba. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 317p il $3 Little 574.97291 Natural history—Cuba. Cuba—Description and travel 45-35224

"An account of the impressions of a naturalist in the island [of Cuba] with some notes on the natural history of the animals found there, the geology, and the taste and feel of the place." (Introd) The work is based on the pleasure trips and scientific expeditions to Cuba of this American naturalist, who began his connections with Cuba in 1908. Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 D 16 '45 360w

Booklist 42:90 N 15 '45

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 8 '45 420w

Kirkus 13:451 O 1 '45 110w

"Recommended for the general reader in every library." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 70:1024 N 1 '45 70w

"The book as a whole is a Cuban conversation piece, full of meat and easy to read. Both native Cubans and prospective visitors, especially those with naturalistic leanings, should be grateful to Dr. Barbour." William Beebe
+ N Y Times p14 D 2 '45 500w

"Although it is a welcome contrast to the current literature of a sick and bleeding world, 'A Naturalist in Cuba' is in no sense escape reading. By carefully blending fact, reflection, observation, and adventure, Dr. Barbour has given us better understanding of a close neighbor and a satisfying share in his rich and warm adventure." Henry Christman
+ Sat R of Lit 29:7 Ja 5 '46 700w

"There is a wealth of information and atmosphere here, found in every sentence. Dr. Barbour calls it a curious hodge-polge, but that is hardly so. The subject matter is extremely varied."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:4 N '45 300w

"An urbane blend of arresting facts, reflection and adventure, all presented with unassuming ease." E. W. Teale
+ Weekly Book Review p5 N 11 '45 1250w

Wis Lib Bul 41:126 D '45

BARCLAY, GEORGE. Bible speaks to our day. 93p $1 Presbyterian bd. [2s 6d Student]
248 Christianity—Addresses, essays, lectures 45-3137

"The former moderator of the Presbyterian Church in England gives modern application to some selected teachings in Old Testament history and prophecy and in the New Testament, stressing the need of the spiritual factor in any program of postwar reconstruction and the requirement that there shall be better men if there is to be a better social order." Christian Century

Booklist 41:315 Jl 1 '45

Christian Century 62:583 My 9 '45 50w

"Little in size, the book is mighty in its Christian impact. Its reading is richly rewarding." W. N. Donovan
+ Crozer Q 22:285 Jl '45 400w

Wis Lib Bul 41:80 Jl '45

BARCLAY, WADE CRAWFORD. Greater good neighbor policy 257p $2.50 Willett 918 U.S.—Relations (general) with Latin America. Latin America—Relations (general) with U.S. Latin America—Religion
45-2573

A Protestant's review of the state of religious liberty in Latin America. The author argues that if religion were as truly free in Latin America as it is in the United States, it would tend to better international relationships.

"The author of this book is well qualified to deal with present-day Latin American religious problems, for he has given the last twenty years of his life to superintending the production of a Protestant Christian literature for Latin America. Though recognizing the highly emotional character of the materials with which he deals, he has not approached them in a contentious spirit." W. W. Sweet
+ Christian Century 62:790 Jl 4 '45 1200w

Foreign Affairs 23:702 Jl '45 30w

BARINGER, WILLIAM ELDON. House dividing; Lincoln as president elect. 356p il $4 Abraham Lincoln assn.
B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham. U.S.—Politics and government—1783-1865 45-4951

"Mr. Baringer, who has given us our fullest account of Lincoln's nomination and election [Lincoln's Rise to Power, Book Review Digest, 1937] now follows that interesting volume by a thorough scrutiny of the four months of 1860-61 in which Lincoln made up his Cabinet, fought off the first infuriated mobs of office-seekers, dealt with the questions of compromise and concession, wound up his affairs in Springfield, and betook himself to Washington. His book abounds in detail drawn from newspapers, manuscript collections, and secondary works. Careful study of the New York Herald files and the papers of such Republican chieftains as Washburne, Chase, Sumner, Trumbull, and John Sherman has yielded many a juicy new item." Sat R of Lit

'There is more matter than art in Baringer's book, but he translates the fruits of his huge research into English that is clear and convincing." Lloyd Lewis
+ Book Week p8 Jl 8 '45 550w

Christian Century 62:1038 S 12 '45 280w

Reviewed by Allan Nevins
Sat R of Lit 28:16 Ag 25 '45 700w

"This account of Lincoln as President-elect not only adds to our detailed knowledge of the man, but is at the same time a valuable analysis of American political life."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:28 S '45 200w

"In passages where the author has mastered his material he demonstrates a real gift for narrative writing. However, his frequent resort to long quotation especially from the newspaper correspondents stationed at Springfield, slows down the pace and throws the book out of proportion. . . Even so, close students of the period will be grateful to Mr. Baringer for making readily available the results of research in a wide range of newspaper files and manuscript collections. Perhaps that was his principal purpose." P. M. Angle
+ — Weekly Book Review p20 Jl 29 '45 600w

BARKER, FREDERIC ALLAN. Modern prison system of India; a report to the department, the progress of prison reform in India during the twenty years following the publication of the report of the 1919-1920 Indian jails committee; foreword by Lord Hailey; pref. by P. H. Winfield. (English studies in criminal science) 139p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

365.954 Prisons—India 44-51530

"This is a short account by the former inspector-general of prisons in the Central Provinces and the Punjab of the prison 'reforms' introduced in the last twenty years. . . This book deals with the efforts that have been made in recent years to classify and separate the various types of prisoners and the problems that arise because of the ethnic and religious heterogeneity of the Indian population. It also describes the measures taken to provide educational and medical facilities that would prepare the prisoners for a respectable form of livelihood after their release." Am J Soc

Reviewed by Jyotirmoyee Sarma
Am J Soc 51:177 S '45 200w

"Colonel Barker's work is thorough and meticulous in spite of the fact that he wrote it almost entirely from memory since he is at present out of the penal service. Thorough though it is, it makes rather dull reading for the layman." N. K. Teeters
+ — Am Soc R 10:435 Je '45 500w

BARKER, HARLEY GRANVILLE. See Granville-Barker, H. G.

BARKSDALE, LENA. That country called Virginia; il. by Harry Roth. 234p $2 Knopf

975.5 Virginia—History—Juvenile literature 45-7394

A state history of Virginia for boys and girls. "Miss Barksdale presents the first such volume on Virginia to take advantage of recent findings covering the origin and early development of the American commonwealth sometimes described as the mother of States and statesmen. And it is well to bear in mind that the beginnings of Virginia are at one and the same time the beginnings of the Nation." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 42:39 O 1 '45

"As a librarian in Virginia and a well-known specialist in books for children and young people in New York, Miss Barksdale has long been conscious of the need of such a contribution as she has made to American history. The book has ripened in her mind and heart over a period of years. It is to be regretted that it lacks the distinction of illustration and the kind of maps one looks for in a book about Virginia. Since the text seems destined for a long life, I shall look confidently for a more attractive format in a future edition." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk 21:345 S '45 240w

"Lena Barksdale writes with vitality and charm, tinctured by pleasant touches of humor." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:462 N '45 100w
Kirkus 13:398 S 1 '45 260w

"As factual books on 'countries,' specially designed for young people, go, this one is quite well written and fairly interesting, but its adequacy does not include either verve or sparkle. Probably this is too much to expect from so narrowly grooved a project as writing 'country' books, for they come so fearfully near to history texts popularized. However, this one is adequate and can be recommended where there is a demand for such a book." Alice Viele hr
+ — Library J 70:823 S 15 '45 70w

"It is noteworthy to find a book written for boys and girls with so much fresh and unfamiliar historical material. Picturesque as the early history of Virginia is, it has received less attention in books for young readers than the colonial settlements in the north. . . Miss Barksdale writes with charm and humor as well as historical perspective and an understanding of what interests boys and girls. 'That Country Called Virginia' is historical writing for young people at its best." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 S 9 '45 130w

"An admirably lucid and readable history of the colony and state named for the Virgin Queen. In style and selection of material it could serve as a model for a series on the states for readers of twelve to fifteen."
+ New Yorker 21:138 D 8 '45 50w

"In the Civil War chapters the Southerners are painted as all white and the Yankees as all black. . . This reviewer, with Yankee ancestors on both sides for a number of generations, felt herself getting a bit 'hot under the collar' at some of the statements. But the book is so obviously backed by good research and authentic evidence; a challenge might end in an ignominious defeat for the Yankees. It is good to have a history of Virginia brought up-to-date." M. G. D.
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:45 O 20 '45 500w

"It is, of course, a state history, but a new name should be coined for a book so much better than the manuals so called, with which schools have been so long provided. . . It is hard to stop reading anywhere; a history for young people should establish a sense of continuity, and this one certainly does." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 S 9 '45 310w
Wis Lib Bul 41:103 O '45

BARMINE, ALEXANDRE. One who survived; the life story of a Russian under the Soviets; with an introd. by Max Eastman. 337p $3.75 Putnam

947.084 Russia—Politics and government. Communism—Russia 45-5860

"In the summer of 1937, when the Soviet purges were in progress, a Soviet official named Alexander Barmine, then chargé d'affaires at the Russian legation in Athens, expressed horror to one of his assistants over the recent execution of Tukhachevsky and seven other Red Army generals. . . For some reason the mesmerism of Moscow did not succeed with Barmine as it had with so many other Party members. . . He eluded the maneuver of the G.P.U., announced that he was taking his leave, wrote a letter of resignation to Moscow, and got on a train for Paris. . . And he then wrote a book, an account of his life and a justification of his course of action, which appeared in French in 1939 as 'Vingt Ans au Service de l'U.R.S.S.' and was afterward translated into English and published in England, though not in America, as 'Memoirs of a Soviet Diplomat.' Barmine, soon after this, came to live in the United States and he is now an American citizen. He has prepared a new text of his book . . . which contains a certain amount of new matter; the author has added a more detailed account of the workings of the Stalin regime and has brought the story of the Soviets up to date." New Yorker

Booklist 42:11 S '45

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 161:515 S '45 800w
Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '45

"One must give some credence to eye witness accounts of events in Russia. But the strictures on Stalin are for the most part so trivial, so definitely backstairs gossip, that they diminish belief in the balance of the record. The story is told with too engaging candor, but it lacks the ring of sincerity, the intellectual grasp, that would make it a contribution to the Russian picture. Will appeal to the many critics of Soviet Russia."
Kirkus 13:176 Ap 15 '45 120w

"Gripping, informative narrative of the shifting tides and upheavals, by one of the participants in these movements. Social conditions, undercover networks, economic disorganization, stresses and pressures, pictured vividly, objectively and with perspective." A. B. Lindsay
+ Library J 70:585 Je 15 '45 90w

Reviewed by H. J. Bresler
New Repub 113:228 Ag 20 '45 850w

"I first read this book when it came out in French, not long after I had taken a trip to Russia, and it seemed to me the most illuminating document that had been published on the Soviet Union in its then perplexing later phases. It still seems to me unique and indispensable. For a foreigner who wants really to learn what has been happening of recent years in Russia—as distinguished from demanding support either for faith or for hostile prejudice — this is probably the one book that ought to be read if you have time for no other book." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 21:65 Jl 14 '45 1650w

"'One Who Survived' is more than the autobiography of a man who had spent his entire thinking life in the service of the Communist Party and his fatherland. It is the record of the rise and fall of a world ideal." Manya Gordon

+ Sat R of Lit 28:14 Jl 14 '45 1100w

Time 46:102 Ag 6 '45 1450w

"Mr. Barmine's book, despite the valuable personal record, presents a bitterly prejudiced picture of the U.S.S.R. Consequently it can be only destructive in so far as it may affect present-day efforts to establish a basis for Russian-American friendship and future world peace." F. R. Dulles

— + Weekly Book Review p4 Jl 22 '45 1100w

BARNE, KITTY (MRS ERIC STREATFEILD). In the same boat; il. by Ruth Gervis. 208p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Dent]

45-10647

An English girl and Tossie from Poland met on shipboard on the way from India to England. The ship is torpedoed, but the two children manage to get together, and when they are rescued even go to the same school. There Tossie's activities are as gay and gallant as usual, especially her work for the Polish underground.

Booklist 42:185 F 1 '46

Library J 70:953 O 15 '45 30w

"A present-day story full of adventure and excitement, and like the author's previous books there is understanding and friendship between children of different countries. Recommended for ages ten to twelve." V. W. Schott

+ Library J 71:57 Ja 1 '46 140w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 12 '45 30w

Reviewed by J. A. Smith

Spec 175:492 N 23 '45 180w

"As I followed the fortunes of the two girls I found this not only a story of steady, realistic Bridget and unpredictable, romantic Antosia, not only a glimpse of the vital spirit of Poland and of Britain, but a book about friendship itself, such as may spring up when you're all in the same boat. The next time I see England I will look up Kitty Barne." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 D 9 '45 300w

BARNES, MARGARET CAMPBELL. Passionate brood. 308p $2.50 Macrae Smith co.

45-4146

Novel based upon the life of Richard Plantagenet, beginning with the day when the minstrel Blondel joined his service and ending with the King's death.

"This is acceptable, readable historical fiction, interpreted according to modern techniques."

+ Kirkus 13:72 F 15 '45 210w

"A novel that thrills from first to last." L. B. Hill

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 10 '45 750w

"It is an oft-told story, but Mrs. Barnes has approached it with imagination and a viewpoint of considerable originality. And in the dramatic chapters of war in the Holy Land is an ironic reflection of history's strange habit of re-enacting its rivalries under new stresses, for here are French and English, Jew and Moslem." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p18 Je 17 '45 100w

Wis Lib Bul 40:101 O '45

BARNETT, DAVID. They shall have music. 108p il $1.50 Stewart

780.72 Music—Instruction and study 45-7286

"A teacher at Wellesley College pleads for active participation in music as a means of learning appreciation." Cleveland Open Shelf

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '45

Reviewed by V. H. Talley

El School J 46:173 N '45 600w

Kirkus 13:148 Ap 1 '45 190w

"Although short almost to the point of being sketchy, it nevertheless is packed with many constructive and logical suggestions on how to stimulate greater musical activity among school children, among college students and among amateur performers. Appendix contains well-chosen lists of material which would be suitable for use in public school music, chamber music groups and choral groups. Highly recommended for the library with a general reading public." H. E. Bush

+ Library J 70:353 Ap 15 '45 110w

BARNOUW, ERIK, ed. Radio drama in action; twenty-five plays of a changing world. 397p $3; college ed $2.25 Farrar

792 Radio plays 45-9883

Anthology of twenty-five representative radio plays, all of which have been previously printed. Partial contents: Will this earth hold? by P. S. Buck; The battle of the Warsaw ghetto, by Morton Wishengrad; Open letter on race hatred, by W. N. Robson; Bretton Woods, by Peter Lyon; The last day of the war, by Arthur Laurents; A child is born, by S. V. Benét; Concerning the Red army, by Norman Rosten; London by clipper, by Norman Corwin; The 'Boise', by Ranald MacDougall; Booker T. Washington in Atlanta, by Langston Hughes; North Atlantic testament, by T. J. Mulvey; Pacific task force, by Lawrence Lader; The Negro domestic, by Roi Ottley.

"Radio writers looking for technical or thematic guidance will do well to consult this collection, and all thoughtful citizens who have been alienated by the asininity of most programs ought to read it for a pleasant surprise." Jack Conroy

+ Book Week p4 N 25 '45 230w

Booklist 42:144 Ja 1 '46

Kirkus 13:414 S 15 '45 110w

"Recommended."

+ Library J 70:1089 N 15 '45 110w

School & Society 62:327 N 17 '45 10w

BARR, JENE. Conrad the clock; il. by Elaine Wittert. [38p] $1.75 Follett

44-9402

Picture-story book about a carnival and Conrad the clock who made it possible for the mushrooms to see the sights of the carnival, especially the dancer.

"Chicago writer Jene Barr and Chicago artist Elaine Wittert have combined to present a book which carries a real carnival flavor. The pictures are gay and colorful and the story is sheer whimsy and fun." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p18 N 12 '44 130w

"An engaging idea, but book is not worth the price. To be read to little children." M. F. Cox

Library J 70:267 Mr 15 '45 70w

BARRETT, LAWRENCE LOUIS. Twinkle, the baby colt; il. by [the author]. [42p] $1.25 Knopf

45-4228

Picture story book for ages four to eight. It tells the story of a disobedient colt which ran away from its mother, and had some bad upsets before the mother found him again.

BARRETT, L. L.—Continued

"Twinkle is a most lovable little colt and very young readers will find in his story a sympathetic note. . . The brief story is charmingly told."

+ Book Week p21 Je 3 '45 150w

Booklist 41:305 Je 15 '45

Bookmark 6:15 Ag 1 '45

"This is a pleasant, attractive book, good for reading aloud to four and up, while second graders would enjoy reading it to themselves."

+ Kirkus 13:221 My 15 '45 90w

"By no means a must book but will be a welcome addition to the list of horse stories for the picture-book age and readers from seven to nine. Attractive pictures in brown and black by author." A. M. Wetherell

Library J 70:587 Je 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by M. C. Skinner

Library J 70:951 O 15 '45 40w

"In these delightful pictures and the brief text that accompanies them, the artist-author has caught the gay liveliness and endearing awkwardness of a baby colt." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p20 My 27 '45 110w

"The tale is basically moral, of course, and Twinkle flings his legs around in such ecstatic coltishness that little boys just beginning to read follow his adventures for his own sake and thus may get into their systems the idea that there is a difference between being bright and being 'bright for your age.'" M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 22 '45 180w

Wis Lib Bul 41:102 O '45

BARRINGTON, HOWARD (SIMON STONE, pseud). Knight missing. 297p $2 Macmillan [8s 6d Hutchinson] 45-1558

Detective story.

"Better than a bit of all right."

+ Boston Globe p15 Mr 14 '45 60w

"Long, intricate and mentally active."

+ Kirkus 13:8 Ja 1 '45 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 Mr 4 '45 130w

"Begins with rather amusing and exciting chase but then bogs down into slow but sure British-brand detective story. For clue-chasers."

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:34 Mr 3 '45 40w

"This item is at its best in serious stretches of detectivism. Clews are plentiful." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p18 Mr 4 180w

BARRY, JOE. Fall guy. 256p $2 Arcadia 45-4535

Detective story.

N Y Times p26 Ap 1 '45 80w

"Mixture of gang-stuff and detection of rather rudimentary sort—with sundry pungent passages. Tough quickie."

Sat R of Lit 28:36 Mr 31 '45 30w

BARSCHAK, ERNA. My American adventure. 248p il $2.75 Washburn

B or 92 U.S.—Social life and customs. National characteristics, American 45-37882

"Reader meets a great heart and high mind in Dr. Barschak, a psychologist dismissed by the Nazis and now teaching at Miami University. This book follows her adjustments to this country and becomes thereby an inclusive, discerning estimate of American life—our food, the way we raise children, our schools, summer camps, cities and towns." Library J

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

+ Book Week p3 D 16 '45 320w

Booklist 42:147 Ja 1 '46

"Pleasant casual reading—with a feminine appeal."

Kirkus 13:454 O 1 '45 150w

"Recommended emphatically for new Americans. 'This country has been very good to me,' says Dr. 'Bar' who is obviously very good for America. Fine solvent for incipient prejudice." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 70:1086 N 15 '45 90w

BARTLETT, MRS ELLA (HERBERT), ed. See Foster, S. C. Songs for boys and girls

BARTMAN, MARK. Yank in Sicily; il. by Diana Thorne. 32p $1.25 Whitman, A.

Dogs—Legends and stories 45-1419

A war story for children of seven to eleven. Yank is a small dog who is sent to Sicily with his master and proves so useful as a messenger that he is decorated for bravery.

Kirkus 12:298 Jl 1 '44 90w

"Though the style is a bit stilted, story is timely for third or fourth grade boys and girls who like dogs." G. E. Joline

+ — Library J 70:165 F 15 '45 70w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 28 '45 70w

BARZUN, JACQUES. Teacher in America. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 321p $3 Little

371.3 Teaching. Education, Higher. U.S.—Intellectual life 45-1580

A treatise—not on education—but on teaching in America, what is taught and why and how, and what can be done to improve teaching. Refers particularly to teaching in colleges and universities with comments on the teaching of children and adults.

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson

Book Week p4 Mr 11 '45 360w

Booklist 41:204 Mr 15 '45

"A sophisticated ironical book. It is almost too entertaining to be wholly just to his victims. One has a feeling he could have an equally exuberant time breezing through any of the other professions. His unfailing quiver of slings and arrows would find easy targets in any of them. That so charming and irreverent a pen as Barzun's has not been dulled by teaching is a good mark for that trade for all its foibles that he so deftly lampoons." L. M. Lyons

Boston Globe p15 F 28 '45 160w

"The best thing about the book is that the writer obeys his own injunctions to write to be read. Teacher in America has itself that certain 'quality' that comes from that rare combination of passion for the subject and objectivity in looking at it that is positively inspiring. Read it, everybody who's interested in the education of the free man." Kathleen Coburn

+ Canadian Forum 25:193 N '45 600w

"Education may be 'the dullest of subjects,' but there are no dull passages in the book. For one thing, it is easy to see that the author is at no point a pedestrian mentality. 'Teacher in America' will probably attract only those who wish to do some sturdy thinking on 'teaching,' but, for such readers, it should not only inform and stimulate, but delight. It is like an evening of grand talk with a thoroughly interesting and brilliant person. It does not necessarily arrive at solutions to problems, but it vastly clears the air and leaves one deeply refreshed." M. J. Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 F 26 '45 550w

"Wit and sagacity and a genuinely humanistic point of view combine to make this both serious and stimulating reading. Barzun has retained the best of the classical and the progressive. This is well within the interest and the reach of the general reader."

+ Kirkus 13:11 Ja 1 '45 270w

"The chapters, some of which have appeared in the Atlantic Monthly and other periodicals, are provocative, witty and entertainingly readable. Wholly free from the jargon and mechanics of pedagogy, they should interest laymen as well as teachers." J. S. Cleavinger

+ Library J 70:162 F 15 '45 100w

"The wittiest and most amusing as well as one of the soundest and most penetrating books upon [education] that I have ever read. The reason is, of course, that he is writing about the real process of education, the living contact of teacher and student. His book is, throughout, inspired shop talk about the art of teaching; there certainly is nothing in it of that battery of doctrines, formulas, and statistics, masked by a smoke screen of 'pedaguese,' by which the professional 'educationist' tries to prevent the reader from coming to a clear view of the subject." Gail Kennedy

+ Nation 160:520 My 5 '45 900w

Reviewed by Granville Hicks
New Repub 112:453 Ap 2 '45 400w

"A good many readers of this book will envy Professor Barzun for having written it. They have been planning to write one like it themselves. I confess I am among the envious. Unfortunately, the deans, to whom it might be a breviary, will be too busy in successive committee meetings to glance at it, and the educationists will not be able to comprehend it, since it is written with wit and grace and not in the jargon they use as a substitute for English. The teachers will read it, and there are, one hopes, still more teachers than educationists abroad in the land." Willard Thorp

+ N Y Times p1 F 25 '45 1350w

"Everybody in the teaching profession ought to read Mr. Barzun, if only to be able to argue with him, and those less immediately involved with the subject will find in his pages a mixture of sagacity and entertainment that makes them a constant delight."

+ New Yorker 21:74 F 24 '45 140w

Reviewed by H. M. Robinson
Sat R of Lit 28:10 F 24 '45 850w

"Some readers will be inclined to say that this publication was intended to be a source of entertainment. Others will claim that the author's purpose is to shock our orthodox, routine classroom instructors, of whom there are so many hundreds of thousands. Most readers will realize, however, that the sarcasm and cynicism are, in the long run, incidental and instrumental; that the book is presenting something serious and inviting—in the very best sense. It is to our advantage to have such a brilliant and customarily preoccupied historian turn aside to stir us up and help us out of some of our troubles." C. D. Champlin

+ School R 53:432 S '45 1350w

"There is of course room for disagreement with Mr Barzun at many points. His chapters on the teaching of science ('The Ivory Lab') and the college training of women ('The Subjection of Women') are probably the ones which will provoke most dissent. I think he tends to overrate the value of cooperative survey courses, which are almost inevitably superficial. But he is stimulating even where he is (perhaps) wrong. Every secondary school and college teacher could read his book with profit; and it will interest a wide public outside the teaching profession." H. E. Woodbridge

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 11 '45 800w

Survey G 34:103 Mr '45 1600w

"What clearly emerges from these wise and amusing pages is Mr. Barzun's conviction that no elaborate methods and techniques can take the place of good teaching. Young men and women cannot be 'educated for democracy,' but they can be taught to think."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:23 Je '45 280w

"On the whole, Mr. Barzun has given us one of the few volumes on education by which no intelligent reader can be bored. As the notices in country newspapers used to say, educationists and even educators, 'who will communicate with' Mr. Barzun, 'will learn something to their advantage.' All they need do is to read his book." Christian Gauss

+ Weekly Book Review p2 F 25 '45 1600w

Wis Lib Bul 41:35 Mr '45

BASCH, ANTONIN. Price for peace; the new Europe and world markets. 209p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

330.94 Europe—Economic policy. Europe—Commercial policy. Reconstruction (1939-) —Europe A45-3068

"Study sponsored by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Noted Czechoslovakian author analyzes the complex European trade patterns, inter-war and Nazi occupation, and discusses how they may be modified and reintegrated. Objects—security from German domination, building the purchasing power of the nonindustrial nations, maintaining high levels of employment and standard of living. The carry-over period of replacing destroyed machinery and equipment is specially considered, and the plea made for avoiding the blight of economic nationalism, so that Europe may become an integral part of a well-functioning world economy." Library J

"An important contribution to postwar thinking by a respected student of European affairs. . . The materials presented have implications far beyond the modest purpose set forth in the preface. Political scientists would do well to read this book." R. C. Snyder

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1049 O '45 360w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Jl 8 '45 90w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 62:933 Ag 15 '45 700w

Reviewed by H. J. Bresler
Commonweal 42:316 Jl 13 '45 360w

Foreign Affairs 24:160 O '45 60w

"Though the style is academic, there is valuable information here—good reference material for readers interested in the major economic problems of postwar continental Europe."

+ Kirkus 13:217 My 15 '45 200w

"Recommended." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 70:413 My 1 '45 110w

"It is a book for every one concerned with European stabilization and a durable peace. Ranging wide and probing deep, yet incisive and written in simple non-technical language, it combines the practical insight of the man of affairs with the scholar's scientific approach and erudition." A. D. Gayer

+ N Y Times p16 S 16 '45 1100w

Reviewed by Norman Angell
Sat R of Lit 28:16 Je 9 '45 1200w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:22 S '45 160w

Reviewed by H. B. Parkes
Weekly Book Review p19 My 20 '45 550w

BASSETT, SARA WARE. Silver Moon cottage. 190p $2 Doubleday

45-5729

Romantic story of a beautiful cottage on Cape Cod, kept up for thirty years by its owner, in memory of the bride he had hoped to marry. Ellen had gone to Boston to buy her wedding dress and never came back and no trace of her was found—until thirty years had passed.

"Bland diet for conservatives."

— Kirkus 13:164 Ap 15 '45 170w

"Plot complications are on the fantastic side, but characters and setting are seasoned with Cape Cod savor and charm." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p25 Ag 19 '45 80w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p16 Je 10 '45 140w

BATCHELOR, JOSEPH ALEXANDER. Economic history of the Indiana oolitic limestone industry. 382p $3.50 Ind. univ. School of business

338.2751 Limestone 44-44291

"This monograph presents a detailed and informative economic history of the Indiana limestone industry from its beginnings in the 1820's to the outbreak of the present war. It is based upon an exhaustive study of published materials pertaining to all economic aspects of the industry and extensive interviews with those who have been associated with the industry. Although this study represents an interesting case for students of the theory of price, labor or business practices, it is factual and historical in its nature and not concerned particularly with the testing of economic theory." (Am Econ R) Bibliography. Index.

BATCHELOR, J. A.—Continued
Reviewed by J. P. Miller
Am Econ R 35:688 S '45 1000w

"The study is broadly conceived but admirably focused. Due attention to technology, labor, price policy, mergers, and like topics is subordinated to the announced purpose of the study."
+ Am Hist R 50:625 Ap '45 100w

BATES, MINER SEARLE. Religious liberty; an inquiry. 604p $3.50 Harper; Int. missionary council 261.7 Religious liberty 45-7079

"Dr. Bates, Rhodes scholar and author, has put down in great detail and from several different angles the whole history of religious tolerance and intolerance from ancient times to the present, and in all countries and under all forms of government. The scope is all inclusive but the presentation is so logical and clear that the reader is neither confused nor overwhelmed. Not all readers will want to read the book through, but as a reference guide it has encyclopedic scope and authority and is copiously documented." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 42:69 N 1 '45

"600 large pages set in 10-point give the reader the most book for the money I have seen in a long time. But don't buy it because it is a bargain. Buy it because it is bound to be the indispensable source book on this subject for a long time to come. And incidentally, while you are studying it pause for an occasional meditation of thanksgiving at this evidence of the growing intellectual leadership which is coming to the Christian church from its mission fields. For Professor Bates is professor of history at the University of Nanking, China." Paul Hutchinson
+ Christian Century 62:1007 S 5 '45 1100w

"This is a volume which is both timely and scholarly. . . An important book."
+ Kirkus 13:367 Ag 15 '45 260w

"Highly recommended for all libraries." Katharine Shorey
+ Library J 70:585 Je 15 '45 110w

"Dr. Bates' inquiry into the problems of religious liberty throughout the world is one of the ablest and most comprehensive religious studies of the past few decades." Reinhold Niebuhr
+ N Y Times p4 S 23 '45 1100w

BATES, RALPH SAMUEL. Scientific societies in the United States. 246p $3.50 Wiley
506 U.S.—Learned institutions and societies 45-5801

"A history of the growth of scientific societies in the United States from the founding of the American Philosophical Society in 1727 by Benjamin Franklin to the establishment of such recent agencies as the Office of Scientific Research and Development and the National Roster of Scientific and Specialized Personnel. The material, divided into four periods—eighteenth century, 1800-1865, 1866-1918, and 1919-1944—is based on publications of the societies and secondary sources such as biographies and memoirs. A final chapter discusses the relation of these societies to scientific workers and to the general public. An extensive bibliography is included." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 42:6 S '45
Library J 69:1002 N 15 '44 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:39 Jl '45

"The need for a reference book on the origin, functions, and national contributions of scientific societies in this country is obvious. This book truly 'fills a gap in the intellectual history of America.'" H. A. Barton
+ R of Scientific Instruments 16:290 O '45 140w

"A vast amount of information scattered not only through numberless publications but also dispersed among many libraries has been assembled to make this book. The result is a history of scientific societies which is a useful reference tool as well. The classified bibliography provides a guide to the literature on the subject treated."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:59 D '45 200w

BATTLE, KEMP PLUMMER. Memories of an old-time tar heel; ed. by his son, William James Battle. 296p il $3 Univ. of N.C. press
B or 92 45-9256

The author of these memoirs was a distinguished son of North Carolina, who served his state in various capacities during the last half of the nineteenth century. Born in 1831, the first half of his volume deals with his childhood and the years before the Civil war. In the post-war years he was interested largely in the University of North Carolina and was its president from 1876 to 1891. The book has been edited by his son, professor of classical languages at the University of Texas.

"The reminiscences—personal, political, educational—are candid and unpretentious, shrewd and fair in comment on contemporaries, often entertaining." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 O 14 '45 100w

"The former president of the University of North Carolina wrote even better than he had hoped; this book is a gold mine of social history, and is so completely charming as to be the despair of any reviewer who has to describe it briefly." R. A. Brown
+ Nation 161:559 N 24 '45 120w

"The rambling 'Memories of an Old-Time Tar Heel' is authentic Caroliniana, as 'folksy' as a mess of turnip greens and, like that dish, palatable chiefly to the addict." W. B. Hamilton
N Y Times p45 D 2 '45 310w

"In a sense Dr. Battle's book has the quality in writing of the best old time Southern (and Northern and Western and Eastern) conversation. He writes in good talkiness not to instruct but to amuse and entertain. And the whole result is one of the best and most easily read social histories of the South from 1820 to 1890 that I have ever found." Jonathan Daniels
+ Sat R of Lit 28:35 N 3 '45 230w

"As an offering to the world at large [this volume] is perhaps useless. But there are three and a half million Tarheels in North Carolina and another million or so scattered through the other forty-seven states; and to them it is treasure-trove." G. W. Johnson
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 13 '46 950w

BAUER, FLORENCE ANNE (MARVYNE) (MRS WILLIAM WALDO BAUER). Behold your King. 408p $2.75 Bobbs
Jesus Christ—Fiction 45-7532

Novel based on the last years of the life of Jesus. The hero is a rich young Cyrenian Jew who comes to Jerusalem to the household of his uncle, Joseph of Arimathea. While there he becomes a follower of Jesus, and is with Him at the time of the crucifixion.

"All through the book are interesting and vivid descriptions of the country, the customs and the people. It takes one right into the world in which Jesus lived and will be especially valuable (as well as entertaining) for people interested in religious education. The words of the New Testament are woven in naturally and effectively." J. M. Yard
+ Book Week p11 S 9 '45 310w
Booklist 42:18 S '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '45

"The telling is overlong, but the details of life and background are exceedingly well done, and the characterizations, a skilful blend of fictional characters and personalities familiar to those who know their Gospels, are full dimensional."
+ — Kirkus 13:259 Je 15 '45 150w

"In general, Mrs. Bauer follows the great and moving episodes in Jesus' life as related in the gospels of the New Testament. It is only in portraying the lesser events and personages of the time that she allows fancy and fabrication to add to the color and plot interest. . . These embellishments, done with sympathy, should offend no one's religious feeling. Moreover, the evidence of careful research into the manners and customs of the times, as well as studious regard for historical validity, is reflected on every page." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p32 S 30 '45 300w

"Here is a novel to illuminate the Gospel narrative; to acquaint the reader with the life and spirit of the time when Jesus went about and did all things well. The author evinces a remarkable perceptive power and taste in bringing the Master so seldom before her readers." K. J. Cooley
+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 16 '45 850w

BAUM, VICKI. Once in Vienna. . . [tr. by Felice and Alan Martin Harvey]. 192p $2.50 Didier pubs [8s 6d Bles]
45-2842

"One of Vicki Baum's earlier books, now translated for the first time. It deals with the love affairs of a successful operatic tenor of forty-five, one of the teachers in the Viennese Conservatoire of Music, and three women are involved, one of them being his divorced wife." Manchester Guardian

"Passion punctuates practically every page, and even the acute and discerning eye for detail Miss Baum brings to bear on the story is lost in a welter of romanticism."
Boston Globe p15 Ja 24 '45 70w
Kirkus 13:2 Ja 1 '45 150w

"The subject and setting, the early years of the present century, give it an effect of belonging to a vanished age, but it is treated with a verve and insight that cannot fail to hold the reader's interest." J. D. Beresford
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 28 '44 70w

"It has been a long time since any adult writer has served us up a plot like this. In fact, it has been a long time since Miss Baum did; the publishers and translators raked this one out of her remote past. . . It's a wonder how Miss Baum ever thought it all up."
New Yorker 20:70 Ja 27 '45 200w

Reviewed by Robert Pick
Sat R of Lit 28:24 Ja 27 '45 500w

"A dexterous performance, of course, but what inches of paint!"
Times [London] Lit Sup p69 F 5 '44 240w

"It is flamboyant and flushed with the emotional fevers of girls who dream of fame and tenors, but as the product of a fifteen-year-old it is certainly not lacking in skill. It shows knowledge of music and describes the rigors and pathos of student life with a certain intensity. Despite its lack of maturity, it doesn't lack a feeling for character drawing or situation. It is, we should say, Vicki Viennese in schmalz time." Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p15 F 4 '45 100w

BAUME, ERIC. See Baume, F. E.

BAUME, FREDERIC EHRENFRIED. Yankee woman [Eng title: Sydney Duck]. 259p $2.50 Dodd [9s 6d Hutchinson]
45-3133

The Barbary Coast in the gold rush years and up to 1906 is the background for this first novel. The Yankee woman is a vigorous character; for eight years she was wife to a sadistic Maine sea captain. After his death Harriet herself takes charge of the ship, brings a rich cargo to California, and makes a name and a fortune for herself in the rough surroundings of the Barbary Coast.

Booklist 41:255 My 1 '45

"'Yankee Woman' is a fine yarn. It has the quality about it that all well written, tightly told stories have; you read every word of it and wish there were more."
+ Boston Globe p15 Ap 4 '45 130w

Reviewed by J. M. Brittan
Library J 70:219 Mr 1 '45 60w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 31 '44 90w

"Spirited first novel. . . It should appeal to readers bored with the antiquarian fare served up as historical fiction, and ready to succumb to this product of American imagination—or invention—at its most credulous and extravagant. Written baldly, with the sure strokes of one who does not particularly care to reproduce the past in detail so long as he can suggest it in spirit, 'Yankee Woman' plunges straight into action." Nona Balakian
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 18 '45 400w

"It is packed with realistic-seeming detail, and with very racy dialogue and adventures, and one of these days it is sure to be made into a big, hard-blowing film, with smashing parts for all the toughest guys in Hollywood. But just to read I found the going too hard and monotonous—especially during air-raids." Kate O'Brien
— Spec 172:296 Mr 31 '44 90w
Times [London] Lit Sup p161 Ap 1 '44 240w

"The story spans three generations, coming down into the early twentieth century. It is a story of action and movement and violence, of which there is no lack, and relatively little space is devoted to thought processes or motives. We never get very close to the characters, though they are real enough to engage the reader's interest in their experiences." Jennings Rice
Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 18 '45 650w

BAXTER, WILLIAM THREIPLAND. House of Hancock; business in Boston, 1724-1775. 321p il $3.50 Harvard univ. press [20s Oxford]

382 Hancock, Thomas. Hancock, John. Boston—Commerce A45-3368

"In spite of his weaknesses, John Hancock was an important figure in the achievement of our independence. He was important not so much for his ability as for his economic and social position. Yet it was because of his political importance that many of the business records of both himself and his more capable uncle were saved. From these records Prof William Baxter of the University of South Africa has reconstructed the development, growth and decline of one of colonial New England's most famous business establishments—'The House of Hancock.'" Springf'd Republican

"Because of Prof. Baxter's real human insight and his excellent selection of material from letters, journals and other personal sources, his book reveals not only the business but the men who conducted it." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 Je 24 '45 450w
Booklist 42:3 S '45

"Professor Baxter, skilled in accounting and possessed of a lively style, has made his book more than a technical treatise on business procedure. The adventure of business, in a period of rapidly recurring wars and almost incredible inflation, and the personalities of the two Hancocks, uncle and nephew, make a good story." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 14 '45 450w
Library J 70:750 S 1 '45 70w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
Nation 161:44 Jl 14 '45 180w

"In spite of these really petty criticisms, Professor Baxter has produced a good book and a valuable book and the writer as well as innumerable students of Colonial History will be grateful to him. We have too few real histories of Colonial trade and too many assumptions of what went on by people who have never reviewed the great masses of private Colonial documents still available." J. D. Phillips
+ — New Eng Q 18:420 S '45 950w

"This volume is marked by sound scholarship, keen penetration, excellent synthesis and a quietly pleasing style." R. A. Brown
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 3 '45 360w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:20 D '45 360w

BAXTER, W. T.—Continued
"Mr. Baxter has worked largely from the mass of Hancock accounts, letters and papers which have been preserved. He is an Englishman, over here for several years on the Commonwealth Fund for scholars. He is an accountant by trade and at present professor of accounting at the University of Cape Town. These facts suggest that the book will be scholarly. And that the author himself will at least be able to understand the curious medieval manner in which trade was carried on. But the marvel of it is, the distinguished scholar is a fascinating and downright amusing writer. He leaves no dust on the Hancock ledgers." Esther Forbes
+ Weekly Book Review p3 Jl 8 '45 650w

BAY, JENS CHRISTIAN. John Crerar library, 1895-1944. See John Crerar library

BAYARD, SAMUEL PRESTON, ed. Hill country tunes. [122p] il $3 Archives pub. co. of Pa, inc, 410 Dauphin bldg, Harrisburg, Pa.
781.7 Folk music 45-7228

"Instrumental folk music of southwestern Pennsylvania." (Subtitle) "Collection devoted exclusively to American instrumental folk tunes which has been edited with special attention to the provenience and history of the music and accompanied by some attempt at a general description of the players' methods and the processes of instrumental folk music tradition. . . The melodies here assembled were noted down by ear, as circumstances did not permit the use of machinery." (Pref) Bibliography. Index of titles.

"Highly recommended." E. L. Lewis
+ Library J 70:413 My 1 '45 140w

"Mr. Bayard acknowledges his regret at not having mechanical aid in collecting these tunes, having to rely solely upon his aural capacity. From the appearance of the ninety-five melodies, he has probably done as well as anyone could so handicapped. His musical variants, some of obviously vocal origin, his description of the players, his historical and critical commentary are all attractive features in a book which is important though slender."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:2 D '45 260w

BAYER, OLIVER WELD, pseud. of ELEANOR (ROSENFELD) BAYER and LEO G. BAYER. An eye for an eye. 186p $2 Doubleday 45-5986

"This is a story of violence and death, but it is not a detective story. Rather, it is a novel of retribution for crimes committed in the past and for treason against a country which was the victim of cruel aggression and perfidy of its leaders. The scene is New York, but the causes which led to the events narrated here lie beyond the sea." N Y Times

Booklist 42:38 O 1 '45
New Repub 113:54 Jl 9 '45 60w

"It is an absorbing story of a secret war not fought on battlefields."
+ N Y Times p20 Je 24 '45 180w
Springf'd Republican p4d Je 24 '45 190w

"Sort of Oppenheim material without the master's touch." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p19 Je 17 '45 90w

BAYSINGER, GERALD, and SCHAAL, HARTLEY H. Woodworking projects for industrial arts students; with a foreword by Earl L. Bedell. 151p il $1.40 McGraw 371.42688 Woodwork 45-931

"These twenty-four projects, suitable for the elementary and junior high school grades, include racks for books and shoes, a drying frame, letter openers, game boards, toy cars and trucks, an electrical motor, a boat stand, and several sailboats. They are presented in such a way as to allow for individual student planning on design and work procedure." N Y New Tech Bks

"The book does not carry out the objectives stated by the authors, namely, to teach the student to plan his work. Practically all the planning is already done. It might well serve as a model for what the student has to do in planning other projects. The book would be most useful for placing in the hands of young pupils of very limited experience with tools, who want to make, without the aid of a teacher, one or more of the projects outlined in such detail." L. C. Smith
El School J 45:536 My '45 650w

"Written directly for the student and for use in the elementary and junior high school shops. Useful also for handicraft groups, hobby classes and for rehabilitation work for the Armed Forces."
Library J 69:1002 N 15 '44 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:15 Ja '45

BEACH, JOSEPH WARREN. Romantic view of poetry. 133p $2 Univ. of Minn.
809.1 Poetry—History and criticism. English poetry—History and criticism. Romanticism A44-5441

Six lectures delivered at Johns Hopkins university in 1941. They are interpretations of romantic poetry of the nineteenth century, as evidenced in the works of Coleridge, Wordsworth, Shelley, Keats, and Byron. No index.

Book Week p2 D 17 '44 120w
Booklist 41:167 F 1 '45
Times [London] Lit Sup p262 Je 2 '45 450w

"The book is charmingly written and, in the best sense of the word, 'undogmatic' in tone."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:5 Mr '45 240w

Reviewed by Vivienne Koch
Weekly Book Review p25 Ag 5 '45 650w
Wis Lib Bul 41:36 Mr '45

BEALS, CARLETON, and others. What the South Americans think of us. See What the South Americans think of us

BEARD, CHARLES AUSTIN. Economic basis of politics. 3d ed rev 114p $1.75 Knopf
320.4 Political science 45-7003

Four lectures first delivered at Amherst college in 1916, and originally published in 1922. In his preface to this edition the author says: "During the past twenty-five years profound changes have occurred in the realities and ideas of Economics and Politics. So I have added a long chapter in which I deal with the bearings of recent historical events on the economic basis of politics, reconsidered the theory in the light of present circumstances, and restated it in formulas more in accord with contemporary experiences."

Booklist 42:21 S '45
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 20 '45 550w
Kirkus 13:287 Jl 1 '45 160w

Reviewed by John Chamberlain
N Y Times p1 S 2 '45 1500w

"Mr. Beard comes to no startling conclusions and occasionally seems to be a rather primitive Marxist in his reiterated emphasis upon the economic determination of history, but almost everything he says in this vigorous and invigorating book makes extreme good sense."
+ — New Yorker 21:63 Ag 25 '45 120w

"Charles A. Beard's 'The Economic Basis of Politics,' which now appears in a new edition, is a classic in its field, and its original appearance in the form of four lectures delivered at Amherst in 1916 and—with the fourth lecture considerably revised—in a small volume in 1922 marked what may be called a classic moment in American economic-political opinion."
+ Weekly Book Review p31 S 23 '45 600w

BECHDOLT, JOHN ERNEST, and MERWIN, DECIE. Dulcie sews a sampler [col. il. by Decie Merwin]. 70p $1.50 Dutton
45-9160

Four more stories, partly in rhyme, about the authors' little heroine of long ago, who flourished in the age of pantalettes, and got into such gay entanglements. This time Dulcie joins a May basket party, goes to a wedding, plays hide and seek and finds the best hiding place, and sews a sampler. For small girls.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p27 N 18 '45 130w
Booklist 42:132 D 15 '45
Kirkus 13:471 O 15 '45 60w

"The Dulcie books have strong appeal for very small girls. Stories are full of innocence and charm. Pictures are delightful. . . Recommended." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 70:1092 N 15 '45 40w

"It is a pleasure to meet again the irrepressible, honest and endearing little Dulcie of the authors' two preceding books. . . The text which occasionally breaks into rhyme as though it could not help itself, blends light-heartedly with the pictures." A. T. E.
+ N Y Times p16 N 11 '45 130w

"Small girls, and their mothers, too, will adore Dulcie." M. L. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 28 '45 120w

"This book is the prettiest of the Dulcies; the pictures, in gentle pastel colors have little children in lively motion. All these little stories have a movement of their own: they are not in verse, but something like metre makes itself felt; they are not rhymed, but now and again their words set up a gentle chiming, pleasant to the ear and belonging particularly to Dulcie and her little world."
+ Weekly Book Review p12 N 11 '45 270w
Wis Lib Bul 41:127 D '45

BECK, HENRY CHARLTON. Jersey genesis. 304p il $3.50 Presbyterian bd; Rutgers univ. press

974.9 Mullica river. New Jersey—Social life and customs 45-6834

"A story of the Mullica River—a stretch of water that was the key to survival at Valley Forge." School & Society

"I'll venture to say that almost every reader will arise from a session with 'Jersey Genesis' feeling that he knows a lot more about New Jersey than he did before and that he had a thoroughly good time while he was acquiring the knowledge." Jack Conroy
+ Book Week p8 Je 24 '45 360w

"The author confesses that he set out to write a novel. Perhaps he should have: an American Hardy or Eden Phillpots would revel in all this folk background. But the volume, as it stands, is a good introduction to the country. More should come of it. We should like to hear of the Mullica valley again in the form of local-color fiction, or possibly a group of little essays. Furthermore, it should be illustrated by dry-point etchings or by swift pencil sketches." M. J. T.
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 11 '45 750w

"A folklorist's case book, too unorganized and unpointed to hold the interest its promise evokes. Distinguished author of several Jersey volumes, Beck in this achieves a poetic appeal. Still, recommended for large libraries only." E. L. Lewis
— + Library J 70:486 My 15 '45 80w

"With his flair for anecdote, his appreciation of homely folk and their interests, and his quiet but infectious enthusiasm for human beings, Mr. Beck has created a lively river book, in spite of a sluggish beginning." W. E. Wilson
+ — N Y Times p14 S 23 '45 450w
School & Society 61:416 Je 23 '45 20w

"If there is any such literary category, Mr Beck is a social antiquarian whose chief delight is in tracing the intricate relationships of the Mullica's old families, and in locating the sites of the vanished towns where the old people lived. There is perhaps too much of this insistence on genealogical and geographical detail in 'Jersey Genesis,' but there are plenty of legends and anecdotes to point up the distinctive flavor of a people whose flag for most purposes could still carry only 13 stars." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4 Jl 7 '45 550w

"This book is obviously a labor of love. It is packed with information and folklore regarding past and present. A true antiquarian, with the necessary instincts of a persistent detective, the author has investigated ancient tales and mere rumors to some purpose, and all to the interest of almost any reader. The book is illustrated with a few old prints and with many fine photographs of the present day."
+ Weekly Book Review p2 Jl 15 '45 350w

BECKER, BELLE, and LINSCOTT, ROBERT NEWTON, eds. Bedside book of famous French stories; with an introd. by Lewis Galantiere. 427p $3 Random house
45-10263

Contents: La Grande Bretêche, by Honoré de Balzac; An episode of the terror, by Honoré de Balzac; The Venus of Ille, by Prosper Mérimée; The marquise, by George Sand; Mimi Pinson, by Alfred de Musset; One of Cleopatra's nights, by Théophile Gautier; A simple heart, by Gustave Flaubert; Herodias, by Gustave Flaubert; The torture of hope, by Villiers de l'Isle-Adam; The elixer of Father Gaucher, by Alphonse Daudet; The last lesson, by Alphonse Daudet; The attack on the mill, by Emile Zola; The procurator of Judæa, by Anatole France; Crainquebille, by Anatole France; The diamond necklace, by Guy de Maupassant; Madame Tellier's excursion, by Guy de Maupassant; Vain beauty, by Guy de Maupassant; The sacrifice, by Georges Duhamel; The escape, by Joseph Kessel; Prisoner of the sand, by Antoine de Saint Exupéry; Tank trap, by André Malraux; The wall, by Jean-Paul Sartre; The professor and the mussels, by Edith Thomas. Brief biographical notes.

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson
Book Week p20 D 9 '45 500w
Booklist 42:165 Ja 15 '46
Christian Science Monitor p14 D 21 '45 300w

"Compiled for entertainment rather than edification, this provides full reader value in a collection of stories at once classical and popular, and of permanent appeal. The selection, while familiar, is reliable."
+ Kirkus 13:477 N 1 '45 110w

"For all its convenient readability, the chief impression one carries away from this excellent anthology is that (with such exceptions as Maupassant and Merimee) the genius of French fiction is more permanently embodied in the novel than in the short story."
New Repub 113:877 D 24 '45 120w

"This is not, as the unserious title may imply, a haphazard collection for excitement-starved readers (to whom French stories suggest spicy boudoir literature or Jules Romains and André Maurois) but an unusually interesting volume, marked by good taste and an appreciation of the short story form as an art, both in its simplest narrative form and in its widest modern sense." Nona Balakian
+ N Y Times p20 D 16 '45 550w

"Mr. Galantiere's preface and the excellent biographical notes at the end are the marks of a well-edited anthology, unlike so many of them that are poured out of the presses these days. They give the reader a chance to orient himself in a literary world that may be unfamiliar to him. This volume is a worthy addition, presented in the same format, to the Bedside Books of English and of American short stories; they can, however, be read lying flat on the floor, or sitting erect in a chair." Harrison Smith
+ Sat R of Lit 28:18 D 1 '45 700w
Springf'd Republican p6 D 19 '45 360w

BECKER, CARL LOTUS. Freedom and responsibility in the American way of life; five lectures delivered on the William W. Cook foundation at the Univ. of Mich, Dec. 1944; with an introd. essay by George H. Sabine. 122p $2.50 Knopf

323.44 U.S.—Civilization 45-9854

"In this collection of lectures, the author of How New Will The Better World Be gives a most timely re-examination of the fundamentals of American democracy, in theory and practice. Freedom of speech and its necessary concomitant—freedom of learning and teaching, constitutional government and private economic enterprise, all main characteristics of that democracy, claim the main share of this analysis. By filling in the historical background for these liberties and institutions and bringing this history up to date, Becker proves soundly that the highest kind of human integrity is needed not only to preserve but to make workable these democratic principles. Reiterating the theme of his last book, he states that we must choose some form of responsible social democracy or we will find ourselves drifting into nothing less than Fascism, even if we should name it 'national cleanup' or 'efficiency for freedom.'" (Kirkus) Index.

Reviewed by Walter Johnson
Book Week p16 N 18 '45 360w

"Always fair and moderate, but with something vital and definite to say, this book is for all thinking people who care about their liberty."
+ Kirkus 13:307 Jl 15 '45 190w

"Thought is easily followed and book is recommended for rather general purchase." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 70:1024 N 1 '45 70w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
Nation 161:526 N 17 '45 480w

"'Freedom and Responsibility in the American Way of Life' is a collection of five lectures Becker delivered at the University of Michigan a year ago, only four months before he died at the age of 71. The book thus stands as a testament to his fellow-countrymen. It is a testament both challenging and reassuring: challenging, because it clearly defines the magnitude of the dilemma which confronts modern democratic man in a technological society; reassuring, because it clearly states the philosophical ground for belief that modern democratic man can resolve that dilemma." C. G. Bolte
+ N Y Times p5 D 9 '45 2000w

"This is not the most outstanding of Professor Becker's books, but there is enough heat and light generated here to supply many a humbler author with treatises twice as long." Ordway Tead + Sat R Lit 28:47 N 17 '45 360w

"The leading ideas are those which Becker has made familiar through all his mature writing, but they are ideas of profound importance for all Americans, and they are expressed in a style of remarkable clarity, free from all affectation and seasoned with wit." W. A. Neilson
+ Weekly Book Review p5 N 18 '45 700w

BECKER, CARL LOTUS. Safeguarding civil liberty today. See Safeguarding civil liberty today

BECKER, MRS MAY (LAMBERTON), ed. Youth replies, I can; stories of resistance; foreword by Elizabeth Morrow; decorations by Warren Chappell. 192p il $2 Knopf

940.53 World war, 1939-1945—Children 45-9674

An anthology for young readers. "The stories are all tales of the war and most of them are true. Courage is the thread that binds them together. They record acts of heroism done by children in twelve different countries that have suffered from Axis domination or cruelty. The authors are either citizens of these countries or residents of long standing there." (Foreword) Partial contents: Little Pernille, by Sigrid Undset; The last penny, by Beatrice Warde; The wind is free, by Jan Masaryk; No thought of the Queen, by Adele de Leeuw; Little Red, by P. S. Buck.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p7 D 23 '45 230w

Booklist 42:112 D 1 '45

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 43:294 D 28 '45 20w

Kirkus 13:493 N 1 '45 80w

"Recommended." Ruth Bostwick
+ Library J 70:1139 D 1 '45 80w

"In spite of such names as Sigrid Undset, Pearl Buck, Jan Masaryk, none are imperishable as literature. But the collective whole is greater than the sum of its parts and serves well to remind American youth of 12 to 16 how their contemporaries in Europe and Asia met brute force with indomitable spirit." E. L. B.
+ — N Y Times p8 D 30 '45 80w

Sat R of Lit 28:74 N 10 '45 30w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans
+ Weekly Book Review p6 N 11 '45 500w

BEDELL, EARL L., and GARDNER, ERNEST G. Household mechanics; industrial arts for the general shop. 2d ed 241p il $2 Int. textbook

371.426 Industrial arts 45-4402

"Although this volume is intended primarily for vocational education classes, it will also be of interest to the homeowner. It not only outlines wood- and metal-working procedures and the use of tools, but provides clear explanations of how to carry out minor repairs around the home. There are numerous illustrative diagrams and the material is grouped under the headings of painting and finishing, care of electric appliances, water supply, care of doors and windows, using concrete, plaster, rope and twine, the home workshop. This edition is almost twice the size of the original volume and includes many new hints and jobs, particularly as relating to household appliances." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 41:303 Je 15 '45

Library J 70:530 Je 1 '45 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:13 Ja '45

BEDIER, JOSEPH. Romance of Tristan and Iseult. See Tristan

BEDSIDE tales; a gay collection with an introd. by Peter Arno. 569p $1.98 Penn

810.8 American literature—Collections. Short stories—Collections 45-2014

Collection of short stories and sketches chosen chiefly from the works of modern American writers. Includes both humorous and serious pieces, with a final section of tales of mystery and horror. Partial contents: The noblest instrument, by Clarence Day; Mr. Kaplan and Shakespeare, by L. Q. Ross; They're off, by Robert Benchley; Sleepy-time extra, by S. J. Perelman; Here we are, by Dorothy Parker; The short happy life of Francis Macomber, by Ernest Hemingway; The sobbin' women, by S. V. Benét; Helen, I love you, by James Farrell; Seventy thousand Assyrians, by William Saroyan; The murder, by John Steinbeck; I want to know why, by Sherwood Anderson; The vanishing lady, by Alexander Woollcott; The shadow, by Ben Hecht; A rose for Emily, by William Faulkner.

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '45

"Much familiar material—but little that is hackneyed."
+ Kirkus 13:106 Mr 1 '45 110w

"Only one section of the book is devoted to serious short stories. The other three can be tagged as Humor, Sex (as Mr. Arno points out, these are more or less interchangeable) and Horror. The first two are excellent. . . The Horror section is the weakest of the lot, in spite of the inclusion of such classics as John Collier's 'Thus I Refute Beelzy,' and William Faulkner's 'A Rose for Emily.' " Jane Cobb

+ — N Y Times p28 Mr 25 '45 450w

"A 'gay collection,' according to the publisher, of good contemporary American fiction and foolery, ranging from Hemingway to Perelman. Just how gay it is seems disputable; surely another adjective would have been more apt for an anthology that includes William Faulkner's 'A Rose for Emily,' John Steinbeck's 'The Murder,' Joseph Mitchell's 'On the Wagon.' "
New Yorker 21:96 Mr 17 '45 120w

BEEBE, CATHERINE (MRS ROBB BEEBE). Story of Jesus for boys and girls; il. by Robb Beebe. 110p $2 Bruce pub.

232.9 Jesus Christ—Juvenile literature

"This retelling of the life of Jesus is couched in simple language, not chosen directly from the Four Gospels, but in conformity to them, with considerable amplification and interpretation. Intended for younger children, the sentences are short and to the point and will be easily understood by the boys and girls to whom the book is dedicated. It has been approved by the Archbishop of Milwaukee. Seven pictures in color and numerous line drawings accompany the always beautiful story." Horn Bk

---

"This is as good a retelling of the life of Our Lord as one could ask for. There is always a certain shock in finding modern colloquial language substituted for the words of the New Testament, but perhaps it is necessary for very young children. The illustrations, although a trifle saccharine, serve their purpose." H. L. Binsse
+ — Commonweal 43:293 D 28 '45 50w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:450 N '45 80w

"A rather uninspired retelling of an inspired story. . . Religious spirit is lacking and the whole has an air of a book to be learned by rote. There are many other stories of Jesus with more charm and distinction."
— Kirkus 13:336 Ag 1 '45 110w

"While suitable for reading to all youngsters who are beginning to express interest in Bible stories, it is intended especially for Catholic children." W. H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 7 '45 60w

BEEBE, ELSWYTH THANE (RICKER) (MRS WILLIAM BEEBE) (ELSWYTH THANE, pseud). Ever after. 334p $2.75 Duell

45-9327

This further chronicle of the Day-Sprague-Murray family takes place in the closing years of the nineteenth century; the scene is variously Williamsburg, Virginia, New York, England, and Cuba. Bracken Murray, the central character, goes thru a harrowing few years while he is divorcing his Austrian first wife, and preparing the way for his marriage to his English Dinah.

"Reading Ever After is like catching glimpses of two feature pictures from the crowded lobby of a movie house. Somewhere beyond the plush ropes and beyond the dim sea of hats and heads, a ponderous story is moving, remote and half seen. But that story does not touch the lobby audience, no matter how fiercely necks are craned or how calves are racked by standing on tiptoe. It may be that this effect will be less apparent to those who have read the preceding volumes of this Williamsburg saga. This reviewer, however, never got beyond the lobby. . . Many people will wish that more of the narrative concerned Williamsburg. The author has achieved a fine piece of work here in making the Tidewater people admirable, refreshingly real and human." Bruce Lancaster
— + Atlantic 177:159 Ja '46 600w

Reviewed by Taylor Caldwell
Book Week p4 N 4 '45 400w

Booklist 42:95 N 15 '45

Kirkus 13:324 Ag 1 '45 130w

"The author tells a good story, enlivened by colorful shifts of scene from Williamsburg to New York, London and Cuba. It is not weighted by any perceptible degree of social significance." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p33 O 7 '45 270w

"Miss Thane's own stage is crowded with people and events, too numerous to enumerate. Because she elects to superimpose them on a larger, more significant stage, she reduces her amiable men and women to less than life-size in the perspective which historical progression inevitably gives to the progress of an individual." Leonard Amster
Sat R of Lit 28:24 O 20 '45 380w

" 'Ever After' is written without haste and with everything included that with reasonable justification could be—even a bit of repartee involving Clara Barton and Theodore Roosevelt." George Conrad
Weekly Book Review p8 O 14 '45 270w

BEEBE, LUCIUS MORRIS. Highball; a pageant of trains. 223p il $6 Appleton-Century

385 Railroads—U.S. Railroads—Trains

45-11367

Companion book to the author's other records of railroading in the United States: High Iron, Highliners, and Trains in Transition (Book Review Digest, 1938, 1940, and 1942). Nearly two hundred photographs and descriptive text describe some little railroads, Colorado railroads, the Pennsylvania, and cabooses.

Reviewed by R. E. M. Whitaker
Book Week p10 Ja 13 '46 500w

Booklist 42:178 F 1 '46

Kirkus 13:452 O 1 '45 90w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:55 Ja 1 '46 100w

"An entertaining and informative combination of effervescent, ambidextrous prose and splendid photographs." N. K. B.
+ N Y Times p20 Ja 13 '46 320w

New Yorker 21:79 Ja 19 '46 80w

"The pictures are so well taken and chosen, and the reproduction so excellent that non-railroad fans might overlook the text, in which case they would miss a fine rococo account of a rococo period of railroading in Colorado. Mr. Beebe has packed this long chapter, one he obviously enjoyed doing, with many a good story gleaned from old newspapers or the memories of ancient men." Stewart Holbrook
+ Weekly Book Review p5 D 23 '45 900w

BEECHER, JOHN. All brave sailors; the story of the S.S. Booker T. Washington. 208p $2.50 Fischer, L.B.

940.545 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. Booker T. Washington (steamship) 45-35136

The great-grandnephew of Harriet Beecher Stowe was purser on the S. S. Booker T. Washington for two years. The ship was the first sizable American ship captained by a Negro, and the officers and crew were made up of Negroes and whites. After the ship made her first difficult trip across the submarine-infested Atlantic in safety, the experiment was pronounced a success. This book is made up of sketches about the ship and the men who sailed her.

"This is decidedly an important success story. It is proof that all groups can live and work together for the good of all mankind." S. C. Watkins
+ Book Week p7 Ag 19 '45 360w

Booklist 42:11 S '45

Christian Century 62:1012 S 5 '45 70w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin
Commonweal 42:484 Ag 31 '45 260w

Kirkus 13:285 Jl 1 '45 170w

BEECHER, JOHN—Continued

"Graphic and interesting. Recommended especially to all members of Congress in whose hands is the fate of the FEPC." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 70:634 Jl '45 120w

Reviewed by John Desmond

N Y Times p24 Ag 26 '45 270w

"Although this book makes no contribution to the scientific literature on race relations, it is an excellent example of the emerging type of 'appeal' literature, and might itself be the subject of scientific scrutiny. Besides, it has a story to relate, interesting for itself."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:48 D '45 320w

"Mr. Beecher is an ardent crusader. An author with a more dispassionate point of view might have made an even more profound study of that remarkable and intensely interesting ship, but his stories of the experiment in operation are impressive." Marcus Duffield

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ag 19 '45 600w

BEIK, PAUL HAROLD. A judgment of the old régime; being a survey by the Parlement of Provence of French economic and fiscal policies at the close of the Seven years war. 290p $3 Columbia univ. press

330.944 France—Economic policy. Finance—France. Provence. Parlement A44-2365

"This is a study of the manuscript volumes, 'Mémoires sur les finances,' which were written by the magistrates of the French parlement of Provence, in response to Louis XV's request, in 1763, for constructive suggestions on the government's financial problems. As an exposition of the financial and political theories of these critics of the Old Régime, the volume is of interest mainly to students of government and economics. . . Of even greater interest to the student of religion is the discovery in these manuscript records that the so-called 'puritan' morality is not peculiar nor even generic to Puritanism as a religious sect. Among these loyal Romanists of the Old Régime we discover that the same ethical valuations developed in response to the evils of a commercial economy as developed among the English sectarians. The proposals of these magistrates for economic and social reform included opposition to idleness, laziness, luxury, waste, vice, love of pleasure and religious holidays, together with an insistence upon thrift, industriousness, honesty, and useful and productive labor as virtues necessary to civic well-being. A strikingly modern note in the thought of these eighteenth-century officials is their emphasis upon the study of population trends as an index of the health of a nation." (Crozer Q) Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Beik has rendered an important contribution to the history of economic problems and thought in the 1760's, but in the opinion of the reviewer, his most important services are in calling attention to the Seligman Collection and to these Memorials. He has discovered an almost inexhaustible field of research, and we may hope for further revelations from French archives." B. F. Hyslop

+ Am Hist R 50:320 Ja '45 800w

Reviewed by W. S. Hudson

Crozer Q 21:366 O '44 400w

BEIM, MRS LORRAINE (LEVEY), and BEIM, JERROLD. Two is a team; pictures by Ernest Crichlow. [61p] $1.75 Harcourt

45-8600

Two little boys of the same age and the same size learn through trial and error to work and play together for better accomplishment—and for more fun.

" 'Two Is a Team' is outstanding in the picture-book field. The lesson of co-operation it teaches would be worth-while in itself, even were it not for the other, more subtly presented lesson told in the pictures alone."

+ Book Week p4 N 11 '45 220w

Booklist 42:60 O 15 '45

Churchman 159:7 N 15 '45 30w

"An unostentatious handling of the race problem which manages to remain first and last a good story, excellently pointed by Ernest Crichlow's lovely illustrations in color and line. A good reader for first and second year reading."

+ Kirkus 13:422 S 15 '45 80w

Reviewed by A. H. McGinity

Library J 70:979 O 15 '45 50w

"The illustrations done by Ernest Crichlow are rather fascinating, but the story is a bit stilted." M. C. Skinner

+ — Library J 70:952 O 15 '45 60w

"Here are no big words like tolerance to raise a question, no issues (until Ted and Paul fall out over the best way to make a coaster), only the record of a friendship accepted simply and naturally." E. L. Buell

N Y Times p37 S 16 '45 100w

New Yorker 21:122 D 8 '45 60w

Springf'd Republican p4d S 23 '45 120w

"You will seldom find a little book that carries so much sense on so few pages." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 23 '45 250w

Wis Lib Bul 41:127 D '45

BELL, BERNARD IDDINGS. God is not dead. 185p $1.50 Harper

230 Christianity 45-8097

This volume contains a group of sermons, with additional chapters, dealing with the spiritual problems of adult, intellectual minds in the present state of western civilization. The author's text is based on material received in the replies of fifty representative men and women to questions put to them by Dr Bell.

Christian Century 62:1065 S 19 '45 40w

"A reviewer has compared the tone of this book to that of the Hebrew prophets. Like them he is emphatic and sweeping in his denunciation of evils, and, like them, he is more successful in proclaiming spiritual ideals than in providing a concrete plan for fulfilling them. But no sincere Christian can deny the validity of the ideals as here so clearly set forth." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 159:16 O 15 '45 330w

Reviewed by W. L. Sperry

Crozer Q 23:92 Ja '46 800w

"Dr. Bell's sermons and articles are so well known within and without the church that a large reading public should be assured for this new volume from his pen. Those who have learned to expect from Dr. Bell a searching analysis of contemporary civilization, a trumpet call to real faith in God, couched in epigrammatic language and a gripping style will not be disappointed in the sermons (or essays) which constitute this volume."

+ Kirkus 13:511 N 15 '45 300w

"A timely and helpful series of sermons."

+ Library J 70:748 S 1 '45 40w

Reviewed by G. R. Stephenson

N Y Times p10 O 14 '45 650w

BELL, HERBERT CLIFFORD FRANCIS. Woodrow Wilson and the people. 392p $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Wilson, Woodrow. U.S.—Politics and government—20th century 45-5410

A biography of Wilson which omits nearly all reference to his early life and concentrates on the years when he was president. In his Foreword the author says: "What I have tried to do is to show that sustained effort to establish and maintain contact with the people was one of the strongest factors in Wilson's public life. . . I have tried to show how he was handicapped (self-handicapped in large degree); how he still managed to win remarkable successes for a time; and why at the end he went down to apparent defeat that seemed the ultimate in tragedy. Since the tragedy was perhaps national and international, as well as personal, its causes are still worth pondering." (Foreword)

"Professor Bell is an admirer of Wilson, but a discriminating and critical admirer who does not try to gloss over Wilson's weaknesses and errors of judgment. The book is liberally illustrated with quotations from Wilson's writings and speeches. Many of these are familiar, but it is nevertheless unfortunate that Professor Bell accepts the current superstition that the omission of footnotes makes a book more readable." J. D. Lewis
+ — Am Pol Sci R 39:1210 D '45 550w

Reviewed by Walter Johnson
Book Week p5 Je 24 '45 400w
Bookmark 6:14 N '45

Reviewed by Paul Kiniery
Cath World 161:437 Ag '45 750w

"His biographer can afford to exercise a greater charity, and while outspoken in his condemnation of those guilty of frankly unethical conduct, displays a calm moderation in appraising the motives of those surrounding Wilson, be they friend or foe. He possesses a keen appreciation of the customs of American politics, a vivid sense for the dramatic, and an excellent style, and these provide the tools and material which have enabled him to construct a most intelligent and absorbing biography of a man whose great faith in popular self-government was best borne out by his own greatness." J. M. Byrne
+ Commonweal 42:384 Ag 3 '45 1800w

"The author has chosen to begin his narrative with the Princeton era and to concentrate his main attention on the presidential years. He has also left several weak, or even blank, spots—such as Wilson's highly significant Latin American policy. All in all, however, this is an honest and valuable appraisal."
+ — Foreign Affairs 24:163 O '45 60w
Kirkus 13:193 My 1 '45 190w

"Easily the best of the single-volume biographies of Wilson. Bell has written an effective synthesis of much of the information made available in slower-paced studies, such as Notter's account of Wilson's foreign policy, Diamond's treatment of his economic thought, and Ray Stannard Baker's plodding, multivolumed over-all view. Although the material is not unfamiliar, the book will interest the general reader; at the same time it is sufficiently scholarly and well-proportioned to be inoffensive to the specialist." E. N. Saveth
+ Nation 161:16 Jl 7 '45 480w

"Professor Bell's book, although it has almost nothing to offer those who are deeply interested in Wilson's pre-Princeton years or the New Freedom at home, deserves high praise as a personal study, particularly for its literary qualities. The author has 'tried to write the sort of book about Wilson that I think he would have wanted to have written about him'; and to say that he has succeeded in doing just that will suggest the defects and the substantial merits of his biography." Richard Hofstadter
+ — New Repub 113:164 Ag 6 '45 650w

"What a story! Mr. Bell takes it from the angle which he conceives that Woodrow Wilson himself would have preferred. Above all else, says Mr. Bell, Wilson wished to be understood by the people and never was understood. Therein was his great tragedy. So he has written a life, not for learned doctors, but not for illiterates either, to explain this complex character. In a measure he is successful. His Wilson is comprehensible, as a man; but it is not certain that he is comprehensible as a great statesman." G. W. Johnson
+ — N Y Times p3 Je 10 '45 600w

"Mr. Bell, following what is beginning to look like a trend, also emphasizes what is now being called Wilson's 'human warmness' (as opposed to what used to be called his 'human coldness'), but the value of his book, particularly for those readers who are just finding out what happened immediately following the first World War, lies in the way he has organized his material into an ably written, constantly interesting narrative."
+ New Yorker 21:78 Je 9 '45 110w

"Mr. Bell gives us Wilson from the days of Princeton. This book is largely an intimate glimpse, often with surprising and warming insights into the man's character and personality and home life. . . Apparently Mr. Bell has gone meticulously into Wilson's private life. . . But the sentimental praise given the first Mrs. Wilson for political astuteness when she did no more than play the gracious hostess is the kind of embarrassing nonsense that cheapens biographies. The dull writing is not brightened by such sentences as 'the convention promised to be one of sweat and tears if not of blood.' That is sophomoric plagiarism." George Barrett
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:14 Jl 7 '45 800w
Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 5 '45 900w

"Obviously based upon a broad knowledge of Wilson and of the complex factors of his period, the book inspires the confidence of the reader. Eschewing footnotes, Professor Bell has indicated sources in the text when he draws upon the findings of other scholars. By selecting his theme and holding rigidly to it, the author has presented Wilson as an intensely human individual, exalted by unwavering devotion to unassailable idealism."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:29 S '45 200w

"The best chapters in Mr. Bell's book are those which deal with the peace conference and the fight over the League of Nations issue in America. Mr. Bell does not exempt Wilson from serious errors of judgment and of tactics; on the other hand, he by no means subscribes to that catalogue of failings which Mr. Bailey has recently furnished us. What makes these chapters particularly valuable is Mr. Bell's familiarity with British and French politics and character, and his constant effort to place the American adventure, the Wilsonian venture, in its world setting." H. S. Commager
+ Weekly Book Review p3 Je 17 '45 2250w

Reviewed by D. M. Potter
Yale R n s 35:163 autumn '45 170w

BELL, MARGARET ELIZABETH. Enemies in Icy strait; il. by George M. Richards. 206p $2 Morrow 45-7908

The scene of this adventure story for older boys is Alaska. The story describes a winter spent there by Robert Craig, when the salmon run failed, leaving his family short of funds.

"A good adventure story of rugged, resourceful living, and wholly independent of the two earlier books relating to the same family group." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:458 N '45 80w

"Competent background, intimate woodland and hunting scenes, but the plot drags at times and the interest is only moderately well sustained."
+ — Kirkus 13:371 Ag 15 '45 90w

"Of special interest to boys of junior high school age." Nelle McCalla
+ Library J 70:823 S 15 '45 70w

"A well-told story of a sturdy, likable boy, against a background of stirring outdoor adventure, loyalty and fine family relationships." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 S 9 '45 170w
Sat R of Lit 28:66 N 10 '45 40w

"The excitement is genuine, not that of a synthetic thriller." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 O 14 '45 350w

BELLAIRS, GEORGE. Calamity at Harwood. 211p $2 Macmillan 45-2833

Detective story.

Booklist 42:38 O 1 '45
Kirkus 13:168 Ap 15 '45 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p22 Jl 1 '45 100w

"This is one of the inspector's slickest cases, with a prime puzzle, quantities of corpses on the home stretch and a winning manner. Can be swallowed straight or with the smile Mr. Bellairs would rather see on your face if we read him aright." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p14 Je 24 '45 200w

BEMELMANS, LUDWIG. Blue Danube; il. by the author. 153p $3 Viking
45-3158

Fanciful story about a group of kindly people living on an island in the Danube. Since the island was inundated yearly and its inhabitants disappeared during that time, and since they had no money whatsoever—only a crop of radishes—the people were of little interest to the Nazis. Then one day a beautiful pig floated down the Danube, past the hungry diners at an open-air cafe, and landed on the island. Then the poor people began to have their troubles.

"Bemelmans's scorn has the edge of a razor and with it he slashes at German grossness. His picture of the old, uncorrupted town is as nostalgic as the old waltz; and in Anton, the Bishop, and the French prisoner he shows the integrity only death can subdue. The little isle, soon to be inundated, becomes a symbol of a sinking people, not without pathos." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 175:123 Je '45 370w

"Here's a postwar plan for redeeming Germany. Translate this scintillating and caustic novel by Bemelmans into German and make it required reading for every literate citizen of the Reich. . . The nimble prose previously used for sheer entertainment purposes is here transformed into a lethal weapon. Next time you meet a soft-peace addict, offer to buy him a copy of 'The Blue Danube.' It might do more to convince him of German evil than all the reports of Nazi atrocities." Sterling North

+ Book Week p2 Ap 15 '45 430w

Booklist 41:255 My 1 '45

"How short the distance between laughter and tears no one knows any better than Mr. Bemelmans, and he has exploited his knowledge in most of his books without sentimentality, but he is not quite so successful in this fable-like story of good Germans and stupid Nazis. All the ingredients of the best Bemelmans are here, however, so you won't mind the sentimentality." E. A. Laycock

+ — Boston Globe p17 Ap 11 '45 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '45

"We are accustomed to think of the weapon of ridicule belonging to our literary heritage, not our literary present, but Ludwig Bemelmans has here redeemed that weapon from obscurity in a vitriolic satire on the Nazi beast. Once again he has done an incomparable job of blending tenderness, pathos, humor, irony and a slight element of fantasy. He's done it with a kind of poignancy that prevents it from descending to horseplay and yet there are sharply etched scenes which would lend themselves readily to farcical handling."

+ Kirkus 13:38 F 1 '45 260w

"This heavily humorous satirical (and expensive) fantasy is superior and more acceptable than author's recent books, despite emphasis on 'good' Germans." H. G. Kelley

Library J 70:306 Ap 1 '45 80w

"Making a bomb the deus ex machina comes too close to accepting the enemy's theology. This sort of thing is a far from fatal flaw in a work which is otherwise good Bemelmans. Not every reader will be pleased to find the bland irony of his recent 'Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep' replaced by a rather muddled blend of indignation and sentimentality; still it is impossible to write without indignation of the Nazis' occupation of one's own country, and it probably would have been equally impossible to write without sentimentality of the sort of people Bemelmans gives us in 'The Blue Danube.'" Russell Maloney

+ — N Y Times p3 Ap 8 '45 550w

"In 'The Blue Danube,' the sentimental Bemelmans is in the ascendant again. He has written a fable of Germany in the current war, but the meaning of the fable isn't clear because the hard, intelligent Bemelmans keeps breaking in on it. . . The book, in detail, is frequently wonderful reading. . . The most unexceptionable features of the book are the fourteen colored illustrations and the magnificent title-page still life, also in color, all by the master himself. Here, at least, the nostalgic Bemelmans can let himself go, unhampered by the rational alter ego. The light and the shadows and the color of the willows by the Danube cannot have changed. And the sparrows, at least must still be democratic." A. J. Liebling

New Yorker 21:83 Ap 14 '45 1450w

"This is no novel written merely for the sake of telling a story, although it is rich in its portrayal and tender in its understanding. . . There is tragedy and beauty in this book. Bemelmans has written sensitively and understandingly. It is a beautiful story that all should read." Harold Fields

+ Sat R of Lit 28:30 My 19 '45 700w

"Only Ludwig Bemelmans could have written this novelette, gay, tender and sad, involving a pig, beer, radishes and a disappearing island." C. K. Bausman

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 15 '45 650w

"Readers who expect The Blue Danube to be a replica of Author Bemelmans' earlier, inimitable works will be disappointed. In its 153 pages they will find the usual bitter-sweet taste and tragicomic personalities—freakish but heartwarming outcasts; birds and animals with the attractiveness of charming children . . . nostalgia, trouble and human patience. But at the heart of these things is a brood of despicable Nazis; and when he comes down to earth to describe their piggish, ruthless natures, Bemelmans drops his magic wand for an unwieldy club. The art and appeal of The Blue Danube are mostly in the trimmings—and particularly in Author-Artist Bemelmans' 14 admirable, full-color illustrations."

+ — Time 45:99 Ap 9 '45 850w

"A simple but profoundly moving little story about the courage of a man whose anguish over a lost world reached the breaking point." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ap 8 '45 650w

Wis Lib Bul 41:84 Jl '45

BENARD, EDMOND DARVIL. Preface to Newman's theology. 234p $2.25 Herder

B or 92 Newman, John Henry, cardinal
45-926

"Dr. Benard tried first to give us 'a convenient synthesis of the background material necessary for the true interpretation of (Newman's) teaching,' and, secondly, to clear away some of 'the vague suspicion of Newman's theological thought.' In the first part of the book we have a brief biography of Newman, an estimation of his place among the theologians, the foundations of his religious thought, his theological method, his temperament, and four principles for the correct interpretation of his thought. In the second part we are given brief analyses of Newman's two great works, An Essay on the Development of Christian Doctrine and An Essay in Aid of a Grammar of Assent, with an answer to the major criticisms of the theological thought of these books." Cath World

"That there is need for a work such as this, no one who is familiar with the historical fate of Newman's thought down to our own time will deny. But, as we intimated in the beginning, it is not probable that all who read this book will do so with equal satisfaction. . . Lest these criticisms seem too harsh, let us repeat again that we hope the book is widely read. Despite its defects, we think the author's general purpose will be achieved, i. e., the book will stimulate some to read Newman for the first time, and others to renew their reading with, perhaps, a fresher and a sounder point of view." M. J. Healy

+ — Cath World 161:186 My '45 500w

"An excellent book, invaluable to one more interested in Newman's theology that his temperament." Cuthbert Wright

+ Commonweal 41:476 F 23 '45 1000w

BENCHLEY, MRS BELLE (JENNINGS). My animal babies. 264p il $3 Little 591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of 45-3909

The director of Balboa Park zoo, San Diego, who is the only woman zoo keeper in the world, discusses the lives and habits of some of the prominent members of her large animal family, paying special attention to the raising of baby birds and animals in captivity. Illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 41:265 My 15 '45

Bookmark 6:6 My '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '45

Kirkus 13:103 Mr 1 '45 170w

"The text is sincere and enthusiastic but lacking in literary charm." L. M. Kinloch
+ — Library J 70:413 My 1 '45 50w

Reviewed by Thomas Haynes
N Y Times p7 My 6 '45 650w

Reviewed by C. B. Moore
Springf'd Republican p4d Je 10 '45 650w

"Mrs. Benchley is generous with her information and dispenses it in the form of stories about her charges. Her affection for them and her pride in them are evident, but she is not sentimental about them." R. B. Peck
+ Weekly Book Review p6 My 6 '45 750w

Wis Lib Bul 41:66 Je '45

BENDA, WLADYSLAW THEODOR. Masks; il. by the author; introd. by Frank Crowninshield. 128p $5 Watson-Guptill

731.75 Masks 45-3975

"This handsome, broad and all-too-thin book tells how the Benda mask came into being, illustrates about seventy of his faces and describes the intricate process by which he makes these technically perfect things. It also gives us something of the history of the mask, and presents Benda's own esthetic." Weekly Book Review

Booklist 41:315 Jl 1 '45

Reviewed by Annette Robin
+ N Y Times p27 Ap 8 '45 180w

Theatre Arts 29:381 Je '45 300w

"For so short an account, Benda's outline of mask history is excellent. It errs only in omitting the magnificent stone masks of prehistoric Mexico as well as the wooden, tin, leather and clay ones of today, and in failing to mention the work of the Eskimo, the sole rival of the Negro in the perfection of such facial sculpture. Benda's esthetic is clear and adequate." Kenneth MacGowan
+ Weekly Book Review p14 Ap 29 '45 550w

BENDICK, MRS JEANNE. Making the movies; directed by Robert Bendick. (Whittlesey house publication) 190p il $2 McGraw

791.4 Moving pictures—Juvenile literature 45-9569

"A clear and entertaining account of the making of a movie, from the script to the finished film. It includes a very informing chapter on the actors and one on the Army and Navy cameramen." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 42:112 D 1 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '45

"A rounded fact-book, charmingly presented with lively, gay spot drawings in warm gray and black."
+ Kirkus 13:473 O 15 '45 80w

"For all its compact simplicity, this is an amazingly well-organized and informative explanation of the professions, crafts, techniques and processes which make the movies. . . Recommended for both children's and young people's collections." M. C. Scoggin
+ Library J 70:1139 D 1 '45 110w

"A really first-rate book about how movies are made." Creighton Peet
+ N Y Times p20 N 11 '45 180w

+ Sat R of Lit 28:32 N 10 '45 30w

"Lucid, simple, interesting to any child who goes to the movies." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 O 28 '45 350w

BENEDICT, OTIS. Manual of machine shop practice. 249p il $1.75 McGraw

621.75 Machine shop practice 44-9283

"Based on courses given at the Pratt Institute, School of Science and Technology, this manual is intended to provide a collection of useful information for the student of machine shop practice. It deals with cutting speeds, time for machining, tapers, tolerances and allowances, precision measuring devices, press tools and standard die sets. Ten experiments which can be performed in the shop and which will further acquaint the student with his tools, are briefly outlined. An appendix includes tables and information relating to screw threads, gauges, A.S.M.E. standards for metal fits, blanking die data, etc."(N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Library J 69:814 O 1 '44 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:61 O '44

BENES, EDVARD. Edvard Beneš in his own words; threescore years of a statesman, builder and philosopher [comp. by Karel Hudec]. 136p gratis Czech-Am. nat. alliance. Eastern division, 24-37 32d st, Long Island City 2, N.Y.

940.5 Europe—Politics. Czechoslovakia—Foreign relations 45-141

Selections from the writings and speeches of this Czechoslovak statesman, which give a picture of Dr Beneš' views on his own country, his neighbors, and the war.

Booklist 41:337 Jl 15 '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 5 '45 500w

Foreign Affairs 23:698 Jl '45 20w

BENET, STEPHEN VINCENT. America. 122p $1.50 Farrar [6s Heinemann]

973 U.S.—History 44-4140

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Bookmark 5:10 N '44

"An interesting addition to the flood of books on American history. It is not, and does not pretend to be, an example of scientific scholarship; it is a poet's vision of the American past and assessment of the American achievement." D. W. B.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 F 21 '45 180w

"Benét was not, it now seems probable, a poet whom later generations will turn to for the deeper delights of poetry, but he was a real poet and he may turn out to have been the Longfellow of his age—and that is no minor politico-poetical office to hold. His essay is markedly the work of a poet. . . It is a posthumous work, and its author might have given it a more adequate dress had he lived. As it is, the reader will miss, in the prose, the frequent felicities of 'John Brown's Body' or 'Western Star,' and there are here few prose substitutes for them. Yet the book is moving, readable and significant."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p37 Ja 27 '45 500w

BENET, STEPHEN VINCENT. We stand united, and other radio scripts; with a foreword by Norman Rosten; decorated by Ernest Stock. 210p $2.50 Farrar

792 Radio plays 45-2167

Posthumous collection of radio scripts written by this American poet for America at war. They are the six "Dear Adolf" letters; the prayer "Toward the century of modern man" composed for the President to read to the nation; and Thanksgiving day—1941; A time to reap; They burned the books; The undefended border; Listen to the people; A child is born; Your army.

"An average collection of writing by Benet's own standard, 'We Stand United' is an extraordinary collection of dramatic radio writing by the standards prevailing in that trade. A competent short-story writer and a better than competent poet, Benet as a radio dramatist stood with Orson Welles, Corwin, Oboler, MacLeish and Ranald MacDougal (The Man Behind the Gun) . . . writers for the most part of brilliant sustaining shows which go on the air obscurely at 11:30 p.m. or midnight, when most people are asleep." Peter Quinn

BENET, S. V.—Continued

+ Book Week p4 Mr 25 '45 380w

Booklist 41:249 My 1 '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 18 '45 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '45

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 21:279 Jl '45 30w

"Honest, homespun, eloquent—propaganda at its best."

+ Kirkus 12:528 N 15 '44 80w

"Highly recommended."

+ Library J 70:266 Mr 15 '45 60w

"I am an actor—a man concerned, primarily, with the spoken word. These plays were spoken plays, and I had the honor of doing many of them. Steve is dead, and the plays have been spoken, and the radio turned off. But the fire and honesty of them lives on paper. We'll always need every word of Stephen Vincent Benét. Put them next to 'John Brown's Body,' on your shelf, and when you get a chance, read them out loud." Raymond Massey

+ Sat R of Lit 28:24 Ap 14 '45 800w

Theatre Arts 29:542 S '45 600w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:4 Je '45 160w

"They are mostly tough and hard driving and sharp-edged. Though they are deadly serious there are more than occasional moments of the old Benét humor, and now and then a lyric passage of goose-pimpling beauty. There is anger and scorn in them, as one might expect from a poet and patriot who hated Fascism long before Munich and the shooting. There is also in them the pride in America and her people, the stout affirmation of our democracy which inhabits so much of his earlier work in other media." Norman Corwin

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 25 '45 1450w

BENET, WILLIAM ROSE, and AIKEN, CONRAD POTTER, eds. Anthology of famous English and American poetry. 951p $1.45 Modern lib.

821.08 American poetry—Collections. English poetry—Collections 45-37883

Collection of Anglo-American poetry, from Chaucer to Auden in England, and from the Revolution thru World war II in this country Index of poets, and of first lines.

"And where in this curious potpourri [the American section] are such really distinguished poets as George Dillon and Eilzabeth Madox Roberts; obviously, the editor is either ignorant or prejudiced in this respect. Generally speaking this anthology is worth the money if only for the first half of the English section, where the selections are unquestionably excellent." Sterling North

+ — Book Week p2 D 30 '45 850w

Booklist 42:167 Ja 15 '46

"'From Chaucer to Tennyson and Whitman, you get more than your money's worth. It is not so comprehensive as, for example, the Viking Book of Poetry, edited by Richard Aldington, which has not been surpassed since its appearance in 1941. For the price, however, this is a good and representative selection. . . Among the works of American contemporaries, we could well spare such offerings as Oscar Williams' to make room for some of the really good poetry excluded from the collection. If no more paper could be spared, we should like to have seen a few of the selections give place to works of poets, both recognized and worthy of recognition, who are noticeably absent." Pearl Strachan

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 19 '46 350w

BENET, WILLIAM ROSE, and COUSINS, NORMAN, eds. Poetry of freedom. 820p $3 Random house

808.81 Poetry—Collections. Liberty—Poetry 45-5160

An anthology of poetic expression representing the urge to freedom of all peoples from the early Greeks and Britons to the young men of the second World war. Index to authors.

Booklist 41:318 Jl 1 '45

Bookmark 6:8 N '45

"An inspiring and enjoyable collection of poems expressing the instinct for freedom."

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 11 '45 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '45

"A good collection—and useful as a source for quotable material covering a wide range of thought and expression."

+ Kirkus 13:241 Je 1 '45 100w

Reviewed by F. W. Dupee
Nation 161:138 Ag 11 '45 90w

"All in all, the book should make the most valuable addition to the private library, the public library, the schoolroom. One cannot help thinking that such a book, carefully studied by the children of Germany over a generation, would be an excellent agent provacateur for the cause of freedom." Marguerite Young

+ N Y Times p25 Ag 5 '45 340w

"Since the nobility of the subject of a poem does not guarantee a poem's excellence, some of the verse is dull, but the anthology as a whole is extremely interesting because of its contrasts, as well as its similarities, of subject and treatment."

+ New Yorker 21:72 Je 23 '45 80w

"It is an immensely more difficult task to survey the vast scene of world poetry in following a single theme than to proceed along the beaten highway of literary history. Palgrave and Quiller-Couch demonstrated the value of the anthology in increasing the reading of poetry, but Mr. Benét and Mr. Cousins have bettered their instruction. Their collection gives to poetry an immediate impact upon human minds, an impact which is more than ever valuable in the present day when the fate of the world is bound up with the idea that men have of liberty, and the means they are prepared to take to achieve it." R. M. Lovett

+ Poetry 67:46 O '45 850w

"Here is the best that men have said about the last best hope of earth; here, cumulatively gathered, music and meaning are combined in 'a message that can be conveyed in no other way.'" Louis Untermeyer

+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 Je 23 '45 550w

BENGE, EUGENE JACKSON. Manpower in marketing. 294p $4 Harper

658.8 Sales management 45-2850

"Excellent book on how to build up a strong sales organization by using tested methods of selecting, training, equipping and evaluating the sales staff. Written to meet trends and changes in salesmanship and distribution by a well-known authority on job analysis. Selection of salesmen, training methods, including conference methods, incentives, compensations, quotas and quota setting, training devices, supervision, sales planning and control, bonus plans and how to conduct a store meeting. Illustrated with charts, graphs and tables." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 41:265 My 15 '45

"A lot of reading for a few ideas, as the author writes on personal practices, executive leadership and office management. . . Comprehensive coverage, but too wordy to appeal to the busy sales manager who might use it."

Kirkus 13:26 Ja 15 '45 130w

Library J 70:307 Ap 1 '45 90w

BENNETT, HARRY, ed. Commercial waxes, natural and synthetic. 583p il $11 Chemical pub. co.

665 Waxes 45-1228

"Up-to-date practical book on mineral, vegetable, animal and insect waxes, manufactured and synthetic waxes and wax materials. Included are physical properties, such as melting point, solubility, plasticity, emulsifiability, adhesiveness, flash point compatibility with other materials, sources and uses, methods of handling, wax technology, waxes in industry and many formulas. For the chemist, engineer, purchasing agent and student." Library J

Reviewed by G. S. Jamieson
+ Chem & Eng N 23:402 F 25 '45 270w
Chem & Met Eng 52:263 S '45 80w
Library J 70:118 F 1 '45 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:14 Ja '45
Special Libraries 36:63 F '45
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:56 Mr '45 240w

BENNETT, MRS JOAN (FRANKAU). Virginia Woolf, her art as a novelist. 150p $2 Harcourt [6s Cambridge]

823 Woolf, Virginia (Stephen) (Mrs Leonard Sidney Woolf) 45-35193

An introduction to the novels of Virginia Woolf. Mrs Bennett quotes copiously from this English author's works and analyses her style and place in literature in the light of her various characters. No index.

Reviewed by Marguerite Young
Book Week p3 O 7 '45 550w
Booklist 42:53 O 15 '45
Bookmark 6:8 N '45

"It is difficult to determine what is the audience whom Mrs. Bennett hopes to reach with this critical study. To a considerable extent it relies upon ample and well-chosen passages from Mrs. Woolf's own books—both the novels and the literary essays. But these passages will be familiar to all her admirers; and those whom her peculiar qualities of intellect, of style, and of technique alienate will be put off by the reappearance in these pages of so much that they dislike or do not understand." S. C. C.
Christian Science Monitor p20 O 13 '45 460w

"Mrs. Bennett gives long and admirably chosen quotation to illustrate her every point—just as an anthology of 'best bits' this would be a lovely book to keep, apart from the excellent critical work—but she says nothing—or very little—of Virginia Woolf as critic, essayist, biographer, fighting feminist or enchanting and rarely beautiful human being, and she was all these too." Anne Fremantle
+ Commonweal 43:71 N 2 '45 3300w

"This critical appraisal of her work is intelligent, extensive, sympathetic, but the copious quotations from the author herself suggest that what one should learn of Virginia Woolf is to be found by reading her own books. This may serve as a guide in that direction. The market? The selected literary minority already enthusiastic admirers."
+ Kirkus 13:417 S 15 '45 100w

Reviewed by Delmore Schwartz
Nation 161:378 O 13 '45 380w

"Mrs. Bennett has written a modest and interesting little volume, with very generous quotations from Virginia Woolf's own writings, so that we have, in addition to a sympathetic account of her work, almost an anthology of it. Mrs. Woolf's novels are good material for an anthology, and Mrs. Bennett's quotations make us enjoy again the flavor of that highly personal style, eager, radiant and sad, which was so unmistakable even when it appeared anonymously in the London Times Literary Supplement." Theodore Spencer
+ New Repub 113:758 D 3 '45 1300w

"It is difficult to imagine a more admirable introduction to the novels of Virginia Woolf than this short book." Rosamond Lehmann
+ New Statesman & Nation 29:143 Mr 3 '45 1550w

"Somehow Virginia Woolf's books, for all their beauty of style and feeling, their intelligence and integrity, have seemed to lie outside the field of our present concerns. Joan Bennett's book, the method of which I am convinced is the best one to use in approaching so difficult a novelist as Virginia Woolf, has helped me to understand why the above is true. And at the outset one ought to say that the book under review so admirably fulfills its duty of being provocative that it easily might disappear from view during discussion. For it leads one at every point to the text of Virginia Woolf, to the special beauty and significance which it is the critic's duty to discover." Ralph Bates
+ N Y Times p1 S 30 '45 1800w

"An unusually perceptive and sensitive study. . . [Mrs] Bennett is totally immersed in her subject, has no preconceived theories, and employs a clean, clear style. Admirers of Mrs. Woolf, it would seem, could hardly afford to be without this one."
+ New Yorker 21:87 S 29 '45 90w

"A book with many amiable qualities. It is neat, elegant, and highly readable. Mrs. Bennett writes with charm, modesty, and a deep love of her subject." Eric Bentley
+ Sat R of Lit 28:35 O 13 '45 400w

"There is only one grudge we feel against Mrs. Bennett in this otherwise admirable book, which every devotee of Mrs. Woolf, every shrewd reader of the novel, will have to ponder. It is that she has not been persuaded to discuss Mrs. Woolf's style. Every sentence, as she says, bears Mrs. Woolf's hall-mark; but where, as she also tells us, as much attention has to be paid to this prose as to lyric poetry, where the method is akin to that form, the style is more than usually part and parcel of what has to be conveyed." Bonamy Dobrée
+ — Spec 174:200 Mr 2 '45 950w
Times [London] Lit Sup p344 Jl 21 '45 390w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
Weekly Book Review p2 O 7 '45 1250w
Wis Lib Bul 41:125 D '45

BENNETT, JOSEPH DEERICKS. Baudelaire: a criticism. 176p $2 Princeton univ. press [13s 6d Oxford]

841 Baudelaire, Charles Pierre A44-5879

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Reviewed by Jean Wahl
J Philos 43:22 Ja 3 '46 600w

"Yet another Princeton professorial evaluation of the work of a European writer, carried through with the erudite competence that is the hall-mark of such productions. It is a sensitive and sympathetic and, at the same time, intensively analytical exposition of the æsthetic and moral implications of Baudelaire's revolt against the somewhat complacently optimistic standards of nineteenth-century writers." W. G.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 18 '45 180w

"Though Mr. Bennett's understanding of Baudelaire's ethics and esthetics is as correct as any Catholic apologist's can be, his whole book is marred by countless minor inexactitudes which might have been avoided had the proofs been expertly revised and corrected and had the manuscript been first submitted to a scholar whose knowledge of French was sounder and whose attitude toward Baudelaire was less subjective or partisan." Edouard Roditi
— + Poetry 66:48 Ap '45 700w

"There are still plenty of things waiting to be said about the work of Charles Baudelaire. The value of Mr. Bennett's book lies in his having failed to say any of them. Whoever scans its pages is likely to be led to review his own estimate of the poet and thereby to hit on at least some of those things for himself."
Times [London] Lit Sup p188 Ap 21 '45 750w

"Mr. Bennett's study is perhaps the first one (in English) grounded in the Catholic tradition which is concerned primarily with the poems

BENNETT, J. D.—Continued
themselves: that is, with Baudelaire's art. Mr. Bennett brings great insight, patience and love to this task. . . Mr. Bennett's analysis of individual poems is often brilliant. But often also his 'contextual' analysis degenerates into an over elaborated paraphrase. . . But perhaps the most serious quarrel one can make with Mr. Bennett's approach is that sometimes he overcomplicates and 'ethicalizes' a poem so that we lose sight of the poem as poem." Vivienne Koch

+ — Weekly Book Review p8 F 4 '45 1350w

BENNETT, LOWELL. Parachute to Berlin. 252p $2.50 Vanguard

940.547243 World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, German. World war, 1939-1945 —Personal narratives, American 45-10094

The author, an INS correspondent went on a raid over Germany with the RAF. The trip proved to be a one-way affair, and Mr Bennett parachuted to German soil, was captured, and spent some time escaping and being recaptured, until he was finally released from a concentration camp by the arrival of the Russians.

Reviewed by David Karno
Book Week p16 N 25 '45 600w

Booklist 42:145 Ja 1 '46

Kirkus 13:409 S 15 '45 150w

Reviewed by H. F. Pringle
N Y Times p29 N 25 '45 230w

New Yorker 21:109 N 24 '45 140w

"The conclusions as to the results of air warfare on the Germans are, of course, a matter of Mr. Bennett's own opinion, since they go beyond mere observation of physical damage; they may well be tinged with overexcitement and even bitterness. Yet they deserve consideration. His debunking of the fabulous claims made for the Allied strategic bombings, including precision bombing, has since found considerable support in the survey of aerial results in Europe conducted by civilians at the Army's request. . . Mr. Bennett's book is not only lively reading but full of meat." Marcus Duffield

+ Weekly Book Review p6 D 16 '45 600w

BENNS, FRANK LEE. Europe since 1914 in its world setting. 6th ed 672,92p il maps $5 Crofts

940.5 Europe—History—1914- 45-35194

"The period since 1914 has almost doubled since the publication of the first edition, and the widening of the implications of European history as well as the lengthening of its duration has suggested the addition of the last four words to the title. In this latest revision the whole text has been reworked and the narrative brought down to April 1945. It ends with an estimate of the difficulty of the prospective invasion of the Japanese home islands—which shows how rapidly current history becomes ancient history in these fast-moving days." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index. For earlier editions see Book Review Digest, 1930, 1934, 1936, and 1939.

Booklist 42:59 O 15 '45

"Primarily a college textbook, this is for any studious reader a thoroughly satisfactory and dependable history of the most crowded and complex thirty years in the history of the world."

+ Christian Century 62:1164 O 10 '45 150w

Social Studies 36:331 N '45 20w

"Prof Benns has marshaled the data for his story with detachment and discrimination and presents it in a direct, straightforward style. His story is one of causes, results and methods. Disputes and arguments, accusations and counteraccusations, suspicions and fears are passed by. . . A comprehensive bibliography, a complete index, maps, charts and photographs contribute to the value of this standard work."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 S 5 '45 200w

BENSON, BARBARA ELNA. Music and sound systems in industry. 124p $1.50 McGraw

621.384193 Music in industry. Loud speaking apparatus 45-7101

"First book devoted to the treatment of the industrial broadcasting system, showing its value as a management tool and giving methods and data for program directors and others interested in the system. Includes technique of organizing and operation as well as proper programming and broadcasting and a discography under title, listing the music on records from catalogs of Victor, Decca and Columbia as well as a discussion of the use of radio transcriptions for industrial use. Bibliography." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 42:4 S '45

Library J 70:686 Ag '45 90w

BENTHAM, JEREMY. Limits of jurisprudence defined; being part two of An introduction to the principles of morals and legislation; now first printed from the author's manuscript with an introd. by Charles Warren Everett. 358p $4.50 Columbia univ. press

340 Jurisprudence A45-1574

"This is the first publication of a hitherto unknown work by the famous author of An Introduction to the Principles of Morals and Legislation. It was designed and written as a continuation of that treatise, and is the civil-law counterpart of the enquiry there devoted to criminal legislation." Am Pol Sci R

"Mr. Everett has performed a work of piety that must have cost much labor. The result does him credit. Though broken in some places by gaps in the manuscript—a defect beyond the editor's control—the text runs smoothly for much the greater part. There are some errors of reproduction, but these are remarkably few. . . What Mr. Everett has presented us with is undoubtedly a faithful and almost complete edition of a work which, if it had come out a century and a half ago, must have added greatly to the impact of Morals and Legislation and enhanced still further the vast reputation of its author. As it is, there is something pathetic about the publication." P. E. Corbett

Am Pol Sci R 39:1012 O '45 650w

"This work is unquestionably an important addition to the Benthamiana placed recently at the disposal of the student. . . There is a great deal of knowledge to be derived from the works of Bentham and the student who takes the trouble to master them in their methodological implications will advance firmly in his understanding of the sociological aspect of the fundamental problems of the law. One can not help being grateful to Professor Everett for this publication. It amplifies our knowledge of Bentham's efforts, and contributes substantially to the adequate evaluation of his ideas about the law and its relationships with the other social disciplines." C. D. Kojouharoff

+ Columbia Law R 45:980 N '45 650w

"The editing has been extremely well done and Professor Everett's introduction to the book is both scholarly and clear. The book deepens and extends Bentham's ideas on both the philosophy of law and method and offers therefore an opportunity to analyze the nature, value, and limitations of Benthamite jurisprudence." E. N. Garlan

J Philos 42:607 O 25 '45 3600w

BENTLEY, GERALD EADES. Shakespeare and Jonson; their reputations in the seventeenth century compared. 2v 162;320p v1 $2.50; v2 $6; set $7.50 Univ. of Chicago press [set 45s Cambridge]

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Criticism and interpretation. Jonson, Ben A45-1235

"Two volumes devoted to Shakespeare's and Jonson's reputations as they are reflected in seventeenth-century literature. . . Mr. Bentley has combed the records for the minutest references, the smallest allusion to a play, a character, a familiar line. He quotes innumerable passages lifted bodily from the elder poet's works. Even in the well sifted field of Shakespearean allusion Mr. Bentley has found twenty-one new items. For Jonson, who, he points out, was far more popular among the writers of the period than the Bard himself, he marshals no less than 1079 allusions. He discusses in Vol. I his methods of work and the conclusions to which this study has led him; Vol. II contains the allusions themselves." Theatre Arts

---

Reviewed by Pierce Butler
Library Q 15:268 Jl '45 320w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 160:310 Mr 17 '45 490w

"A solid piece of research... It is an important addition to the mass of precise information available on these two great Elizabethans."
+ Theatre Arts 29:255 Ap '45 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p200 Ap 28 '45 550w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:3 Je '45 280w

Reviewed by Samuel Chew
Weekly Book Review p15 Ag 19 '45 550w

BERG, MARY. Warsaw ghetto, a diary; [tr. by Norbert Guterman] ed. by S. L. Shneiderman. 253p $2.75 Fischer, L.B.

940.54056 World war, 1939—Poland. Jews in Poland. World war, 1939—Atrocities. Poland—History—German occupation, 1939-45-2281

A young girl's diary based on notes set down during the months and years she lived in the Warsaw ghetto before her family was finally allowed to come to America. The daughter of an American mother, the girl was protected from the worst hardships but she saw much grief and tragedy among her friends and neighbors.

Booklist 41:207 Mr 15 '45

"This is a grim, unpleasant record, but it is shot through with the heroism of youth. Our young people need it to show them in human terms what oppression has meant and to give them a stake in the peace to come."
+ Horn Bk 21:210 My '45 140w

"In view of the youth and the experiences of the author, it manifests surprising restraint... A moving record of terrorism."
+ Kirkus 13:24 Ja 15 '45 170w

"This is not a pleasant book, neither is it entirely depressing, for the courage of this young person shines through the Nazi atrocities. Small libraries will want to consider the amount of this type of material that is needed." M. P. McKay
Library J 70:162 F 15 '45 100w

"A curative for anti-Semitism—and it is still among us—should be a consideration of this bravely human document, inconspicuous as it is. The macrocosm, the universe itself—as always—must bear the endless weight of its guilt toward the microcosm. The only solution for man's problems, from this point of view, must be provided by man himself, his creative consciousness." Marguerite Young
+ N Y Times p6 F 18 '45 800w

"This diary of a young Polish girl who was somehow able to survive the years of torment and terror when Warsaw was occupied by the Nazi is one of the most heart-breaking documents that has yet come out of the war... This is a grim book, full of darkness and horror, and, because of the picture it gives of the courage and humanity of the people of the Warsaw ghetto, it is also a brave and inspiring one."
+ New Yorker 21:77 F 24 '45 160w

Reviewed by F. C. Weiskopf
Sat R of Lit 28:34 Mr 3 '45 550w

"Unfortunately, Miss Berg repeats hearsay grievances and stirs up resentments when what we need is understanding. She accuses the Poles of anti-Semitism yet twice she was saved by the kindness of a 'gentile.' She probably did not known Poles were being shot for throwing food parcels over the Ghetto walls. Many of her intimate friends escaped to the 'Aryan side,' yet several times she gives undue credence to the danger of Polish informers. However, even in Miss Berg's account the Polish police are conspicuous by their absence. It was the 'Lithuanians' and 'Ukranians' who helped the Nazis." Dorothy Adams
Weekly Book Review p14 F 18 '45 850w

BERGE, WENDELL. Cartels; challenge to a free world. 266p $3.25 Am. council on public affairs

338.88 Trusts, Industrial 44-9690

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Mr. Berge writes as a prosecutor; he states his convictions (sound convictions, by the way) and supports them. His thrusts are vigorous, not to say impassioned. They are solidly based, however, and well documented; and while the author has made full use of his very revealing materials he has been careful to direct his assault solely against the institution of cartels, and not to dissipate its strength by attacks on either persons or motives." B. W. Lewis
+ Am Econ R 35:199 Mr '45 1100w

Foreign Affairs 23:333 Ja '45 70w

Library J 70:220 Mr 1 '45 70w

"An illuminating discussion of the evil effects of cartels, by the Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Antitrust Division."
+ Management R 34:117 Mr '45 40w

Social Studies 36:186 Ap '45 60w

"History teachers who want their pupils to understand the workings of monopolies and cartels will find this volume, written by Wendell Berge, Assistant Attorney General of the United States in charge of the Anti-trust division, a very helpful addition to the materials already available."
+ Social Studies 36:232 My '45 700w

Reviewed by Thurman Arnold
Survey G 34:72 F '45 430w

BERGENGREN, ROY FREDERICK. I speak for Joe Doakes; for co-operation at home and among nations. 167p $2 Harper

334 Cooperation. International cooperation
45-1977

The author, who has for many years been interested in cooperative credit unions, reviews our present and future economic and political problems and shows how cooperation everywhere at home and abroad could help in solving them.

Reviewed by A. E. Albrecht
Ann Am Acad 240:169 Jl '45 490w

"I am afraid that traditional radicals, traditional conservatives, the majority of academic economists, and most business men are too deeply channelized in their current economic assumptions to make heads or tails of Bergengren's book. Joe Doakes, however, will find it easy to understand. The job is to get it into his hands." S. I. Hayakawa
+ — Book Week p4 Mr 11 '45 800w

Booklist 41:219 Ap 1 '45

Reviewed by John Reid
Canadian Forum 25:119 Ag '45 450w

Christian Century 62:337 Mr 14 '45 140w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 31 '45 450w

Commonweal 42:99 My 11 '45 40w

Kirkus 12:556 D 15 '44 90w

New Repub 112:486 Ap 9 '45 110w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue
N Y Times p25 Ap 8 '45 550w

Springf'd Republican p4 Jl 21 '45 480w

Reviewed by Louise Dichman
Survey 81:182 Jl '45 300w

Wis Lib Bul 41:45 Ap '45

BERGER, ELMER. Jewish dilemma. 257p $3 Devin-Adair

296 Jews—Political and social conditions. Zionism 45-9993

In this treatise on the Jewish problem, an American rabbi sets forth arguments to show that the solution lies in part with the Jews themselves—that they should cease to consider themselves as a people apart from others, and that the Zionist nationalist movement is opposed to the best interests of the Jews.

"Rabbi Berger is the executive director of the American Council of Judaism. This book outlines the ideas upon which that council is founded. It is a book written primarily for Jews, but Christians will do well to read it as they desire to help Jews solve our common problems." A. L. Warnshuis

+ Christian Century 63:18 Ja 2 '46 1100w

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ja 19 '46 280w

Kirkus 13:488 N 1 '45 170w

"Here is as controversial a piece of writing as has for a long time come from the pen of a Jewish scholar. It is not only highly interesting reading on practically every one of its pages, but is also a valuable antidote to the growing belief—undeniably nurtured by Zionism—that 'Jews are an unassimilable group and want to be understood as such.' The apparent failure in Europe of Jewish emancipation, culminating in Hitler's policies and what went with them, makes Dr. Berger not despair of it, but rather call for an emancipation on the part of European Gentiles." Robert Pick

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:44 N 10 '45 400w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon

Weekly Book Review p16 Ja 13 '46 700w

BERGHELL, A. B. Production engineering in the aircraft industry. 307p $3 McGraw

629.134 Airplane industry and trade. Factory management 45-97

"A practical text embodying principles, illustrated by specific cases, questions, and answers, for the solution of common problems encountered in the aircraft industry. The author explains the application of principles of estimating new contract costs, budgeting and scheduling direct labor hours, controlling work in process through the use of time standards work simplification, material saving, statistical and graphical reports, etc." Publisher's note

Booklist 41:192 Mr 1 '45

Library J 69:814 O 1 '44 80w

Management R 34:117 Mr '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:12 Ja '45

BERGMAN, ALEXANDER F. They look like men [poems] ed. with a foreword by Joy Davidman. 63p $1.50 Ackerman

811 44-47583

Volume of the collected poems of a young American poet who died in 1941 at the age of 29.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p6 D 24 '44 300w

"Bergman can endure the melancholy of the present and suffer his irony to recognize without demoralization the cold and forbidding surface of life. In this rare combination of qualities, the view of irony is somewhat technically indebted to T. S. Eliot, while the naturalism has overtones of Robert Frost. Bergman fuses these contradictory influences into a style of his own. It is a loss to American poetry that he should have died before his talent reached its maturity." E. B. Burgum

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 25 '45 500w

BERGMAN, CARYL. Dance on, tzigane. 344p $2.50 Dorrance

45-907

"Romance of a 'blond gypsy' dancer and an American." Christian Century

— Christian Century 62:210 F 14 '45 10w

"Miss Bergman's detailed descriptions of life in a gypsy caravan have occasional charm, despite her vocabulary. As for the novel itself, this reviewer would have sworn that the brand went out of fashion with the mustache cup. Perhaps it only goes to prove that certain brands of corn improve with age. You may even enjoy this bottling, if you hold your nose and swallow fast." James MacBride

— + N Y Times p29 Ap 15 '45 360w

BERGMANN, MRS LEOLA (NELSON). Music master of the Middle West; the story of F. Melius Christiansen and the St Olaf choir. 230p il $2.50 Univ. of Minn.

B or 92 Christiansen, Frederik Melius A44-5713

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"In the opinion of the present reviewer, the vitality which music has or will have in this country must arise not out of the calculated search for musical Americanism by the folklorist nor from the glib sensationalism of the concert hall and radio, but from the 'grass roots' need for music of the people who live in America. Much of our musical activity is energized by that kind of need, and it is important that such sources of musical vitality become a part of the record. That record, which will be the history of music in America, gradually is being written. Mrs. Bergmann's story of Mr. Christiansen and his St. Olaf Choir is an important and inspiring part of it." T. M. Finney

+ Am Hist R 50:625 Ap '45 240w

Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 10 '45 450w

Wis Lib Bul 41:19 Ja '45

BERNADOTTE, FOLKE, greve. The curtain falls; last days of the Third reich; tr. from the Swedish by Eric Lewenhaupt [Eng title: The fall of the curtain]. 154p il $2 Knopf [5s Cassell]

943.086 World war, 1939-1945—Germany. Germany—Nazi movement 45-8956

The man whom Himmler chose to be his intermediary with the Allies, during the last days of the Third Reich, describes his efforts to bring about a peace settlement. Count Bernadotte's first mission was to Germany, to attempt to get permission to have all Danes and Norwegians in German prison camps, transferred to Sweden. He first describes this mission and continues with the abortive surrender gesture.

Reviewed by David Karno

Book Week p10 O 21 '45 500w

Booklist 42:125 D 15 '45

Christian Science Monitor p12 O 29 '45 550w

Kirkus 13:410 S 15 '45 170w

"An unpretentious, highly interesting account of the last days of the Third Reich, a serious contribution to the inside story of the Nazi collapse." Joseph Bornstein

+ Nation 161:530 N 17 '45 210w

"It is a remarkable story in several respects. It is remarkable, first, for its brevity. . . But for all its brevity the book is remarkable, too, for the insight it gives into the positively preposterous parallel between Himmler's machinations and those of the men he had butchered after July 20. . . Count Bernadotte is unmistakably an honorable man, a humane man and an intelligent man. He foresaw that the only way out for the Reich was unconditional surrender to all the Allies. He never believed that Himmler would be received on any such terms as those he proposed. Yet he had to try to do anything he could that might conceivably help end the war. And he did try. In spite of every tribute that can and should be paid him, however, it also remains true—and this is another remarkable thing about his book—that his part in the events he describes is a perfect example of the curious complications that can be introduced into high policy by the intervention of amateur outsiders." W. R. Deuel

N Y Times p3 O 14 '45 1150w

New Yorker 21:98 O 27 '45 90w

"This fascinating little volume is an important contribution to an understanding of the chaotic, nightmarish last days of the Third Reich. Unassuming, simply written, it makes no pretense to being definitive or analytical. But as a highly intelligent man's close-up of some of the key figures of the crumbling Nazi empire it makes absorbing reading. And it is an invaluable footnote to history." H. C. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 28:10 O 20 '45 750w

"Of all the recent books covering the final phase of the war in Europe and the last, lurid days in Berlin and Germany, probably the easiest to read, and not merely because it is unquestionably the shortest, is 'The Curtain Falls.' " R. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 21 '45 390w

"The book, as might be expected, makes no sensational disclosures; but for all that it contains much of interest."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p4 Ja 5 '46 900w

"Count Bernadotte is a distinguished Swede to whom fate gave a ringside seat from which to watch the disintegration and collapse of Hitler's Reich. He used his opportunity to observe sharply, and record with humanity and detachment some of the details of that unprecedented and appalling spectacle. The volume is slender, its contents rewarding. I hope, however, that the author will see fit to extend the recital, with the aid of documents that must soon become available, before his memory of men and events becomes dim." J. R. Walsh

+ Weekly Book Review p5 O 14 '45 900w

BERNARD, LUTHER LEE. War and its causes. 479p $4.25 Holt

355.01 War 44-8797

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"The book deals with a complex and important subject, but it lacks in careful analysis, precise definition, trenchant criticism, original ideas, illuminating insight, or arresting expression. A number of interesting quotations and several sketchy expositions of opinions of others may be of some use, as may the nine-page Bibliography." Quincy Wright

— + Am J Soc 51:71 Jl '45 1200w

"In this book a mature and able sociologist brings his massive erudition and logical power to bear upon a great social problem. The result is a readable and significant volume which will bear examination in the post-war years better than most of the literature of the period." Willard Waller

+ Am Soc R 10:809 D '45 800w

Booklist 41:180 F 15 '45

Bookmark 6:3 Ja '45

Christian Science Monitor p13 F 17 '45 50w

"Dr. Bernard's encyclopedic work is so broad in scope that the cantankerous reviewer would be tempted to disagree with any number of basic concepts and to seek out errors of commission or omission. . . He might object to the author's occasional lapses into the professional sociologist's jargon . . . unnecessary because Dr. Bernard is at his best when he writes simply and directly, without literary or scholarly flourishes. But all this is unimportant. What is important is that this is a vital, thought-provoking, authoritative book. It shows an enormous background and knowledge. The planning and outlining are superb. The style is for the most part brisk and clear. The selection of quotations is keen and penetrating." L. L. Snyder

+ — Pol Sci Q 60:119 Mr '45 950w

Reviewed by H. E. Jensen

Social Forces 23:464 My '45 600w

"With a severely formalized and pedagogic style, one of America's outstanding sociologists analyzes war into its last and most minute causative components. Attentive and serious readers (others should not attempt the work) will find fascination and illumination in the precision and complete detail of the study, its logical presentation and the dispassionate objectivity with which the subject is examined." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p12 F 11 '45 600w

Wis Lib Bul 41:44 Ap '45

BERNAYS, EDWARD L. Take your place at the peace table. (Gerent press bk) 60p pa $1 Duell

341.1 International law and relations. Peace. Public opinion 45-35062

"Edward L. Bernays, the well known public-relations counsel, has written a manual for the American citizen who wants to help bring pressure to bear on the Senate in favor of ratification of Dumbarton Oaks. . . He tells you how to get publicity into newspapers and over the radio, how to make a speech . . . and just how to write to the President, Secretary of State or a member of Congress. An appendix contains lists of books and pamphlets on international affairs." New Repub

Reviewed by P. B. Potter

Am Pol Sci R 39:818 Ag '45 1350w

Book Week p6 Ap 29 '45 160w

Booklist 41:247 My 1 '45

Canadian Forum 25:99 Jl '45 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '45

Current Hist 9:48 Jl '45 70w

Foreign Affairs 23:688 Jl '45 20w

"Good handbook for reference in public libraries."

+ Kirkus 13:178 Ap 15 '45 80w

New Repub 112:566 Ap 23 '45 110w

"Credit is hereby given to Mr. Bernays for writing a useful 'how-to' book in a fine cause and for reversing the usual scheme of publicity agents. Instead of pounding or insinuating an idea into our minds, he is trying to show us how to express our own ideas most effectively. The conception of a nation of press agents is frightening at first, but if that's necessary to win the peace—and it may very well be—we'll grin and bear it. Against total war we need total peace." Daniel Schwarz

+ N Y Times p21 Je 10 '45 400w

School & Society 61:238 Ap 14 '45 60w

"With one reservation this reviewer was impressed by this booklet. . . The only jarring note in 'Take Your Place at the Peace Table' was a not too subtle flattery of the reader at the outset. 'The Individual Is All-Powerful' one caption reads." Marshall Bragdon

+ — Springf'd Republican p4 Ap 28 '45 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p395 Ag 18 '45 120w

BERNHARD, MRS JOSEPHINE BUTKOWSKA. Nine cry-baby dolls; a folktale adapted; il. by Irena Lorentowicz. [28p] $1 Roy pubs. 45-35088

"In rhythmic English words Josephine Bernhard brings to the children of America an old Polish story of a baby who cried and cried from morning to night and from night to morning, until 'a wrinkled old Granny came walking across the open pasture' and, in her wisdom, told the baby's mother what to do about it." Sat R of Lit

Book Week p20 Je 3 '45 180w

Booklist 41:305 Je 15 '45

Bookmark 6:15 Ag 1 '45

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 21:272 Jl '45 80w

"A simple warm-hearted little story."

+ Kirkus 13:158 Ap 1 '45 150w

"Recommended." R. O. Bostwick

+ Library J 70:587 Je 15 '45 80w

BERNHARD, J. B.—Continued

"Another vigorous folk tale from Poland." M. C. Skinner

+ Library J 70:950 O 15 '45 40w

"A novel story." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p20 My 27 '45 90w

New Yorker 21:127 D 8 '45 60w

"The illustrations, in brilliant, jewel-like colors, are by the gifted Polish artist who gave the children 'Lullaby' last year. The story is more robust than the Christ legend. It gives the artist greater scope. She uses it to bring reality to lovely design. . . Here is a story that will make the children laugh out loud, that will delight their elders with its homely wisdom. Here are drawings that in execution and reproduction are a delight to all eyes." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:35 My 19 '45 360w

"The collaborators on the most original picture book in last year's Spring Festival, 'Lullaby,' have done it again. In this brightly colored picture book an old folk tale, unknown outside Poland, brings laughter with it in the English language. It has the distinctive coloring, pleasant shrewdness, wiry vivacity of its country of origin, yet it fits smoothly into a nursery where Poland is as yet unknown."

+ Weekly Book Review p6 My 20 '45 300w

BERNSTEIN, HARRY. Origins of inter-American interest, 1700-1812. (Am. hist. assn. Albert J. Beveridge memorial fund publication) 125p $2 Univ. of Pa. press [9s Oxford]

327.73 U.S.—Relations (general) with South America. South America—Relations (general) with U.S. 45-35041

A study of early cultural, commercial and political relations between North America (represented specifically by New England, New York and Pennsylvania) and South America as a whole. "The period between 1700 and 1812 was chosen for this monograph because it has not been investigated, and because the latter year serves as a logical stopping point for a study of origins. That was a year of war and South American revolution. . . The decade before 1823 marked the first appearance of ordered, diplomatic attitudes on the part of this country toward the southern continent. Up to that time, inter-American relations were primarily challenged by Spain—not by European politics—and had greater freedom to develop spontaneously. This study of origins therefore presents the material up to the point where other investigations begin." (Pref)

"Undoubtedly this is the kind of book that had to be written, but it contributes very little to our over-all picture of inter-American relations. A more extensive treatment, including the areas served by Baltimore, Charleston, and Savannah, and an extension of the period to at least 1822 when the United States began the recognition of the newly created Latin American states, would certainly have greatly strengthened the value of the volume for students of early nineteenth-century inter-American relations." A. C. Wilgus

Ann Am Acad 240:166 Jl '45 270w

"A book for specialists rather than the general reader, with its many footnotes and careful examination of details, Bernstein's work traces a little-considered aspect of our colonial and early national history very adequately." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Ap 8 '45 130w

"Recommended for scholarly approach." Walter Hausdorfer

+ Library J 70:162 F 15 '45 110w

BERNSTEIN, WALTER SAUL. Keep your head down. 213p $2 Viking

940.548173 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 45-4206

A series of articles, most of them reprinted from the New Yorker, dealing with the author's experiences in the Army from the spring of 1941 to the spring of 1944. Contents: Action in Georgia; A roller coaster is worse; Juke joint; A night in the guardhouse; Inhale! Outhale! Night watch; The taking of Ficarra; Busy morning; I love mountain warfare; Search for a battle; Walk through Yugoslavia: 1. Road crossing; 2. March; 3. Tito's headquarters.

"A good part of the book has appeared in print before as New Yorker stories. All are eminently worth having in more permanent form." W. F. Morse

+ Book Week p3 Je 10 '45 180w

Booklist 41:284 Je 1 '45

"Mr. Bernstein has much of the style which made Ernie Pyle popular. It is matter-of-fact reporting, without flights either of fancy or rhetoric. Some of it is funny, some of it deeply moving. Five of his chapters are descriptions of training, mainly humorous. Four are brief stories of fighting in Sicily and Italy. Perhaps the best is the concluding article, or dispatch, which describes his overland march with 50 Partisans from the Dalmatian coast to Marshal Tito's headquarters." M. W. B.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 My 15 '45 550w

"Photographic, terse accounts of various assignments . . . that by their shorn simplicity are effective and good."

+ Kirkus 13:125 Mr 15 '45 210w

"A clear-eyed young man with a gift for recording simply and effectively what he saw, Sergeant Bernstein has produced some of the most convincing accounts of how the war looks to the men who are actually fighting it. The earlier pieces in the book are dated now, but the stories of combat, such as 'The Taking of Ficarra' and 'Search for a Battle,' have the ring of genuine authenticity." F. S. Adams

+ N Y Times p3 My 6 '45 1000w

New Yorker 21:91 My 12 '45 60w

Springf'd Republican p4d My 6 '45 360w

Time 45:102 My 14 '45 600w

"As you might expect the eleven chapters of 'Keep Your Head Down' are all tinctured with 'The New Yorker's' urbanity. They also represent excellent reporting—a first-hand, G-eye view of fighting men written by a young soldier who knows how to put the war into his pages and leave himself out of them." Herbert Kupferberg

+ Weekly Book Review p2 My 6 '45 800w

BERRY, ERICK, pseud. See Best, A. C.

BEST, MRS ALLENA (CHAMPLIN) (ERICK BERRY, ANNE MAXON, pseuds). Harvest of the Hudson. 239p il $2 Macmillan 45-8647

The time in this novel written for young people is the eighteenth century. The story relates the adventures of a brother and sister left on their own by the death of their parents. Sebastian sails a cargo sloop to the Caribbean and has difficulties with pirates; Deborah, meanwhile, stays with the patroon's daughter on the Hudson river estate, and attempts to detect the overseer in his dishonesty.

Booklist 42:60 O 15 '45

"Erick Berry has drawn her characters with skill in this vigorous historical story of two-fold interest." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:351 S '45 120w

"An excellent account of life in New York before the Revolutionary period."

+ Kirkus 13:339 Ag 1 '45 90w

"Well-sustained interest with attractive chapter headings by the author. Recommended." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 70:1191 D 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p34 N 4 '45 120w

"This is a book that should stand high on the year's list of adventure stories for boys and girls. It has action and adventure, fine characterization, good historical background, and wording that is unique in its faithfulness to the past and to locality." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:62 N 10 '45 750w

BEST, HERBERT. Border iron; il. by Erick Berry. 219p $2 Viking 45-35170

Adventure tale for grades seven to nine. The scene is the border region between Massachusetts and what was called York province, about 1740. The hero is a young orphan, Tod Randall, who runs away from an overbearing deputy sheriff, who had tried either to work him to death or beat him into submission. With his intelligent dog, Tod finds work in an ironworks and helps to settle a border dispute.

Booklist 42:39 O 1 '45

"Every page of the book shows Mr. Best's sound knowledge of place and period, while at the same time the vigorous action aroused by the likable hero and his intelligent sheep dog provides excitement and suspense." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:458 N '45 130w
Kirkus 13:317 Jl 15 '45 130w

Reviewed by Ruth Bostwick
Library J 70:979 O 15 '45 70w

"A stirring story, full of accurate local color and historical detail. Girls as well as boys will enjoy it." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p34 N 4 '45 140w

"This is a period book which boys of junior-high school age can really sink their teeth in—exciting, solidly written, and appealing."
+ New Yorker 21:133 D 8 '45 40w

"A good story . . . told in the terse, clear-cut idiom of the day."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:66 N 10 '45 40w

BETHEL, LAWRENCE L., and others. Industrial organization and management. 798p il $4.50 McGraw 658 Industrial management 45-5141

"Basic text on management in business and industry. The sections are American industry; organizing the industrial enterprise; operating the enterprise; and co-ordinating the enterprise. Includes case studies taken from actual industrial situations. Several sections concern the problems of the smaller industries. Chapters are summarized." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Chaplin Tyler
Chem & Met Eng 52:288 N '45 300w
Library J 70:307 Ap 1 '45 70w

"The book brings together within the covers of one volume much that is fresh and new in the field of management, and in the working practices of modern manufacturing establishments. It is more properly a reference book for supplementary study in several courses than a text-book for an established course in industrial organization and management."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:53 S '45 160w

BETHELL, SAMUEL LESLIE. Shakespeare and the popular dramatic tradition; with an introd. by T. S. Eliot. 209p $3 Duke univ. press [10s 6d King]
822.33 Shakespeare, William—Criticism and interpretation 45-2995

"This English author contends vigorously against the conclusions of such Shakespearean authorities as Bradley, Schucking and Stoll among others. Their concept is 'naturalistic' as opposed to 'conventional' according to this author. He is particularly antagonistic toward Victorian criticism, especially Swinburne, for it is his contention that they unduly emphasized character." Library J

Current Hist 8:442 My '45 90w

"Interesting and iconoclastic, this study is reasonably well written. Recommended for Shakespearean and drama collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 69:998 N 15 '44 110w

"There is so much evidence of aesthetic sensibility, philosophic interest, and scholarly preparedness in it that one hopes from it an enlargement of our sense of Shakespeare. But the hope is vain." H. B. C.
— Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 5 '44 170w

"Mr. Bethell displays great intellectual acumen, alert aesthetic susceptibility and an ardent faith in his own insight. But he has not, nor does he seek, the art of persuasion. This is the more to be regretted because, although there is much more delusion than revelation in his findings, much of what he says deserves serious attention." H. B. Charlton
New Statesman & Nation 28:60 Jl 22 '44 1450w

"This is a book at once comforting and irritating, with many good things and as many assumptions which must be vigorously combated. Mr. Bethell's basic assumption, however, is sound, and it is a pleasure to see so well stated something that we are, oddly enough apt to forget, namely, that the stage is not real life, but pretending." Bonamy Dobree
+ — Spec 175:200 Ag 31 '45 1000w

Reviewed by H. E. Woodbridge
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 29 '45 700w
Times [London] Lit Sup p333 Jl 8 '44 800w

Reviewed by S. C. Chew
Weekly Book Review p29 Ag 5 '45 700w

BETTS, MRS ANNABEL (PAXTON). Women in Congress. 140p il $2 Dietz
328.73 U.S. Congress. Women in politics
45-35069

"Informative political sketches, accompanied by photographs, of women in the 78th and 79th Congresses, with highlights of the careers of women who served from the 65th in 1917, when the first congresswomen took office, through the 77th. A chronological and an alphabetical list, as well as a formal roster of congresswomen since the woman suffrage amendment, present a complete picture of the subject." Booklist

Booklist 41:268 My 15 '45
Wis Lib Bul 41:67 Je '45

BETTS, EDWIN MORRIS, ed. See Jefferson, T. Garden book

BEVERIDGE, SIR WILLIAM HENRY. Full employment in a free society; a report. 429p $3.75 Norton [12s 6d Allen, G.]
331.137942 Unemployment—Great Britain. Great Britain—Economic policy 45-923

"The new Beveridge proposals deal in the first place with unemployment in peacetime contrasted with the full employment of war. With this background the reader is prepared for the author's proposals of a full-employment policy in the postwar period. The conditions of this policy are dealt with in sufficient detail to give a complete picture of the author's program both in its internal and its international implications. Specifically discussed are questions relating to the adequate total outlay required for full employment, the controlled location of industry, organized mobility of labor, and the necessary changes of government machinery. The whole contains a mass of new information about the unemployment problem and the new economic theories bearing on this problem that point the way to a cure." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by M. A. Heilperin
Am Pol Sci R 39:1014 O '45 1200w

"This outstanding complex work conglomerates an encyclopedia of economic policy, a political program of action, and a monograph on theory practice and philosophy of full employment. . . This book will be read, studied, and quoted more than almost all other publications of our time for decades to come." Alfred Manes
+ Ann Am Acad 239:214 My '45 600w

"If you expect a short cut to the future, a simple and lucid mix-with-water-and-presto way of making democracy work, for heaven's sake, do not open this book! For 274 pages, Sir William piles up his evidence and, not content with that, continues with 160 pages of appendices. And what he can do to the English language is sometimes criminal. But if you are an American and believe that the past few decades foreshadow the future, 'Full Employment in a Free Society' will give you something solid to chew." Ralph Peterson

BEVERIDGE, W. H.—Continued
Book Week p4 Mr 4 '45 1050w

Booklist 41:191 Mr 1 '45

Reviewed by H. E. Fey
Christian Century 62:432 Ap 4 '45 1700w

"This is an extraordinarily important document which every intelligent minister and layman will wish to study. Its thesis is cogently stated in a brilliant twenty page introduction and summary which no one should dare pass up. Whether or not one accepts the program of Sir William Beveridge, here is an approach to the cause and cure of unemployment that is already agitating political action in Great Britain and the United States." W. H. Melish
+ Churchman 159:18 Je 1 '45 150w

Reviewed by G. G. Higgins
Commonweal 41:523 Mr 9 '45 1050w

Foreign Affairs 23:519 Ap '45 50w

"All libraries, except the very small ones, will need this report. It is a handbook indispensable to intelligent citizens since it gives many statistics, raises many questions (all of which are not answered) and notes many problems, an important one being that mass idleness prolonged becomes politically dangerous." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 70:162 F 15 '45 80w

Reviewed by Mordecai Ezekiel
Nation 160:251 Mr 3 '45 2500w

"In sum, here is a most notable book, packed with ripe knowledge and valuable suggestions, and falling short only to the extent that Sir William as a Liberal is very determined not to become involved in the controversy between Socialism and private enterprise, and therefore skates over thin ice whenever he comes to those parts of his subject where this issue arises in any acute form." G. D. H. Cole
+ — New Statesman & Nation 28:324 N 11 '44 900w

"The lay reader must not shun this book because of its learned apparatus; it is of the very first importance, both for what it says and for the state of mind it represents. Indeed, the Anglo-American world will be in Sir William's debt for a long time to come. There has been much loose—albeit, well-intentioned—talk about 'planning' here and in Great Britain in the past ten years; there need be no uncertainty hereafter." L. M. Hacker
+ N Y Times p1 F 18 '45 2500w

"Heavy going for anyone who isn't comfortable around graphs, charts, and the abstract prose that seems unavoidable when men write about big subjects. Sir William, however, makes good sense, and though the entire book is concerned with British political economy, any American can read it with profit, if not with excess profit."
+ New Yorker 21:90 Mr 10 '45 80w

Reviewed by H. Belshaw
Pacific Affairs 18:188 Je '45 1250w

"His Report, as he calls it, may not become popular reading, in spite of its crystal clarity, its beautiful style, and the warm sympathy which glows through the frosty scientific casing. But it is a germinal book, a text for action and controversy." Palmer Harman
+ Sat R of Lit 28:52 Ap 14 '45 1150w

"Sir William's careful and scholarly work is at the same time imaginative and daring. Its publication in this country sets two tasks for Americans who are concerned about our recurrent devastating cycles of unemployment. The first is to grip the subject, no matter how forbidding its difficulties may be. The second is to guard against new ideas simply because they are new; but, rather, to invent something just as imaginative if Sir William Beveridge's plan proves to be unsuited to American circumstances." Alzada Comstock
Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 1 '45 900w

"The second Beveridge Report is an indispensable handbook, written with simplicity and grace, for ordinary intelligent citizens, including M.P.s and Ministers of State, trade unionists and business men, housewives and consumers. . . Though the book is not primarily intended for the economic specialist, he will find suggestive matter for thought in the appendix on fluctuations of trade, which throws some new light on international trade cycles and provides a new index of British industrial fluctuations from 1785 to 1938, and also in Mr. Kaldor's appendix on the quantitative aspects of full employment. In a postscript Sir William Beveridge gives a somewhat scathing criticism of the Government's White Paper on employment policy, which was issued after the book had been completed."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p546 N 11 '44 3100w

Reviewed by Joseph Barnes
Weekly Book Review p1 F 18 '45 1850w

BEVERIDGE, SIR WILLIAM HENRY. Price of peace. (Target for tomorrow) 160p $2 Norton [6s Pilot]

341 International cooperation 45-7890

"Author shares the growing realization that our primary task today is not to attack the differences between nations, but the general condition of anarchy which makes these differences inevitably result in war. A rule of law between nations must be established. Discusses various methods of accomplishing this —League of Nations, a federal state, regionalism—, rejecting all in favor of the Dumbarton Oaks plan where 'equal rights of all nations are guaranteed by the strength of the most powerful in a lasting union for that purpose.' Brief but cogent argument for Dumbarton Oaks." (Library J) Index.

"This brief study is both a masterful and a realistic analysis of the various alternatives so often suggested for attaining a rule of law in world affairs. Although Sir William wrote before the United Nations Conference at San Francisco, he nevertheless had at hand the Dumbarton Oaks proposals for the United Nations Organization, and these, along with proposals for federal union and a world state, are the subject of cogent criticism by the author." G. S. McClellan
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1237 D '45 600w

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson
Book Week p4 Ag 26 '45 360w

Booklist 42:31 O 1 '45

Bookmark 6:3 N '45

"The reviewer must report that he found this a disappointing book."
— Christian Century 62:1130 O 3 '45 240w

"Sir William is an idealist—but an idealist who is an administrator who works with facts and figures, who understands human nature and the economic forces that keep it happy. In estimating the price of peace, one feels that he makes no proposal that is not fully thought out as a thoroughly practical expedient." H. J. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 17 '45 650w

"This thin, but closely-reasoned little volume will probably neither add to nor detract from the established reputation of Sir William Beveridge. It adds nothing substantially new to our understanding of the problem of international peace, but what it does say was well worth saying and is said concisely and with genuine feeling and sincerity." G. G. Higgins
+ — Commonweal 42:602 O 5 '45 550w

Kirkus 13:286 Jl 1 '45 150w

"Recommended." George Wakefield
+ Library J 70:683 Ag '45 100w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard
Nation 161:500 N 10 '45 430w

Reviewed by T. F. Reynolds
New Repub 113:378 S 24 '45 950w

Reviewed by Freda White
New Statesman & Nation 29:261 Ap 21 '45 700w

"These wise and logical pages of Mr. Beveridge are not out of date, in spite of the crowding of events. They are as fresh as today's and tomorrow's news, and every bit as worth reading." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p3 Ag 19 '45 1350w

"This small book—it's just a hundred and sixty pages—contains some of the sanest thinking on the international situation that anybody has done since the outbreak of the recent World War."

+ New Yorker 21:64 Ag 25 '45 160w

Reviewed by Dexter Perkins

Sat R of Lit 28:8 Ag 25 '45 2250w

"The emphasis Sir William lays on the principle that every nation shall accept in advance the submission of its disputes to some form of arbitration and undertake to abide by the result is fully justified. His book appears opportunely within a month of the opening of the San Francisco Conference, and there could be no better preparation for the discussions there than concentrated study of his arguments." Wilson Harris

+ Spec 174:293 Mr 30 '45 900w

"Out of a profound knowledge acquired in a lifetime study of man and his struggle, out of a human heart which has never lost its warmth, Sir William Beveridge writes a clear, concise, and convincing argument for morality. I do not use the word in any narrow sense, but rather in a sense of a spiritual awareness." J. D. de Constant

+ Survey G 34:448 N '45 310w

"The whole argument, condensed into less than 100 pages, illustrates the author's power of driving a rigidly logical furrow through a mass of material. But the material itself is not wholly factual, and though Sir William, who marshals it dogmatically, turns vigorously on critics, The Times among them, who disagree with his estimates, his own conclusions sometimes invite challenge. It is not, for example, an established truth that the British people would have accepted the responsibilities of collective security ten years ago had not the Conservative Party prevented them."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p148 Mr 31 '45 750w

Reviewed by J. R. Walsh

Weekly Book Review p4 Ag 19 '45 950w

BEVERLEY-GIDDINGS, ARTHUR RAYMOND. Broad margin. 246p $2.50 Morrow 45-6103

Pictures life in the Tidewater section of Virginia in 1943. The hero is Page Nugent, owner of one of the gracious manors of the section. He has been shot down over the English Channel while serving as a volunteer in the R.A.F. and has been sent home to regain his physical and spiritual health. One by one his neighbors are pictured in their quiet, charming homes, living a life apart from the war, and yet cognizant of it, and slowly Page takes up his life and finally comes to complete health.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p4 Ag 26 '45 320w

Booklist 42:37 O 1 '45

Christian Science Monitor p17 O 13 '45 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '45

Kirkus 13:164 Ap 15 '45 150w

"The author's vignettes of Southern comfort have a genuine, lazy charm; the colors of his fields are true and lovely; his oyster stews are mouth-watering; there isn't a hound dog in the book that you don't yearn to scratch behind the ears. His well-fed, amazingly articulate people are something else again. 'Hedged in and protected by background and money,' placidly excusing their inability to contact the world outside, they reread old novels endlessly and shrink in terror from the machines that pour out their dividends. 'Broad Margin' presents them with impeccable taste—and a loving grasp of their shortcomings." C. V. Terry

+ — N Y Times p7 Ag 26 '45 500w

"The healing qualities of peace and sanity, which an invalided soldier finds in a kindly, civilized community of Tidewater, Virginia, is not a bad idea for a novel. . . Unfortunately much as Mr. Beverley-Giddings admires the agreeable virtues of his Chesapeake Bay families, he makes their story a rather prosy one."

New Yorker 21:86 S 8 '45 70w

"'Broad Margin' is a satisfying book to read. It holds one's interest for the story alone, but it's special distinction lies in the sense of place that it evokes. Evidently writing of a section and a way of life that he knows and loves, the author shows an intense awareness of nature—of fields and woods, of smoke rising from a chimney on a winter morning, of a flight of ducks over the marshland. He conveys this to the reader in simple, poetic prose that has beauty of its own." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ag 26 '45 550w

Wis Lib Bul 41:112 N '45

BIBLE. NEW TESTAMENT. GOSPELS. Jesus the Christ; events of the Gospel story in the words of the King James version; sel. and il. by Charles Cullen. 88p $2.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

741.6385 Jesus Christ—Art. Bible. New Testament. Gospels—Pictorial illustrations 44-9029

"Cullen presents forty drawings, of great distinction, illustrating as many incidents in the gospel story. The text of each, in the King James Version, is printed facing the picture to which it refers. The drawings have strength and beauty. Their manner is somewhat stylized, and the extensive use of stipple and grain effects to produce the desired values suggests that they might easily be enlarged and translated into effective murals with broad areas of flat color in low tones. But taken as they are, they are finished and satisfying works." Christian Century

---

"The artist has a sensitive feeling for the spirit of his material and brings to its rendering a fine sense of pictorial composition and decorative quality. These notable drawings will deserve to be taken into account by all future students of modern religious art." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 61:1200 O 18 '44 210w

"They are not realistic, nor are they symbolic. Perhaps religious is the best word to indicate their difference from secular art."

+ Churchman 159:16 Mr 1 '45 70w

BIBLE. NEW TESTAMENT. GOSPELS. Story of Jesus; a little New Testament; with il. by Maud and Miska Petersham. 119p $1.50 Macmillan

232.9 Bible New Testament—Selections. Jesus Christ—Juvenile literature A45-3676

"The text of this Catholic edition of Jesus' Story [Book Review Digest, 1942] is selected from the Confraternity of Christian doctrine edition of the New Testament. Illustrations and format are the same as in Jesus' Story. Many libraries will want both versions." Booklist

---

Booklist 41:198 Mr 1 '45

"Reverent colorful pictures, careful selections of parts of the New Testament most interesting to children as well as the excellent type and comfortable, small format recommend this book for purchase in Catholic communities." Isabel McLaughlin

+ Library J 70:165 F 15 '45 50w

Wis Lib Bul 41:30 F '45

BICKFORD, HUGH CRAIG. Excess profits tax relief; an interpretation of section 722 of the Internal revenue code. 491p $7.50 Prentice-Hall

336.243 Excess profits tax 44-7786

"Bickford's Volume on 'Excess Profits Tax Relief' is limited, as its sub-title indicates, to a consideration of Section 722, which provides relief to taxpayers who show that the 'average earning period' used as the normal profit base in calculating excess profits results in the tax being excessive and discriminatory. . . Without question, Section 722 (b) (3) presents one of the most formidable sections for the Treasury to administer. It is also that part of Section 722 concerning which there has been the most confusion both in the Treasury Regulations and in the mind of the average tax practitioner." (Columbia Law R) Index.

BICKFORD, H. C.—Continued

"The interpretation is that of an intelligent and experienced tax practitioner, but, what is more important, it is that of a thinking student of economic affairs. The most valuable and stimulating part of the analysis of the section is to be found in the discussion of Section 722 (b) (3) and its consideration of the problem of variant business cycles." T. N. Tarleau

+ Columbia Law R 45:107 Ja '45 420w

"Although a number of books are cited in the text, no reference is made to any of the many articles which have appeared in periodicals since Section 722 was adopted. Some of these have had great merit, and it would have been helpful to have had the author's comments on the ideas which these others have advanced. . . Millions of words will be devoted to Section 722 during the next twenty years. One of the merits of this book is its clarity and conciseness. It is a really helpful introduction into a difficult provision of our tax law." E. N. Griswold

+ — Harvard Law R 57:1134 S '44 650w

BIESANZ, JOHN BERRY, and BIESANZ, MAVIS. Costa Rican life. 272p il $3 Columbia univ. press [15s Oxford]

917.286 Costa Rica—Social life and customs
A44-5796

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Mr. and Mrs. Biesanz give an objective and interesting picture of Costa Rica, the more illuminating in that it endeavors to depict the culture not only from the outside looking in but also from the inside looking out." M. P. Redfield

+ Am J Soc 51:86 Jl '45 360w

Reviewed by C. C. Taylor
Am Soc R 10:436 Je '45 500w

"This account, written in a plain yet interest-arresting style, bears evidence of sober and trustworthy reporting. The authors apparently went about their self-imposed task of knowing Costa Rica in a thoroughly rational, albeit highly intensive, fashion. They are deeply sympathetic and appreciative, yet have not allowed this to overrule their critical sense in reporting the black as well as the white." J. L. Mecham

+ Ann Am Acad 239:200 My '45 600w

"There is much that is attractive about this proud, highly self-respecting little nation. The authors of this instructive volume spent some twenty-one months among the Ticos while Dr. Biesanz was an exchange professor at the University of Costa Rica. Apparently they came to have, even in that limited time, a very distinct understanding of the land and its people. It is homely, unlabored, and objective. It points no morals, does not act as a guidebook or Baedeker, and refrains from painting Costa Rica as either a flowery Eden or gospel-thirsty Sahara." M. S. Enslin

+ Crozer Q 22:189 Ap '45 850w

Foreign Affairs 24:171 O '45 30w

"Dr. and Mrs. Biesanz spent twenty-two months in Costa Rican towns and came back with careful chapters on courtship and marriage, family life, education, work, plan and religion. It is not for a layman to say how valuable such figures may be in the long effort to make sociology a quantitative science. . . This is still raw material, classified in the simplest fashion, presented without proportion, perspective or literary skill." Mildred Adams

N Y Times p12 My 6 '45 440w

"The main fault which one finds in this report is a lack of feeling of depth. The book is essentially a journalistic report which does not go very far below the surface. . . These comments are mentioned more as suggestions for future work than as fundamental criticisms of the valuable volume of the Biesanzes. They have provided us a decidedly useful investigation of one national variety of Latin American society and culture, and it is to be hoped that others will be inspired by their example to add still more to our knowledge and understanding of our neighbors of the hemisphere." John Gillin

+ — Social Forces 24:125 O '45 1000w

"The Biesanzes are observant reporters. They give a fresh and lively view of this small, beautiful country. . . Excellent features are an unusually complete index, and a bibliography helpfully divided into sections listing materials published in Costa Rica and in the United States."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:40 Mr '45 240w

BINGER, CARL ALFRED LANNING. The doctor's job. 243p $3 Norton

610 Medicine—Practice. Physicians
SG45-116

An informal, but authoritative account of the changes which have taken place in medicine during the last few decades, and a study of the influence of psychoanalysis in psychiatry and in medicine. The author is a graduate of Harvard Medical school, served with the Rockefeller Institute for medical research, and is now on the faculty of the Cornell medical college. The book contains a bibliography, and an index.

Reviewed by C-E. A. Winslow
Am J Pub Health 35:1328 D '45 400w

"What is uncommon and refreshing about his book is the extent to which he has pondered and digested the findings of psychoanalysis, psychiatry and psychosomatic medicine." S. I. Hayakawa

+ Book Week p3 Mr 25 '45 750w

Booklist 41:220 Ap 1 '45

Bookmark 6:6 N '45

Reviewed by B. V. Whitney
Boston Globe p15 Ap 4 '45 600w

"When all the entries are in, this may well turn out to be the 'doctor book' of the year. Its author is practicing physician, research scientist and medical teacher. He discusses the duties and ethics of his profession, some recent advances in medical knowledge, problems of preventive medicine, and of convalescence, a few specific diseases . . . psychoanalysis and psychiatry, and socialized medicine—all with professional authority and a warmly human touch."

+ Christian Century 62:464 Ap 11 '45 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '45

"A liberal, non-partisan presentation of problems of doctor-layman concern, and wholly interesting reading in its field."

+ Kirkus 13:49 F 1 '45 200w

Reviewed by J. M. Morse
Nation 161:65 Jl 21 '45 210w

"Dr. Binger is more liberal than most physicians in regard to socialized medicine; he writes exceptionally well, with clarity, humor and a sympathetic understanding of the patient's viewpoint. His book is modest, unpretentious, but useful to those who want a rather elementary discussion of our growing knowledge of the relation between mental and physical disease."

+ New Repub 112:455 Ap 2 '45 120w

Reviewed by C. D. Haagensen
N Y Times p5 Mr 25 '45 1750w

"Dr. Binger, a practicing physician with an engaging bookside manner, writes warmly, pleasantly, and with much good sense about the doctor's place and function in the modern world."

+ New Yorker 21:79 Je 2 '45 110w

"Both the medical profession and the public today are interested in the kind of book which will stimulate and encourage mutual understanding. Doctor Carl Binger, in his book 'The Doctor's Job,' has made an excellent contribution toward this understanding in presenting the doctor and his problems to the public. He has unusual qualifications for this task, the first being his ability to write with charm, intimacy, and with a sense of humor. As he is writing about the work and experience that have dominated his life, there is, as he acknowledges, an autobiographic spirit in the book that reveals the author's unique breadth of training and experience, his sincerity and his scientific and philosophic soundness." G. C. Robinson

+ Sat R of Lit 28:17 Ag 25 '45 1000w

"Here is the volume that won the 1945 Norton Medical Award It justifies its selection in no uncertain degree, doing among other things the needed job of explaining modern medicine versus the family physician and of demonstrating the very necessary integration of psychiatry and medicine."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:2 Ap '45 500w

"The first annual Norton medical award for an outstanding book addressed to laymen by a doctor was recently conferred by that publishing house upon 'The Doctor's Job.' It is a worthy choice. . . Dr Binger is a New York physician and professor of medicine. He is also a civilized man of sympathy and humor and not a little wisdom. All these qualities, shining through clear and graceful language, fit him well to talk of his 'shop' with zest and humility." Marshall Bragdon

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 14 '45 750w

"Social workers, administrators who are interested in human beings as well as machinery, hospital managers and trustees, will find this book useful vocationally—helping them to deal with people in general and doctors in particular. Parts of the book seem especially aimed to inform and 'educate' doctors. This is particularly true of the chapter on 'Socialized Medicine' which ought to be required reading for every successful city specialist." M. M. Davis

+ Survey G 34:299 Je '45 250w

"Cases are presented in lucid style, and are well chosen. There is a short and intelligent discussion of the social and economic problems of medical care, and a dispassionate section on socialized medicine."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:40 Je '45 120w

"Dr. Binger's 'apologia and credo' is a lively book, honest and sure to be absorbing for such readers as have an interest in current medicine. In one way or another—and without wishing anyone any hard luck—it may be said that this includes just about every one." H. M. Parshley

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 25 '45 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 41:98 O '45

"There are few doctors who will not be better doctors and few patients who will not be better patients for the reading of this book." A. B. Dayton

+ Yale R n s 35:172 autumn '45 650w

BINGHAM, MRS MILLICENT (TODD). Ancestors' brocades; the literary debut of Emily Dickinson. 464p il $3.75 Harper

B or 92 Dickinson, Emily 45-35042

A study of the background of the first publication of Emily Dickinson's poems, written by the daughter of the Amherst professor's wife who edited the first three series of Emily's poems. She explains some of the strange circumstances of the poet's life and the doings of her erratic family, and explodes some theories which were invented to explain these circumstances. She also gives full details of her mother's correspondence and the difficulties she encountered in her work of editing. Index.

"The book is not a pretty one, as skeletons rattle on every page, nor is it smooth reading, as it is made up of scraps of evidence from diaries, letters, and poems of the various persons involved, pieced together with objective and amazingly dispassionate care. But it is a valuable case history, essential not only to the student of Emily and her work but to the historian of nineteenth century New England." R. E. Spiller

Am Hist R 51:171 O '45 400w

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p8 Ap 15 '45 450w

Booklist 41:253 My 1 '45

"The Dickinson family is dead now, and the daughter of Mrs. Todd, with remarkable restraint and objectivity, writes of the conflicting Dickinson interests that simmered all the time Emily's work was being given to the public. We are indebted to Mrs. Bingham for many things, chiefly for her scholarship and restraint in a family matter." E. A. Laycock

+ Boston Globe p19 Ap 18 '45 440w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 16 '45 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '45

Reviewed by Theodore Maynard

Commonweal 42:75 My 4 '45 500w

Current Hist 9:127 Ag '45 40w

Kirkus 13:27 Ja 15 '45 170w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

New Eng Q 18:261 Je '45 1750w

Reviewed by Conrad Aiken

New Repub 113:25 Jl 2 '45 750w

"Though the book is painfully evident as fact, it is as arresting as any fiction. 'Ancestors' Brocades' and its companion piece, 'Bolts of Melody,' are a rich and major contribution to our understanding of Emily Dickinson's work and her background." Robert Hillyer

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 15 '45 1450w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan

New Yorker 21:84 Ap 21 '45 300w

"The book is thoroughly documented. In her eagerness to vindicate her mother, which she indubitably does, and to show all the facets of that talented and energetic woman's personality, Mrs. Bingham prints correspondence irrespective of whether or not it has intrinsic value or, indeed, whether or not it illuminates her subject. Her book has all the apparatus of scholarship, including footnotes, cross-references, and appendices, but it does not function properly. While she draws generously on Mrs. Todd's diaries and journals, her account, written in the nineties, of the editing of Emily's manuscripts, and her verbal comments as they went over the source material together in the summer of 1932 just before Mrs. Todd's death, Mrs. Bingham fails to note which particular source she is citing. Several footnotes are irrelevant to the point of comedy and some that would be desirable are wanting. Nor, for all her efforts, does she quite dissipate the mystery that clings to the manuscripts." Babette Deutsch

+ — Poetry 66:274 Ag '45 900w

"There is much material here invaluable for future editors and biographers of Emily Dickinson, but the story is dragged out to tedium by the inclusion of trivialities, and little new light is thrown on Emily herself. Some of Mrs. Bingham's conclusions seem less than logical. It is her contention, for example, that Emily's love was only 'an enveloping effulgence' directed toward no specific individual, but a careful reading of the poems and letters makes it quite evident that Emily was considerably less ethereal than Mrs. Bingham would have us believe. This same dehumanizing of Emily leads Mrs. Bingham to take issue with Austin's contention that Emily 'posed' in her letters to Thomas Wentworth Higginson, whereas even a glance at these letters (some of the most delightful that have ever seen print) indicates that she not only posed, but was deliberately provocative in her attempt to arouse the critic's interest." R. N. Linscott

Sat R of Lit 28:10 Ap 21 '45 500w

"Mrs Bingham is the only living member of the original circle who is qualified to continue the investigating and the editing. It is doubtful, in spite of what has happened across the years, if anyone would question her competence, her interest, and her integrity in the project she has accomplished to date or in the task that lies ahead. The first book—the poems—is lovely; the latter—the debut—is a painstaking account that is a distinct credit to the author's literary skill in handling difficult material." A. M. Jakeman

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 8 '45 600w

"It is a valuable book, rich in detail, illustrated with 16 fine photographs and sketches.

BINGHAM, MILLICENT—Continued
Its careful report of intellectual brutality, spite, frauds, lawsuits, jealousies, of poems and letters destroyed, attempted blackmail fabrications and hoarded literary wealth, would be almost unbearable if it were not for the glimpses of Emily one gets beyond the foreground quarrels, as the townspeople of Amherst used to see her in the garden of Squire Dickinson's big house."
+ Time 45:100 Ap 15 '45 700w

"Significant material is offered in an interesting fashion, and contributes a new chapter to our literary history. But the book should interest others besides literary historians. It should appeal, also, to any reader who has a curiosity about the world in which Emily Dickinson lived, or who is engaged by complex psychological situations."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:4 S '45 240w

" 'Ancestors' Brocades' is sure to prove a mine of information to students of the text for years to come. It permits us to make many pencil corrections in our copies of the current 'Poems of Emily Dickinson,' pending the time when the publishers may be free to change the faulty readings that have too long appeared in type. It is tantalizing, however, in what it fails to reveal." G. F. Whicher
+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ap 8 '45 1050w
Wis Lib Bul 41:67 Je '45

BIRO, LAJOS. Gods and kings; six plays. 85p $1.75 Macmillan [6s Allen, G] 822 [45-4868]

"Lajos Biro is evidently a Hungarian who now writes for the English films, but takes time out to sport with the theater. The six one-act plays collected [here] range from Olympus and the Garden of Eden to the office of Napoleon and a modern café in Hungary. They are witty and sportive, but each one has by implication a bearing on the world today." (Weekly Book Review) Contents: Scandal in the house of Zeus; Sorcery; The heart of kings; Revolt; Midsummer night; Revision.

"Recommended."
+ Library J 70:1089 N 15 '45 30w
New Statesman & Nation 30:358 N 24 '45 190w

"One-act plays can find no sure foothold on the modern professional stage, but the form still exercises its compulsion on dramatists, and Mr. Lajos Biro is fortunate inasmuch as each of the pieces included in Gods and Kings is virtually independent of stage direction. They all make delightful reading."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p249 My 26 '45 180w

"All the plays are among the best one-acts issued in recent years." W. P. Eaton
+ Weekly Book Review p22 S 16 '45 130w

BIRREN, FABER. Selling with color. 244p $2.50 McGraw
659.1325 Color. Color—Psychology 45-4495

"A study of color and consumer preference for the purpose of formulating principles regarding color appeal that will help the manufacturer and merchandiser to bring their products to the attention of mass markets. The opinions set forth are substantiated by extensive research and the sales records of numerous industries. A bibliography lists some forty books and articles on the psychology and scientific aspects of color." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 42:6 S '45
Library J 70:530 Je 1 '45 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:22 Ap '45

BISCHOFF, WILLIAM NORBERT. Jesuits in old Oregon, 1840-1940. 258p maps $3 Caxton printers
271.5 Jesuits in the Northwest. Missions—Northwest. Indians of North America—Missions 45-8727

"These pages make no pretense at being a history of the Pacific Northwest; nor do they constitute a history of the Catholic Church in the Pacific Northwest. [Rather, they tell in part the] story, yet to be fully told, of the contribution made to the religious, social, and intellectual betterment of this area by the members of the Society of Jesus." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"Father Bischoff has written a short, well-documented chronicle of the attempts of missionaries of the Society of Jesus to bring Roman Catholicism to the Northwest. Although he is in no sense a literary artist, he has written a fascinating book." J. S.
+ Book Week p19 S 23 '45 150w
Kirkus 13:363 Ag 15 '45 130w

"Father Bischoff has worked through a vast amount of original sources to give us this fluent and vivid story of pioneer days." T. S. Hanrahan
+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 28 '45 330w

BISHOP, MRS CLAIRE (HUCHET). Augustus; il. by Grace Paull. [32p] $1.50 Viking 45-8453

A picture-story book about a "capable calf" who stepped thru an open gate one morning and led by curiosity journeyed to town. In town Augustus' adventures ranged from pure comedy to near tragedy but ended when he was asked to play a part in a Christmas pageant in the church.

Booklist 42:78 N 1 '45
Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 43:125 N 16 '45 30w
Kirkus 13:295 Jl 1 '45 130w
Reviewed by M. C. Skinner
Library J 70:951 O 15 '45 30w

"Little children will love to have the story of Augustus 'a capable calf, full of fabulous fantasy' read aloud again and again. His exciting adventures . . . are told with enchanting humor and delightfully illustrated by Grace Paull." K. H. McAlarney
+ Library J 70:1026 N 1 '45 70w
Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p22 O 14 '45 130w
New Yorker 21:130 D 8 '45 40w

"As Grace Paull draws Augustus, he is innocent, wide-eyed, trusting. Children who are lucky enough to have his book for a birthday or Christmas present will love him instantly. Adults will find him less absorbing than Ferdinand." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:49 N 10 '45 320w
Weekly Book Review p36 N 11 '45 270w

BISHOP, JIM. Glass crutch; the biographical novel of William Wynne Wister. 309p $2.50 Doubleday

This book purports to be the fictionized biography of one William Wynne Wister, scion of an old Philadelphia family, who became a drunkard and then, after reaching the lowest depths, put himself into the hands of a psychiatrist who cured him.

"Though Bishop lacks the descriptive virtuosity of Charles Jackson, his book is of wider scope than 'The Lost Weekend' and his comprehension of the idiosyncrasies of the alcoholic is just as sound and penetrating. All former and practicing drunks as well as others seeking entertainment and enlightenment can read 'The Glass Crutch' with profit." Jack Conroy
+ Book Week p6 N 18 '45 360w

" 'The Glass Crutch' is a rewarding book. Preëminently it does not spare the reader the agony the writer lived through. And beyond all that here is an interesting story of human lives and loves and patterns." Margaret Christie
+ Commonweal 43:389 Ja 25 '46 750w
Kirkus 13:442 O 1 '45 230w
Reviewed by Wolcott Gibbs
— N Y Times p4 N 18 '45 900w
New Yorker 21:122 N 17 '45 180w

"The story has pace and narrative interest. Bill and Bill's drinking are intensely real.

All the other characters remain shadowy, but here the author has cut the ground from under the critic's feet by stating in his preface that this was deliberate. 'The Glass Crutch' deserves to be read both for its story value and for the information it contains." Jennings Rice
+ Weekly Book Review p12 N 18 '45 850w

BISSON, THOMAS ARTHUR. America's Far Eastern policy. 235p $3 Macmillan

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—East (Far East). Eastern question (Far East) 45-1072

"[This book] includes an account of the economic and political conditions which produced the situation existing in July 1937, with respect to China, to Japan and to the other foreign Powers concerned; an evaluation of developments during the war period which appear to indicate important trends in the policies and programs of all the Powers in relation to the Far Eastern situation; and finally, an estimate of the principal political, economic and social conditions which may be expected in a post-war period, the possible forms of adjustment which might be applied under these conditions, and the effects of such adjustments upon the countries concerned." (Foreword) Index.

"A review so compressed must of necessity have the character of a précis. Unfortunately, a précis is of value to a very limited number of people. It is too condensed to convey much to the layman, and to the specialist it can present little that is new. Where a fresh interpretation is presented, it cannot be adequately developed or supported. While this is an excellent précis, it is a précis nevertheless, with all the merits and weaknesses inherent in this type of treatise." Amry Vandenbosch
Am Pol Sci R 39:806 Ag '45 700w

Reviewed by Ernest von Hartz
Book Week p4 Mr 25 '45 230w

Booklist 41:204 Mr 15 '45

Bookmark 6:4 My '45

"For the serious student of international affairs America's Far Eastern Policy is essential reading. It is a thoroughly documented, solid study of those American relations with Japan which led at last to the treachery at Pearl Harbor. There is no attempt in this volume to write spectacularly. It is addressed to readers who want tools to work with rather than reading for its own sake. Nevertheless, the general reader may be grateful for its reminders of outstanding factors which contributed to American involvement in war in Asia." C. W. M.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 F 3 '45 400w

"China has now come to the parting of the ways and her choice will soon be made. Mr. Bisson has done a great service in making the two alternatives clear." Robert Norton
+ Churchman 159:14 My 15 '45 420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '45

Foreign Affairs 23:520 Ap '45 50w

Reviewed by M. S. Stewart
Nation 160:280 Mr 10 '45 280w

Reivewed by Helen Mears
New Repub 113:52 Jl 9 '45 200w

"Mr. Bisson's book has done more than any recent American writing on the subject to depict the Far East (and American interests therein) as an integral part of the global picture, with less tendency to look at the Pacific as a place apart. It will certainly be widely read in the United States, and I hope that restricted ocean transport will not prevent it from coming to the Old World in large numbers." A. F. Whyte
+ Pacific Affairs 18:292 S '45 1000w

"This is by no means a popular book but it is an important and valuable one. It is scholarly, factual, serious, and authoritative and for anyone with an interest in the field well-nigh an imperative. Included are sixty-five pages of relevant documents." Robert Okin
+ Sat R of Lit 28:39 F 17 '45 700w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
Survey G 34:131 Ap '45 300w

"An expert of considerable standing in the field presents a skillful and scholarly historical survey of American Far Eastern policy in this book."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:24 Je '45 120w

"An amplification of earlier writings, this new book is a clear, succinct and unerring account of the events that led to Pearl Harbor. No more thoroughly objective record of the period between 1900 and 1941 is available for the general public, and its value in clarifying the issues at stake in the Pacific war can hardly be overstated." F. R. Dulles
+ Weekly Book Review p3 F 4 '45 1000w

BISSON, THOMAS ARTHUR. Japan's war economy. (Inst. of Pacific relations. Int. secretariat publication) 267p $3.50 Macmillan

330.952 Japan—Economic policy. World war, 1939-1945—Japan. Industrial mobilization (for war) 46-228

"Mr. Bisson discusses in detail the various programs for economic administration that were developed during the war years, the recurrent crises in trying to meet the ever-growing demand for increased production, and the struggle for control over the national economy between the militarists and the Zaibutsu. On the latter point, however, he very definitely states that at no time did the government, and even less the militarists, succeed in asserting control aganst the will of the forces dominating Japanese industry. . . In a brief glance into the future, [the author] declares that while the industrial structure of Japan has been greatly weakened by defeat and the country has been deprived of important raw materials, there still remains the problem of seeing to it that the Zaibutsu are not given the opportunity to rebuild their old power." (Weekly Book Review) Index.

"Scholarly and thoroughly documented volume." Joe Fromm
+ Book Week p6 D 30 '45 470w

Booklist 42:178 F 1 '46

"Although all the necessary material was not available when he completed his study in September, 1945, he has brought together a mass of pertinent facts illustrating how the Japanese government mobilized the country's industrial resources." F. R. Dulles
+ Weekly Book Review p12 Ja 13 '46 420w

BLACK, DOROTHY. Shadows under the stars. 248p $2 Macrae Smith co. 45-2143

Three wounded aviators, a Frenchman, a Pole, and an American, and the nurse in charge of them in an English hospital, are the chief characters in this present day novel.

Booklist 41:302 Je 15 '45

"Oversimplified to sweet story."
— Kirkus 13:3 Ja 1 '45 130w

"Quite a good story." Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p18 Je 17 '45 130w

Wis Lib Bul 41:47 Ap '45

BLACK, MRS IRMA (SIMONTON). This is the bread that Betsy ate; il. by Allen Ullman. [24p] $1.25 Scott, W. R.

In the rhythm of The House That Jack Built, pictures and story trace the history of "the bread that Betsy ate" back thru deliveryman, baker, and miller to the farmer who planted the wheat.

Reviewed by Naoma Zimmerman
Book Week p21 N 11 '45 130w

Booklist 42:78 N 1 '45

Kirkus 13:420 S 15 '45 110w

Reviewed by Olive Brain
Library J 70:980 O 15 '45 60w

BLACK, Irma—Continued

"This is the kind of book which fills a great need. As we live today, few children see the steps which lead up to a finished product. Food is found at the store in bottles or packages. How it gets there is a mystery. Pictures by Allen Ullman and story by Irma Simonton Black make up a book which the kindergarten child will like to have read." L. M. P.

+ N Y Times p10 N 11 '45 100w

"The pictures are in brisk primary colors, with simplified, readily recognizable shapes and a decorative effect. It will be good for stretching the vocabulary. The author is a teacher in a progressive school: the artist, a sculptor, makes his debut as an illustrator for children." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 N 18 '45 180w

Wis Lib Bul 41:127 D '45

BLACK, MARY E. Key to weaving; a textbook for hand-weaving techniques and pattern drafts for the beginning weaver. 312p il $5 Bruce pub.

745.52 Weaving 45-8970

"Explanations of the mechanics of the loom and its preparation for weaving and the general information are simple enough for the beginner to understand yet adequately detailed to give a working knowledge. The main portion of the book contains directions for patterns from the simplest two-harness weaves to advanced eight-harness weaves. The use of homespun and rag-rug making are given special attention. A glossary and a list of terms in seven languages." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 42:70 N 1 '45

"These are hand weaving techniques . . . of value primarily for folk industry projects, occupational therapy schools, applied art training and those individuals who already know something about the subject and wish to go farther. I doubt whether anyone could use the book as a beginner's instruction book."

+ Kirkus 13:152 Ap 1 '45 170w

"Excellent text on technique of weaving, various directions for patterns for simple and advanced weaves." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 70:1135 D 1 '45 40w

Wis Lib Bul 41:125 D '45

BLACKBURN, JULIAN MURRAY. Psychology and the social pattern. (Int. lib. of sociology and social reconstruction) 157p $3.50 Oxford [10s 6d Routledge]

150 Psychology. Social psychology [45-8173]

"This book is the first of three which will attempt to estimate the interaction between the individual and society. It explores the social aspects of general and abnormal psychology. The two promised volumes will respectively discuss the social framework into which human beings are born and the social relationships which influence their behaviour." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

Reviewed by T. H. Pear

Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 20 '45 250w

"This book gives a useful introduction into the problems of contemporary psychology. . . It has also extensive and fine bibliographies which may help the general reader not to lose his way amongst the embarrassing multitude of warring psychologies."

+ New Statesman & Nation 30:182 S 15 '45 180w

BLACKFORD, WILLIAM WILLIS. War years with Jeb Stuart. 322p il $3 Scribner

973.78 U.S.—History—Civil war—Personal narratives 45-9275

Memoirs of a Southern engineer, who enlisted in the First regiment of Virginia cavalry under Jeb Stuart at the outbreak of the Civil war. He was associated with Stuart for three years, and in the last desperate year of the war was in the engineer corps. The book was written in the years following the Civil war, and is now published for the first time. Index.

Reviewed by Lloyd Lewis

Book Week p9 S 30 '45 360w

Booklist 42:161 Ja 15 '46

"The authenticity that Freeman mentioned is here; if you wish to see the war through a Confederate's eyes, simply read this book." Paul Kiniery

+ Commonweal 43:29 O 19 '45 350w

"An intimate chronicle of a military family and four years of war—a distinctive note in the library of Civil War recordings."

+ Kirkus 13:265 Je 15 '45 170w

"In it the reader will find the only adequate contemporary account of service in the Confederate engineer troops; perhaps the best, and certainly one of the three best, contemporary accounts of the military career of Jeb Stuart; observations about Von Borcke, Pelham, Mosby, Geary, and a host of other Confederate leaders; and, above all, a book which is both charmingly written and unusually accurate." R. A. Brown

+ Nation 161:410 O 20 '45 180w

"Many Civil War memoirs, which number as colonels at a Confederate reunion, may have been more important than this one, but few can equal it in downright interest for the general reader. Without any apparent tricks of the writing trade, Blackford manages to gallop through four years of war in a narrative that will carry with him all those who love adventure, people, humor, military science and horseflesh. The author obviously relished Army life." W. B. Hamilton

+ N Y Times p6 S 30 '45 1200w

"Colonel Blackford thinks like a soldier, writes like a lawyer, and philosophizes like a Confederate. Both the thinking and the philosophizing are interesting—the first for its straightforwardness and the last for the illumination it sheds on an outmoded way of life—and the writing, which tells of some rousing, hard-riding adventures, is more than adequate for the purpose at hand."

+ New Yorker 21:86 S 29 '45 160w

"How can this book be evaluated as a source of Civil War history? The character and personality of the author and his intellectual integrity give us every reason for confidence. Colonel Blackford has certain prejudices, particularly against officers of the regular Army and against the political leaders of the Confederacy. . . No higher praise can be given to Colonel Blackford's work than to acknowledge its right to a place beside Dr. Freeman's writings on the war." Donald Armstrong

+ Sat R of Lit 28:32 S 29 '45 1050w

"These memoirs were written 20 or 30 years after the war but when, as the reader will discover, the author's memory was still keen and accurate. In this journal the reader will find the only contemporary, and complete, account of life and work with the Confederate engineers. It is also one of the very best contemporary accounts of the military career of one of the war's most colorful cavalry leaders, for few men knew Stuart as did Blackford. It is a charmingly written and unusually accurate book, and one whose importance, within its own field, can scarcely be overestimated." R. A. Brown

+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 5 '45 330w

"These memoirs are not merely a first-rate source for American military history; their literary distinction makes them enjoyable and highly entertaining."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:12 D '45 180w

BLAIR, JULIAN MACFARLANE. Practical and theoretical photography. 2d ed 243p il $2.50 Pitman

770 Photography 45-4683

"Based on material used in college classes, and suitable for groups studying photography or for individual use. Many diagrams and illustrations. First published in 1938, now reissued with revision and some new material." Booklist

Booklist 41:303 Je 15 '45

Library J 70:531 Je 1 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:27 Ap '45

BLANSHARD, BRAND, and others. Philosophy in American education. See American philosophical association. Commission on the function of philosophy in liberal education

BLIVEN, BRUCE, and MEZERIK, AVRAHM G., eds. What the informed citizen needs to know. 377p $3 Duell

330.973 U.S.—Foreign policy. U.S.—Economic policy. U.S.—Social conditions. Reconstruction (1939-)—U.S.

A collection of articles discussing many of the important issues facing the United States and the world today. Partial contents: The United Nations charter, by E. R. Stettinius; America and world trade, by Wendell Berge; Our relations with Russia, by W. L. Batt; Relief and rehabilitation, by E. D. Thomas; Jobs for all, by H. A. Wallace; War surplus—tool for peace, by A. G. Mezerik; Science and the American future, by Bruce Bliven; Good houses for everybody, by Charles Abrams; Tax policy for a prosperous America, by R. E. Paul; Veterans: the twelve-million-man question, by C. G. Bolté; Which way politics? by Irving Brant; Labor's new responsibilities, by Philip Murray. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Willard Shelton
Book Week p2 N 4 '45 330w

Booklist 42:92 N 15 '45

Commonweal 43:390 Ja 25 '46 210w

Kirkus 13:461 O 15 '45 110w

"Easy reading but not superficial. Two valuable appendices: Crimean Report, Dumbarton Oaks, Bretton Woods, GI Bill of Rights, etc. Very useful guide to additional reading and bibliography. Highly recommended for public libraries and educational libraries." H. H. A. Bernt
+ Library J 70:748 S 1 '45 110w

"The purpose which led Messrs. Bliven and Mezerik to compile this anthology is an honorable one, pleasing to all men of good-will. . . If the volume be regarded as a storehouse for public debate, from which speakers on the side of the angels can draw fact and argument, the volume fulfills its purpose. But there are two grave difficulties in its program. Twenty-one essays . . . discuss twenty-one separate and complicated problems. . . The mind flags, the brain tires, the spirit sinks, the reader sighs wearily. . . Deeper, however, lies a more fundamental issue the book almost completely ignores. . . I think this fundamental error in much liberal thought is that it has an eye only for the distant horizon." H. M. Jones
N Y Times p4 N 11 '45 1100w

"The things that the informed citizen needs to know, according to this anthology, are varied and complicated enough to give any citizen a headache. . . Mr. Bliven and Mr. Mezerik have taken special pains to make qualification easy as possible. Among the contributing experts are Morris L. Cooke, William L. Batt, Chester Bowles, Alvin H. Hansen, Thomas Parran, Randolph E. Paul, and Philip Murray. None of them turns in a particularly brilliant performance, but they are a most adequate faculty."
New Yorker 21:106 N 3 '45 140w

Reviewed by H. B. Parkes
Weekly Book Review p39 N 11 '45 1250w

BLOCH, ROBERT. Opener of the way. 309p $3 Arkham house

45-20691

Twenty-one tales of the weird and the supernatural, some of them on the wacky side.

"Mr. Bloch's fans will doubtless welcome the appearance of his stories in book form. From the point of view of a fan, Bloch is more successful in working up a thrill the nearer he comes to Lovecraft. He has already achieved a reputation as one of the better practitioners of a highly specialized genre." H. R. Hays
N Y Times p24 D 9 '45 600w

"'Yours Truly, Jack the Ripper,' is best of lot but others will satisfactorily chill addicts of this kind of yarn."
Sat R of Lit 28:38 N 24 '45 40w

BLOCK, RICHARD JOSEPH, and BOLLING, DIANA. Amino acid composition of proteins and foods; analytical methods and results. 396p $6.50 Thomas, C.C.

641.12 Amino acids. Proteins 45-174

"Monograph on laboratory methods and procedures, a survey of all published literature of analytical methods and results most useful in determining the amino acid composition of nutritional valuable food products." Library J

Library J 70:750 S 1 '45 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:20 Ap '45

"Dr. Block's own original, thorough, and numerous researches in the field of amino-acid and protein chemistry qualify him well for the task undertaken. The work is not only pioneering, but covers the subject with mastery and completeness. It fulfills a needed service in a field which is growing daily in importance in the study of nutrition, viruses, hormones, enzymes, and other basic aspects of life reactions."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:47 Je '45 160w

BLUNDEN, EDMUND CHARLES. Shells by a stream. 59p $1.75 (5s) Macmillan

821 [45-1102]

A new volume of poetry by this English poet, the first since his Poems, 1930-1940, published in 1940 (Book Review Digest, 1941).

"His craft is deliberate, delicate, whimsical, unassertive. It seldom, if ever, quivers beneath the urge of a dominating impulse. At times, indeed, its intricacies of thought and feeling, as of form, are too tentative. But they are never only artist's exercises. They are distillations of a poetic experience which is also a philosophy of life." H. I'A. Fausset
+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 27 '44 300w

"Edmund Blunden is certainly one of the best poets we have; his great virtues are rather taken for granted, and his development continues without causing much excitement. Yet he is a poet to be grateful for, and he is more passionate and has more variety than the melodious smooth surfaces of his poems would suggest." Stephen Spender
+ — New Statesman & Nation 29:29 Ja 13 '45 360w

Reviewed by Harry Roskolenko
N Y Times p31 O 7 '45 130w

"Blunden's later poetry seems rather battered, rather mossy and blurred in outline. Hardy-esque, and difficult to follow. Under the lichened surface, however, emotion and a most delicate tenderness for people and natural objects shine."
New Yorker 21:96 N 3 '45 140w

"It is always a pleasure to have new work from Edmund Blunden. . . There is always something of the old and grand about his writing—something recalling an early England and an early world. . . This has his combination of tradition and sometimes rough technique; his brusque courage in the face of being called a sentimentalist. His work itself is 'ornamental water,' mirroring an England of the still shaped and visible past." L. T. Nicholl
+ Sat R of Lit 28:40 N 17 '45 350w

Reviewed by Sheila Shannon
Spec 174:110 F 2 '45 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p620 D 23 '44 950w

"In spite of, or possibly because of, certain cliches and archaic phrases, his lyrics have an old-fashion grace, a courtly humor. And always they express the reaction of a sensitive mind to the counterpoint of change and permanence manifest in the country scene."
Weekly Book Review p8 N 25 '45 200w

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer
Yale R n s 35:336 winter '46 180w

BLYTON, ENID (MRS H. A. POLLOCK). Mystery island [Eng title: Island of adventure]; with il. by Stuart Tresilian. 266p $2.50 (7s 6d) Macmillan 45-1955

Mystery story for young readers. The scene is the rocky coast of Cornwall.

Kirkus 13:35 Ja 15 '45 90w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p18 My 13 '45 120w

Reviewed by B. W. Shaffer
Sat R of Lit 28:26 Je 16 '45 270w

"'Mystery Island' is sure to be as popular with boys and girls here as it is in England. This is fast-moving adventure with a talkative parrot to lighten tense moments." L. R. S.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 11 '45 90w

"What happens is contemporary; every one knows strange things may happen now in lonely reaches of war-time coast. The children are today's, too, and talk like today. But the reason why Enid Blyton is one of the most popular writers for children in England is that she gives them stories in which something keeps happening all the time, not necessarily within a child's usual experience but not beyond the circle of his hopes." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 11 '45 400w

BOARDMAN, EDWARD THORPE. Guide to higher aquarium animals [ed. by Robert T. Hatt and Dorothy Tyler]. 107p il $2 Cranbrook Institute of Science, Bloomfield Hills, Mich.

597 Aquariums. Fishes. Reptiles. Batrachia
44-8506

"Intended for amateur naturalists and teachers as a guide to aquarium-suited fauna that can be found in Michigan and other midwest regions. The fish, amphibians, snakes, and turtles suggested are for the relatively small thirty by fifteen by fifteen inch aquarium although all fauna are much larger than the popular tropical fish. The book is a companion to the author's Field guide to lower aquarium animals (1939)." Booklist

Booklist 41:233 Ap 15 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '45
Wis Lib Bul 41:36 Mr '45

BOAS, FRANZ. Race and democratic society. 219p $2.50 Augustin

304 Social problems. Race problems
45-10440

"America's elder statesman in science, Franz Boas, died in 1943 at 84 years of age. What he had learned by patient investigation and impersonal research helped him to make up his mind on the questions of the day. . . This book contains 33 brief and incisive articles and addresses made by the author over a period of almost 40 years, selected by him to aid in the great struggle of democracy against Fascism. He had carefully re-read and edited the first 12 papers, but died before he had completed the task." Book Week

"Naturally, in a collection of articles and addresses, there is some repetition of material, but the reader will be thrilled by the imposing evidence of man's determination to enlarge the area of his self-interest and eventually build a co-operating world of abundant living on the basis of increasing freedom." H. Y. Williams
Book Week p8 D 9 '45 360w

"Most readers of this little volume will probably agree that its publication was decidedly worth while. The only question is, how many readers will there be? Those who insist on entertainment can be counted out, for anything by Boas is solid stuff. Yet these papers are clear, even exciting to anyone who can get excited about broad problems. Besides, the flood of recent books about friction between races and between nations, and the fact that several of them have appeared in lists of best sellers, suggests that there may be enough market for serious writing on these subjects to give this book the hearing it deserves." E. G. Burrows
+ Sat R of Lit 29:48 Ja 19 '46 950w

BODE, HENDRIK WADE. Network analysis and feedback amplifier design. 551p $7.50 Van Nostrand

621.3878 Electric circuits. Amplifiers, Vacuum tube
45-9525

"[This] is the first text to be published on networks that are to be used specifically in feedback amplifiers, and is a coordination and development of earlier works on the subject. The center of attention is lumped-constant networks at audio and at radio frequencies, used for coupling and feedback in single loop, absolutely stable amplifiers. The methods of designing and analyzing the behavior of such networks are developed from theoretical considerations. Practical design suggestions and limitations are interspersed throughout the development. The material has been organized in logical sequence: early chapters present network theorems and design criteria as applied specifically to feedback amplifiers; later chapters present design techniques, and a final chapter briefly describes several actual designs. For feedback properties and applications that have been more thoroughly treated elsewhere, references are given." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

Library J 70:1089 N 15 '45 100w

"The book is an important contribution to those design engineers directly concerned with feedback. However, for those who are concerned with exhaustive circuit analysis and detailed design, the work constitutes a useful coordinative assimilation of material."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:63 D '45 260w

BODEIN, VERNON PARKER. Social gospel of Walter Rauschenbusch and its relation to religious education. 168p $3 Yale univ. press [15s Oxford]

B or 92 Rauschenbusch, Walter A44-3627

"Dr. Bodein gives a full and circumstantial account of the life, work, writings and thought of the leader of the American Social Gospel movement. . . The secondary title of Bodein's book stands for two things. One is that Rauschenbusch himself laid great emphasis on education as the way in which the Christian Church must arouse a social spirit in its members. The other is that Dr. Bodein considers this part of Rauschenbusch's teaching to be particularly important." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by J. H. Nichols
J Religion 25:306 O '45 250w

"This very excellent study of Rauschenbusch's Social Gospel may suitably furnish a manual for religious workers in these days of the Beveridge report."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p249 My 26 '45 850w

BODIN, JEAN. Method for the easy comprehension of history; tr. by Beatrice Reynolds. (Records of civilization: sources and studies) 402p $6 Columbia univ. press [30s Oxford]

907 History—Study and teaching. History —Methodology
A45-1617

The author was a French humanist, with some knowledge of theology and law, who spent his life (1539-1596) at Toulouse. This is the first English translation of one of his earlier works, in which he tried to express his philosophy of history, or to show "the way in which one could cull Flowers of History to gather thereof the sweetest fruits." Bibliography. Index.

"The present edition of the Method, the first in the English language, has been provided with an introduction by Miss Reynolds, who spent seven years in careful preparation and translation; it is to be regretted that she did not add a week to her work in order that the index, which is rather poor in its present condition, might be a real help to the user of this highly interesting but badly organized opus that contains so many problems stimulating for the historian and the student of political thought." Friedrich Engel-Janosi

+ — Am Hist R 51:90 O '45 900w

"The writer feels abashed in attempting what should be a review of this book, dealing as it does with an age of thought of which he has but slight knowledge. But it has fascinated him with its essay at a philosophy of history, and he may only trust that his interest in the novel book may serve to introduce it to others, so that it may open their eyes as well." J. A. Montgomery

+ Crozer Q 22:275 Jl '45 1250w

Current Hist 9:128 Ag '45 100w

"The appearance of a volume like this is to be welcomed as an addition to our knowledge of the past, especially such a popular part of the past as the Renaissance. But Bodin is unquestionably safe and dull, to use J. B. Bury's words. Miss Reynolds is to be congratulated on her translation and edition, so far as I can tell, and obviously is in no way responsible for Bodin's philosophical failings. Like so many philosophers of his period, he provides more for those who paint its picture than for those interested in advancing toward the solution of contemporary philosophical problems." M. G. White

J Philos 42:25 Ja 3 '46 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p478 O 6 '45 800w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:29 D '45 350w

"The book is not intended for the general public; Bodin is not a difficult writer (in this excellent translation), but although not tedious, he can hardly be called entertaining. His discussion of sovereignty is thought-provoking even today, and he anticipated the ideas of Montesquieu and Taine on the influence of 'climates' or physical environment; but he was not a man of commanding genius. Well equipped departments of history and political science will need this convenient edition for occasional reference." Albert Guerard

+ Weekly Book Review p16 Jl 29 '45 320w

BODLEY, RONALD VICTOR COURTENAY. The gay deserters. 296p $2.50 Creative age 45-10123

A novel based on the activities of a group of Europeans belonging to the old International Set, who sought refuge in the United States in 1941. They spend their time deriding the United States, trying to run our society, and wishing for the day when they can return to their pre-war haunts. The young people of the group put their elders to shame by returning to Europe to take their part in the struggle.

Reviewed by Russell Maloney

— Book Week p8 D 9 '45 280w

"This would be a bitter picture of the ungrateful refugee if it were a better book. . . This does not buttress Wind in the Sahara [Book Review Digest, 1944] since it doesn't quite come off in its intent, the broad eccentricities tending toward caricature rather than satire."

— Kirkus 13:498 N 15 '45 170w

"While Mr. Bodley's right hand was pounding out an attack on the rich refugees, his left hand seems to have written a love-letter to the Americans. If that's what it is, it is remarkably impudent. He loves us for being so dull, earnest, provincial, seducible, unseductive. On such terms we might feel more flattered not to be loved at all." Nancy Flagg

N Y Times p6 D 9 '45 630w

"The subject is both timely and promising, but unfortunately, and for all his good intentions, Mr. Bodley has muffed it by turning out a fairly tedious piece of slapstick."

— + New Yorker 21:106 N 24 '45 60w

"The author mixes witty and even riotous scenes of legitimate satire with a gravely tender love story and a full share of unctuous editorializing—and thereby kills all three of his themes." Robert Pick

Sat R of Lit 28:32 N 24 '45 850w

"The lavish weekends in the country, the unconventional love affairs and the eccentricities of the well-born are all dealt with in Mr Bodley's book. In pointing a finger of scorn, the author has somehow managed to turn out a gay, inconsequential but readable novel." J. S. K.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 2 '45 420w

" 'The Gay Deserters' is faintly irritating because one feels that its author is considerably irritated himself, so that, while he is often extremely funny and gives an admirable satirical picture of affairs, at other times he seems cross rather than funny. His attack is unquestionably justified; it is mostly diverting. The writing occasionally lapses into carelessness, but Count Oberon and his English butler are superb and unforgettable figures." Iris Barry

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 D 9 '45 500w

BOERKER, RICHARD HANS DOUAI. Behold our green mansions; a book about American forests. 313p il maps $4 Univ. of N.C. press [24s Oxford]

634.9 Forests and forestry—U.S. Agr45-148

Study of the present state of the forests of the United States, describing in particular the effects of the extensive use of wood in the war effort. Gives facts of our reforestation projects, soil conservation, timber, flood control, Southern forest products, and recreation uses of forests. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

"This is precisely the broad and authoritative presentation of all phases of our forest problem for the general reader which we have been needing." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Je 17 '45 400w

Booklist 41:334 Jl 15 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '45

Library J 70:636 Jl '45 90w

"An authoritative and up-to-date book. . . Unfortunately, 'Behold Our Green Mansions' is not written in a style which will have great popular appeal, and this is a pity." P. A. Waring

+ — Nation 161:160 Ag 18 '45 420w

"The book is rather prosaically written, but the excellent photographs and maps add greatly to its interest and value."

New Repub 113:143 Jl 30 '45 120w

"The descriptions of the geographical forest regions of America given in this book are of great interest to the British forester, although there is no chapter on silvicultural methods. Moreover, they are excellently supported by numerous photographs of American forest landscapes and wood industries. . . This book is both a text and a guide."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p549 N 17 '45 800w

"This is a sound, informative and much needed book, sure to improve the layman's understanding of one of the country's most complex and important problems." Stewart Holbrook

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Jl 15 '45 1150w

BOJANO, FILIPPO. In the wake of the goose step; tr. from the Italian by Gerald Griffin. 272p $2.50 Ziff-Davis [9s Cassell]

940.52 Europe—Politics. World war, 1939— Personal narratives, Italian. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 45-5714

"This book is the fruit of observation of Axis politics by the Berlin correspondent of Mussolini's newspaper Popolo d'Italia. The author began his journalistic career in 1926 as a devoted collaborator of Mussolini's brother Arnoldo, and received his Berlin appointment in 1929. From this vantage point he watched the disintegration of the Weimar Republic and the dramatic rise and hey-day of Nazidom, while frequent visits to Italy enabled him to keep an intermittent finger on the Fascist

BOJANO, FILIPPO—Continued
pulse. In the autumn of 1940 he was sent to Moscow and from there was transferred to Stockholm on the eve of Hitler's attack on the U.S.S.R. The collapse of Mussolini's regime found him still in the Swedish capital." Sat R of Lit

---

Reviewed by Joseph Bornstein
Nation 161:160 Ag 18 '45 120w

Reviewed by M. L. Rosinski
Sat R of Lit 28:10 Jl 14 '45 450w

"This book has a special interest and value of its own in so far as it not only confirms authoritatively and from first-hand evidence much of what has previously been written but also gives a different interpretation on several points. Not all of these judgments will find unqualified acceptance. . . Apart from the main political themes Signor Bojano has included numerous little sketches of incidents seen and heard which make his book additionally agreeable to read. The translation by Mr. Gerald Griffin is thoroughly good."
Times [London] Lit Sup p38 Ja 27 '45 800w

"For the most part the book is Mr. Bojano's memoirs, but he includes enough of the history of the period to put his own experiences into the framework of world events. The result is a very readable and stimulating refresher course in recent history, dealing particularly with aspects that are less familiar to American readers because they deal with what went on in enemy countries." J. C. Smith
+ Weekly Book Review p12 O 28 '45 700w

BOLLINGER, ELROY WILLIAM, and WEAVER, GILBERT GRIMES. Occupational instruction; how to analyze and organize for teaching. 136p il $2.25 Pitman

607 Vocational education. Technical education 45-8264

"An aid to the industrial worker who faces the task of imparting to others his own vocational knowledge and skill, and who wants to know the best methods and techniques of teaching them efficiently. Step by step, the book explains how to analyze a trade for its operations; how to determine what is to be taught and when and how it is to be presented, with regard to learning sequence; and finally how to develop a comprehensive course of instruction with exercises, projects, and concrete jobs. The procedure proposed uses a card system for recording trade content and lends itself to constant revision and adaptation. It is applicable to any type of training program in vocational school, plant, or business. The authors are supervisors of Industrial Teacher Training in the New York State Department of Education." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Library J 70:1089 N 15 '45 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:36 Jl '45

BOLTE, CHARLES GUY. The new veteran. 212p $2 Reynal

355.115 Veterans 45-37881

The author is a veteran, altho he dislikes the term, who lost his leg in the war, and has given considerable time to reflection on the importance of the veterans' status. He considers, among other subjects, the American Legion, and proposes a new organization to take its place. Partial contents: The hospital life; Soldier from the wars returning; We've got our own war and we want our own club; Citizens first, veterans second; The veterans get the run-around; The veterans' problem is the national problem; We fight for what we fought for. Index.

Reviewed by E. L. Jones
Atlantic 177:155 Ja '46 480w

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson
Book Week p6 D 9 '45 440w
Booklist 42:141 Ja 1 '46

Reviewed by H. J. Bresler
Commonweal 43:341 Ja 11 '46 600w

"Aware, progressive, forthright, one can just hope that such a book and such a group may avert what begins to look like losing the war they won."
+ Kirkus 13:449 O 1 '45 170w

"Of more than average importance for any community in which the Legion is already active. Recommended generally." L. M. Kinloch
+ Library J 70:1086 N 15 '45 110w

Discussion by Walter Bernstein
Nation 162:65 Ja 19 '46 2100w

Reviewed by Louis Falstein
New Repub 113:875 D 24 '45 900w

"This reviewer wishes to state that the book is must reading for anyone seriously interested in understanding what veterans who do think are thinking about. Mr. Bolte's conclusions are not those with which all persons will agree, but the force with which he says what he has to say wins admiration even in the passages where a reader disagrees with him. . . For sheer reading pleasure this reviewer likes best the first four chapters of Mr. Bolte's book." Charles Hurd
+ N Y Times p3 N 18 '45 1600w
New Yorker 21:82 D 22 '45 160w

Reviewed by Jay Adams
Sat R of Lit 28:10 D 8 '45 950w
Springf'd Republican p6 D 13 '45 240w

Reviewed by Bill Mauldin
+ Weekly Book Review p1 N 25 '45 1350w

BONNAMY, FRANCIS, pseud. See Walz, A.

BONNE, ALFRED. Economic development of the Middle East; an outline of planned reconstruction after the war. (Int. lib. of sociology and social reconstruction) 164p $4 Oxford [12s 6d Routledge]

330.956 Levant—Economic conditions. Reconstruction (1939-)—Levant [45-5479]

"A statistical and descriptive study of Middle Eastern agriculture and industry approached from the point of view of contemporary British social and economic planning." Book Week

---

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Ja 6 '46 30w

"Dr. Bonné can be congratulated on the accomplishment of a useful piece of constructive work. The material he has collected, and the conclusions at which he arrives, deserve careful study. It is a pity that work such as this is so greatly handicapped by inadequate statistical information: for it is difficult to resist the impression that some at least of the figures available are in fact highly conjectural."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p242 My 26 '45 800w

BONNER, MARY GRAHAM. Surprise place; il. by Lois Lenski. 119p $2 Knopf 45-6989

This is the story of Ellen, her brother, Ronnie, her precious calf, Sea Weed, and their happy adventures in the little fishing village in Nova Scotia where they lived.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p20 N 25 '45 130w
Booklist 42:39 O 1 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '45
Kirkus 13:313 Jl 15 '45 120w

"Book is not important but is an acceptable, simple story which should appeal to third- and fourth-graders. Pages are readable with large clear print and many illustrations by Lois Lenski." J. E. Lynch
+ Library J 70:821 S 15 '45 70w

"Girls of Ellen's age will thoroughly enjoy her story, salted with sea breezes and sweetened with a real appreciation of the small happinesses of every day." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p21 Ag 19 '45 180w
Wis Lib Bul 41:128 D '45

BONNIWELL, WILLIAM RAYMOND. History of the Dominican liturgy; with an introd. by Bartholomew J. Eustace. 386p il $3.50 Wagner, J.F.

264.02 Roman Catholic church—Liturgy and ritual—Dominican 44-8720

"After a brief survey of the Roman Rite from its origins to the thirteenth century, Father Bonniwell carefully traces the gradual formation of a distinctively Dominican Rite at Mass and Divine Office, he analyzes the liturgy of the Friars Preachers in the Middle Ages, and he gives a chronicle, some of it trenchant, of the revisions in the sixteenth, seventeenth and twentieth centuries. Here and there the author interrupts his development to describe the introduction of new feasts into the Dominican calendar." Cath World

Reviewed by J. A. McVann
+ Cath World 160:567 Mr '45 300w

"This is a careful and scholarly study of a vexing problem. It is outstanding for the calm judgments, the common sense and the diligence of the author in the assembling, digesting, and the evaluation of his sources. Since it is well enough written to make agreeable reading, any person with the slightest interest in liturgy should possess and study it, especially all Catholics who live in Dominican parishes or study in their schools." H. A. Reinhold
+ Commonweal 41:404 F 2 '45 450w

BONSAL, STEPHEN. When the French were here. 263p map $3 Doubleday

973.337 U.S.—History—Revolution—French participation. Yorktown—Siege, 1781 45-1583

"A narrative of the sojourn of the French forces in America, and their contribution to the Yorktown campaign, drawn from unpublished reports and letters of participants in the National archives of France and the Ms. Division of the Library of Congress." Subtitle

Reviewed by Louis Gottschalk
Am Hist R 50:779 Jl '45 900w

Reviewed by P. M. Angle
Book Week p3 F 25 '45 550w
Booklist 41:234 Ap 15 '45

"For a delightful excursion into an eventful and interesting chapter of American history, we are deeply indebted to Mr. Bonsal's book." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 F 15 '45 500w

"A concentrated phase of a war of the past studied in intimate detail—an objective and detached study for scholars, not for the general market."
+ Kirkus 13:11 Ja 1 '45 130w

"Usable in large collections for high school students studying the American Revolution." Elizabeth Burr
Library J 70:309 Ap 1 '45 70w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
Nation 160:280 Mr 10 '45 300w

"A pleasant, old-fashioned narrative history of the military and social aspects of French aid in the American Revolution."
+ New Repub 112:398 Ja 19 '45 60w

Reviewed by J. A. Krout
N Y Times p21 Jl 15 '45 750w

"In the many histories of our Revolution, there are few precedents for the felicitous blending of authentic detail with genuine human interest that distinguishes this book. Colonel Bonsal has been announced as the winner of the Pulitzer Prize for history in 1944. His latest volume also merits an accolade for another brilliant contribution to the history of our country." Donald Armstrong
+ Sat R of Lit 28:19 Je 16 '45 1000w

"The political, social, military, and diplomatic history of the last two years of the American Revolution is touched on in this volume. Teachers will find it a valuable book for their school library; many students will be fascinated by it." R. A. Brown
+ Social Studies 36:373 D '45 360w

Reviewed by Marvin Lowenthal
Weekly Book Review p4 F 25 '45 1000w
Wis Lib Bul 41:53 My '45

BONTEMPS, ARNA WENDELL. We have tomorrow; il. with photographs by Marian Palfi. 131p $2 Houghton

325.26 Negroes—Biography 45-8344

Twelve fiction-like biographical accounts of as many young Negro men and women. Each story is one of success gained over obstacles. Partial contents: A girl who liked hats: Mildred E. Blount; Strangers and friends: Horace R. Cayton; Fiddler's progress: Dean Dixon; Her own idea: Hazel Scott; Wings on his shoulders: Benjamin Davis.

Book Week p5 N 11 '45 270w
Booklist 42:60 O 15 '45

"They are inspiring career stories of artists and musicians. . . And they treat with calm, dispassionate frankness the great issue of racial discrimination. Adults, as well as older boys and girls, will find this an arresting book." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:354 S '45 90w

"I could only wish the book were better written, but that [these stories] exist at all is a note of hopefulness."
Kirkus 13:318 Jl 15 '45 130w

Reviewed by John Tunis
N Y Times p22 N 11 '45 120w
Sat R of Lit 28:79 N 10 '45 30w

"Some of these stories are interesting, but the book as a whole has an effect of monotony. The same pattern is followed throughout. Each story is writtten in the same manner, beginning with the trials and tribulations of childhood and ending with the ultimate success of the individual. The characters seem almost too perfect; all of them are easygoing and undaunted by failure or misfortune." E. R. Weltman
Springf'd Republican p4 S 22 '45 420w
Wis Lib Bul 41:129 D '45

BONTEMPS, ARNA WENDELL, and CONROY, JACK. They seek a city. 266p $2.75 Doubleday

325.26 Negroes. Migration, Internal 45-35114

"This study of Negro migration from the South to the North and West during a period of more than a century pulls together a good deal of interesting material which heretofore has been scattered in books, pamphlets and newspapers. It begins with the flight of slaves from the antebellum South via the Underground Railroad, and ends with the recent movements to industrial centers beyond the Mason and Dixon Line." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by H. R. Cayton
Book Week p3 Je 17 '45 850w
Booklist 41:315 Jl 1 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '45

"The writers have brought us a much improved approach along literary lines to the study of the Negro in American life. Their gift to us is a book without a philosophic base, apparently; certainly in the sense of American 'race-ology.' They have unearthed much new material, have rewritten some that is old, and in general have helped present a new point of view on Negro life and culture. There is very little straining, although the sufferings of the Negro are made to account for perhaps far more human weaknesses than we ought to make excuses for." George Streator
+ Commonweal 42:337 Jl 20 '45 750w

"Lives which have served as object lesson and promise to a race which is still fighting for equal rights, simply told."
+ Kirkus 13:150 Ap 1 '45 130w

"When the authors come to the mass migrations beginning with the First World War, their account loses much of its drama because individuals do not stand out. Here the story is more concerned with issues and problems. Nevertheless, the book is unique and should be read by anyone who would gain a knowledge of the human meaning of the northward migrations." E. F. Frazier

BONTEMPS, A. W.—Continued
+ Nation 161:411 O 20 '45 380w

"Messrs. Bontemps and Conroy seem objective enough, for the most part, in discussing the disabilities and obstacles which have confronted the Negro in the period under notice. They present data showing that all sections have discriminated against him. But our authors are guilty of some remarkable generalizations. . . The handful of egregious generalizations of which they are guilty do not mar greatly what is, on the whole, a sound and valuable book." Virginius Dabney
+ — N Y Times p4 Je 10 '45 750w

"The authors have selected from their obviously vast supply of material only facts and figures that are both pertinent and interesting, and have managed to avoid most of the sociological clichés that clutter so many books about the Negro problem. They have also managed, which is even more important, to write about that problem, so often approached more emotionally than intelligently, with understanding, tolerance, and restraint."
+ New Yorker 21:71 Je 16 '45 110w

"Although the writing is sometimes inexpert, the book contains much valuable information; there are also picturesque and interesting descriptions of Negroes who helped make history in the United States."
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:36 S '45 200w

"A most timely study of the Negro's successive flights from oppression to a city where he thought he could find freedom, only to discover sooner or later the necessity for seeking it somewhere else. Although there is much that is familiar to students of history and sociology in this deftly written, always interesting and at times fascinating narrative, the general public will undoubtedly read it with more understanding and profit than it would the dry, statistical analyses of the social scientist." Rayford Logan
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Je 10 '45 1150w

Wis Lib Bul 41:80 Jl '45

BOOKER, EDNA LEE (MRS JOHN STAUFFER POTTER), and POTTER, JOHN STAUFFER. Flight from China; decorations by Peggy Bacon. 236p $2.50 Macmillan

951.0425 China—History. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 45-6891

"[This book] is divided into two completely separate parts: the first part being Miss Booker's own account of the end of an era; the second part a portion of her husband, John S. Potter's, diary. First comes a nostalgically sympathetic account of housekeeping in the Shanghai which existed between the conflicts of World War I and the Japanese occupation, an account of a city which has forever vanished; then the story of her husband in his captivity." Christian Science Monitor

---

Reviewed by Ann Hunter
Book Week p6 Ag 26 '45 330w

Booklist 42:34 O 1 '45

Cath World 162:286 D '45 200w

" 'Flight From China' is well written, and it describes the Japanese occupation with sincerity and restraint." L. T. K. G.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 23 '45 650w

"In personal, affectionate terms, there is a good deal about China, by people who understand it."
+ Kirkus 13:174 Ap 15 '45 150w

"A superior book, delightful in its literary quality, informative, readable." F. L. D. Goodrich
+ Library J 70:529 Je 1 '45 110w

"No one has ever described the exotic atmosphere of Shanghai in the 1920's more vividly or more accurately than Miss Booker; her husband contributes a significant section on Japanese policies in Shanghai after Pearl Harbor and on his experiences in a Japanese concentration camp. It is not a sensational book; neither of the authors went through or witnessed any of the cruelties which others have suffered. Nor does it contribute to an understanding of Chinese politics or culture. The China one sees is that of the treaty ports, which are more Western than Chinese. . . Those who have never lived in China may get a false impression of the Chinese people, particularly from the constant use of pidgin English, but they can hardly fail to be delighted by Miss Booker's charming account of an incredible city that is truly the crossroads of the world." M. S. Stewart
+ — Nation 161:320 S 29 '45 280w

Reviewed by John Goette
Sat R of Lit 28:12 S 8 '45 700w

"The book has the defect of all personal recitations of war experience in assuming in the reader often more interest in the family personalities than exists. It contains more pidgin English than some readers will bear, and in general the intertwining of intimate details of the Potter family household, the crowded canvas of domestic characters . . . with chronology of political developments, with reminders of the last four thousand years of Chinese history, take more than summer attention. On the other hand, the richness of 'Flight from China' depends on this interweaving." Ernestine Evans
+ — Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 26 '45 700w

BOOTH, ERNEST. With sirens screaming. 294p $2.50 Doubleday

45-7801

Two young people in love run into difficulties in their attempts to get married. They get entangled with the law and the man lands in prison, with a long sentence. In prison more bad luck overtakes them, and while there is an interlude of happiness, the end of the story is inevitable tragedy. The locale is southern California.

Reviewed by E. D. Branch
Book Week p6 S 2 '45 550w

"Not as important a book as Cohen's Coming Home but another 'straw in the wind' of our crop of wartime problems."
Kirkus 13:258 Je 15 '45 190w

"Mr. Booth's plot is legally sound. He cites statutes and court decisions to prove it. But obviously he has loaded the dice too heavily against his harried hero; the reader may be reminded of the old joke about the man who was electrocuted for spitting in the subway. It is a tribute to Mr. Booth's fast-moving narrative that you don't mind the loaded dice too much. His story has just enough plausibility, beyond its grim San Quentin authenticity, to make it at times an almost terrifying experience. It could happen." Richard Match
+ — N Y Times p32 O 7 '45 300w

"Mr. Booth, who the jacket blurb says is himself a pardoned lifer, has a nervous, lively style and the good taste to stick to his narrative without pointing any obvious moral."
New Yorker 21:67 Ag 18 '45 60w

"Tough, alert and confident, Ernest Booth puts on a fictional performance like that of a professional boxer, with a punch on every page and so much dramatic action in the first few chapters that you have little chance to analyze his tactics. If you take time out to study his method, however, it is evident that he has pushed the characters into a situation devised to fit his thesis." Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p16 S 9 '45 180w

BOOTH, MRS ESMA RIDEOUT. Nyanga's two villages; il. by Janet Smalley. 126p $1; pa 60c Friendship press

45-4770

Story about two contrasted African villages, the one Christian, the other savage. The narrator is a small Negro girl. For fourth grade.

Christian Century 62:838 Jl 18 '45 10w

"Characters overshadowed by the moral: that the natives need to work together for a better Africa. However, stories written from this standpoint about Africa are hard to find, so this may be useful in larger collections." Gweneira Williams

+ — Library J 70:639 Jl '45 90w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p19 Jl 15 '45 60w

BORDEN, CHARLES A. Oceania; il. by Rafaello Busoni. (Lands and peoples ser) 25p $1 Holiday

919 Oceania—Juvenile literature 45-37880

Short introduction to the history and geography of Hawaii, New Zealand, and the other islands of the South Pacific. For grades six to eight.

Booklist 42:169 Ja 15 '46

Kirkus 13:472 O 15 '45 90w

"Useful with the present interest in the South Pacific." E. W. Turpin

+ Library J 70:1190 D 15 '45 70w

BORDEN, MRS LUCILLE (PAPIN). Francesca Cabrini: without staff or scrip. 402p $2.75 Macmillan

B or 92 Cabrini, Mother Francesca Saverio 45-4909

Biography of Mother Cabrini, which stresses her personal life rather than her accomplishments. The book is longer and more detailed than Maynard's Too Small a World (Book Review Digest, May 1945). Index.

"Miss Borden has done her subject a great injustice. From a secular as well as a religious standpoint there are elements of true greatness in the life of Mother Cabrini, but the author has done an incredibly thorough job of keeping them submerged." J. O. S.

— Book Week p13 Je 10 '45 200w

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy

Cath World 161:361 Je '45 240w

Christian Century 62:709 Je 13 '45 90w

"Lucille Papin Borden spoils her story by cluttering the broad outlines with a mass of irrelevant detail. We are told the exact location on every steamer of Mother Cabrini's cabin on every one of her crossings; we are told precisely what she ate at which meals and those which her companions missed or lost are also enumerated. . . Yet her Constitution is nowhere given; nor what differentiated her Rule from that of other religious houses. . . There is no account of the women whom she trained to succeed her. And there are other forms of punctuation possible, and even preferable, to the long dash and the repeated dot: in the first chapter alone, twelve sentences end in the former; in the first fifty pages, no less than sixty-five. Both Virgil and Henry Ghéon used the unfinished half-line, but it is doubtful whether any human being has ever so abused it as Lucille Papin Borden does in this biography." Anne Fremantle

— Commonweal 42:360 Jl 27 '45 1100w

Kirkus 13:131 Mr 15 '45 150w

"Compared to Maynard's life of Mother Cabrini this is a longer and more detailed work. . . The first biography by a well-known Catholic novelist, writing is diffused, conversational style at times and sentimentalized approach. Account of this first American citizen to be canonized is complete and readable. Both biographies supplement each other. Recommend Maynard's for first purchase. For public and Catholic libraries." R. J. Hurley

Library J 70:486 My 15 '45 80w

"Mrs. Borden furnishes much material in her account of Francesca Cabrini. Her book has an excellent index which should make it valuable to future biographers. But there is much that is irrelevant and much that is missing. Surely there are many of St. Francesca's friends still living who could have supplied the material to make this book the warm, inspiring document its subject deserves." Clare Godfrey

+ — Weekly Book Review p10 Jl 8 '45 450w

BORING, EDWIN GARRIGUES, ed. See National research council. Psychology for the armed services

BORTH, CHRISTY. Masters of mass production. 290p il $3.50 Bobbs

670 U.S.—Manufactures. U.S.—Industries and resources. Engineers 45-4267

The story of American industry's answer to the government's demand for mass production of guns and airplanes for use in the present war. Index.

"This is the sort of book that stirs up pride in the American way of doing things." G. S.

+ Book Week p10 Ap 29 '45 180w

Booklist 41:300 Je 15 '45

"Recommended."

+ Library J 70:1089 N 15 '45 80w

"While Mr. Borth's volume lacks dramatic interest and intellectual perspective, it will aid the layman to gain a picture of the work and contributions of many of our leaders of industry." Philip Taft

+ — Weekly Book Review p14 Je 17 '45 400w

BOSWELL, ROLFE EDMUNDS. Medals for marines. 211p il $2 Crowell

940.542 U.S. Marine corps—Biography 45-4339

The stories behind the awards of the Navy's Medal of Honor to eighteen marines for gallantry "above and beyond the call of duty." Brief biographical sketches and photographs are included.

"Badly organized material, badly overwritten."

— Kirkus 13:161 Ap 1 '45 130w

"Especially recommended for junior high school ages and older." S. J. Robinson

+ Library J 70:356 Ap 15 '45 60w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p21 Ag 19 '45 80w

BOTHWELL, JEAN. Little boat boy; a story of Kashmir; il. by Margaret Ayer. 252p $2 Harcourt

45-8415

Hafiz and his family live in a doonga on a lake in Kashmir. This is the story of how they live and thru them and their dealings with a moneylender, a wood-carver, a farmer and his coolie, and an English artist (the Sahib) is presented a picture of life in India.

Booklist 42:60 O 15 '45

Churchman 159:8 N 15 '45 20w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '45

"Jean Bothwell, who knows India at first hand, must have known Hafiz, too, and Margaret Ayer's drawings admirably fit the picture." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:349 S '45 160w

"In several important aspects this is a very satisfying book. It is a credible and human family story of India's river dwellers, with characterizations that will give young Americans a sense of familiarity, of common interests and viewpoints, of a feeling of One World. . . Vocabulary all keyed to third and fourth grade readers ability and interest."

+ Kirkus 13:297 Jl 1 '45 170w

"Hafiz is almost as real as the Chinese 'Little Pear'—mischievous and fun loving. There is, in addition to his mild adventures, much information about the way of living in the Himalayan province of Kashmir." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 70:821 S 15 '45 50w

"This is a delightful tale of a little Moslem boy of Kashmir. . . Grown-ups as well as children will enjoy the book for its distinguished writing and charming drawings." N. B. B.

+ N Y Times p14 N 11 '45 100w

"The writing is good enough to make an alien existence seem real and to bring to life

BOTHWELL, JEAN—Continued
a cast of characters for whom children of eight to eleven are likely to develop a real affection."
+ New Yorker 21:134 D 8 '45 50w

"The background of the story is good, and the illustrations in black and white have the same authenticity as the text." R. A. Hill
+ Sat R of Lit 28:58 N 10 '45 310w

"In looking for books which will help boys and girls to have a kindly feeling toward children of other lands, one should not miss [this]. . . Miss Bothwell, writing from first-hand knowledge of the country, gives a vivid picture of Kashmir and its life and makes each of her characters seem real." E. B. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 23 '45 100w
Wis Lib Bul 41:128 D '45

BOTKIN, BENJAMIN ALBERT, ed. Lay my burden down; a folk history of slavery. 285p il $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press

326.973 Slavery in the U.S. Folklore, Negro A45-5576

The author, "who supervised preparation of the Slave Narrative Collection, was asked to make a selection from the interviews 'which would give at once the flavor of the entire collection and the social pattern revealed in the series.' The result is 'Lay My Burden Down,' a folk history of slavery in which, through some 280 anecdotes, tales, and autobiographical narratives former slaves tell what slavery and emancipation meant to them. The experiences, philosophy, and folklore of this group of old people (ages of those interviewed ranged from seventy-five to 105) looking back on a life lived part slave and part free become under skilful editorial integration illuminating social history and permanent literature." (Sat R of Lit) No index.

"It is difficult for even the jaded and eye-weary reviewer to write about this informal history of slavery in the United States in anything less than gaudy superlatives. For one thing, we probably never will see so effective an antidote for both the 'fields of snowy white, banjos ringing darkies singing, all the world seems bright' and the more intellectualized and high-falutin' Southern agrarian school interpretations of the lot of American citizens of African descent before the Civil War. Here also is a book which must stand alone henceforth, for the simple, unadorned stories of ex-slaves were recorded by the industrious (and too often unsung) workers of the WPA Writers' Project not a minute too soon." Jack Conroy
+ Book Week p3 D 9 '45 750w

"This book is interesting and important for the present, and will become even more significant as time goes on. What is it like to be a slave? What does first freedom feel like? Those are two questions answered here, and answered from a knowledge which, in a few more years, will—we hope and trust—never exist again." R. A. B.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 17 '45 360w
New Yorker 21:67 D 29 '45 90w

"Mr. Botkin, with the aid of the much-maligned Federal Writers' Project, has produced a major contribution to the social history and literary heritage of America." Henry Christman
+ Sat R of Lit 28:22 D 15 '45 1100w

"What was it like to be a slave in America? The testimony of former slaves themselves is presented in 'Lay My Burden Down.' Here is the feel of slavery, the sights and sounds, the smells and tastes of plantation life as only the slave could know them. . . Ben Botkin, whose 'Treasury of American Folklore' has found more than half a million readers, has brought a high degree of editorial skill and insight to the selection and integration of the narratives. . . The University of Chicago Press has presented the narratives in a handsome example of book-making, but they have done a disservice both to the studious and to the casual reader by the omission of an index." Coleman Rosenberger
+ — Weekly Book Review p5 D 23 '45 950w

BOUCHER, ANTHONY, pseud. See White, W. A. P.

BOULDING, KENNETH EWART. Economics of peace. 278p $3.75; text ed $2.75 Prentice-Hall

330.1 Economics. Economic policy 45-629

"British born, Oxford graduate, young professor at Iowa State, deals at first with economics of reconstruction, including a case study: Europe 1918-28. Greater part of book, economics of reform, takes up fundamental problems of our times: economic progress, justice in distribution, unemployment, international trade and closes with several illuminating chapters on right-wing and left-wing illusions." Library J

"Professor Boulding combines a thorough knowledge of modern economic analysis with an unusual talent for clear, forceful exposition. The result is an excellent book on the economics of the peace ahead of us. For beginning students and for the general reader, it would be an even better book if the author had limited himself to fewer topics and had developed each at greater length. But for more advanced students, and others with the necessary background, it provides a most enjoyable and rewarding survey of the problems with which we are already, or soon will be, confronted. . . There are a few imperfections. . . But these difficulties are of minor importance. For the most part, the analysis is on an unusually high level of technical excellence; and, equally important, it is developed with vigor and imagination which hold the reader's interest and stimulate his thinking." A. R. Sweezy
+ Am Econ R 35:701 S '45 1300w

"It is most agreeable reading. It should have many readers outside collegiate circles." Robert Rockefellow
+ Ann Am Acad 240:136 Jl '45 340w
Booklist 41:332 Jl 15 '45

Reviewed by G. G. Higgins
Commonweal 42:269 Je 29 '45 750w

"Whether by intention or not, Boulding has written a book which is non-technical, plainly worded and arranged to make comprehension of basic economics within the range of the average reader." Roy Hillbrook
+ Current Hist 8:542 Je '45 600w
Foreign Affairs 23:690 Jl '45 30w

"Understandable to layman, but not superficial. Wealth of material and ideas, lucidly presented. Not for professional economists but for educated readers and every library should provide it for them." H. H. A. Bernt
+ Library J 70:162 F 15 '45 110w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 161:112 Ag 4 '45 420w
New Repub 112:685 My 14 '45 180w

"As a whole the book represents a pretty comprehensive presentation of Professor Boulding's whole economic philosophy. Much of it seems elementary, doubtless owing to the fact that the book is intended for intelligent general readers rather than for special students in the field. The format, characterized by individual paragraph headings in bold type, and the almost complete absence of references and footnotes, are similarly indicative. This may also explain the rather dogmatic and pontifical tone of the book. It is, however, a very interesting book to read—especially so three chapters on right- and left-wing illusions—and every now and then one rejoices to encounter a particularly apt and well-turned phrase or sentence." E. E. Agger
+ Pol Sci Q 60:598 D '45 1200w

Reviewed by C. W. Churchill
Sat R of Lit 28:32 My 19 '45 950w

"Possibly because of the wide scope of the book, the interesting but highly debatable 'adjustable tax plan' is treated too briefly and the obvious objections to it are not properly dealt with. The book, however, is written in an attractive style, and the author demolishes with great skill a number of the most mischievous economic myths, though his curious blindness to the significance of the issues involved in the present war leads him to foster others in the political field which are almost as objectionable." F. R. Flournoy

+ — Social Educ 9:331 N '45 350w

Reviewed by Alfred Bornemann

Social Forces 24:242 D '45 750w

Social Studies 36:139 Mr '45 10w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:22 S '45 240w

BOURKE, VERNON JOSEPH. Augustine's quest of wisdom; life and philosophy of the Bishop of Hippo. (Science and culture ser) 323p $3 Bruce pub.

B or 92 Augustine, Saint, bp of Hippo 45-6779

"Study of St. Augustine's development has often been content to see him safely baptised. . . Dr. Bourke redresses the balance. His continuous history of the Saint's life and thought fills 300 pages, the baptism falls well before the hundredth. His aim is to present the breath of Augustine's life and thought within a manageable compass, and in a clear and pleasant way, not to prove any particular thesis or to commend critical novelties." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Reviewed by J. O. Supple

Book Week p2 S 2 '45 230w

"The merit of the book is in part that of good selection, both of incidents for biographical treatment and of passages for analysis. The analyses are clear and never too heavily loaded. It is by means of them chiefly that the author opens St Augustine's mind to the reader. All sides of his thought are touched upon so far as is necessary for the biography, but it is the philosophy that is developed."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p514 O 27 '45 1100w

"Written by a student of Jesuitical and Thomistic philosophy, this synthesis of Augustine's life and learning presents a scholarly and yet rather popularly available resource for that segment of the Catholic tradition which marked the close of antiquity."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:16 D '45 320w

BOWERS, CLAUDE GERNADE. Young Jefferson, 1743-1789. 544p il $3.75 Houghton

B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas 45-2085

The third volume in the author's trilogy about Thomas Jefferson, of which the earlier volumes were Jefferson and Hamilton, and Jefferson in Power (Book Review Digest 1925 and 1936). In this section the author concentrates on Jefferson between the years 1743 and 1789, or from the time of his birth to his return from Europe as ambassador, to become George Washington's first secretary of state. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Marie Kimball

Am Hist R 50:810 Jl '45 650w

"Here is a scholarly piece of research, done by a man who can write attractively for the layman. Every chapter is interesting in itself, and the very full and adequate bibliography is of particular interest to the political scientist." E. A. Weber

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1047 O '45 450w

"Even Mr. Bowers falls short of humanizing Jefferson; democrat and humanitarian that he was, Jefferson lacked the qualities that make Lincoln the man of the people. The Young Jefferson, however, because of its readability, clearness, and relevancy for the times will not disappoint Mr. Bowers's audience." J. C. Miller

Atlantic 175:131 My '45 300w

"Here is the third and final volume of Claude Bowers' inquiry into the life and times of Thomas Jefferson; in every way, it measures up to the first parts of the trilogy, and the final whole, taken together, makes one of the most thoughtful and profound investigations of our history ever undertaken by one man. Bowers is not merely to be praised and congratulated; working with those same tools Thomas Jefferson used, he has added to the knowledge of American democracy—and he has strengthened the foundations upon which our ideology rests." Howard Fast

+ Book Week p3 Mr 18 '45 900w

Booklist 41:236 Ap 15 '45

"This is the third and completing Jefferson volume of Bowers, who wrote his biography backward. One can see why. The further back into the colonial record, the harder to add flesh and blood to the record. Bowers has done an interesting, at times fascinating job with his material, but he can hardly be said to have made it come to life." L. M. Lyons

+ — Boston Globe p15 Mr 14 '45 500w

"When the scholarly and painstaking Claude Bowers turns his attention to a topic of historic interest, the result is sure to be worth while. This is decidedly true of his latest work, The Young Jefferson." M. W. B.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 14 '45 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '45

"Mr Bowers's work for which every American must be grateful, is readable and comprehensive; what it lacks is a certain magistral play of the imagination which is perhaps the principal element required to make a biography 'definitive.' To say this much, however, is merely to say that there is still room for a great book on Jefferson and that we have not as yet any such book; it is not in any way to belittle Mr. Bowers's real achievement."

+ Commonweal 41:650 Ap 13 '45 650w

"Bowers is important from the point of view of definitive scholarship, but we confess we find him solid reading. . . It is a thorough, careful recapitulation of a man of vision—at variance with some other books on the period, but—with Bowers' record—authoritative, if partisan."

+ Kirkus 13:23 Ja 15 '45 150w

Reviewed by H. A. Wallace

Nation 160:307 Mr 17 '45 1000w

"Those who have read Jefferson and Hamilton and Jefferson in Power will know what to expect from this final volume of Mr. Bowers' triptych: the warm, ideologically vague, but faithful partisanship for the democratic side, the easy-going narrative, plushy prose and often repetitious characterizations, the search for tension and conflict. This volume, to be sure, is not so exciting as its predecessors. Mr. Bowers is at his best when he is picturing a stark struggle between Good and Evil, and his passions are not as much aroused by the fight over the Virginia reforms or the issues of the Revolution as they are over the dastardly machinations of the Federalists. Within the limits of his particular medium, which is long on romance and the merely personal, and somewhat short on sharp historical insight, Mr. Bowers has, however, done a fairly good job; certainly Jefferson's fame does not suffer by having our attention focused again and again on his brilliant early career." Richard Hofstadter

+ — New Repub 112:394 Ja 19 '45 700w

"Mr. Bowers has written history that is deservedly popular. His great gifts are those of the artist, a writer in the grand tradition of the literary school. Relying on published sources, acknowledging his debt to scholars whose spade work in archives and manuscripts has produced learned monographs and fact-accumulations, he fuses facts together, endows them with meaning, and narrates them in dramatic, marching prose. An eye for the significant detail, the revealing anecdote, the apt quotation, combine to make his pages glow with life and movement." Bernard Mayo

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 11 '45 1650w

"Mr. Bowers, in his early chapters, deals with the most formative period of Jefferson's life, his youth and early manhood, and he shows that everything that went into his political philosophy had been thought out long before he wrote the Declaration of Independence. This, of course, is no new discovery on the part of Mr. Bowers, whose book is singularly lacking in discoveries, and the value of his volume lies more in its comprehensiveness than in anything else. . . It ought to be said that Mr. Bowers' young Jefferson is a much more likable and engaging person than his older one. The author hasn't lost his reverential attitude, which is perhaps as it should be, but he does come right out and say that Jefferson had a talent for flirtation, along with his more substantial accomplishments. . . A little love affair covers a multitude of virtues, and I suggest that Jefferson, because of Maria, is going to seem a much more human person to many of his countrymen than he has ever seemed before." Hamilton Basso

BOWERS, C. G.—Continued
+ New Yorker 21:86 Mr 10 '45 800w

Reviewed by H. M. Kallen
Sat R of Lit 28:10 Ap 7 '45 3400w

Social Studies 36:186 Ap '45 30w

"Obviously, this is not the definitive study of Jefferson that will emerge from the study being made at Princeton, but it is a biography that will be widely read as its merits become known to more and more people."
+ Social Studies 36:233 My '45 360w

"To readers familiar with Jefferson's life and major works, very little will be strikingly new. But even they will probably welcome the Bowers narrative for its sustained and clear examination of Jefferson's contributions theoretical and practical, each in its social and intellectual context. . . There are shortcomings too. Aside from the slovenly writing, the story occasionally lacks precise data about the background for Jefferson's ideas, and betrays a measure of naivete at certain points where it is found necessary to defend the hero against slander real or fancied." S. L. Jackson
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 1 '45 470w

Reviewed by Rachel Davis-DuBois
Survey 81:215 Ag '45 500w

"Author Bowers writes as if everybody hated Jefferson except himself. . . In default of bright youthful doings to relate, Bowers fills his book with 'it is not improbable,' and 'we can easily imagine'; with 'it is to be regretted that no Boswell was on hand to record the brilliant conversation.' But so microscopic has been his study of Jefferson's career that contraryminded readers may easily forgive his constant drawing of contemporary political morals."
Time 45:94 Mr 19 '45 1000w

"The book is more than a study of Jefferson. It is an absorbing picture of men and events in this country in the years before the war and immediately after. The story of the period is clearly told, and new views of well-known figures and fresh views of forgotten leaders are brought into new perspective."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:12 Je '45 240w

"Mr. Bowers, whose practiced hand has long dwelt on Jefferson, draws these early years—and the middle ones too, for we take leave of Jefferson at forty-seven—with unflagging enthusiasm. Indeed, it is no disparagement of a capital book to say that enthusiasm, sympathy and a vivacious style are its chief merits. . . What we have here is the ancient difficulty of the proper division between biography and history and certainly we cannot ask that Mr. Bowers rewrite the history of the American Revolution. He has provided enough of that history to make Jefferson's role clear, he has recreated Jefferson himself with lavish detail, and he has given us a lively and dramatic story." H. S. Commager
+ Weekly Book Review p1 Mr 11 '45 1350w

Wis Lib Bul 41:47 Ap '45

Reviewed by D. M. Potter
Yale R n s 34:738 summer '45 900w

BOWERS, DAVID FREDERICK, ed. Foreign influences in American life; essays and critical bibliographies. 254p il $3 Princeton univ. press [15s Oxford]
325.14 U.S.—Foreign population. U.S.—Civilization A44-4627
For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"The essays are written primarily to educate and to stimulate the most intelligent of the undergraduates, but they have a quality which invites a wide reading. Each presents a carefully thought out and neatly written summary of the state of knowledge in the respective fields. These are spiced by the individuality of most of the writers, whose views will in several cases probably be challenged by their intra-disciplinary colleagues. The book is likewise convenient because of its series of comprehensive bibliographies supplied with appropriate introductions, classifications, and annotations. Finally these essays deserve careful consideration as studies in methodology. Here the historian will find some interesting demonstrations of his indispensability to the humanities and the social sciences, for he finds his work and his method the basis of the argument of all save one of the writers. These essays illustrate the importance of the historical method in the instrumentalism which dominates the symposium." R. F. Nichols
+ Am Hist R 50:578 Ap '45 900w

Foreign Affairs 23:336 Ja '45 20w

"The idea of the book is not new, but its use as collateral reading for a two-year undergraduate program opens up a vista of great possibilities. The students (upperclassmen) enrolled in that program must have been subjected to considerable preliminary work in their first two years, for many of the essays take a good deal for granted. That this is so speaks well for undergraduate seriousness and maturity in days when both students and their teachers have to concentrate on affairs much more immediate, but often not more important, than the sources of our strength and our weakness." Julian Park
+ Library Q 15:159 Ap '45 440w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan
Manchester Guardian p3 Je 6 '45 350w

"Despite the rigid limitations the authors of the eight essays, here presented, deserve commendation from all who would understand the forces which have been shaping a distinctive American culture. . . Since all of the essays are illustrative rather than comprehensive, tentative, rather than definitive, it would probably be unfair to record a long list of omissions. To any such indictment editor and authors could properly reply (and they have done so in the book) that they were merely selecting typical phenomena. The principles of selection are not always apparent, however, and emphases sometimes seem misplaced. Attempts at precise definition, which are numerous, here lose their force when the reader realizes that nowhere in the volume is so central a term as 'American life' defined." J. A. Krout
+ — N Y Times p16 S 30 '45 700w

Reviewed by Richard Hofstadter
+ Pol Sci Q 60:319 Je '45 300w

"This work may be criticized for its deficiencies, but it can scarcely be ignored. For it is one of the most vivid and generally revealing pieces of writing that has been published in connection with this comparatively neglected topic." J. S. Roucek
+ — School & Society 61:108 F 17 '45 1200w

BOWMAN, PETER. Beach red; a novel. 122p $2.50 Random house
45-10493

"A haunting description in verse form, unrhymed, and no more metrical than any studied prose, of one man's experience in an assault force capturing a Japanese beachhead. His road leads to death. His long thoughts, the experiences he and his comrades endure, are poignantly presented." Library J

Reviewed by A. C. Spectorsky
Book Week p1 D 9 '45 1700w

Booklist 42:149 Ja 1 '46

Christian Science Monitor p14 D 18 '45 700w

+ Commonweal 43:389 Ja 25 '46 260w

"This is the best piece of American verse that the war has so far produced. More than that—it is intrinsically good,—moving, hard, brilliant and sincere."
+ Kirkus 13:344 Ag 15 '45 210w

"A beautiful piece of writing, but strong meat for some library patrons." Thelma Brackett
Library J 70:1025 N 1 '45 70w

"The irony is never insistent though it is constant; it is at its best when Mr. Bowman skillfully uses another device. Interlacing Biblical passages and Psalms in contrast or parallel to local actions and meditations. The seriousness and high quality of the work do not make such religious overtones seem incongruous. All of the phrases, clichés and jokes of the Pacific are woven in, so that the whole seems to typify a great area by means of one small piece of a single operation." Donald Stauffer

+ N Y Times p3 D 2 '45 1400w

"Mr. Bowman's versification probably owes something to Auden and to the MacLeish of 'Conquistador,' but it is quite outside the vein that we are used to in modern poetry. The style seems at first prosaic, but we soon find that the tone as well as the beat is quite distinct from that of prose. The whole thing, colloquial though it sometimes is (and though the author once writes 'lay' for 'lie' and uses 'disinterest' to mean 'lack of interest'), has an apt and ready flow of imagery and a dignity of thought and feeling that are as distinct from the Hemingway tradition as they are from Karl Shapiro (this is not meant invidiously in either case). Mr. Bowman has found something of his own which is not of professional belles-lettres and yet not, in a bad sense, journalistic." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 21:62 D 29 '45 500w

"Peter Bowman has written a rare and wonderful book, a novel which is simple and moving and, in its brief 122 pages, tells the story not only of a landing on a tiny, unnamed Pacific island but, indeed, of all war everywhere." M. D. Miller

+ Sat R of Lit 28:9 D 8 '45 800w

"There are sharp impressions in 'Beach Red' but too often the main current is obscured by verbiage. This is regrettable because the effort as a whole, its unusual form of presentation, is interesting." G. W. Bragdon

+ — Springf'd Republican p4d D 30 '45 200w

"In the traditional sense Beach Red is scarcely a novel at all. It is a prime cut of human suffering. But as an attempt to put in a fresh form an ageless experience (war), and as a clue to what soldiers think in battle and even what they are thinking in peace, it is as hot as a shell fragment and worth careful inspection."

+ Time 46:98 D 10 '45 700w

'There is very good writing in 'Beach Red.' Despite the overwriting and a definite sense of strain, as though the author were trying too hard, there are also solid passages of perceptive and sensitive writing. The soldier talk is heavy and rather wordy for combat, but it is rarely phony, as it has been in most soldier books. The form fits what Mr. Bowman has to say, although the device of the second person is not altogether successful. The aim would seem to be to bring about a greater identification of reader with character, but it has the effect of separating them even further. It might perhaps be effective in a shorter work." Walter Bernstein

+ — Weekly Book Review p3 D 2 '45 750w

BOWMAN, RUFUS DAVID. Church of the brethren and war, 1708-1941. 348p $2.50 Brethren pub.

286.5 Church of the brethren. War and religion 44-34544

"The Church of the Brethren (Taufers, Tunkers, Dunkers), one of the three historic peace churches, originated at Schwarzenau, Germany, in 1708 under the leadership of Alexander Mack. Within twenty-five years it had been transplanted in America and the record in Germany was closed. Today the membership is 179,000, and there are 1,019 churches. The founders, believing that war was contrary to the teachings of the New Testament, made non-resistance the first principle of the church. To that principle the Brethren have clung tenaciously for two hundred and thirty-six years, and as consistently as the better known Friends. This book will help to give them the place they deserve in the estimation of all who are interested in the great historical experiments with non-resistance." Christian Century

---

Reviewed by F. L. Weller

Am J Soc 50:331 Ja '45 500w

"This historical survey of the Brethren ought greatly to aid them to understand themselves and their position, as certainly it will aid those outside the peace churches to understand them." S. E. Mead

+ Christian Century 61:1290 N 8 '44 800w

BOYD, MRS EUNICE (MAYS). Murder wears mukluks. 248p $2 Farrar

45-3286

Detective story.

"Murder at 50 below zero can be as eerie as murder on any tropical night and Eunice Mays Boyd carries her story along at a swift pace to a satisfying, and for me, anyway, surprising climax." P. A. W.

+ Book Week p18 Ap 22 '45 180w

Booklist 41:270 My 15 '45

Kirkus 13:45 F 1 '45 60w

"There is enough excitement and puzzlement to provide a good evening's entertainment." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 15 '45 130w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p16 Ap 29 '45 70w

BOYD, JAMES. Eighteen poems. 29p $1.75 Scribner

811 44-47229

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Reviewed by Howard Moss

N Y Times p25 Ag 12 '45 270w

"Eighteen Poems by James Boyd has the passionate sincerity and lofty thought which we associate with first-rate poetry. Usually the ideas are original and they are always humanitarian. But the final expression has too much the large, smooth tone of generality for the idea to explode into true poetry." J. S. Bond

+ — Poetry 65:280 F '45 210w

"Mr. Green feels that 'if in his death we lost a fine novelist, we lost an even finer poet.' However well meant, the judgment is questionable in view of the slightness of these verses compared to the sound weight of the historical novels. Like the latter, however, the poems are the work of a sensitive craftsman and genuine character: as such they add to the stature of a creative figure in American writing." Ruth Lechlitner

+ — Weekly Book Review p16 F 11 '45 330w

Wis Lib Bul 41:28 F '45

BOYD, JULIAN PARKS, ed. Declaration of independence; the evolution of the text as shown in facsimiles of various drafts by its author, Thomas Jefferson. rev ed 46p il $3.50 Princeton univ. press [17s 6d Oxford]

973.313 Declaration of independence A45-1832

A revised and enlarged edition of a study first published by the Library of Congress in the form of a brochure in 1943. "Thirty-two large pages of facsimiles reproduce all the versions, beginning with Jefferson's rough draft with his own interlinear alterations and Adams' and Franklin's marginal emendations, and ending with the first official printed text as inserted in the journal of the Continental Congress. These and the various other copies written in Jefferson's own hand present some rather intricate textual questions which the interested reader can best pursue by following Mr. Boyd's study. Two points, already well established, are given more complete documentation and demonstration: Jefferson was the almost sole author of the phraseology; but the ideas, for which Jefferson disclaimed originality, were drawn from many sources and were, to use his own phrase, 'an expression of the American mind.'" (Christian Century)

Am Hist R 50:845 Jl '45 40w

BOYD, J. P., ed.—Continued
"The descriptions of the ten documents which are reproduced are exceedingly valuable in any study of the Declaration. . . The facsimiles of the various drafts add materially to the attractiveness of a volume which must be given very high rank in the field of American historical scholarship." E. S. Brown
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:585 Je '45 750w

Booklist 41:234 Ap 15 '45

Christian Century 62:401 Mr 28 '45 280w

"Julian P. Boyd, librarian of Princeton University, has prepared for Americans a special study regarding the formulation of the Declaration of Independence which possesses no little interest. If it is necessary to demonstrate once again how a document of this sort does not spring full-fledged from any Jovian brow—even the brow of Thomas Jefferson—Mr. Boyd has so demonstrated. Nor is he the first to have done so, but rather the most succinct and the handiest."
+ Commonweal 42:26 Ap 20 '45 700w

"Much of the handwriting is easily decipherable, and it gives stirring emphasis to the ordinary repetition of the famous document."
+ Current Hist 8:442 My '45 110w

Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 25 '45 180w

"In a handsome and dignified quarto volume, Julian Boyd, librarian of Princeton University, has assembled for the first time the reproductions of all the known drafts of the Declaration of Independence in Jefferson's hand, together with facsimiles of other documents intimately related to the final text the general reader remembers from his student days. In an able and gracefully written introductory essay, Dr. Boyd supplements and illuminates this volume of facsimiles." Carl Bridenbaugh
+ N Y Times p8 Ap 22 '45 450w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:33 Je '45 280w

BOYERS, BETTINA, and BOYERS, AUDREY. Murder by proxy. 192p $2 Doubleday 45-7216

Detective story.

"Good slant on the telling, with Hollywood life plausible instead of exaggerated, and with fresh interest in spite of drawbacks."
+ Kirkus 13:230 Je 1 '45 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p18 Jl 22 '45 130w

"Odd—but readable!"
Sat R of Lit 28:30 Jl 21 '45 40w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 12 '45 240w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p11 Jl 22 '45 60w

BOYNTON-HAMILTON, MRS MATHI (KOHLER). On winter's traces; decorations by Elmore Brown. 241p $2.75 Appleton-Century 45-9070

Story of a gallant woman's struggle to readjust herself to a new kind of life, when her husband divorced her. From her happy life in New Jersey, Sarah went to a South Carolina plantation, left her by an aunt. Here among new scenes she built up her courage and her reserve, until she finally came to a full realization of her place in life.

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers
Book Week p11 O 14 '45 90w

Booklist 42:94 N 15 '45

Kirkus 13:346 Ag 15 '45 170w

"As delightful and refreshing a reading experience as this reviewer has experienced in many months. . . Anyone with the slightest tendency to a green thumb, or a fascination for the history of old southern cities and the genteel graciousness of southern country life will read 'On Winter's Traces' as a faithful recreation of a way of life that has a dignity not found in the harder, busier North, and for the delectable enjoyment of reading aloud certain folksy or illuminating passages which have the day-by-day charm of wholesome reality." L. S. Munn
+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 21 '45 500w

"If you enjoy horseback riding and herbaceous borders you may be entertained by some of this." Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p22 O 14 '45 110w

BOY'S fun book of things to make and do; 216 ways to have fun; 470 how to do it illustrations. (Foremost bks) 192p $1.49; de luxe ed $1.98 Pop. science

790 Amusements. Handicraft

"Model plane making, magic tricks, hobbies, paper craft, radio construction, indoor and outdoor games, camping and fishing suggestions, and building a soap box derby are among the twenty-four topics, complex and simple which should appeal to a variety of ages and talents." (Library J) Index.

Churchman 159:7 N 15 '45 30w

Reviewed by M. M. Clark
Library J 70:1028 N 1 '45 80w

BOZYAN, HAGOP FRANK, and LOVETT, SIDNEY, eds. Yale carol book; pub. for Church of Christ in Yale university. [58p] $1.50 Yale univ. press

783.65 Carols A45-476

A collection of 35 carols, selected from those used at the Vesper carol services held in Dwight Memorial chapel, Yale university, during Advent each year. "The carols, for the most part, have been selected on the basis of usage and familiarity, with an eye to wider use in connection with church services, and more informal gatherings in college halls and in the home." (Foreword)

Booklist 41:206 Mr 15 '45

"An excellent collection."
+ Christian Century 62:20 Ja 3 '45 70w

BRADBURY, BIANCA. The antique cat; drawings by Diana Thorne and Connie Moran. [64p] $2 Winston

Cats—Legends and stories 45-35242

Solomon, a bedraggled cat from the dives of Fishtown, wandered into the expensive shopping district, with one object in view—he wanted a good home. When the girl who owned the antique shop took him in, he thought his search was ended. Then Miss Ruth found an old doll and began to expend her time on that. The result of Solomon's jealousy of the doll was improved conditions for all.

" 'The Antique Cat' is certainly one of the handsomest picture storybooks of the season. Diana Thorne and Connie Moran have produced the most wonderful pictures for Bianca Bradbury's story—a story, by the way, which has real freshness and originality."
+ Book Week p19 N 11 '45 200w

Booklist 42:112 D 1 '45

"An absorbing story, handsomely illustrated."
+ Churchman 159:7 N 15 '45 30w

"A very entertaining story, which adults will like as well as children."
+ Kirkus 13:492 N 1 '45 110w

"Charming story with lovely pictures by Diana Thorne and Connie Moran that give real personality to the 'antique cat.' " D. M. MacDonald
+ Library J 70:1092 N 15 '45 60w

N Y Times p8 D 30 '45 90w

Weekly Book Review p10 N 11 '45 310w

BRADLEY, DWIGHT JAQUES. Your problem—can it be solved? 213p $2 Macmillan

150.13 Psychology, Applied 45-2634

"The author's main object is to show troubled people how to face their own problems squarely, find the causes, accept responsibility for the things for which they are responsible, discover their resources for meeting the situation and, with a minimum of professional help from outside, find a solution." Christian Century

Christian Century 62:436 Ap 4 '45 70w

"Dr. Bradley has written within the pages of this little book a uniquely searching and penetrating analysis of individual needs and has done so in such a straightforward and appealing manner as to fully win the average reader." R. H. Read

+ Churchman 159:14 My 15 '45 360w

"Your Problem—Can It Be Solved? is a sensible and, if rightly interpreted, a helpful discussion of the difficult situations that confront men and women and that we describe as problems." E. R. Groves

+ Crozer Q 22:284 Jl '45 300w

"This is no psychological treatise or religious homily, but there is much sound psychology and good religion and some very good writing in the book. Extremely practical—down to earth—refreshingly free of psychoanalytic patter and pious platitudes—this is an example of personal counseling at its best."

+ Kirkus 13:60 F 1 '45 170w

Social Studies 36:284 O '45 50w

BRADSHAW, MARION JOHN. Nature of Maine; as seen by a teacher of philosophy. 176p il $5 The author, 319 Union st, Bangor, Me.

917.41 Maine—Description and travel 44-9248

The author, professor of philosophy and religion at Bangor Theological seminary, combines 177 fine, full-page photographs showing the beauties of Maine scenery, and short discourses on religion and nature.

"The text is not a page-by-page description of the pictures but a free and informal discussion of such topics as these: 'First the Natural,' 'Sword of Christ,' 'Religion and Art,' 'The Way Called Heresy,' 'The Christian and War,' and other themes upon which a professor of the philosophy of religion at Bangor Theological Seminary might be expected to discourse profitably. He does, and interestingly too, in the unstrained and discursive mood which is most likely to be achieved by one who thinks out-of-doors about high matters which have already been studiously considered under the midnight lamp. The connection between pictures and text is vital, even though it is not one of detailed correspondence. We understand that the edition is already sold out, but there may be another. There should be, for the book is a fine blending of wisdom and beauty."

+ Christian Century 62:144 Ja 31 '45 220w

Reviewed by A. N. Wilder

J Religion 25:229 Jl '45 250w

Weekly Book Review p16 O 29 '44 120w

BRAMELD, THEODORE BURGHARD HURT. Design for America; an educational exploration of the future of democracy; for senior high schools and junior colleges; with the collaboration of K. Hovet [and others]. 165p $2 Hinds

307 Social sciences—Study and teaching 45-6277

An account of an experiment in education carried out in a small village in Minnesota, with members of the junior and senior classes of the high school and two of their teachers participating and assisted by a professor from the state university. Their object was to answer the question: What do we want the future to be like in the United States?

Christian Century 62:1038 S 12 '45 280w

Current Hist 9:459 N '45 50w

"A very good book for those of us interested in the social structure of America." Susanne Thompson

+ J Home Econ 37:655 D '45 270w

"Although this particular experiment was conducted with high-school pupils, I see no reason why its lessons and results should not be earnestly studied and thereafter emulated by university teachers and especially by leaders of classes in adult education." E. C. Lindeman

+ New Repub 113:29 Jl 2 '45 430w

"Mr. Brameld has written a striking account of a noteworthy step toward the remaking of our secondary education. It is a highly promising proposal of a better citizenship education of our youth for the post-war world." W. H. Kilpatrick

+ Sat R of Lit 28:61 N 17 '45 150w

Reviewed by R. B. Raup

School & Society 62:205 S 29 '45 2150w

"This book is a noteworthy contribution to the growing literature on the study of contemporary problems in the high school. It goes beyond most previous work in this area by placing the major emphasis on the future planning of a 'Design for America.'" I. J. Quillen

+ Social Educ 9:380 D '45 950w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 12 '45 360w

BRAMHALL, MARION. Tragedy in blue. 191p $2 Doubleday

45-5065

Detective story.

Booklist 42:38 O 1 '45

"Adroit planning—but there's almost too much happening."

+ — Kirkus 13:145 Ap 1 '45 130w

"The author knows how to build a plot and how to make her characters come alive." I. A.

+ N Y Times p10 My 27 '45 110w

"A well-constructed, beguiling puzzle." R. N. F.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 1 '45 110w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p15 Je 3 '45 90w

BRANDEL, MARC. Rain before seven (a low fantasy). 230p $2 Harper

45-8513

In this self-styled "low fantasy" the central figure is a young man named Cassius who believes that he has been the innocent cause of disaster in the past and now has a presentiment that he will cause another catastrophe. He warns certain of his friends and acquaintances to stay away from him, with the consequence that, after vague wanderings around New York, the seven people, pre-destined to perish, converge at last upon his apartment.

Reviewed by A. C. Spectorsky

Book Week p4 S 16 '45 650w

Kirkus 13:278 Jl 1 '45 150w

"'Rain Before Seven" is well-written, often witty, and, except for a stretch just before the end, very successful in its suspense." Diana Trilling

+ — Nation 161:292 S 22 '45 240w

"Novels populated exclusively by off-center characters (or zanys, posing as people) are commonplaces of the critic's trade. 'Rain Before Seven,' which strains every seam to make that category, is assured of a place in the sweepstakes. Whether the public that loves this sort of thing will accept it is another question." C. V. Terry

N Y Times p27 S 23 '45 500w

"[There are] possibilities for humor, satire, and suspense. Mr. Brandel does not realize these possibilities more than half the time, not because he has done too little but because he has done too much. When he seems not to be trying, he is extremely funny, but the humor eventually becomes strained, and the novel is so often weighted with the author's medium-heavy satire and indefatigable sophistication that it quickly loses its sparkle."

— + New Yorker 21:85 S 22 '45 160w

"Technically it is [a] good piece of writing, confusing and occasionally amusing at the same time, but if there is any other reason for its existence it has been cleverly concealed." R. F. H.

BRANDEL, MARC—Continued
— + Springf'd Republican p4d S 16 '45 180w

"Lifting your eyes from the map and your mind from the novel, you have the impression that Mr. Brandel's objective was to create a ribald story on an intellectual plane but that he failed to master the formula. Synthetic slyness is a poor substitute." Lisle Bell
— Weekly Book Review p20 S 23 '45 600w

BRANDS, GEORGE J. Meteorology, a practical course in weather. 235p il $2.50 McGraw 551.5 Meteorology 45-786

"A text that meets the requirements of those who need a special knowledge of the subject of meteorology in its application to their work, for safety, economy, and efficiency. Each lesson, consisting of text and examination, covers a particular topic in concise form. The lessons are so arranged that the principles involved are thoroughly understood before the student attempts the practice of weather forecasting." (Publisher's note) Author is chief meteorologist of the Pan American airways system. Index.

Library J 70:33 Ja 1 '45 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:10 Ja '45

BRANDT, KARL. Reconstruction of world agriculture; pub. in cooperation with Food research institute of Stanford university. 416p maps $4 Norton
338.1 Agriculture—Economic aspects. Food supply. Reconstruction (1939-) Agr45-111

A German scholar, now professor of agricultural economics at the Food research institute of Stanford university, surveys the history of world agriculture and food supply from the beginning of the first European war to the present, and offers suggestions and programs for agricultural policies in the postwar world.

"In order that one may not infer from this review that the author's conclusions are couched in terms of broad generalities, it should be emphasized that the book contains a wealth of detail pertaining not only to the agriculture of the regions actually visited by war, but to the major agricultural producing areas of the world. For students of international agricultural relations, and those interested in national agricultural policies, The Reconstruction of World Agriculture should be granted high priority." Asher Hobson
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:805 Ag '45 650w

"The volume as a whole represents a competent summarization and appraisal of a vast amount of information on agricultural trends, beginning with the First World War, drawn from the author's high background in this field, and from the work of the Food Research Institute, the United States Department of Agriculture, and many other sources. In this probably lies the chief value of the book, rather than in the specific proposals for reconstruction." Eric Englund
+ Ann Am Acad 240:137 Jl '45 650w
Bookmark 6:4 My '45
Foreign Affairs 23:690 Jl '45 30w

Reviewed by J. K. Ableiter
Geog R 35:517 Jl '45 1200w

Reviewed by F. F. Hill
Nation 160:458 Ap 21 '45 500w

"Professor Brandt's readable volume is an outstanding study of the agricultural situation today. The author voices a number of strong opinions, yet adversaries will find it difficult to refute the vast documentation found here."
+ New Repub 112:854 Je 18 '45 180w

"Many people will surely be attracted by Karl Brandt's title, 'The Reconstruction of World Agriculture.' I am happy to report that their expectations will be highly rewarded. This close-packed book is written to help build an understanding and not merely to leave a residue of unassorted facts. It is well designed for business men, officials and teachers with responsibilities in the international area; but it deserves a much wider audience." C. M. Hardin
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 22 '45 1000w
Pacific Affairs 18:400 D '45 220w

"This book, by one of the world's foremost agricultural economists, should be required reading for all post-war planners, A.M.S. officers with European assignments, members of Congress, international bankers, and urban editorial writers. . . One strength of the book is that the author does not view agriculture in a vacuum. He spends a great deal of time in tracing out the inter-relationships between industry, credit and tariff policies, and agriculture, and vice versa. Moreover, he is cognizant of the larger social problems and objectives of the rural populations. This thinking he carries into the international field with equal clarity and warns that 'International policy must not be built around a system of moral postulates addressed to other nations, but must inevitably begin at home.'" E. deS. Brunner
+ Pol Sci Q 60:294 Je '45 1200w

"This is a book to be studied rather than merely to be read. It is crammed with statistical data, analyses of historical events and critiques of the economic policies adopted in various countries since the first World War. The complexity of the problem with which it deals is almost overwhelming, but its spirit is by no means one of defeatism. On the contrary, it is only through comprehension of the wide ramifications of the subject that success in making the necessary adjustments can be achieved."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 Ja '45 300w

"The book is probably the best to date on the all-important subject of food and agriculture in the postwar world. It is written in a style that will please not only the professional economist but likewise interest the general reader, bent on being intelligently informed about the vital issues at stake—issues which must be faced if we and the coming generation are to enjoy an era of peace." M. L. Wilson
+ Survey G 34:136 Ap '45 450w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:17 Je '45 240w

Reviewed by P. M. Wagner
Weekly Book Review p14 My 27 '45 1350w

"Industrialization and world trade: these are the two keys to agricultural prosperity in the United States and every where. Nor can the decision whether to use them or to revert to the pre-war system of self-sufficient national farm blocs, parity prices, and the exploitation of scarcity, be long delayed. European agriculture, except in the devastated sections of Russia and Poland, is in far better shape than is popularly supposed. British and Dominion food production has reached an all-time peak. It will be no time at all before we are face to face with the old problem of surpluses. Professor Brandt's book is a primer for all who would face it with knowledge and hope rather than superstition and dismay." A. W. Griswold
+ Yale R n s 34:565 spring '45 850w

BRANN, ESTHER. Book for baby [il. by the author]. [36p] $1 Macmillan

"Important happenings in the day of a small child—the coming of the milkman, playing with favorite toys, eating, bathing, buying new shoes—are told in colored pictures and a small amount of text. A good item for nursery school and parents' shelf." Booklist

Book Week p6 N 11 '45 100w
Booklist 42:39 O 1 '45
Kirkus 13:395 S 1 '45 90w

"A pleasant addition to the bookshelf for beginners in reading." A. M. Wetherell
+ Library J 70:821 S 15 '45 60w

"Esther Brann has a special gift for not saying too much in a book for babies, and of giving to what adults call common things the sweetness they hold for new eyes." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 19 '45 230w

Wis Lib Bul 41:128 D '45

BRANSON, HENRY C. Fearful passage. 249p $2 Simon & Schuster

45-10363

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p7 D 23 '45 180w

"Smooth going . . . though in retrospect the motivation is inconclusive."

+ — Kirkus 13:460 O 15 '45 170w

"Better than average."

+ New Repub 113:910 D 31 '45 60w

"The motive is a most unusual one. That is only one of the reasons why this story is so absorbing." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p16 D 30 '45 130w

"Deliberately underwritten, and just the thing to recommend to acquaintances who claim to be repelled by the hard-boiled school of detection."

+ New Yorker 21:84 D 22 '45 100w

"Worth your attention, if you don't demand sheer genius." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p24 D 9 '45 180w

BREBNER, JOHN BARTLET. North Atlantic triangle; the interplay of Canada, the United States and Great Britain. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of economics and history. Relations of Canada and the United States) 385p maps $4 Yale univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.—Foreign relations—Canada. Canada—Foreign relations—U.S. A45-1973

"It is, as the subtitle tells us, an account of 'the interplay of Canada, the United States and Great Britain,' from the days of the first white settlements in North America down to 1944. Prof. Brebner has traced in brilliant panorama the great story of the occupation of the continent, of the wars for sovereignty over its soil and the emergence of the United States and of Canada as nations. He has presented in even more thorough, well-documented fashion the history of the specific relations between these two nations and the third member of the 'North Atlantic Triangle,' Great Britain." (Book Week) Index.

"In view of the present need for close coöperation among the three major English-speaking powers, in both the political and economic spheres, Professor Brebner's concluding chapters are very timely. The consequences, domestic and international, of the economic and political isolationism followed by the United States after the close of World War I are strongly stated. Repetition of such policies now would be disastrous. The volume contains nearly forty excellent maps and diagrams, some of which have appeared in earlier volumes in the series. In addition, there is a valuable analytical bibliography." C. A. Riches

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1215 D '45 750w

"It's something of a pleasant surprise to find distinguished scholarship and good entertainment within the covers of the same book. Probably the proportion of professors who possess a sense of humor is as large as that of the similarly gifted in any other group of people; but somehow it seems that many of the professors who write books belong to the unhumorous fraction of the profession, with the result that too many weighty tomes are without a saving sparkle. 'North Atlantic Triangle' is a big book and a learned one. But it is continuously good reading, humanly interesting in spite of its big subject." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 S 23 '45 400w

Reviewed by J. P. Humphrey

Canadian Forum 25:192 N '45 900w

"It is happily written in a style that makes it absorbing and interesting."

+ Current Hist 9:324 O '45 220w

"Members of Congress should be required to read this book. So should members of Parliament in Canada and Great Britain. Because misunderstandings between nations—and it has been particularly true of the three in question—arise all too often from bad teaching of history and bad reading of history. 'North Atlantic Triangle' is a notable example of interpreting history from a point of view that is neither nationalistic nor yet aloofly internationalist." J. K. Gordon

+ Nation 162:50 Ja 12 '46 1150w

"A skillful interpretive summary of their labors, 'North Atlantic Triangle' is history-writing of unusual scope and sympathetic grasp. It would be misleading to represent it as a popular book, but those who have a special interest in Canadian-American affairs will find it pleasant to read and amply informing." Richard Hofstadter

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 26 '45 1150w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:30 D '45 500w

"The author had at his disposal all the specialized work of twenty-five authors on the various parts of his field. He has made good use of their labors. But his book is much more than a synthesis. It is an original product of his own high capacity, and a large contribution to the fuller understanding of past and present in North America." P. E. Corbett

+ Yale R n s 35:338 winter '46 900w

BRECHT, ARNOLD. Federalism and regionalism in Germany; the division of Prussia. 202p maps $2.50 Oxford

943 Germany—Politics and government. Prussia 45-11294

In this work the author examines the political make-up of pre-Hitler Germany, particularly in the light of the program set forth by the official Reform Committee of 1928-1929, which among other recommendations proposed the division of Prussia. The book concludes with a chapter containing Dr Brecht's own recommendations for the reconstruction of Germany politically.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 D 16 '45 70w

"Penetrating analysis, with rather strong emphasis on legal-administrative aspect, which merits serious consideration in the building of Germany's postwar structure. Of interest to historians, political scientists, and administrators. Useful appendices and maps." H. H. A. Bernt

+ Library J 70:977 O 12 '45 110w

Reviewed by R. S. Ullery

Springf'd Republican p4d N 11 '45 500w

BREED, CHARLES BLANEY, and HOSMER, GEORGE LEONARD. Principles and practice of surveying; v 1, Elementary surveying. 8th ed 717p il $4 Wiley

526.9 Surveying (45-3846)

"A slight amount of new material, revision, and a new chapter on Public lands surveys bring this handbook up to date, but do not make it an essential purchase for libraries owning the seventh edition." Booklist

Booklist 41:303 Je 15 '45

Eng N 135:127 Jl 12 '45 60w

Library J 70:220 Mr 1 '45 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:30 Ap '45

BREGER, DAVID. G I Joe (Private Breger). [96p] $1 Blue ribbon bks

940.5497 World war, 1939—Humor, caricatures, etc. 45-35035

Cartoons selected from The Stars and Stripes and Yank, showing G I Joe at the front.

"Just as G.I. Joe has done his share in morale-building at the front lines, so he may well do the same for the home front. Many a civilian reader will find relaxation and appreciative laughter in this new Breger collection." August Derleth

BREGER, DAVID—Continued

+ Book Week p10 Ap 8 '45 310w

Booklist 41:234 Ap 15 '45

"This collection is amusing throughout. Breger leaves to Mauldin and others the grimmer sort of humor. In his own line—nonsense and exaggeration—he's very welcome at home and abroad."

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 29 '45 110w

BREUNING, MARGARET. Mary Cassatt. See Cassatt, M.

BREVIG, TOLLEF LARSON. Apaurak in Alaska; social pioneering among the Eskimos; tr. and comp. from the records of [the author] pioneer missionary to the Eskimos of Alaska, from 1894-1917, by Walter Johnshoy. 325p il $3 Dorrance

917.98 Eskimos—Alaska. Alaska—Description and travel 44-51218

" 'Apaurak' means 'father of all.' It was the name given by the Eskimos to T. L. Brevig, who was a missionary among them from 1894 to 1917. He went to Alaska before the gold rush and did every kind of missionary work. The book is an arrangement and translation of his own records, which were written in 'a nonliterary Norwegian interspersed with Norse dialect, Swedish and Eskimo.' " Christian Century

Christian Century 61:1449 D 13 '44 140w

Foreign Affairs 24:164 O '45 30w

"As the self-portrait of a formidable personality gripped by 'a call,' Dr. Johnshoy's patchwork has a certain psychological interest." E. B. Garside

N Y Times p10 Mr 4 '45 110w

BRICENO, OLGA. Cocks and bulls in Caracas; how we live in Venezuela; il. by Kay Peterson Parker. 161p $2.75 Houghton

918.2 Venezuela—Social life and customs 45-35043

Life and customs among the upper class families of Venezuela is the subject of this small book by a Venezuelan correspondent and lecturer in the United States. The author was herself a member of such a family in Caracas, so she knows thoroly the ins and outs of the houses, courtships, religion, and social institutions of which she writes.

"This witty, gossipy book deals as little with cocks and bulls as with Caracas. What it does portray in a charmingly superficial way is the life of the people of Venezuela and particularly the author's well-to-do family." Angel Flores

+ Book Week p19 Ap 22 '45 250w

Booklist 41:253 My 1 '45

Bookmark 6:13 My '45

"Miss Briceno's prose is lucid and sparkling. She writes with admirable detachment and objectivity about activities and situations from which she is by no stretch of the imagination, detached." Mary Lasswell

+ Boston Globe p19 Ap 18 '45 270w

Cath World 161:444 Ag '45 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '45

"An intimate, all-over picture of Venezuelan life, colorful and revealing, this will give readers more feeling of knowing what our Venezuelan neighbors are like than any number of serious surveys."

+ Kirkus 13:100 Mr 1 '45 220w

"One has the sensation, in reading it, of taking part in an interminable telephone conversation with a talkative woman whom one knows to be charming and pretty. There are vivid passages of description, though for the most part the text is merely vivacious, with a conventional upper-middle-class point of view as to what is witty, humane, or interesting about a very limited range of experience. . . In the book's favor it must be said that it really does give an impression of upper-middle-class life in Venezuela and of people with whom persons of that class might be expected to come in contact." Ralph Bates

Nation 160:494 Ap 28 '45 210w

"The book has hardly a fact which would satisfy a sociologist, yet when you finish it you know how life would be in Caracas. If more about South America were written with such grace, gayety and intimate knowledge, the path of our mutual understanding would be less thorny. Except for occasional stumbling in dialogue, the work of the translator, whose name is not given, is excellent." Mildred Adams

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 8 '45 900w

"Despite the brevity of this book we learn an immense amount about life in Venezuela. Its nontechnical make-up includes no statistics on oil production, literacy or wages, but the very roots of the country's material and psychological life appear as one after another incident in the intimate life of the Briceno family is described." S. M. Gross

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 15 '45 480w

"Pleasantly humorous and non-statistical report on Caracas life."

+ Time 45:104 Mr 26 '45 20w

" 'Cocks and Bulls in Caracas' is a good title, but it would be hard to choose one less suggestive of the atmosphere of Olga Briceno's picture of life in Venezuela. To find a precisely suitable name for this charming group of informal talks would be to run the risk of being either too precious or too sentimental. . . In spite of its charming informality, 'Cocks and Bulls in Caracas' affords an excellent picture of Venezuela's gradual emergence from autocracy toward popular political consciousness and the consequent improvement in educational standards, the status of women and public health care." Clare Godfrey

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Ap 22 '45 600w

Wis Lib Bul 41:82 Jl '45

BRICKELL, HERSCHEL, ed. See O. Henry Memorial award. Prize stories

BRIERLY, JAMES LESLIE. Outlook for international law. 142p $2 (6s) Oxford

341 International law 45-2107

"[An analysis] of the existing structure of international law and of the part international law will have to play in the peace settlement, written for the general public." Book Week

"A paraphrase of a single thesis can give only a very inadequate notion of the rich content of Professor Brierly's little work, which furnishes not only a badly-needed introduction to the study of international law, but also a summation of a theory of international law and relations which the author has developed over a period of a quarter-century. To those who await with eagerness everything that Professor Brierly writes, the ideas set forth in the present work will not seem new. The conservativeness of the writer's views and the cautiousness with which he frames his generalizations are all the more welcome during a period in which so much of the thinking on international affairs is dominated by the 'cynic or the sciolist.' " Lawrence Preuss

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1196 D '45 1000w

"This small volume must be recommended as a thoughtful study which, in taking account of the grim political considerations in which international law must operate, contributes much to a clarification of the problems of international organization." Edward Littlejohn

+ Ann Am Acad 240:141 Jl '45 550w

"A succinct and extremely able analysis." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 D 9 '45 40w

Reviewed by George Jaffin

Columbia Law R 46:162 Ja '46 210w

"This little book has all the merits we know that we shall find in a book by Professor Brierly. It is written with clarity and persuasiveness, it has the wisdom without the parade of great learning and it has about it a pungent effectiveness which does not seek to evade any of the issues. . . If the book has a weakness it lies in its failure to discuss the economic aspects of the sovereignty States insist upon retaining. But it is always suggestive in its ideas and there is a real stimulus in its cogency." H. J. L.

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 31 '45 100w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p253 Je 2 '45 1650w

BRIGGS, MARTIN SHAW. Building to-day. (Pageant of progress ser) 112p pl $2 (5s) Oxford

720.942 Architecture—England. Building A45-2995

Study of modern methods of building in England "as it was practised in 1939." Partial contents: The men who build; Planning; Style and fashion; Structure and materials; Keeping out damp; Keeping clean and saving labour; Communal housing; Private houses; Flats; Cathedrals and churches; Schools and colleges; Libraries; Town halls and county halls; Buildings for pleasure; Dealing with old buildings; Town-planning. Illustrated with photographs of modern English buildings and line drawings by the author. Index.

"Refreshing is the best way to characterize this little book by a British architect, which is one of a series on modern scientific development called the 'Pageant of Progress.' The author is writing about buildings in the British Isles, but many of his observations about architectural styles and building details will be found to be applicable the world over."

+ Eng N 135:127 Jl 12 '45 140w

"As a popular guide to current architectural practice Building To-day is perhaps the more generally useful for being conservative in outlook. It is certainly an excellent production at the price." D. S.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 22 '44 80w

"This book, which is written 'primarily for those who have not yet embarked upon their careers or decided what those careers shall be,' is distinguished by tolerance in attitude and moderation in tone. From internal evidence, not to speak of his other writings, it is clear that Mr. Briggs is on the side of what is called, rather ambiguously, tradition in architecture, but in both text and illustrations he is generous towards the best that the modern movement has produced."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p460 S 23 '44 420w

BRIMBLE, LIONEL JOHN FARNHAM. Flowers in Britain; wild, ornamental and economic, and some relatives in other lands. 393p il col pl $4.50 (12s 6d) Macmillan

581.942 Flowers. Botany—Great Britain 45-1725

The author is a former lecturer at the University of Manchester, and was for some years joint editor of Nature. His book is an "account of the form, structure, and classification of both the wild and the cultivated flowers in [Britain], with as much of their history, folklore, and literature as can be compressed in the available space; the text is admirably illustrated by numerous plates in colours, line drawings, and photographic reproductions, and there is a comprehensive botanical as well as a general index." (Manchester Guardian)

"There is a great deal informative and helpful to all interested in gardening and in our wayside, hedgerow, and woodland plants in Flowers in Britain." B. L.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 20 '44 150w

"Something of botany, something of gardens, something of wild flowers, folklore, literature, and plant relationships the world over—these are chief ingredients in a book as appealing in its conception and tone as it is varied in the information which it presents. One welcomes it the more because it departs boldly from the stereotyped molds in which most horticultural books are cast and, in so doing, achieves a fresh and distinctive flavor. . . Here is a volume you will be glad to own." R. S. Lemmon

+ Weekly Book Review p23 S 9 '45 180w

BRINDZE, RUTH (MRS ALBERT W. FRIBOURG). Gulf stream; il. by Helene Carter. 63p maps $2 Vanguard

551.471 Gulf stream—Juvenile literature 45-5219

Traces the history of the Gulf stream in picture and story from the fifteenth century on, and brings out the importance of the stream as "an international highway for fish and a factory for weather." For ages eight to twelve.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p11 Jl 15 '45 230w

Booklist 41:323 Jl 1 '45

Bookmark 6:16 Ag 1 '45

"A fascinating account of the great river that flows through the ocean, bringing warmth to northern Europe, making a highway for fish, affecting even the weather. Helene Carter's beautiful pictures are enough to tempt anyone into this by-way of geography." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:276 Jl '45 40w

"A distinctive volume outstanding for the illustrations by Helene Carter which are rampant with lush beauty. Her fine awareness of flora and fauna added to the talent for making the smallest drawings seem spacious, deep and full of movement, combine to give real feeling to the natural subjects. The text is lively and sparkles with historical bright spots."

+ Kirkus 13:316 Jl 15 '45 110w

"Attractive, beautifully illustrated, well-written book." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 70:688 Ag '45 70w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 Je 24 '45 180w

New Yorker 21:138 D 8 '45 60w

"An interesting and informing text and lovely drawings."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:71 N 10 '45 20w

Scientific Bk Club R 16:4 Jl '45 180w

"For the first time in this reviewer's experience the perennial mystery of the Gulf Stream—for so it is to a fascinated child—has become the subject for a book for them that is alluring to eye and mind. . . Perhaps the best feature of the book is that with all it tells, it leaves a tantalizing sense that some day we will learn a great deal more about the warm blue river in the dark, cold sea." M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p5 My 20 '45 200w

BRINIG, MYRON. You and I. 474p $3 Farrar 45-9227

Until Eric Whitney was eight years old he believed himself to be the son of Jim and Elizabeth Whitney and Claire's brother. And then shortly after he learned he was an adopted child, both children were made orphans, and Claire went to live in New York and Eric was taken by Jim Whitney's brother to Montana. After years of separation and quite different ways of living, however, the two finally come together again in the little adobe house in New Mexico where they had spent their happy childhood.

Reviewed by Albert Halper

Book Week p33 N 11 '45 550w

Booklist 42:110 D 1 '45

"A synthesis of the generation, minus the bite and incisiveness of Fitzgerald, but giving a kaleidoscopic review of the social, economic, aesthetic values of pre- and post-war eras. Human, real in the youth of its characters, and correlating with fresh backgrounds, Brinig's earlier books. No glamor, but honesty, in this backward look."

+ Kirkus 13:348 Ag 15 '45 250w

"Although structure has weaknesses it is interesting. Good story." Margaret Owen

+ — Library J 70:1024 N 1 '45 70w

BRINIG, MYRON—Continued
Reviewed by James Fuller
N Y Times p24 N 25 '45 500w

"Another of Mr. Brinig's big, exhaustively detailed banalities. . . Readable, though."
New Yorker 21:102 N 10 '45 40w

"You and I has amusing moments and non-stop action, but somehow it seems just to have been poured out of a big jug."
Time 46:106 N 19 '45 130w

"This new novel 'You and I' is the authentic Brinig—sturdy, supple, lavish, even voracious in its swift absorption and disgorgement of life." F. H. Bullock
+ Weekly Book Review p2 N 18 '45 500w

BRINK, CAROL (RYRIE) (MRS R. W. BRINK). Caddie Woodlawn; a play; dramatization of the Newbery medal book. 82p $1.25 Macmillan 812 45-9034

"In order to condense the story to meet the limitations of stage production a few characters and minor incidents were omitted and some episodes combined. The play is in three acts, requiring 19 characters. May be produced without permission of author by school and library groups not charging admission." Booklist

Booklist 42:78 N 1 '45
Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:465 N '45 80w

"The background material is excellent and there is plenty of good emotional appeal."
+ Kirkus 13:340 Ag 1 '45 40w
Library J 70:1089 N 15 '45 20w

"An excellent dramatization."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:81 N 10 '45 30w
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 O 7 '45 180w
Wis Lib Bul 41:113 N '45

BRINKLEY, STUART ROBERT. Introductory general chemistry. 3d ed 645p il $4 Macmillan 540 Chemistry 45-2626

"A college textbook with chapter exercises and supplementary readings, also a collection of problems. Throughout the book more emphasis is placed on industrial applications and processes than in the author's Principles of General Chemistry." N Y New Tech Bks

"A comparison of the table of contents of this edition with those of the first and second editions convinces one that the author is trying hard to find the best possible order of presentation of the material ordinarily included in a course in General Inorganic Chemistry. Whether or not he has solved the problem of order of treatment will, no doubt, depend upon the point of view of the individual teacher. At any rate, Professor Brinkley builds up a very good case for the particular order which he has chosen and proceeds, very logically and realistically from one topic to the next." C. H. Sorum
+ Am Chem Soc J 67:1044 Je '45 300w

"Brinkley's well-established and time-honored text appears in its third edition, increased in volume and material, attractively printed and bound. The subject matter is well presented and the outline follows more or less the conventional pattern." F. C. Nachod
+ Chem & Met Eng 52:216 Je '45 250w
Library J 70:307 Ap 1 '45 20w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:5 Ja '45

BRINNIN, JOHN MALCOLM. No arch, no triumph [poems]. 73p $2 Knopf 811 45-1622

The author, a Nova Scotian by birth, is an instructor at Vassar. In this collection of his poems "he essays big issues without pompousness or preaching, bringing to his search and creation all the varied resources of a highly articulate poetic technique. The results of his art have often a richly deployed and long-breathing musical texture, an orchestral sound that faithfully and well transcribes the movements of his questioning mind and its basically affirmative tone of deep-lying confidence." (Publisher's note)

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p4 F 25 '450w

"Not always immediately easy to grasp, these poems repay a little closer reading. They are contemporary in content and in form, perhaps resembling the disillusioned school of Auden and Eliot, but with an authentic personal note. The poet is particularly conscious of the ironical contrast between the cloistered study of the past and this 'season of actual war'. The poem which gives the volume its title is typical and particularly hard-wrought, certainly out of the groove of what one expects from lyric verse."
+ Kirkus 13:24 Ja 15 '45 100w

"Mr. Brinnin is an extremely competent, sometimes brilliant, exponent of form and tone-color, and what worries one about this new book of his is something else; it is the fact that it falls so much into a contemporary poetic 'fashion.' . . This is a poetry that wants to be cosmic, but also to sneer at the cosmic, and itself; and what it adds up to is something very like decadence. But Mr. Brinnin often proves himself to be much better than the fashion he follows, and one does not doubt that he will do so again." Conrad Aiken
+ — New Repub 112:453 Ap 2 '45 200w

"Comparing Mr. Brinnin's latest book with his 'The Garden Is Political' [Book Review Digest, 1942], one finds the same level style, intellectualized phrasing and effect as of a thoughtful speaker uttering disturbing observations calmly. Indeed, if there is any change from the style of the earlier book, it is that now the named scene or person which furnished the theme of a considerable number of the earlier poems less often appears. A philosophizing abstractness has somewhat gained upon Mr. Brinnin. . . This style of dry (in the sense of the French sec) statement seems to me to need a counterpoise of concrete detail if it is to produce its maximum effect." F. C. Flint
+ — N Y Times p10 F 25 '45 400w

Reviewed by Jeremy Ingalls
Poetry 66:32 Ap '45 900w

" 'No Arch, No Triumph,' is an improvement on 'The Garden is Political' which was, I believe, his first book. Mr. Brinnin apparently belongs to the very exacting school which verges upon the belief that poetry should be more or less non-representational, should create something apart from the reality with which even poets are compelled to live. This is a perfectly sound belief and has served as dogma for some of the best modern poets. It is, however, a very exacting doctrine and one which demands a great deal of the poet. Mr. Brinnin appears to regard it as a short cut to distinction, which it can hardly be." Raymond Holden
Sat R of Lit 28:28 Mr 24 '45 150w

"It is possible that it is still too early to attempt to assess the obvious talents here displayed. For one thing, the shadow of Auden's devices of irony still lies large across these pages. For another, Mr. Brinnin strains considerably to make his work significant in a public sense. These two factors have done a good deal to make it difficult to see exactly what kind of a poet Mr. Brinnin actually is. It is clear, however, that he is a poet."
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:6 Je '45 100w

BRINTON, CLARENCE CRANE. The United States and Britain; maps prepared under the cartographic direction of Arthur H. Robinson. 305p il $2.50 Harvard univ. press
327.73 Great Britain—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Relations (general) with U.S. U.S.—Relations (general) with Great Britain A45-5302

"Professor Brinton of Harvard, who spent two years in England on a wartime mission, offers an unemotional exploration of Anglo-American affairs and the chances for a durable working relationship between the two nations. The book is a plea for closer coöperation with Britain. This coöperation, the author says, should stop short of any agreement . . . which would exclude Russia or anyone else. The author believes that we should help rebuild a strong, prosperous England—not necessarily a strong British Empire—and he briefly outlines the political and economic means of doing it." New Yorker

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Ja 6 '46 230w
Booklist 42:158 Ja 15 '46

"Professor Brinton's book is a remarkably lucid and penetrating account of Anglo-American relations. While much of its content is or should be familiar to every educated reader, many of the facts presented are unusual and even startling. . . The pertinence of the material and the delightful style in which the book is written increase one's surprise that the author should have indulged in so many doubtful if not inaccurate judgments." E. M. Burns
+ Christian Century 63:48 Ja 9 '46 600w
Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 9 '46 550w

"Professor Brinton's book is admirably suited to the purpose announced for the Foreign Policy Library. It is at once simple and accurate. It contains mostly undisputed fact, or opinion which is widely acceptable to the thought of the two countries. It contains a minimum of speculation, and it avoids complicated problems whose solution must depend upon technical knowledge. It is in a high degree readable. It is well designed to guide American public opinion toward an enlightened and humane attitude concerning the relations between the two English-speaking nations. Men of international good-will must hope that it will accomplish its purpose." G. H. Sabine
+ N Y Times p3 D 23 '45 1300w
New Yorker 21:67 D 29 '45 120w
Reviewed by Norman Angell
Sat R of Lit 28:19 D 1 '45 2700w

"More valuable, because more original, is Mr. Brinton's explanation of the impact of the war upon British economy and upon the relations of Britain to her empire and the rest of the world." H. S. Commager
+ Weekly Book Review p1 D 9 '45 1450w

BRO, MRS MARGUERITE (HARMON). Let's talk about you. 213p $1.50 Doubleday
170 Conduct of life. Girls 45-35055

Discussions and friendly advice on matters of interest to teen-age girls. Partial contents: Homework (how to study); Making a new habit stick; Unsticking an old habit; Escape devices; You—and work; Work and marriage; Sophistication; To have and to hold. Parts of the book have appeared in modified form in the magazine Calling All Girls.

"Here, if ever, is a handbook of good sense for girls from 12 to 18." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p13 Je 3 '45 310w
Booklist 41:247 My 1 '45
Bookmark 6:16 Ag 1 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '45

"Frank, thoughtful, well-written, a book which faces the normal problems of a girl in the teens. . . But there's a notable lack of mention of war work—after school hours, or defense or war jobs, which are vitally interesting to teen-agers today. Apart from that—its an eminently readable book, which will make girls think about themselves—and others."
+ — Kirkus 13:36 Ja 15 '45 170w

"Entertainingly written, but format not inviting. Recommended." R. O. Bostwick
+ Library J 70:415 My 1 '45 70w

"Mrs. Bro's book is written with humor and imagination, out of quick perception and a wide acquaintance with girls of high school and college age. It will come to girl readers like a personal word from someone who understands. . . The author clinches her points by citing pertinent and convincing instances. Her figures of speech are apt, her use of quotation skillful. And her attitude toward the girls for whom and of whom she writes is always fair, reasonable and friendly. Compact and dignified in appearance, this little volume is one that girls will enjoy owning and keeping at hand." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p25 Ap 15 '45 270w

"'Let's Talk About You' is a lot of common sense. As you start to read the book, notice how well the chapters fit their titles. Note the interesting bits of prose and poetry brought in to clarify an idea. You will agree that the author has something to say and that you have a responsibility to fulfill." G. C. Kaynor
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 3 '45 180w
Wis Lib Bul 41:54 My '45

BROBECK, FLORENCE RICHARDS. Serve it buffet. 288p $2 Barrows
641.5 Cookery. Menus 44-40217

Recipes and menus suitable for self-service meals. Partial contents: Soups; Fish; Chicken and other fowl; Meats and their garnishes; Vegetable dishes; Eggs and light dishes; Curries and rice; Salads and dressings; Griddlecakes and waffles; Sandwiches; Sauces; Desserts; Beverages. Index.

Booklist 41:134 Ja 1 '45
Bookmark 6:7 Ja '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '45

"In these servant-less days, every meal of the day can be advantageously, and gayly, served buffet style, contends the author. And that goes for family meals and for guest affairs. Recipes and menus are offered for both simple and ambitious affairs." H. P. H.
+ J Home Econ 37:237 Ap '45 50w

"'Serve It Buffet' should be satisfying to a variety of hostesses with large or small apartments. . . There is an excellent recipe for oyster and potato soup, and the dessert recipes sound painfully good." L. M. Palmer
+ N Y Times p14 F 25 '45 90w

BROCH, HERMANN. Death of Virgil; tr. by Jean Starr Untermeyer. 493p $5.50 Pantheon bks.
Virgil (Publius Vergilius Maro)—Fiction 45-8650

"Mr. Broch, whose trilogy, 'The Sleepwalkers,' caused a certain amount of stir when it was published a few years ago [Book Review Digest, 1932] has written a long prose poem (this isn't an exact description, but I don't know what else to call it) based on a single incident—the death of the author of the 'Aeneid,'—that sets out to explore all the currents and conflicts of the Augustan Age by exploring the ramifications of Virgil's thought, which are hardly less complicated, as he lies on his deathbed." New Yorker

Reviewed by M. E. White
Canadian Forum 25:217 D '45 750w
Reviewed by Max Fischer
Commonweal 43:361 Ja 18 '46 550w

"It is difficult to convey the levels of experience this reveals, wrapped as they are in words and sentences of deep musical content, a drenched dream-like quality. The work of a gifted, sensitive man, a recapitulation of a life and an age, but it mournfully lacks any lightness or lucidity or even great originality. Appeal to poets chiefly."
Kirkus 13:269 Je 15 '45 250w

"We are profoundly indebted to Jean Starr Untermeyer for her truly heroic and largely successful labors in translating The Death of Virgil, a story that consciously and powerfully attempts to deepen the bases of the novel in its destined role of modern tragedy, modern epic, modern poem." Waldo Frank
+ New Repub 113:226 Ag 20 '45 2500w

"In the wide reaches of the American nation there must be surely many readers who will appreciate the immensity of an adventure story such as this. It should be a corrective to our fundamentalism, our departmentalism. The work—part of it was written in a German concentration camp—should command a vast respect. Jean Starr Untermeyer, poet translator of the original, has combined her knowledge of language with her deep understanding of Broch's intellectual intention in every phrase. The result is opalescence, by no means inaccessible to any man who has loved 'Paradise Lost' or 'The Golden Bough' or other works transcending time." Marguerite Young

BROCH, HERMANN—Continued

+ N Y Times p1 Jl 8 '45 1450w

"This sort of literary ambition is more European than American, possibly because of our truncated sense of history and what would appear to be a native suspicion of anything that suggests the turgidly heroic, and I suspect that Mr. Broch, at best, is going to have a rather limited audience. This is unfortunate, because, while this tidal remembrance of things in the ancient past is frequently just a bit too much to contend with, it is perhaps the best novel by a European since Thomas Mann's 'The Magic Mountain.'" Hamilton Basso

+ — New Yorker 21:64 Je 23 '45 1400w

"This is an important book, concerning which the reviewer ventures to make the conventional prediction: 'The Death of Virgil' will be deliberately and elaborately ignored, violently and unfairly attacked in certain quarters, hesitatingly praised with many qualifications in others, and at length recognized for what it is, a work of great learning, remarkable psychological understanding, and startling symbolical subtlety." Leonard Bacon

+ Sat R of Lit 28:11 Je 30 '45 750w

"It is not an easy book to read. Jean Starr Untermeyer in her remarkable and beautiful translation has adhered closely to the rhythm and structure of the original German, and these great surging sentences, piling meaning on meaning, can overwhelm the careless reader. Even the more appreciative, seduced by the magic of rhythm and sound, may lose hold of the idea which binds together these rolling subordinate clauses." W. H. H.

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 15 '45 550w
Time 45:88 Jl 2 '45 650w

"Mr. Broch's solution to an old semantic problem consists in a style whose enormously long sentences and cadenced repetitions suggest the continuous, unanalyzed nature of the reality they describe, and in which the great predominance of adjectives and substantives over verbs gives the impression of something that timelessly is, rather than of something that acts and becomes within the world of successive events. This stylistic device is fully successful where it is used in comparatively brief passages that alternate contrastingly with passages of straight narrative. But there are, unfortunately, two long sections of the book where Mr. Broch makes use of it for many pages at a stretch. The result is bewildering." Aldous Huxley

+ — Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 8 '45 1050w

"With a style so ornate and complex, so symbolical and abstract that mere meaning is buried deep beneath cairns of Teutonic rhetoric, Mr. Broch makes use of the dying poet only as a mouthpiece for his own Delphic ideas. As a work of literature, even as a method of communication through printed words, The Death of Virgil is a grandiloquent failure. But it should not be dismissed without recognition of its merits. There is a dark beauty in these cloudy pages, a passionate sincerity, a vaulting grandeur of ambition that have a dignity of their own." Orville Prescott

— + Yale R n s 35:190 autumn '45 280w

BROCK, EMMA LILLIAN. Umbrella man [il. by the author]. [48p] $1.25 Knopf

45-3160

Story for young children about the little man who both fixed and mixed umbrellas, and the results of his peculiar sense of humor.

Book Week p23 Je 3 '45 220w
Bookmark 6:16 Ag 1 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '45

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:272 Jl '45 50w

+ — Kirkus 13:201 My 1 '45 110w

Reviewed by Margaret Miller
Library J 70:491 My 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by M. C. Skinner
Library J 70:951 O 15 '45 20w
Sat R of Lit 28:33 Jl 14 '45 220w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 1 '45 150w
Wis Lib Bul 41:86 Jl '45

BRODERICK, JOHN THOMAS. Willis Rodney Whitney, pioneer of industrial research; with foreword by Karl T. Compton. 324p il $3 Fort Orange press, inc, 883 Broadway, Albany 1, N.Y.

B or 92 Whitney, Willis Rodney 45-9519

"Life of Whitney told mainly in his own words, his early life, his theories of scientific progress. The story chiefly concerns his achievements in the General Electric research laboratory developed by him and called the 'House of Magic.' Dr. Whitney, inventor of the metalized filament and one of the foremost pioneers of industrial research and productive scientific enterprises, received many honors and medals, among them the Franklin Medal, the Edison Medal, and, in 1943, the coveted John Fitz Medal." (Library J) Index.

"This book gives an interesting sketch of an extremely interesting and able man. Whitney set the standard for a research director, possibly for all times." W. D. Bancroft

+ Am Chem Soc J 67:2277 D '45 650w

"A series of formal portraits moving in stately procession through the book's pages. Each is true, quite as true as a single frame taken from a motion picture and retouched to give it portrait quality; but it is a little disappointing to one who has seen the picture in action now to be given its motionless individual frames. The collection in one place of a large number of Whitney's writings and sayings is valuable. Mr. Broderick's labors in bringing this material together provide a great well of inspiration from which man can profit in the future." D. H. Killeffer

+ — Chem & Eng N 23:2264 D 10 '45 650w
Library J 70:1090 N 15 '45 80w

"Willis Rodney Whitney is rich material for an engrossing biography. The author should be commended for his style, the wealth and arrangement of information contained here and above all for the complete picture conveyed of the man."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:4 D '45 480w

BRODIE, FAWN (MCKAY) (MRS BERNARD BRODIE). No man knows my history; the life of Joseph Smith, the Mormon prophet. 476p il $4 Knopf

B or 92 Smith, Joseph. Mormons and Mormonism 45-9481

Taking as her title a phrase from a sermon by Joseph Smith himself, the author has attempted to discover as much of the truth concerning Joseph Smith and the beginnings of Mormonism, as can be found in an intensive research into documents, diaries, unpublished manuscripts, etc. Her work is a sober, mainly impartial, study of the man and his strange career.

Reviewed by E. S. Watson
Book Week p3 N 25 '45 400w
Booklist 42:147 Ja 1 '46

+ Kirkus 13:351 Ag 15 '45 230w

"Inherently sensational material treated with taste, skill and scholarship." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 70:1086 N 15 '45 110w

Reviewed by Marguerite Young
Nation 161:630 D 8 '45 700w

"Whether Mrs. Brodie has told the story which Joseph felt he could never tell is a question that may have to wait for an answer on further developments in the field of psychology. Meanwhile, she has ably presented her thesis in a biography that is well worth reading." Vardis Fisher
+ — N Y Times p5 N 25 '45 1800w

"Mrs. Brodie writes about Joseph Smith objectively and entertainingly, but because of her preoccupation with him she never quite explains what the Mormon religion is and what makes it work."
+ — New Yorker 21:109 N 24 '45 200w

"Joseph Smith's story is all he says of it—so fundamentally incredible that notwithstanding the million present-day Mormons and the stupendous literature about him, one is sometimes persuaded that no such person ever existed. But in Mrs. Brodie's book an eminently human and entirely understandable being stares into peepstones, communes with God . . . and has his people distinctly to understand that a prophet is a prophet only while he is working at the job. The result is the finest job of scholarship yet done in Mormon history and perhaps the outstanding biography in several years—a book distinguished in the range and originality of its research, the informed and searching objectivity of its viewpoint, the richness and suppleness of its prose, and its narrative power." D. L. Morgan
+ Sat R of Lit 28:7 N 24 '45 1600w

"Mrs. Brodie has a wide knowledge of the social matrix of Mormonism. She has the first requisite for the historian, profound sympathy for the Mormon people, and the other indispensable one, objectivity about their history. . . But also she has written as a detached, modern intelligence, grounded in naturalism, rejecting the supernatural. All this adds up to the best book about the Mormons so far published; it is in a class by itself. Nevertheless, the book has deficiencies and colorations of varying degrees of seriousness. Extensive as Mrs. Brodie's knowledge of the America of the 1830s is, it is not adequate to protect her from a number of misunderstandings." Bernard De Voto
+ — Weekly Book Review p1 D 16 '45 1250w

BRODY, ILES. On the tip of my tongue. 274p $2.50 Greenberg

641.5 Cookery 44-51200

The food columnist of Esquire combines personal experiences and recipes in this collection of articles on food and cooking for gourmets. Contents: Literary canapées; Hors d'oeuvres; Eggs; Crustaceans; Soups; Fish; Carving; Meat; Fowl; Game; Sauces; Vegetables and salads; Breads; Desserts; Wine; Coffee; La bonne bouche. No index.

"The collection is definitely not for the inexperienced cook, but for one interested in culinary arts, both in practice and as fascinating reading. . . This volume is not one that will become dog-eared with use, but on occasion will offer that one rare combination that will give zest and excitement to a commonplace meal." E. R.
Book Week p10 N 26 '44 180w

Booklist 41:182 F 15 '45

"Iles Brody's book . . . only indirectly helps out on meatless Tuesdays. A whole carp, suckling pig, Biftek Bercy don't appear often in the average larder these days. Nevertheless, Mr. Brody's happy experiences in many frugal kitchens throughout the world (and in restaurants where the great dish is made from the simple things) show the fine possibilities of lesser cuts of meat and of eggs and fish. His instructions are not always definitive; he gives the veritable recipe for goulash, for instance, but doesn't say how much paprika to use." L. M. Palmer
N Y Times p14 F 25 '45 180w

BRODY, SAMUEL. Bioenergetics and growth; with special reference to the efficiency complex in domestic animals. 1023p il $8.50 Reinhold

636.084 Metabolism. Growth Agr45-358

"Book, a co-operative effort of the Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station and a private foundation, is probably most valuable published book on the growth and energy metabolism in relation to animal husbandry and nutrition. Charts and tables give evaluation on results of extensive researches sponsored by the Herman Frasch Foundation for research in agricultural chemistry. Methods and equipment used. Some subjects are energy and nitrogen metabolism, energetic efficiency of production processes, aspects of growth, aging, and factors influencing efficiency." Library J

Chem & Eng N 24:102 Ja 10 '46 50w

Library J 70:1090 N 15 '45 100w

"The book will have little interest for the casual reader, but for one seeking information on the vital processes whereby the animal body becomes a transformer of energy, converting feedstuffs into growth, work, or animal products, it is a treasurehouse."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:52 D '45 320w

BROGAN, DENIS WILLIAM (MAURICE BARRINGTON, pseud). The free state; some considerations on its practical value. 130p $2 Knopf [6s Hamilton, H]

321.8 Democracy. Liberty 45-6535

"Discusses the character of the free state, argues persuasively that it is the best form of government devised by man, and explains why the Germans have never been able to develop such a state and why they are not likely to do so in the near future." Publisher's note

"Mr. Brogan has written a book that plainly will be gratifying to those who enjoy the comfortable illusions engendered by self-righteousness and self-adulation. . . Mr. Brogan pursues his theme in a style that is frequently vivid and vigorous, sometimes persuasive, often more glib than profound." J. H. Hallowell
— + Am Pol Sci R 39:1198 D '45 750w

"This little book, without the understanding and the good humor that have usually characterized his work, is unworthy of the highly gifted pen of Dr. Brogan. We all have our off days, even the reviewer; and on this occasion Dr. Brogan is far off the beam." C. E. Merriam
— Ann Am Acad 242:167 N '45 350w

Reviewed by W. F. Morse
Book Week p6 S 2 '45 420w

Booklist 42:4 S '45

Reviewed by Donovan Richardson
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 21 '45 550w

Reviewed by Anne Freemantle
Commonweal 42:599 O 5 '45 700w

Kirkus 13:288 Jl 1 '45 150w

Reviewed by H. J. Bresler
Nation 161:235 S 8 '45 360w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf
New Statesman & Nation 29:340 My 26 '45 480w

"Mr. Brogan is one of the few writers who have seen what the American T. V. Smith has seen: namely, that the politician is the only practicable middleman between constitutional theory and pragmatic action. The first two chapters of 'The Free State' are a superb statement of the practical working plans of a free society. The best part of the tract is not that it is directed against the German people, but that it can be directed toward American reactionaries. If the reader can but be persuaded not to turn complacent because he is not, thank God, like the Germans, he will find in this book a manual for political action far more permanent than the original occasion of the book." H. M. Jones
+ N Y Times p4 Ag 19 '45 1300w

BROGAN, D. W.—Continued

"A short lecture, more readable than profound, on the structure, character, and general operation of the democratic state."

+ New Yorker 21:62 Ag 25 '45 80w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

Sat R of Lit 28:10 Ag 18 '45 750w

"This excellent book is a defence of the Free State against those who think that liberty can be bartered for efficiency." E. L. Woodward

+ Spec 174:388 Ap 27 '45 700w

Reviewed by S. H. Walker

Survey G 34:488 D '45 280w

"As a contribution to the re-education of Germany, the book has many virtues and one signal defect. Professor Brogan speaks of the English idealist, like T. H. Green, as 'embedded in a pragmatic society which saves him from the worst dangers of his trade.' Professor Brogan is himself even more deeply embedded and he does not always succeed in removing himself far enough from the environment of liberal democracy, which is so congenial to his temperament, to make a critical assessment of the merits of liberal democracy possible or even to make that system intelligible to those not already familiar with it."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p193 Ap 28 '45 1300w

"For the free peoples themselves this little book is a wholesome tonic. It will help to rebuild faith, faith with open eyes. The range of Mr. Brogan's scholarship and his fertility in illustration make it illuminating and liberating, and its candor and good temper a model of political argument." W. A. Neilson

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ag 19 '45 700w

BROMFIELD, LOUIS. Pleasant Valley; with drawings by Kate Lord. 302p $3 Harper

630.1 Farm life. Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 45-3100

In this book which is in part made up of autobiographical reminiscence, in part exposition of his theories of farming and farm life, a noted American writer relates how after many years spent abroad, he returned to his native Ohio and there built up a new home and a new way of life founded on the old ways of the pioneer American farmer.

"Mr. Bromfield's knowledge of agricultural and world conditions, with which his professional, political, and economic interests brought him in touch, is that of a sentimental conservative who has a love of the soil but who thinks at heart that the laissez faire of Smith and Ricardo will solve the complicated problems of our times. Like any other farmer, he has every right to his opinion, but it is well to remember that it is strictly the opinion of an amateur." Angus Cameron

Atlantic 175:129 Je '45 360w

"The book achieves as a whole a constructive expression of one American's positive faith in a permanent American agriculture based on a satisfying rural life." J. T. Frederick

Book Week p10 Ap 15 '45 500w

Booklist 41:265 My 15 '45

"Pleasant Valley has the quality of a long, familiar essay without its defect—the tendency to make much of nothing and to use style as an end in itself. It is full of delightful glimpses into animal life, nature—rabbits feeding on the terrace in the winter moonlight, a muskrat swimming across the pond at night, a possum hiding in the tree with its little ones, looking like so many clowns, ducks and geese nesting among the forsythia, a raccoon coming down to the pond at night to wash its face. This is a wise and beautiful book, a book that is too good to miss." N. E. Monroe

+ Cath World 161:187 My '45 250w

"A charming and entertaining as well as an informative book." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 9 '45 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '45

"The major part of his book is the story of the way he and his helpers have succeeded in rebuilding a house, the soil and all the accessories of rural life on a farm in mid-Ohio. It is a rich and varied description, interspersed with anecdotes of early pioneer legends and with incidents from Mr. Bromfield's years of living in France and India. . . 'Pleasant Valley' is a testament of the power of the good earth." Emerson Hynes

+ Commonweal 42:170 Je 1 '45 950w

"The book has charm—much of it is good reading—the human bits of biography are folklore and legend in the making. Some sections are intended, primarily, for the serious agriculturist, the specialist. Much of it is too detailed for the average layman (certainly for Bromfield's average reader). But, for dipping in—scattered reading, it forms an intimate introduction, a close-up portrait of a man and a way of life."

+ — Kirkus 13:45 F 1 '45 360w

"Some materials have gone into his The Farm and numerous magazine articles, but their recapitulation in book form remains fresh and lively reporting. Recommended." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 70:305 Ap 1 '45 110w

Nation 160:464 Ap 21 '45 60w

"What weakens the book is not Mr. Bromfield's practical knowledge but the mysticism of his political philosophy. He makes many general statements which, under investigation, dissolve into nothingness. He talks too much of racial stocks, for example, too much of the blood in his veins and what that peculiar inheritance implies. His dream of returning to the soil is somehow bound up with various repugnances to various aspects of peoples." Marguerite Young

+ — N Y Times p5 Ap 8 '45 1100w

"Perhaps the book is the answer to critics who have found Mr. Bromfield's later work too slick, too carefully contrived, too Hollywood. 'Pleasant Valley' is straight from the heart with no eye on the box office. . . It follows the interests of the author, from European scenes and personalities to delightful accounts of the visiting wild life at Malabar. It is romantic with a vengeance when treating of the good earth and man's relation to it, it is bitter and disillusioned about world politics, and it is sensitively perceptive when it deals with the 'stories' of people." Graham Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 28:56 Ap 14 '45 900w

Reviewed by A. H. Fuller

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 8 '45 700w

Time 45:100 Ap 9 '45 380w

"A crusading book? Certainly it's a crusading book—and an important one. A book that every countryman and every gardener should read and get excited about. And the best of all is that it presents the Bromfields as a well knit, highly intelligent American family, who are having a whale of a time. Their theme song—sung over their own-grown wheatcakes and bacon—is 'Oh, what a beautiful mornin'.'" Richardson Wright

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ap 8 '45 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 41:51 My '45

BROMHALL, WINIFRED. Belinda's new shoes; il. by [the author]. [31p] $1.50 Knopf

45-7579

Story of a nice little girl who longed for a pair of slippers, instead of the heavy black shoes her grandmother bought her for school. When Belinda was elected to lead the spring festival, grandma counted pennies and bought beautiful new slippers. Then came the accident, and the damage repaired just in time. For ages five to seven.

Booklist 42:39 O 1 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '45

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 21:451 N '45 80w

Kirkus 13:296 Jl 1 '45 130w

"Recommended as a delightful addition to stories with folk tale qualities." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 70:821 S 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by M. C. Skinner

Library J 70:950 O 15 '45 30w

"The little story has a happy ending, as is only right in one conceived in such warm understanding of the things which lie close to a little girl's heart. Children of 5 and up will enjoy this and will like the comfortable curves of the author's drawings." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p18 S 2 '45 150w

"One of the nicest things about this attractive picture book is the harmony between pictures and text. . . The book is well made with pictures on every page, faint greens and browns printed on an ivory paper." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:44 O 20 '45 200w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 19 '45 230w
Wis Lib Bul 41:113 N '45

BRONSON, WILFRID SWANCOURT. Turtles; il. by [the author]. [63p] $1.75 Harcourt 598.13 Turtles—Juvenile literature 45-6768

Facts about turtles, especially the turtles of the United States, with illustrations by the author. For young readers.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p11 Ag 19 '45 200w
Booklist 42:22 S '45
Bookmark 6:16 Ag 1 '45
Churchman 159:7 N 15 '45 20w
Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '45

"The facts are scientific and interesting to any age, but they are chosen especially for the younger children, printed in large type and illustrated with accuracy and humor. Turtles are such odd and curious creatures that children are generally fascinated by them. They will love Mr. Bronson's informing book." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:347 S '45 70w

"Here's a man who knows what can and should be done and owes it to his market to sustain a higher level of intelligent, scientific presentation."
+ Kirkus 13:297 Jl 1 '45 90w

"The different kinds of turtles and many other interesting points are discussed for the youngest children with humor and scientific accuracy. Recommended." G. E. Joline
+ Library J 70:688 Ag '45 60w

Reviewed by M. C. Skinner
Library J 70:952 O 15 '45 40w

"Mr. Bronson's many books on natural history for readers from 8 to 13 have never failed to find eager readers. This his latest volume is written for still younger children, though their older brothers and sisters and even adults also will enjoy this artist-naturalist's turtle portraits with their fine clarity and humor." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p21 Jl 29 '45 100w

"The volume, with its big type, is designed for the youngest readers, but it will inform and entertain the whole family."
+ New Yorker 21:128 D 8 '45 50w

"An informing book for younger boys and girls. Clear, amusing drawings on every page."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:73 N 10 '45 20w

"This is one of the most informing and amusing of Mr. Bronson's introductions to natural history. Whatever he says—in this case in twenty-four-point type—he promptly puts into pictures, and these, without departing from facts, manage always to infuse them with a certain gayety." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 5 '45 300w
Wis Lib Bul 41:86 Jl '45

BROOKING, WALTER J. Arc welding, engineering, and production control. 347p il $4 McGraw 671 Electric welding 45-98

"This volume is concerned with the organization and operation of industries engaged in the mass production of welded equipment, rather than with actual welding operations and techniques. The discussion is based largely on methods evolved by the firm of R. G. Le Tourneau, Inc., and covers such topics as selection of welding equipment, arc-welding specifications, material control and costs, jigs and fixtures, inspection, training operators, shop fixtures, location of literature dealing with welding problems." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 69:1002 N 15 '44 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:15 Ja '45

BROOKS, GWENDOLYN. A street in Bronzeville. 57p $2 Harper 811 45-7550

A first book of poetry by a young Negro poet, who was born in Topeka, Kansas, and now lives in Chicago.

Booklist 42:53 O 15 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '45

"This slim volume of verse by a Negro poetess is gifted, passionate and authentic."
+ Kirkus 13:306 Jl 15 '45 110w

"We have, in 'A Street in Bronzeville,' a good book, and a real poet." Rolfe Humphries
+ N Y Times p14 N 4 '45 320w

"She writes with style, sincerity, and a minimum of sentimentality. Her city-folk poetry is particularly fresh."
+ New Yorker 21:88 S 22 '45 50w

"All in all, despite the fact that this first book has its share of unexciting verse, there are considerable resources evidenced for future work. Miss Brooks, to use one of her own phrases, 'scrapes life with a fine-tooth comb.' And she shows a capacity to marry the special quality of her racial experience with the best attainments of our contemporary poetry tradition. Such compounding of resources out of varied stocks and traditions is the great hope of American art as it is of American life generally." A. N. Wilder
+ Poetry 67:164 D '45 420w

Reviewed by Starr Nelson
Sat R of Lit 29:15 Ja 19 '46 800w

"Miss Brooks's poetry strikes one with the force and power of her compatriot, Richard Wright's, prose. Her poems are unusual and memorable." C. M. Sauer
+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 30 '45 220w
Wis Lib Bul 41:99 O '45

BROOKS, RICHARD. Brick foxhole. 238p $2.50 Harper
45-4537

The "brick foxhole" is a barracks in the United States. In one such foxhole a company of Marines are sweating out a period of inactivity, the hero being one Jeff Mitchell. Jeff is an artist who is not slated for active service and the situation is driving him crazy. In a wild week end in Washington, D.C. he attempts to paint the town red, is accused of murder, and is only saved thru the patience of an understanding wife and a prostitute who provides an alibi.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 176:133 Ag '45 180w

Reviewed by E. D. Branch
Book Week p11 Je 17 '45 600w
Boston Globe Je 13 '45 180w

"An intense, sustained job of analysis."
Kirkus 13:142 Ap 1 '45 170w

"This is a pretentious book, tough on the outside and soft on the inside. . . Sergeant Brooks's hero would be more sympathetic if he were less of a jerk. He represents a class of intellectuals who interpret the world in terms of their own navel. The other characters are equally without depth; there are a great many high-sounding and undoubtedly well meaning words about anti-Semitism and truth and prejudice of all kinds, but they are spoken by people interested only in themselves." Walter Bernstein
— New Repub 113:109 Jl 23 '45 500w

"Mr. Brooks is an angry man and he seems to have spent great energy in his writing; his prose jerks across the page like a horse being

BROOKS, RICHARD—Continued
whipped. His subject-matter is highly interesting and he writes out of first-hand experience. Yet the effect that he achieves is dim, cheap, second-hand. He tries to tell a story of frustration and spiritual decay in terms of the hardboiled action story. Most of the characters are straight from the tough fiction factory. . . Mr. Brooks is a man who may have music in his head, but certainly has none in his fingers. He exhausts his creative energy by furiously pumping out a third-rate version of 'Frankie and Johnnie' on the player piano." D. S. Norton

— N Y Times p17 Je 3 '45 450w

"This is a good theme for a novel, and, since it must have occurred to any number of writers in the armed forces, a good novel may someday be written about it. The field is still wide open. Mr. Brooks, having come upon the theme, does little more than kick it around. . . Although Jeff shows many of the signs of a man headed for a psychoneurotic discharge, Mr. Brooks never once presents him as a psychoneurotic—in fact, there are times when the author seems to imply that Jeff is one of the few healthy-minded men in his outfit—and his peculiar behavior is too absurd for belief." Hamilton Basso

— New Yorker 21:75 Je 2 '45 1300w

"Such a background, treated by an author not yet released from it, could easily have inspired a book that was peevish or dull or both. Sergeant Brooks's book is neither. It is angry, rapid, stream-lined, and beautifully written; it is tough without self-consciousness and bitter without irritability and it has a mood in it which looks like the mood of the best of the new stuff coming out of this war and which is as different from that of any other war as modern camouflage paint is from the colors worn by Wellington's dragoons. . . Richard Brooks is a good writer and a real find for his publisher. If he goes on developing, as I think he will, he may some day be a most important one." Niven Busch

+ Sat R of Lit 28:12 Je 2 '45 1100w

"This is Richard Brooks's first book, and in it he has shown himself a master at dramatic use of language. His words and phrases move along at an intense pace which is exhausting for the reader to follow. But by that hard manner of writing, he imparts to the reader the feeling of nervous energy which keeps men in service from going to pieces." Tom McEnroe

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 22 '45 480w

"This is a somewhat unusual thesis and Sergeant Brooks could have made it stronger by peopling his brick foxhole with a less discreditable array of characters. The soldiers in 'The Brick Foxhole' have already so far deteriorated that when the reader meets them it's hard to feel sympathy for them." Herbert Kupferberg

Weekly Book Review p6 My 27 '45 550w

BROOKS, WALTER HENDERSON. The pastor's voice; a collection of poems. 391p il $2.15 Associated pubs.

811 Religious poetry 45-6354

"There are at least 400 poems here, written by the man who, until his recent death at 94, was probably the oldest Protestant minister in active service in the United States. Born in slavery, Dr. Brooks was minister of the Nineteenth Street Baptist Church in Washington for 63 years. His poems are marked by the simplicity, strength and tenderness of his faith. When he turns to the rhythms characteristic of spirituals, they are genuinely moving." Christian Century

Christian Century 62:861 Jl 25 '45 80w

Springf'd Republican p4d S 30 '45 250w

BROOKS, WALTER ROLLIN. Freddy and the popinjay; il. by Kurt Wiese. 244p $2 Knopf 45-8209

Freddy, the intelligent pig from Mr Bean's farm in Centerboro, once more flashes into action when J. J. Pomeroy, the robin, mistakes Freddy's tail for a worm. For ages eight to twelve.

Kirkus 13:422 S 15 '45 80w

Reviewed by Phyllis Fenner
Library J 70:953 O 15 '45 30w

Reviewed by E. M. Gordon
Library J 70:980 O 15 '45 60w

BROWN, EARLE B. Optical instruments; with a foreword by James G. Baker. 567p il $10 Chemical pub. co.

681.4 Optical instruments 45-7043

"A survey of the design, function, and adjustment of various types of optical instruments such as the telescope, binoculars, microscope, theodolite, spectroscope, and range finder. Writing for the layman rather than the optical or mechanical engineer, the author discusses the principles of optics in terms which are comprehensible to the reader with limited scientific background, and relegates the more complex mathematical proofs to the appendix." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 70:890 O 1 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:37 Jl '45

"For the reader making his first contacts with optical instruments, either in school or in field and laboratory practice, this book should serve as a useful introduction."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:64 D '45 320w

BROWN, FRANCIS JAMES, and ROUCEK, JOSEPH SLABEY, eds. One America; the history, contributions, and present problems of our racial and national minorities. rev ed 717p $5; to schools $3.75 Prentice-Hall

325.73 U.S.—Foreign population. U.S.—Nationality. Minorities. U.S.—Race question. U.S.—Immigration 45-3207

"With a new title indicative of the unity brought about by war, this book appears with extensive revision and new material, and some additional contributors. This compendium of information about our foreign population should be useful in many libraries." (Booklist) For earlier edition with title: Our Racial and National Minorities, see Book Review Digest, 1937.

Am Hist R 50:849 Jl '45 100w

"The proofreading of this edition was poor. The format is improved. It still seems to be the best available text for courses in its field, but not for courses limited to race relations. The postwar period, however, already begins to call for a new edition; events are too fast, nowadays, for our textbooks!" T. D. Eliot

Am J Soc 51:343 Ja '46 1100w

Am Soc R 10:574 Ag '45 200w

Reviewed by W. C. Smith
Ann Am Acad 240:181 Jl '45 400w

Booklist 41:271 My 15 '45

"The Brown and Roucek book seems to me practically indispensable for one who takes seriously the duty of being informed and intelligent in regard to the many-colored fabric of American life. To some extent it is not yet a fabric, certainly not a completed one, but a collection of rich materials waiting to be woven." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 62:654 My 30 '45 550w

Current Hist 9:47 Jl '45 50w

Foreign Affairs 24:163 O '45 20w

"A useful basic book—though somewhat pedagogic in style now and again. Valuable statistics and bibliography."

+ — Kirkus 13:119 Mr 15 '45 150w

"The last two sections comprise for the most part routine discussions of the origin and nature of group conflict and methods of combating it. The complacent tone of some of these surveys would belie the need of the present moment, which is a new methodology of combating prejudice. Because of its comprehensiveness 'One America' is a convenient and in many respects a useful volume. It could have been a better one." E. N. Saveth

+ — Nation 160:578 My 19 '45 420w

"As a handy one-volume reference, 'One America' will unquestionably fill an important need. For it assembles a mass of factual information; is carefully indexed; contains some excellent charts, graphs, and tables; and includes some valuable bibliographic notes. Aside from its general utility as a reference, however, 'One America' fails to fulfill the specifications which the editors themselves have established. Considered as a comprehensive source-book, the work has two major weaknesses, one related to the method employed, the other to the content of the materials collected." Carey McWilliams

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:14 My 26 '45 1600w

Social Studies 36:284 O '45 60w

Reviewed by Marshall Bragdon

Springf'd Republican p4 Je 23 '45 650w

Wis Lib Bul 41:97 O '45

BROWN, GERALD. Murder in plain sight. 256p $2 Phoenix

45-4558

Detective story.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 Je 10 '45 130w

Sat R of Lit 28:28 Je 2 '45 40w

BROWN, HARRY PETER M'NAB. Artie Greengroin, Pfc. 212p il $2.50 Knopf

940.5496 World war, 1939—Humor, caricatures, etc. 45-5878

A series of sketches in which the author depicts a typical American private (Artie Greengroin) during his enforced sojourn in the British isles where he "was alternately bored, astonished, delighted and depressed by what he saw about him." "Most of these pieces about him appeared originally in the British edition of Yank, The Army Weekly; a few were reprinted in other Yank editions. I have added a number of episodes and rearranged the sequence of the chapters. Essentially, however, the story of Artie Greengroin is the same as appeared in Yank." (Author's note)

"As in Nize Baby, the humor lies half in the spelling and half in the situation, and the portrait of the Army which emerges is an amusing complement to Mr. Brown's admirable novel, A Walk in the Sun." Edward Weeks

Atlantic 176:135 S '45 180w

Review by Sterling North

Book Week p2 Jl 22 '45 440w

Booklist 41:340 Jl 15 '45

"Perfect antidote for low moments—but don't take an overdose all at one time."

+ Kirkus 13:227 Je 1 '45 210w

"Artie Greengroin may have some value as evidence that men in uniform do not necessarily write freshly or knowingly about the business of soldiering. Some civilian critics, it should be noted, have greeted the book with glad, twittering, if slightly patronizing, little cries. What that is evidence of I wouldn't know. In any case, it would seem safe to recommend Artie only to civilians who have led a very sheltered mental life." Herbert Lyons

New Repub 113:198 Ag 13 '45 360w

"Despite the fact that both deal in one fashion or another with American soldiers of the second World War, two books could hardly be more different than 'A Walk in the Sun' and 'Artie Greengroin, Pfc,' and together they indicate pretty obviously that their author is one who has as much versatility as he has talent." Richard Watts

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 15 '45 1100w

"The reflections of Artie Greengroin on practically every situation in which an American private stationed in English might conceivably find himself do not seem as funny in the publisher's formal getup as they did in the more casual setting of Yank, but, at that, they are pretty funny."

New Yorker 21:59 Jl 21 '45 80w

"Few things in Army humorous writing can touch the best episodes in 'Artie Greengroin, Pfc.'—Artie in the guardhouse, at the movies, waiting to meet a duchess, cooking Spam and brussels sprouts, giving his views on supply sergeants. These sketches are a laugh-filled mixture of witty lines and character drawing that have a wry flavor all their own. Other pieces—on prose style, ditch-digging, and war weariness—have their good spots, as do even the weaker and repetitious selections. Compared to the peak items, though, the less successful sketches make one wonder once more why publishers to fill out a volume persist in including material that dulls the high lustre of the best in a book." Maurice Basseches

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:17 Jl 21 '45 700w

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 15 '45 360w

"Artie and his glib earthiness are frequently amusing. . . His weekly appearance in Yank was a popular one. But untraveled civilians who try to read 51 of his adventures at a sitting will find the laughs wearing thin. Author Brown himself puts a finger on the weakness of his book as civilian entertainment when he notes that Artie's 'character was appreciated by those who were living with someone like him and listening to him every day.' "

+ — Time 46:104 Jl 23 '45 400w

Reviewed by Herbert Kupferberg

Weekly Book Review p2 Jl 15 '45 800w

BROWN, IVOR JOHN CARNEGIE. A word in your ear, and Just another word [Eng title: Book of words]; with a foreword to the Am. ed. by J. Donald Adams. 2v in 1 136;128p $2.75 Dutton [6s Cape]

422 English language—Words 45-7876

"Mr. Brown, the editor of the London Observer, has compiled two anthologies (bound together for the price of one) dealing with the origin and mutations of certain words. One word, he has discovered, leads inevitably to another, and it has amused him to collect some whose meanderings seem particularly interesting—staddle, stalwart, stolchy, and stour, for instance." (New Yorker) Part 1 was first published separately in England in 1942, part 2 in 1943.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 172:125 O '43 120w (Review of pt 1)

Book Week p2 S 30 '45 200w

Booklist 42:6 S '45

" 'A Word in Your Ear' is that unusual thing, an anthology of words. Anthologies of poetry, anthologies of prose, we have had in plenty; but an anthology of the terms out of which both poetry and prose are made is a rarer matter. In this volume, which is as witty as it is learned, Mr. Brown makes a collection of words that have pleased him, and furnishes each with an agreeable and sometimes provoking little essay." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 O 24 '42 600w (Review of pt 1)

Christian Science Monitor p16 O 20 '45 700w

Kirkus 13:352 Ag 15 '45 150w

Manchester Guardian p3 S 9 '42 180w (Review of pt 1)

"Many of Mr. Brown's words in this volume will be new, I imagine, to most of his readers, and to each word he has appended a charming essay in miniature." B. I. E.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 10 '43 200w (Review of pt 2)

"Despite his addiction to words, Mr. Brown seems oddly insensitive to verbal magic among his contemporaries. Who in the last fifty years have been the most word-intoxicated of English writers? Joyce and Virginia Woolf, without a doubt; and before them, Meredith and Hopkins. But while regretting the decay, etc., of language Mr. Brown doesn't mention any of these; or rather, there is one passing reference to Hopkins. And the most world-intoxicated critic? Logan Pearsall Smith. Again, Mr. Brown doesn't seem to have learnt from him. He is engaged in looking back to Elizabethan glories out of our grey, grey present. However, such reflections do not spoil the discoveries one makes by reading A Word in Your Ear." G. W. Stonier

New Statesman & Nation 24:160 S 5 '42 1250w (Review of pt 1)

BROWN, I. J. C.—Continued
Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer
+ New Statesman & Nation 27:13 Ja 1 '44 950w (Review of pt 2)

"This is a book of enthusiasms, with which readers will agree and disagree, talk about, quote from. It is not all scobberlotchery from the days before neo-classicism put Tudor English into the stocks, scaring it into the tame thing from which 'Finnegans Wake' and 'Variety' are extreme reaction. The anthology is comely with such happy remarks as 'Rose is a word which always reverberates beautifully,' and 'Scottish poetry rumbles with wames.' It is a book for the alphabeticall, what Ivor Brown is fond to call the clerisy. Only literate folk can truly relish the depths of deferential respect behind the wine merchant's 'A reverend, indeed an episcopal, Burgundy,' or the melancholy beauty of Housman's use of bereave in 'All the woods that autumn Bereaves in all the world.'" Horace Reynolds
+ N Y Times p7 S 9 '45 950w

"J. Donald Adams, in his introduction, finds all this delightful, and the stolchy-and-stourminded, as well as those who have an interest in peregrine, pickthank, and pinchbeck, probably will too. Even those who have a hard time remembering the difference between etymology and entomology could do worse than give it a try."
+ New Yorker 21:88 S 8 '45 120w

"Mr. Brown's two volumes in one are such a delightful adventure that I have purposely omitted unraveling a number of unusual words in this review. They were taken from Mr. Brown's anthology. I commend you for their meaning to his agreeable pages, which are properly introduced with a most appropriate foreword by Mr. J. Donald Adams." Donald Armstrong
+ Sat R of Lit 28:54 O 13 '45 750w

"A fascinating book. . . Incidentally—or, it might be, primarily—the book is a plea for better writing, especially in official documents and statements or in expositions of a public nature. Not only cumbersome archaic language, which clings to official utterance by reason of long custom, but even worse, a new vocabulary of verbal monstrosities are targets of Mr Brown's darts. And he sure has got something there."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 S 11 '45 330w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p12 S 30 '45 450w

"Admirers of 'Trivia' and 'More Trivia' by Logan Pearsall Smith have not, I suspect, ever found a suitable companion volume to place beside them on their shelf. Ivor Brown's 'A Word in Your Ear' and 'Just Another Word,' now combined in one volume for the American public, is surely the desired item. . . I like the whole book and the charm of the man who cared enough to write it." David McCord
+ Yale R n s 35:372 winter '46 850w

BROWN, MRS JEANETTE (PERKINS). Friendship magic; il. by Janet Smalley. 128p $1; pa 60c Friendship press 45-4811

Collection of stories for young readers to illustrate friendliness among the children of different races and classes in America.

Christian Century 62:710 Je 13 '45 20w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Johnson
+ Library J 70:639 Jl '45 70w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. House of a hundred windows [a book of paintings; story by M. W. Brown] cat and architecture by Robert deVeyrac; pictures by Henri Rousseau [and others]. $1.75 Harper

759 Paintings—Juvenile literature 45-4227

Fifteen paintings by different modern artists reproduced as the scenes a little black cat saw out the windows of the house where he lived. The brief story is by Margaret Wise Brown; the pictures of the little cat and his immediate surroundings are by Robert deVeyrac. An introduction to art for very young children.

Book Week p20 Je 3 '45 130w

"An original and fascinating book designed to introduce young children to contemporary art by a novel method. . . The pictures, happily chosen for their action, as well as their beauty, are all without color." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:273 Jl '45 90w

"A quaint little story, not too sugar-coated which does bring fine art to small persons."
+ Kirkus 13:159 Ap 1 '45 170w

"Adults will find it a novel method of introducing art to children. Small children for whom it was intended will doubtless find it lacking childlike appeal." Margaret Miller
+ Library J 70:491 My 15 '45 70w

"This is not the first book to introduce painting to children but it is, so far as I know, the first addressed to a very young audience, and an original one it is. Through the eyes of a little cat who lived in a house of a hundred windows the young child sees a variety of landscapes, some filled with the mystery which bewitches youth, some gay, some downright baffling. . . Such a forward-marching step toward the enjoyment of art deserves applause even though one may not wholly endorse its total result." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p18 My 6 '45 270w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Little fisherman; a fish story; with il. by Dahlov Ipcar. [32p] $1.50 Scott, W.R.

In large pictures and small, with brief text, this book relates the story of how two fishermen went out to fish, a big fisherman and a little fisherman, and how when they came home the big fisherman told his children a little fish story, and the little fisherman told his a big one.

"This book is a perfect gem—a rich and charming tale, colorfully illustrated by Dahlov Ipcar. It is a masterpiece of harmony and balance that will appeal to every child's natural love of beauty, rhythm, humor and a good yarn." Naoma Zimmerman
+ Book Week p21 N 11 '45 230w

"Not a whole lot to the story but small children will like the constant comparison between 'big' and 'little' in text and pictures."
Booklist 42:78 N 1 '45

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:451 N '45 40w
Kirkus 13:420 S 15 '45 130w

"The illustrations by Dahlov Ipcar are excellent." M. C. Skinner
+ Library J 70:952 O 15 '45 90w

"There is a rhythm and balance about this book that appeals to children of six and seven or younger years." M. F. Cox
+ Library J 70:1036 N 1 '45 70w

"These are pictures to be enjoyed by adults as well as children; boys and girls, however, will take especial delight in discovering the well-chosen details in each picture, clearly presented without clutter or confusion. The simple story which accompanies the drawings has the element of contrast pleasing to children as well as the repetition they enjoy." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p35 O 7 '45 100w

"We are told that children collaborated on the scenario; for this there is internal evidence, as it repeats just enough to please and ends on a laugh."
+ Weekly Book Review p8 N 11 '45 150w

BROWN, ROSE JOHNSTON (MRS ROBERT CARLTON BROWN). American emperor; Dom Pedro II of Brazil; il. by C. B. Falls. 265p $2.50 Viking

B or 92 Pedro II, emperor of Brazil—Juvenile literature 45-8431

A biography of Dom Pedro II, emperor of Brazil from 1831 (when he was a child of five) to 1889 when he abdicated. The book is written for readers of high school age.

Booklist 42:78 N 1 '45

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 43:125 N 16 '45 60w

"Rose Brown has written an absorbing story of Dom Pedro's national leadership, as well as of his family and personal life." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:465 N '45 120w

Kirkus 13:340 Ag 1 '45 130w

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus
Library J 70:1028 N 1 '45 70w

"As Dom Pedro II is presented here, he is a human and appealing figure; indeed the author manages to make all the members of the royal family convincing and very much alive." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p26 O 21 '45 110w

"Rose Brown must be steeped not only in Brazil and its history, but in the tales and traditions and customs of the people, to have presented a man and a nation so convincingly that the reader feels he has lived a bit of his life in Brazil and knows well that amazing man, Dom Pedro II. . . The woodcuts by C. B. Falls have great strength. Here is an exhilarating book for the whole family." R. A. H.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:75 N 10 '45 550w

BROWN, SLATER. Talking skyscraper; il. by Oscar Fabrès. (Hyperion bk) 48p $2 Duell 45-4612

Picture story book for the very young in which the hero is an ill-mannered skyscraper named Algebra. In order to attract attention Algebra began to sing lustily, and it took the Mayor and all his wise men to avert a tragedy.

Reviewed by G. E. Joline
Library J 70:639 Jl '45 50w

"'The Talking Skyscraper' begins well . . . The pictures by Oscar Fabrès are drawn with zest and a pleasant absurdity; but the story depends heavily on mere incongruity and lacks the logic of true nonsense." A. T. Eaton
+ — N Y Times p18 Jl 8 '45 120w

"A story a parent with a sense of humor will love to read to a little boy. A five-year-old may not understand all the words, but he will be much impressed by them and get the idea at once. I hope the idea doesn't spread among skyscrapers." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Je 17 '45 350w

BROWN, SPENCER. They see for themselves; a documentary approach to intercultural education in the high school. 147p $2 Harper

371.3 Education—Experimental methods. Education—Aims and objectives. Culture 45-4712

"An account of a novel method of procedure in establishing friendly and cooperative attitudes among diverse racial and religious groups on the basis of firsthand information. Prejudice thrives in the dark. This method, developed and practiced in the Ethical Culture schools in New York, aims to turn on the light of knowledge." Christian Century

"The study as a whole is a credit to the Bureau and to its author. It is one of the most intelligent, useful, and critical pieces of writing in the field of social science education that has appeared in a long time." E. S. Johnson
+ Am J Soc 51:173 S '45 750w

Am Soc R 10:456 Je '45 30w

Reviewed by Leo Shapiro
Book Week p10 Je 24 '45 400w

Booklist 41:316 Jl 1 '45

Christian Century 62:654 My 30 '45 70w

"This book is a 'must' for every group leader, every teacher who is awake to the seriousness of the racial and cultural conflicts in our country." J. E. Henderson
+ J Home Econ 37:593 N '45 170w

School & Society 61:286 Ap 28 '45 50w

"One leaves the book with the feeling that there is much more work to be done in the important field of intercultural relations if we are to remain united in a single ideal of democratic action. Pioneer books such as this are important in marking fields in which further development can be carried on by others. Teachers of social science would do well to familiarize themselves with such appraisals if they are serious in their efforts to work toward the socialization of their students." J. R. Brown
+ School R 53:497 O '45 1050w

Social Studies 36:332 N '45 40w

Wis Lib Bul 41:109 N '45

BROWN, STEPHEN JAMES MEREDITH, and MCDERMOTT, THOMAS. Survey of Catholic literature. (Science and culture ser) 249p $2.50 Bruce pub.

809 Roman Catholic literature—History and criticism
45-4394

"A running commentary on Catholic writing from the beginnings of the Christian era to the present time." Wis Lib Bul

"To present an intelligible and enlightening survey of this gigantic field in a volume of less than 300 pages is a feat so difficult and so delicate as to seem almost impossible. Yet there is no denying that on the whole this new volume of the Science and Culture Series succeeds extremely well. . . Inevitably, perhaps, there are little slips of fact and of proportion, especially in the contemporary field. It is disappointing to find more space given to Katharine Tynan than to our great but strangely misprized Coventry Patmore, to find scant appreciation of Padraic Colum and none at all of Abbé Dimnet." Katherine Brégy
+ — Cath World 162:89 O '45 550w

"It is to be hoped that enough readers will be sufficiently exasperated by 'A Survey of Catholic Literature' to make use of the reading lists which follow each chapter. They can be tremendously useful to the ordinary man wishing to learn something of the variety and the significance of a literature truly catholic." T. A. Kirby
+ Commonweal 43:217 D 7 '45 550w

Review by T. S. Hanrahan
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 22 '45 180w

Wis Lib Bul 41:82 Jl '45

BROWN, WENZELL. Dynamite on our doorstep; Puerto Rican paradox [il. by Jack Crane]. 301p $2.75 Greenberg

917.295 Puerto Rico
45-10329

"Wenzell Brown went to Puerto Rico in 1936, taught for two years and then went to China. He returned to the island in 1945, and now tells what he saw in a most critical period of Puerto Rican history." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by David Karno
Book Week p20 D 2 '45 750w

"It seems generally agreed by students of the question that there is nothing wrong with Puerto Rico which cannot be cured by a full dinner-pail and elemental hygiene. If Mr. Brown's book does nothing more than to bring the consciousness of our responsibility to a few more American minds, his work, for all its limitations, will have been worth while." L. J. Trese
+ Commonweal 43:211 D 7 '45 550w

"Especially timely because of the President's recent suggestion to Congress that Puerto Rico be allowed to choose by plebiscite its own destiny. Strikingly illustrated by Jack Crane, U. S. Army." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 70:1025 N 1 '45 70w

"This book is a piece of reporting of a rare and valuable kind. Mr. Brown is not only unsparing in his record of the miseries of the island; he is able to do justice to its extraordinary scenery and its flamboyant flora and fauna. And he not only had first-hand experience of the abject life of the people; he also observed, from inside, the barbaric Puerto Rican upper classes, mixed Spanish and Negro and other strains, the descendants of the early buccaneers." Edmund Wilson
+ New Yorker 21:60 D 29 '45 750w

BROWN, WENZELL—Continued

"It would have been easy to have allowed the presentation of the author's observations to deteriorate into a castigation of Puerto Rico or the United States. He chooses to present the picture, state a few facts, guide the reader's thinking, and let him draw his own conclusions. For that, for the interesting stories and experiences that are related, for the excellent drawings, this book is to be commended." Harold Fields

+ Sat R of Lit 28:18 N 10 '45 1350w

Reviewed by Edna Lonigan

Weekly Book Review p5 N 11 '45 550w

BROWN, WILLIAM ADAMS. How to think of Christ; a book for people who feel that there is more to be found in the Lord Jesus Christ than they are able to understand. 305p $3 Scribner

232 Jesus Christ—Person and offices 45-35005

"Taking the question put to the Pharisees: What think ye of Christ, as a starting point, the author traces some of the historic approaches to the subject such as The Christ of the philosophers, The Jesus of the historians, the lawyers' Christ, the soldiers' Christ, the Christ of the Saints, all leading up to: How to think of Christ today. A Religious book club selection." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Booklist 41:180 F 15 '45

"It is perhaps unrealistic to suppose that anyone will get a faith in Christ like Dr. Brown's simply from reading this book, in which a lifetime of reflection appears deceptively foreshortened. But it is not too much to hope that many will be guided in their ascent of the slopes of faith by this parting pointer from a veteran climber who has actually reached the top, so that he can report which paths stop short, and which of them lead up into the sunset glow where he stands beckoning." W. M. Horton

Christian Century 62:553 My 2 '45 1150w

Reviewed by F. J. Moore

Churchman 159:16 S 15 '45 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '45

"This book is particularly rich and rewarding to the reader because of its sympathetic appreciation of the many ways in which men have approached Jesus and sought to understand him. . . Many will gratefully accept this book—published posthumously and edited by Henry P. Van Dusen—as a fitting climax to a long and productive Christian life. For many years to come it will undoubtedly be a volume which students and laymen interested in the Christological problem will find of great significance." G. W. Davis

+ Crozer Q 22:171 Ap '45 1000w

Springf'd Republican p4 Ag 25 '45 300w

Wis Lib Bul 41:35 Mr '45

BROWN, WILLIAM FRANCIS. Retriever gun dogs; history, breed standards and training; upland game and waterfowl specialists; il. by Edwin Megargee. (Countryman press bk) 143p $3 Barnes, A.S.

636.75 Retrievers Agr45-320

"The selection and schooling of the entire retriever group of dog breeds is here dealt with by the author of 'How to Train Hunting Dogs.' " New Yorker

Booklist 42:91 N 15 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '45

Kirkus 13:292 Jl 1 '45 90w

New Yorker 21:67 Jl 7 '45 90w

Wis Lib Bul 41:110 N '45

BROWN, MRS ZENITH (JONES) (LESLIE FORD, DAVID FROME, pseuds). Philadelphia murder story. 250p $2 Scribner 45-3130

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p8 Ap 1 '45 110w

Booklist 41:238 Ap 15 '45

Bookmark 6:16 My '45

"Ingenious."

+ Boston Globe p17 Ap 25 '45 30w

Kirkus 13:76 F 15 '45 100w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 Ap 1 '45 140w

"Although the suspects, as a result, are legion, you won't have too much trouble in working out things for yourself. Under par."

New Yorker 21:92 Ap 14 '45 100w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 8 '45

"Leslie Ford wins our medal-of-the-month for this top-drawer story about the body found in the goldfish pool in the entrance lobby of the Curtis Publishing Company, Independence Square, Philadelphia. . . That charming widow, Grace Latham, tells the tale in her best style, improved if anything by the nature of her material." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p14 Mr 25 '45 300w

BROWNE, CHARLES ALBERT. Thomas Jefferson and the scientific trends of his time. 63p il maps pa $1.25 Chronica botanica

B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas 44-30321

"In this work, addressed primarily to students of agriculture, botany, and the related arts and sciences, Browne omits discussion of Jefferson's lifelong interests in philology, ethnology, architecture, law, economics, and certain other sciences and limits himself 'to a consideration (1) of Jefferson's relations, during the eventful period of his life, to several of the sciences that were grouped by him under the designation of Natural History, (2) of the influences that shaped his scientific culture, and (3) of how he himself, with remarkable vision, foresaw much of the future course of scientific progress.' " Chem & Eng N

Reviewed by T. L. Davis

Chem & Eng N 22:2127 D 10 '44 130w

"Jefferson's accomplishments as a practitioner and promoter of science are here treated with satisfying restraint. . . Most commendable is the rather full discussion of Jefferson as an agriculturist." R. H. Brown

+ Geog R 35:688 O '45 150w

"Dr. Browne's long services to the Department of Agriculture have especially fitted him to appreciate Jefferson's ideas applicable to agriculture, horticulture, animal husbandry, soil conservation, botany, etc." S. C. Lind

+ J Phys Chem 49:261 My '45 150w

BROWNE, LEWIS, ed. Wisdom of Israel; an anthology. 748p $3.95 Random house

892.4 Jewish literature—Collections. Hebrew literature—Collections 45-5682

A collection of excerpts from the works of Jewish writers from ancient times to the present. The excerpts chosen deal mainly with ethical or philosophical subjects.

Booklist 42:10 S '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '45

"Exceedingly valuable source book for teachers and rabbis—and for leaders of all faiths."

+ Kirkus 13:195 My 1 '45 380w

"Anthologies are generally spotty, even ones so encyclopedic as this, but Mr. Browne has nevertheless put together an impressive cross section of a most impressive literature."

+ New Yorker 21:66 Jl 7 '45 40w

"Any good anthology should challenge its readers to compile another. Mr. Browne's anthology within its limits and because of its provocativeness is very good indeed and deserves a long life." Marvin Lowenthal

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:10 Jl 21 '45 1600w

"In the present anthology Lewis Browne has brought together more than seven hundred pages of material to demonstrate the diversity of Jewish genius. Some of the material is ineffably sad, the product of ever present suffering and despair. But most of it rises above ghetto and gaberdine and expulsion to take its place with the superb and creative experience of the human spirit. . . If there is any quarrel with Mr. Browne it is because of the yardstick that he has set for his selection. . . Mr. Browne seems to go out of his way to dig up material which is primarily clever, which carries a punch line, and which is earthy. . . The chapter on Hasidic tales and teachings is made up mainly of wiseacre stories where the rabbis prove themselves masters of debating points. The section on Yiddish humor is even more unfortunate." A. L. Sachar

+ — Weekly Book Review p14 S 9 '45 850w

Wis Lib Bul 41:97 O '45

BRUERE, MRS MARTHA S. (BENSLEY). Your forests; with a foreword by Gifford Pinchot. 159p il $2.50 Lippincott

634.9 Forests and forestry—U.S. Agr45-141

Study of the importance of forests and forest products in American economic life, and of the importance of a forest program to the nation. Includes data on fighting forest fires. For high school students as well as adults. Index.

"A most readable book for anyone from 12 up."

+ Book Week p16 Je 3 '45 300w

Booklist 41:282 Je 1 '45

Bookmark 6:16 Ag 1 '45

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 21:276 Jl '45 120w

"A readable, well-documented book."

+ Kirkus 13:203 My 1 '45 130w

"Understandably and interestingly written, this book gives a wealth of information on the forests of our United States from many different phases of the industry. Format is good with excellent end papers and well illustrated with photographs. Fine for both high school and elementary school libraries." M. L. Goodwin

+ Library J 70:688 Ag '45 60w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p18 Jl 8 '45 130w

"For everyone, young or old, who cherishes our North American heritage of forest and woodland this is an important book. Out of a contagious enthusiasm and wide research Mrs. Bruere has written what might be called a biography of the forests of the United States and Canada. In his foreword Gifford Pinchot calls it 'a delightful book.'" M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:35 Jl 14 '45 270w

Wis Lib Bul 41:81 Jl '45

BRUFF, NANCY (MRS E. T. CLARKE). The Manatee. 251p $2.50 Dutton

45-8639

The story of a sadistic Nantucket whaling captain, whose whole life was changed by an experience dating back to his first voyage on a whaler. Only after many years did he succeed in rationalizing this experience, and then it was too late to mend his own life or the lives of those around him which he had tinctured with his strange hatred.

Reviewed by R. E. Danielson

— Atlantic 177:153 Ja '46 1750w

Reviewed by T. S. Winslow

Book Week p5 O 21 '45 1000w

Booklist 42:76 N 1 '45

"The plot is loosely constructed, with no really sympathetic character and slight motivation—but the picture of the times and of Nantucket, as whaling industry collapsed, is very well done."

— + Kirkus 13:376 S 1 '45 170w

"Although ably written, the coarse humor and violent lusts are not for the fastidious reader." H. G. Kelley

— + Library J 70:979 O 15 '45 70w

"All the faults of the born non-story teller are here in heaping measure: the marathon from mind-to-mind (until the reader is almost as groggy as the novelist); the continual naming of emotions; the tag-end of psychology masquerading as character; the 'salty' idiom, stuck like a forlorn raisin in a page of doughy dialogue; the apparent inability to realize that an adolescent heart-throb is no substitute for genuine feeling, that flagellation from without is no substitute at all for drama. 'The Manatee,' to put it mildly, would serve a class in novel-writing well, as a truly remarkable example of what not to do." William Du Bois

— N Y Times p30 O 21 '45 310w

"The ending is unsatisfactory. . . Nevertheless, a first novel by a writer of unmistakable talent."

+ — New Yorker 21:94 O 27 '45 200w

"It is a sad commentary on the ethics of the Tenth Muse, Advertisia, that a book like 'The Manatee' is foisted on a credulous public as 'already sweeping the country' and its author described as 'the talented, glamorous young writer all America is talking about.' It is enough to make honestly talented young writers, whose novels (infinitely superior to this 'bold, sweeping drama of vibrant love and corrosive hatred') languish unheralded and unsold, wonder just what literary merit has to do with the success of a book." S. H. Hay

— Sat R of Lit 28:36 N 17 '45 750w

Reviewed by E. H. Dexter

Springf'd Republican p4d O 28 '45 390w

"The story of Jabez and his Quaker wife Piety and their children and neighbors is lively reading, with fast action, exotic detail and bizarre incident. It should screen well. But the motif of a soul in torment is a theme which might well have challenged the power of a far more experienced novelist. Miss Bruff's first published story shows her capacity to spin a yarn that, I fear, is more likely to be remembered for its outré episodes than for the people she seeks to present." Mary Ross

Weekly Book Review p10 O 21 '45 400w

BRUNNER, EDMUND DE SCHWEINITZ, and others, eds. Farmers of the world; the development of agricultural extension. 208p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

630.717 Agricultural extension work

A45-4570

"The primary aim of this book is to discuss the most effective general approach which a government or a private agency can use in helping rural people solve their everyday problems. This approach is commonly called Extension. Considerable space is devoted to specific ways and means of carrying on extension but these are incidental to the primary aim. The basis of discussion throughout is within the democratic framework; namely, that the end of all extension activity is the growth and improvement of the individual rather than the fashioning of automatons who merely obey orders handed down from above. The authors . . . have asked two questions: First, what is the cultural background against which extension work must be carried on? Secondly, how can innovations desired by the people most easily become a part of their way of life?" (Foreword) Index.

Reviewed by O. D. Duncan

Ann Am Acad 242:191 N '45 450w

"A solid, heavy, well-written book." R. H. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 28 '45 500w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:50 D '45 340w

Reviewed by P. M. Wagner

Weekly Book Review p14 S 16 '45 550w

BRYAN, JOSEPH, and REED, PHILIP. Mission beyond darkness. 133p il $2 Duell

940.544 World war, 1939—Aerial operations

45-35113

In June 1944 a battle took place in the Philippines Sea between Admiral Mitscher's task force 58 and the Japanese fleet. This book describes in vivid detail one small portion of that battle, the attack by planes from the carrier Lexington on the Japs during the final hours of the battle. The book is based on the reports of individuals—pilots and crewmen of Air Group 16.

BRYAN, JOSEPH—Continued

Reviewed by G. A. Scheuer
Book Week p5 Je 24 '45 90w

Booklist 41:319 Jl 1 '45

"The night landings, the rescues, the intimate life aboard ship make thrilling reading; but, with it all, comes a better appreciation of the courage and character of these lads of naval aviation, who are doing things that no one else in history has ever done before." M. W. B.
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 9 '45 350w

Reviewed by B. A. Foster
Churchman 159:19 Jl '45 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '45

Foreign Affairs 24:162 O '45 30w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 21:366 S '45 80w

Kirkus 13:176 Ap 15 '45 170w

"This is a small book. But between its opening glossary of technical and slang terms and its final roster of flying fighters it packs dynamite. Lieut. Comdr. Joseph Bryan 3d, USNR, and Philip Reed unquestionably know their material. They know also how to keep their style from getting between subject and reader. The title of the book, which is on the phony side, is their sole concession to salesmanship." D. A. Stauffer
+ N Y Times p4 Je 17 '45 1500w

"The authors likely found themselves in the position of all war writers who are telling the story of one operation: they must get it on the market before other military advances destroy its timeliness or before someone else beats them to the story. With less urgency they would certainly have trimmed out the non-essential, frequently confusing, material that clutters the book, virtually burying the real story." Robert Schwartz
Sat R of Lit 28:40 Jl 7 '45 850w

"The authors scrupulously avoid fine writing or heroics. They hew to the line with almost the sparseness of a Western Union telegram. The result is fine writing and heroics and dramatics in quite another sense, shot through with honesty and factualness achieved by adherence to minute detail." G. W. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 1 '45 550w

Reviewed by G. W. Bragdon
Springf'd Republican p6 O 25 '45 360w

"'Mission Beyond Darkness,' for all its splendid account of the battle and the wild homecoming, puts as much emphasis on the human elements of the story as on the naval. It includes a roster of Air Group 16 and photographs of many of the men, as well as action pictures and maps of the engagement. As a final aid to understanding, there is a glossary of technical and slang terms for the benefit of those earth-bound folk who at this late date still don't know what such things as TBS and a Tail-End Charlie are." Herbert Kupferberg
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Je 24 '45 500w

BRYANT, ARTHUR. Years of victory, 1802-1812. 468p $4 Harper [12s 6d Collins]

942.073 Great Britain—History—1789-1820. France—History—Consulate and empire, 1799-1815. Europe—History 45-8031

This is the second volume of the author's trilogy devoted to England's wars with Revolutionary and Napoleonic France. For volume one: Years of Endurance, see Book Review Digest, 1942.

Reviewed by Stanley Pargellis
Book Week p6 S 30 '45 450w

Booklist 42:54 O 15 '45

Reviewed by W. P. Sears
Churchman 159:14 N 1 '45 180w

"This book reveals with incomparable clarity the horror that oppressed Europe for so many years, and her frantic efforts to encompass the fearful but inescapable Bonaparte. The author makes no comparison with the days for us just past, but the parallels are uncanny. May some writer a century hence tell with equal vividness, spirit and learning the tale of 'Years of Victory 1938-1945!'" E. C. MacVeagh
+ Commonweal 43:26 O 19 '45 500w

Current Hist 9:461 N '45 60w

Kirkus 13:289 Jl 1 '45 170w

"Mr. Bryant's great story has purified and refined his style and has lifted him above his earlier level. This is undoubtedly his best book, and a very good book too." A. J. P. T.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 17 '45 180w

"Mr. Bryant has told his story well except for occasional lapses into patriotic rhetoric. Drawing copiously on the abundant memoirs and diaries of the time, he gives a lively picture of the home front. His account of the complicated naval strategy of the war is excellent, and he does a good job in sustaining interest in the Peninsular War, reports of which usually make rather dreary reading for all but students of military history. At the same time scholarship has not been sacrificed to entertainment; Mr. Bryant's researches appear to have been extensive, and I cannot detect any serious inaccuracies in regard to facts. . . Its chief fault is the product of its author's ingrained assumption of British superiority." Keith Hutchison
+ — Nation 161:594 D 1 '45 850w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 29:80 F 3 '45 950w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger
N Y Times p4 S 16 '45 800w

Social Studies 36:332 N '45 20w

"This book has the larger merits and lesser defects of the first volume of Mr. Bryant's history. . . The great merit of the book is that it is alive. . . The defects of the book as a popular history could be corrected without much difficulty. I might point out three of them: (1) The narrative suffers from a lack of good maps and diagrams. (2) Mr. Bryant is apt to let his prejudices run away with him when he deals with internal questions, English or French. (3) A historian with a strong visual imagination ought to be on guard against overpainting his pictures." E. L. Woodward
+ — Spec 173:580 D 22 '44 750w

Springf'd Republican p4d S 23 '45 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p618 D 23 '44 2400w

"The charm of deeply rooted, slowly ripening growth is obvious in this book; all too obvious perhaps, but none the less potent. The style and method are those of the leisurely gentlemanly school, from Hume and Gibbon to Churchill and Trevelyan. The spirit is of the purest 1810 vintage, yet as fresh and modern as the first speech of Foreign Minister Bevin. Such a book enables us to understand the delightful and exasperating England of 1945, as well as the lustier, cruder and even more exasperating England of George III." Albert Guerard
+ Weekly Book Review p4 O 7 '45 950w

"The superlative victory of these years was that of the British navy. . . All this Mr. Bryant describes superbly well. By bringing the narrative down to the capture of Cuidad Rodrigo, he may be said, in the words of Mr. Churchill, to have reached the end of the beginning. It is to be hoped that he will soon finish the job." Alexander Thomson
+ Yale R n s 35:358 winter '46 850w

BRYN-JONES, DAVID. Toward a democratic new order. 288p $3.50 Univ. of Minn.

321.8 Democracy A45-4663

"The author conducts a discussion course on international relations at Carleton College, Northfield, Minn. His . . . book is a personal distillation of the arguments between him and his students during recent years. First he reviews the liberal tradition; then he re-examines the basic concepts of democracy.

Finally, in Part Three, he wrestles to reinterpret and reapply that part of the reviewed experience which may now be invoked to keep, or make, democracy dynamic." Book Week

Reviewed by Russell Lord
Book Week p30 N 11 '45 400w

"In a world afflicted with militaristic hysteria and atomic bomb jitters and looking forward to a policed world order to realize the 'freedoms,' this book is healthfully philosophical, provocative and profoundly practical." W. L. Bailey
+ Christian Century 63:17 Ja 2 '46 600w
Current Hist 9:547 D '45 950w

"The book is consistently on the side of the angels. It measures the dimensions of the democratic ideal accurately and is not unrealistic in analyzing the economic and international hazards which democracy faces in our technical civilization. Why, then, should it not have a more persuasive quality than it seems to possess? Perhaps it is just a little too pious and has the effect of a sermon which is consistently opposed to sin but not fully conscious of the strength of temptation." Reinhold Niebuhr
+ — Nation 162:21 Ja 5 '46 360w

BRYSON, GLADYS EUGENIA. Man and society; the Scottish inquiry of the eighteenth century. 300p $3 Princeton univ. press 301 Sociology. Philosophers, Scottish
A45-5326

"Professor Bryson of Smith College has taken the Scottish school of moral philosophers of the eighteenth century, of which Adam Smith and especially David Hume were the outstanding members, and has read their writings with care and candor to determine what of solid and enduring merit their 'mixed mode of thought' yielded. She is also, quite fortunately, interested in what John Dewey spoke of as 'the philosophical origin of the ideas which have in the past so largely governed special social studies . . . the intellectual framework within which the latter are carried on.' " Sat R of Lit

"The author is to be commended for her devotion to what must have been a long and tedious task, yet a task stimulating and satisfying. Her book is interesting, but not particularly easy reading. It is hardly casual." F. L. P.
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 D 10 '45 450w

"Professor Bryson's readable and deeply understanding volume will long stand as a significant chapter in the evolution of social science out of moral philosophy. It is an excellent exposition of the manner in which the impact of eighteenth-century Continental enlightenment upon shrewd Scottish intellect helped to push moral observation and generalization significant steps in the direction of social science." A. M. Lee
+ Sat R of Lit 29:12 Ja 5 '46 1100w
Social Studies 37:48 Ja '46 60w

Reviewed by S. C. Chew
Weekly Book Review p14 Ja 20 '46 450w

BRYSON, LYMAN, ed. See Conference on science, philosophy and religion. . . Approaches to national unity

BUBER, MARTIN. For the sake of heaven; tr. by Ludwig Lewisohn. 316p $3 Jewish pub.
45-6401

Religious novel in which the heroes are the Hasidic rabbis of eighteenth and nineteenth century Poland. The action of the book centers about the philosophic and religious problems of Jewish life at the beginning of the Napoleonic wars.

"Regrettably, the figures are not well drawn, they do not talk and act like human beings of flesh and blood, whether they are old Jewish rabbis or Christian aristocrats. This is not a novel but a deep vessel into which all sorts of profound meditations, acute theological discussions and poetic prayers are thrown. It is obvious that Professor Buber made full use of his vast knowledge of Hasidic lore and included some of the finest pearls of wisdom created by eighteenth century Polish Jewry. The patient American reader will be amply rewarded for plowing his way through his peculiar 'novel,' as he will dig up a large number of gems of wisdom in each chapter. Ludwig Lewisohn's translation from the German vernacular renders the author's exuberant language into poetic English." Alfred Werner
Christian Century 62:1126 O 3 '45 700w

"Though 'For the Sake of Heaven' is a novel of ideas rather than people, it has a peculiarly living quality. Steeped as it is in the mores of Hassidism, its composite picture is at once colorful and real. Unfortunately, Mr. Buber's technique of developing his story through parable, dream, vision, etc., will undoubtedly discourage most readers. But for those who are willing to work at it, 'For the Sake of Heaven' is a compelling and historically important document." Vivian Wolfert
+ — N Y Times p32 S 30 '45 270w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p22 O 28 '45 70w

BUCHANAN, DONALD W., ed. This is Canada [photographs]. [80p] $2.50 Humphries
917.1 Canada—Pictorial works [A45-3762]

Collection of photographs featuring the life and industries of Canada. The photographs are drawn mainly from the collection of the national film board. The book has an introductory chapter and brief captions for each picture.

Booklist 42:15 S '45
Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 13 '45 50w

"Excellent photographs of French Canadian peasant farms, large modern factories in Montreal and Toronto, Western wheatfields, and varied scenes of beauty in mountain and lake, forest and ocean are accompanied by appropriate descriptive comment." W. H. Chamberlin
+ Sat R of Lit 28:28 Jl 28 '45 600w

BUCHANAN, NORMAN SHARPE. International investment and domestic welfare; some aspects of international borrowing and lending in the post-war period. 249p $2.75 Holt
332.67 Investments, Foreign. Economic policy. Reconstruction (1939-) 45-7652

"An analysis of the problems of economic reconstruction and deliberate industrialization. . . Part One of this book gives an analysis of economic reconstruction and planned industrialization the world over and their importance for the United States. Part Two deals with the role of the United States in a post-war world. . . The essay closes with some positive and specific recommendations concerning the main principles on which American policy in these matters should proceed." (Publisher's note) Indexes.

"Replete with incisive statistical analyses, Professor Buchanan's volume asserts that we must be extremely circumspect in our foreign-loan policy. His argument is not by any means isolationist; based upon a hard core of common sense, it suggests that the burden of loans will only recreate the recriminations of the twenties. Recent British reaction seems to substantiate this dire view." B. B. Seligman
+ New Repub 114:100 Ja 21 '46 300w

"A serious essay written primarily for economists. Yet the book is not beyond the reach of a courageous amateur, who may want to pursue the line of thought suggested by Hansen and Hoover into some of its complexities. . . The most dubious and controversial part of his book is its discussion of stockpiles of raw materials, which he favors as a way of providing other nations with dollar exchange. The danger of such schemes, illustrated by our long experience with wheat, cotton, rubber, gold, silver, and other raw materials, is that they become devices for keeping prices high, and often perpetual subsidies for unneeded and unwanted production." E. V. Rostow
+ — Yale R n s 35:377 winter '46 220w

BUCHANAN, ROSEMARY. This bread. 263p $2.50 Bruce pub.
45-6098

Story of the conversion of two young Protestants to the Roman Catholic faith.

Reviewed by J. O. Supple
Book Week p9 Jl 22 '45 230w

"This is a pleasant little story. . . The story suffers the defects of a novel with a purpose. In order to explain certain dogmas and practices of the Church, Miss Buchanan makes the curate, who is supposed to come from an aristocratic family, incredibly rude."
Cath World 161:523 S '45 150w

Reviewed by H. J. Sloan
Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 19 '45 300w

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH), comp. China in black and white; an album of woodcuts by contemporary Chinese artists; with commentary. (Asia press bk) 95p $3 Day

915.1 China—Views. Wood engravings

"This album of eighty woodcuts by contemporary Chinese artists makes a panorama of man's effort to exist and to produce in the face of constant threats of war, famine and disaster. It is a graphic story of the fight with the soil, the stirrings of industrial power, the homely family life, the grubbing start in education, interrupted constantly by vignettes of battle. You feel the sweat of labor, the rocklike character of the peasant faces, their mystic wonder at nature's power newly harnessed. . . The prints were assembled by the China Woodcut Association, and Pearl Buck has written a commentary." N Y Times

"Despite the uneven quality of these prints, the total impression is one of a pulsing, latent human force bestirring itself. . . Unpretentious but remarkably vivid book." W. G. Dooley
+ N Y Times p7 D 16 '45 400w

"Woodcuts are particularly suitable for portraying a China made realistic by war, not subtle, nor effete nor intellectual but vigorous and earthy and direct. It is interesting that of the ninety-five pictures in the book twenty-seven portray workers, seventeen farmers and twenty-two soldiers. Pearl Buck's captions are thoughtful and almost every one contains a significant idea." Eleanor Lattimore
+ Weekly Book Review p4 D 23 '45 310w

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH). Portrait of a marriage; il. by Charles Hargens. 224p $2.50 Day
45-10055

The life stories of a wealthy Philadelphia artist and the wholesome but uneducated farmer's daughter whom he married. Their life on the Pennsylvania farm where they lived was a happy one, on the whole.

"Women who read this book, unlikely to be the type of Ruth Harnsbarger (because Ruth never read a book), will possibly be bewildered and even annoyed with Pearl Buck's thesis in a day and age of feminine emergence from field, kitchen and nursery for a proper place in the sun. But one suspects, with a chuckle, that a lot of men married to up-and-coming women will read with a passing feeling of envy." Edith Roberts
Book Week p22 D 9 '45 260w
Booklist 42:149 Ja 1 '46
Christian Science Monitor p16 D 3 '45 550w
— Kirkus 13:403 S 15 '45 230w

Reviewed by N. B. Baker
N Y Times p4 D 9 '45 450w

"Mrs. Buck rings all the possible changes on talent, marriage, and love with her customary assurance and simplicity, but the generalities that served her so well in China are occasionally out of key in the rolling hills of Pennsylvania."
New Yorker 21:130 D 1 '45 120w

"In her new novel Pearl Buck turns away from China to write of Pennsylvania, but her Americans manage to be as close to the good earth and the eternal verities of life as her Chinese. Even her portrait of an 'impossible' marriage between the highly-polished scion of an aristocratic Philadelphia family and the illiterate daughter of a Pennsylvania farmer succeeds in dealing with generalities of existence that are as true for one human being as another." Grace Frank
+ Sat R of Lit 29:37 Ja 19 '46 550w

"Presumably it was Mrs Buck's desire to tell the story of a man who well lost the world but gained his soul's happiness, and a good life, but the novel is vitiated by the substitution of logy sentimentality for earthy reality, and all achieved is a pedestrian tome devoid of vigor and truth." L. S. Munn
— Springf'd Republican p4d D 9 '45 450w

"The book is written with Miss Buck's beautifully deceptive simplicity and with her persuasiveness, but it is hard to go along with the extreme it postulates. In this story the achievement is Ruth's. . . Insulated in a personal relationship, William's protected life appears stunted, lacking in some of what becomes a man. It is hard to believe that Ruth would not have resented his passivity more than she occasionally did. To at least some readers their relationship, and this record of it, will seem hemmed in and a little dull." Mary Ross
Weekly Book Review p6 D 9 '45 900w

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH). Talk about Russia with Masha Scott. 128p $1.75 Day

914.7 Russia—Social life and customs 45-9634

The author wanted to see Russia thru the eyes of a Russian. Masha, the Russian wife of the American correspondent John Scott, now lives in New York, so she was called in to answer questions on the state of the new Russia. From the stenographic record of these conversations, between Pearl Buck and Masha, the book was made.

"Joy in co-operation with fellow Russians, joy in banishing race prejudice, joy in learning, working, playing, fill every page. Here is a book which will do as much to make us understand Russia as 'The Good Earth' did to help us understand China. A major contribution." Sterling North
+ Book Week p2 D 9 '45 650w
Booklist 42:162 Ja 15 '46

"It is an interesting story; not only as a well-told history of a growing child among the hurly-burly and propaganda of newly Red Russia, but as a study in controlled thinking. The careful training of Masha's psychological processes should be most instructive, not only to those professionally interested in modern Russia, but to the people who probe through their current events items in order to understand the reasons behind a suspicious Kremlin and the antics of the Red Army in Eastern Europe. Masha answers with directness and clarity the questions proposed to her. She has humor and, if Mrs. Buck's account is as honest as it seems, an excellent command of herself and her emotions as well as of the English language. . . In the face of such competence, it seems paradoxical that anyone should be moved protectively, but it seemed to this reviewer that Masha needed shielding against an overbearing interlocutor." L. G.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 N 29 '45 480w

"Masha tells her story so well under Pearl Buck's gentle prodding that her family, their neighbors, the workers on the collective farm established in the village in which she spends her childhood, students at Moscow, workers in the great factories at Magnitogorsk, and vacationists in Caucasus rest houses all come thoroughly alive. They are not types, or ideological stalking horses, but intensely real and human people. It is Marsha herself, however, who stands out most appealingly against this background." F. R. Dulles
+ N Y Times p22 Ja 6 '46 410w

"The slight volume of questions and answers, earnestly asked and quietly but firmly answered, entertaining always, and never pretentious or argumentative, is a little primer for Americans. One acre of the Russian field well worked isn't the whole of the Russian state, but it does give a clew to what goes on and what sort of people, with what sort of cultural goods, we are up against or could pull with in the same boat." Ernestine Evans
+ Weekly Book Review p2 D 30 '45 1150w

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH). Tell the people; talks with James Yen about the mass education movement. 84p $1.50 Day

370.951 Education—China. Yen, Yang-ch'u. Mass education movement 45-2762

"This little book contains the story of how a small group of Chinese intellectuals, moved first by admiration for the quality of their own common people, went to live with those people, learned what they wanted as well as what they needed, and how a plan [for their education] was made and perfected and put into action." Foreword

Booklist 41:248 My 1 '45

"Mrs. Buck puts this story in prose that is, in a few passages, magnificent; at times, beautifully simple, as befits the subject; and on occasion saccharine and stilted. As far as they went, Mrs. Buck and James Yen have done a competent job on a significant theme. But it is a job that will some day have to be done at greater length and more persuasively." Mark Gayn
+ — N Y Times p20 Mr 25 '45 550w

"This book is an interesting and highly readable account of how Yen became interested in the problems of his people, and of the methods that he used in getting this movement started in China." H. P. Rainey
+ Sat R of Lit 28:25 Ap 14 '45 650w

School & Society 61:368 Je 2 '45 20w

Reviewed by Bruno Lasker
Survey G 34:134 Ap '45 500w

"Americans who want to understand what goes on in China, and why, and how, can learn a great deal by studying this unpretentious little book and following up the leads which it discloses; especially the eager response of China's peasantry to opportunities to learn how to read and write, how to improve farming methods and the breeding of pigs and chickens, and how to organize their own government and elect their own leaders; and the prompt and calculated opposition of vested interests which organizes mobs of 'citizens' to oppose the new and reinstate the old." Owen Lattimore
Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 8 '45 950w

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH). Yu Lan, flying boy of China; drawings by George T. Hartman. 60p $1.50 Day

45-8811

"The story of a Chinese farm boy who loves planes and has his big opportunity to learn about them when an American flyer is forced to land near his home." Library J

Book Week p20 N 11 '45 100w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:453 N '45 40w

"A pleasant direct little story with social values unobtrusively and charmingly handled."
+ Kirkus 13:296 Jl 1 '45 130w

"The story is interesting; and the propaganda which accompanies the story may be all to the good." M. C. Skinner
Library J 70:952 O 15 '45 60w

"Although there is some Chinese atmosphere in this story, author pictures the family as thinking and talking very much as Americans. A slight story." M. F. Cox
+ Library J 70:1026 N 1 '45 70w

"Only such a great interpreter of the Chinese people as Pearl S. Buck could have written with so much insight and understanding this heart-warming and friendly story." Carl Glick
+ N Y Times p7 N 11 '45 130w

"The story bubbles with fun, reads aloud well—it can be read at one hearing—and carries a sound idea. Its pictures are in the same spirit."
+ Weekly Book Review p8 N 11 '45 310w

BUCKINGHAM, NASH. Tattered coat; il. by Arthur Fuller. 210p $2.50 Putnam

799.24 Hunting 45-248

Reminiscences of the author's shooting and fishing days, mainly in the southern states. "Nash Buckingham is a sportsman of the old school, and has owned more guns and sporting dogs—pointers, setters, springer spaniels, and retrievers—than the average sportsman can ever expect to own. He has hunted wild ducks and geese, wild turkeys, and quail in the bottom lands along the Mississippi river, and prairie chickens on the prairies of Saskatchewan. He tells in this book about these trips." (Springf'd Republican)

"There is humor and sentiment and good spinning of tall tales—and threading all together, the code of sport in its best sense, the love of outdoors. The buy for your sport book collectors in a year when the choice of material of this kind is very limited."
+ Kirkus 13:96 Mr 1 '45 170w

"Nash Buckingham's latest . . . is written with gusto and knowledge of the country and the critters, black and white, with two feet or four, who play their part in the drama of field and stream and tale-telling around the camp's airtight stove. It is not a masterpiece —but it's good of its kind." H. I. Brock
+ N Y Times p22 S 30 '45 130w

New Yorker 21:87 My 5 '45 60w

"Those who have read Nash Buckingham's other books, 'De Shootinest Gent'man' and 'Mark Right,' will be surely pleased with 'Tattered Coat.' No sportsman's library is complete without it." C. L. Kites
+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 6 '45 240w

BUCKLES, ELEANOR. Valley of power. 265p $2.50 Creative age

45-8891

The romance of a young engineer who is responsible for removing the Southern farmers from the land to be flooded by the TVA, and who falls in love with the red-haired daughter of one of the most stubborn landowners.

"The author apparently did not discover that the Southern mountaineers are not walking cartoons from Esquire. The book . . . is crawling with 'types' quainter than any Jesse Stuart ever caricatured. . . Having some slight acquaintance with mountain people, I believe that books of this sort are not only a sociological but an emotional mistake." Olive Carruthers
— Book Week p11 O 14 '45 150w

Booklist 42:128 D 15 '45

"In the raw, rough spoken language of the country, a sustained story with romantic angles."
Kirkus 13:443 O 1 '45 130w

"A first novel: weak in dialogue, but with enough story interest to hold the reader to the end. Authoritative background description of the dam project. Recommended for large libraries." Barbara Overton
+ — Library J 70:685 Ag '45 70w

Reviewed by Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p37 N 4 '45 160w

"Miss Buckles obviously knows both the background and foreground of the TVA and in an excellent chapter she makes the miraculous achievements of the project clear to even the most bigotted of its enemies. Readers may find that the attraction between Rootman and Sandrey lacks depth and subtlety in the telling and that the personal terms in which the novel is worked out give us a negative rather than a positive approach to the essential problems of the TVA. Nevertheless the author achieves her purpose of making a single aspect of the whole undertaking thoroughly real. She also writes well and displays great competence in visualizing the component parts of a distinctively primitive community with its flaws and virtues." Grace Frank

BUCKLES, ELEANOR—Continued
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:34 N 17 '45 400w

BUCKLEY, JEROME HAMILTON. William Ernest Henley. 234p il $2.75 Princeton univ. press

B or 92 Henley, William Ernest A45-5325

"This book, subtitled, 'A Study in the "Counter-decadence" of the 'Nineties,' attempts the first general criticism of Henley's life and work, deliberately slighting anecdote and personal melodrama in order to relate Henley to a broader social, aesthetic and intellectual background. A valuable bibliography that is suggestive rather than exhaustive and a careful index, adapt this book to the student as well as to the reader interested in literary backgrounds and personalities." Library J

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p20 D 2 '45 400w

"Buckley's careful study of this movement and of Henley's life leaves a better taste in the mouth than Gaunt's recent, and equally scholarly, presentation of the opposite tendency in The Aesthetic Adventure."
+ Christian Century 62:1386 D 12 '45 70w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor
+ Library J 70:977 O 15 '45 130w

Reviewed by Eric Bentley
New Repub 114:26 Ja 7 '46 300w

Reviewed by Alexander Cowie
N Y Times p4 N 25 '45 1850w

"Mr. Buckley is not given to going too far. Indeed, he resists with remarkable fortitude the first temptation which besets all those who write of neglected or minor figures: the temptation to blow the subject up to dimensions larger than life. This merit, let it be added, is one of the several that make 'William Ernest Henley, almost a model performance of its kind." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 28:5 D 22 '45 1350w
Time 46:100 O 15 '45 1250w

BUDGE, LLOYD. Tennis made easy. (Barnes sports lib) 126p il $1.25 Barnes, A.S.

796.34 Tennis 45-35117

A book of instructions, illustrated with many photographs, by the elder brother and coach of Don Budge.

Booklist 41:342 Jl 15 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '45

"An excellent addition to the Barnes sport library."
+ Kirkus 13:293 Jl 1 '45 90w

"A profusely illustrated little book which is heartily commended to beginners and especially to teachers of beginners." R. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 2 '45 1850w
Wis Lib Bul 41:110 N '45

BULLARD, ROBERT LEE. Fighting generals; illustrated biographical sketches of seven major generals in World war I. 329p $5 Edwards bros.

923.573 Generals—U.S. U.S.—Army—Biography. European war, 1914-1918—Biography 45-1247

Contents: Major General Joseph T. Dickman; Major General Hanson E. Ely; Major General Henry T. Allen; Major General Ulysses G. McAlexander; Major General Preston Brown; Major General William G. Haan; Major General John F. O'Ryan. Index.

Book Week p6 Ja 21 '45 110w
Foreign Affairs 23:691 Jl '45 30w

BULLOCK, MRS HELEN (DUPREY). My head and my heart; a little history of Thomas Jefferson and Maria Cosway; with pref. by Carleton Sprague Smith. 235p il $3 Putnam

B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas. Cosway, Maria (Hadfield) 45-10513

"The charming story of the deep and enduring friendship established in Paris in 1786 between Jefferson and the beautiful and gifted Italian-English artist, Mrs. Maria Cosway—a friendship budding during one idyllic month in Paris and ripening during a life-time of affectionate correspondence." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
Book Week p18 D 9 '45 650w
Booklist 42:147 Ja 1 '46

"This is definitely a 'find'—a new item for the collectors of Jeffersoniana—and a slight book that has a great deal of charm."
+ Kirkus 13:390 S 1 '45 150w

"The story is told with skill and restraint, and with only an occasional hint that the affair entailed anything deeper than friendship. Limited in appeal, no doubt, to those more than casually interested in Jefferson. Recommended for larger libraries." G. W. Wakefield
+ Library J 70:1086 N 15 '45 110w

"The editing of the letters, in brief, is slovenly. But these evidences of haste or lack of care, while denying a full presentation of the evidence, are not so serious as the manner in which Mrs. Bullock interprets the story as a whole. She presents it as an unbroken, unchanging story of affection, losing none of its luster with the passage of time. It obviously was not." J. P. Boyd
N Y Times p7 D 23 '45 1650w
New Yorker 21:67 D 29 '45 160w

Reviewed by Dumas Malone
Sat R of Lit 29:8 Ja 5 '46 700w

"The idea that any one could write a really new book about Thomas Jefferson at this late date seems fantastic, but Helen Duprey Bullock has done it. Furthermore, it is an amusing and, in its own way, a charming book, revealing a side of the philosopher statesman that has hitherto remained obscure." G. W. Johnson
+ Weekly Book Review p3 D 9 '45 1000w

BULMAN, DAVID, ed. Molders of opinion. 166p il $1.75 Bruce pub.

920.5 Journalists. Radio—Biography 45-10085

Collection of brief biographical sketches on some present-day news broadcasters. Contents: Lone wolf of the Potomac [Paul Mallon], by J. J. Daly; Global lady [Dorothy Thompson], by J. S. Kennedy; Tonight will go down in history [Gabriel Heatter], by John O'Connor; Lapsed liberal [Walter Lippmann], by J. C. O'Brien; Oracle of the airwaves [H. V. Kaltenborn], by Leo Egan; Square peg [Westbrook Pegler], by J. B. Kennedy; Bedside manner in radio [Fulton Lewis, jr], by E. A. Lahey; Diplomacy syndicated [Sumner Welles], by Richard Pattee; Cautious analyst [R. G. Swing], by J. C. Wynne; Washington gadfly [Drew Pearson], by W. P. Carney; Custodian of the new freedom [David Lawrence], by J. C. O'Brien; Radio crusader [J. B. Kennedy], by Leo Egan; Why I like Sokolsky, by J. M. Gillis; A bolt from the blue [Walter Winchell], by J. S. Kennedy.

"The sketches are factual but pedestrian, providing nothing more than mere biographical detail. If any effort was made here to evaluate news commentators, to determine their place in the social world, how they came into being, the purposes they serve, or the obligations they face, it has not succeeded." R. J. B.
— Book Week p22 N 18 '45 90w
Booklist 42:127 D 15 '45

"Here is a timely, informative, very readable and, when all is said and done, a rather encouraging book. . . Something of interest could be quoted from almost any one of these inviting pages; but, with space limitations in mind, it will suffice to say how pleasant it is to find Father Gillis so enthusiastic about Sokolsky, and to note the delightfully original technique of Father Kennedy in his drawing and quartering of Winchell."

+ Cath World 162:380 Ja '46 280w

Kirkus 13:465 O 15 '45 90w

"If a system of plus and minus were to be applied to the analyses contained here, those commentators whose political beliefs veer left of center would find themselves generously pock-marked with minuses, while their brethren clinging to the opposite principles would find themselves the recipient of what few accolades the authors dole out. Mr Bulman offers a number of interesting personality sketches and these may prove useful to those readers who know little or nothing of the personal history of their favorite commentator." Emanuel Slotnick

— + Springf'd Republican p6 N 28 '45 420w

BUNCE, WILLIAM HARVEY. Horned snake medicine; a story of the mound builders; il. by James Macdonald. 160p $2 Dutton 45-7244

A story of the Mound Builders woven about the theft of a sacred carving and its recapture by the young hero, Osana.

Booklist 42:60 O 15 '45

"Early Indian customs and religious ceremonies are revealed in the exciting story of the adventures of the young craftsman who recovered the precious talisman. And the information about the arts of the Mound Builders is of special interest." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:352 S '45 80w

"Authentic, vivid background, excellent regional material about primitive America—good library and school supplementary reading. The black and white drawings are uninspired, but adequate."

+ — Kirkus 13:369 Ag 15 '45 90w

"The plot is exciting and modern, the background an authoritative, interesting picture. Drawings in black and white by James McDonald. Recommended for boys ten to thirteen." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 70:821 S 15 '45 60w

BURACK, ABRAHAM SOLOMON, ed. Writing detective and mystery fiction. 237p $2.75 Writer

808.3 Fiction—Technique. Detective stories
45-3544

Collection of articles on the technique of writing detective stories and mysteries, composed by some twenty-six leading writers in the field. Among the chapters are: Detective fiction: Origins and development, by D. L. Sayers; A corpse can't leer, by Zelda Popkin; The 'naughty child' of fiction, by Q. Patrick; A method to mystery, by A. A. Fair; It's a mystery to me, by Craig Rice; The detective story, by Van Wyck Mason; Motivation in mystery fiction, by C. F. Adams; The rules of the game, by Howard Haycraft; The perfect crime, by Richard Lockridge; Whodunit, by Elliot Paul; Twenty rules for writing detective stories, by S. S. Van Dine; It's fun to write a mystery, by D. B. Hughes.

Booklist 41:250 My 1 '45

Kirkus 13:198 My 1 '45 110w

"With a few exceptions, the articles have an astonishing sameness—and a corresponding loss of interest if read consecutively. The total effect does not even approximate the hard common sense of Marie Rodell's excellent book, 'Mystery Fiction: Theory and Technique,' though it is obvious that many of the contributors, like Mrs. Rodell, speak from bitter experience of their own. . . Too many of the well-wishers merely tell the eager beginner that two and two make four." C. V. Terry

N Y Times p26 Ap 8 '45 500w

"Whether or not one is interested in writing detective and mystery fiction, the book is valuable background and source material and will probably lead to greater enjoyment in future detective story reading." W. H. Messick

+ Springf'd Republican p4 My 14 '45 250w

"Informative, diverting for the most part and frightening in spots, this collection of twenty-six pieces about the history, theory and practice of whodunits should provide the average reader with all he needs to know on the subject." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p23 My 20 '45 180w

BURBANK, ELBRIDGE AYER. Burbank among the Indians; as told by Ernest Royce; ed. by Frank J. Taylor; il. by [the author]. 232p $5 Caxton printers

970.1 Indians of North America—West
45-588

An American painter's reminiscences of his experiences among the American Indians of the West, Southwest, and Northwest, in the 1890's and early 1900's. Many of the Indians were his models, among them the Apache, Geronimo, and the Nez Perce, Chief Joseph. Includes reproductions of paintings and some photographs.

Booklist 41:167 F 1 '45

Reviewed by Alan Creighton

Canadian Forum 24:289 Mr '45 210w

"Many persons regard Mr. Burbank as the greatest living painter of the American Indian. Aside from his paintings, the book has charm and value for stimulating interest in the still-vanishing tribes, among which the painter spent many years before the turn of the present century." R. K. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 30 '45 420w

"No fancy dress here,—writing reduced to its simplest terms for first hand material which may add to historical evidence."

+ Kirkus 12:491 N 1 '44 100w

"As a painter aspiring to depict character in face and figure, his interpretations are both candid and sympathetic. The carefully authenticated costumes and poses form a valuable historical record, and the many reproductions of typical Indian portraits sufficiently justify the book. Burbank's best chapters deal with the desert folk of the great Southwest." E. G. Eastman

+ N Y Times p14 F 4 '45 280w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 21 '45 90w

Reviewed by Paul Radin

Weekly Book Review p14 Ag 5 '45 370w

BURCH, GUY IRVING, and PENDELL, ELMER. Population roads to peace or war; foreword and postscript by Walter B. Pitkin. 138p $2; pa $1 Population reference bur, 1507 M st, N.W, Washington 5, D.C.

312.1 Population. Birth control 45-4696

"A concise, hard-hitting analysis of the population problem in its social and psychological as well as economic and political aspects." Foreign Affairs

Christian Century 62:630 My 23 '45 130w

Foreign Affairs 24:161 O '45 20w

"This book is such a curious mixture of good sense in the evaluation of the meaning of the main currents of quantitative population growth in the world and of biased thinking in regard to its qualitative aspects in a country like the United States that it seems very likely that the problems of war and peace arising in connection with the differential growth of nations may be overlooked by many readers." W. S. Thompson

+ — New Repub 113:684 N 19 '45 700w

BURK, ROBERT EMMETT, and GRUMMITT, OLIVER JOSEPH, eds. Advances in nuclear chemistry and theoretical organic chemistry. (Frontiers in chemistry) 165p il $3.50 Interscience

541.04 Isotopes. Nuclear physics 45-35138

"Volume 3 in the 'Frontiers in Chemistry Series.' Papers published under the auspices of Western Reserve University. The five lectures are: Isotopes and Their Applications in Biochemistry; Applications of Isotopes in Catalytic Reactions at Surfaces; Techniques in Nuclear Physics; Resonance and Organic Chemistry; and The Hydrogen Bond and Its Significance to Chemistry." Library J

BURK, R. E.—Continued

Reviewed by S. B. Hendricks
Chem & Eng N 23:2030 N 10 '45 400w

"This volume is not as homogeneous in the selection of contributions as its forerunners but this fact does not detract from the value of the book which makes for good and interesting reading." F. C. Nachod
+ Chem & Met Eng 52:270 O '45 230w

Library J 70:750 S 1 '45 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:35 Jl '45

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:61 D '45 300w

BURK, ROBERT EMMETT, and GRUMMITT, OLIVER JOSEPH, eds. Major instruments of science and their applications to chemistry. (Frontiers in chemistry) 151p il $3.50 Interscience

543 Chemistry, Analytic. Optics, Electronic. Spectrum analysis. Diffraction 45-9839

"This small book comprises a series of six lectures presented to graduate students at Western Reserve University by a group of eminent experts in their respective fields. Electron diffraction is covered by Dr. L. H. Germer, the electron microscope by Dr. L. Marton, x-ray diffraction by Dr. M. L. Huggins, emission and absorption spectroscopy by Dr. W. R. Brode and the infrared spectrometer by Dr. R. B. Barnes. Each lecture contains a brief presentation of the fundamental factors necessary to understand the discussion of a few more or less representative problems to which the instrument is applicable." Chem & Met Eng

Reviewed by E. K. Jaycox and K. H. Storks
Chem & Met Eng 52:285 N '45 170w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:56 Ja 1 '46 90w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:61 D '45 220w

BURKHART, ROY ABRAM. Church and the returning soldier; the church and its ministry to the soldier now, and its total guidance of all the returning soldiers—the discharged of the present and the demobilized of the future. 204p $2 Harper

250 Church work. Veterans 45-5830

"The message of these pages is organized in four parts. Part One attempts to depict the mind of the soldier, what he thinks about in general and how he feels toward the Church Part Two describes places where the Church may begin, if its ministry is incomplete at the present. Part Three outlines areas of preparation wherein the Church can start now to provide an effective ministry when the war is over. Part Four deals with the revitalized Church, not only from the viewpoint of the soldier and his return to civilian life, but in terms of the fullest and most vital ministry of the new Church in the new day." Introd

Booklist 42:2 S '45

Bookmark 6:3 N '45

"The part of the book that is given to a study of the disabled in mind and body is not allowed to become disproportionate. The author recognizes that the majority of the men who return will be normal. They will appreciate friendly counsel. And there will be much that their friends in the church can do to help them make a quick adjustment to civilian life. This part of the book has many commonsense suggestions that will stimulate churches to reach the helping hand toward the returning service men." Hampton Adams
+ Christian Century 62:884 Ag 1 '45 850w

"Ministers and other church leaders will find sane and helpful suggestions in this book by Dr. Burkhart. In it he interprets the mind of the soldier, and outlines plans and procedures by which a revitalized church might hope to carry an effective ministry to those who have served in the armed forces as well as to others. Parents of service men anxious about their religious life might also be interested. The point of view is liberal Protestant but not sectarian."
+ Kirkus 13:363 Ag 15 '45 250w

Reviewed by E. P. Nichols
Library J 70:529 Je 1 '45 70w

"What Dr. Burkhart proposes may or may not be a 'reborn' church; it is certainly an advance program." Richard Match
+ N Y Times p10 Jl 15 '45 600w

"The book has its strengths and its weaknesses. It is strong in its presentation of the challenge which the church must face. It is weak in the limited number of suggestions it makes as to how that challenge can be met. It leaves much ground untouched in the area of the attitudes of the returning men. However, no person can read the book without ending up with the definite conviction that if the church wishes to have the allegiance of the returning serviceman, it must have something worthwhile to offer him. The book can be very valuable if it succeeds in convincing enough people of that one fact." Rev. J. C. Flint
+ — Survey 81:278 O '45 300w

Wis Lib Bul 41:80 Jl '45

BURKS, ALLISON L. Tight rope. 215p $2.50 Duell
45-7203

Detective story.

"An unusual and interesting story, even if its a little on the mild side." Elizabeth Bullock
+ — Book Week p6 Ag 12 '45 130w

"Smooth styling for a first dependent on atmosphere, not deduction."
+ Kirkus 13:304 Jl 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p16 Ag 5 '45 180w

New Yorker 21:72 Jl 28 '45 80w

"Much harassed heroine, pleasant cast of subordinate characters, unobtrusive but effective sleuth—and an exceptionally well concealed criminal. Very good!"
+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 Jl 28 '45 40w

"This is soft-boiled and readable enough, with most of the emphasis upon Stella's states of mind, from her 'wry little smile' on the first page to a downright skeered condition." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p14 Ag 12 '45 150w

BURLAGE, HENRY MATTHEW, and others. Fundamental principles and processes of pharmacy. 615p il $4.50 McGraw

615.4 Pharmacy SG45-75

An introductory course in pharmacy covering history, ethics of the profession, and the fundamentals of the sciences employed, physics and chemistry. An appendix gives a list of books for a pharmacist's library. Index.

Booklist 41:192 Mr 1 '45

Library J 69:1002 N 15 '44 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:11 Ja '45

BURMAN, BEN LUCIEN. Rooster crows for day; sketches by Alice Caddy. 308p $2.50 Dutton 45-6050

Little Doc, a red-haired young Mississippi river pilot with a desire for travel, sets forth for Africa, with his devoted follower Poppy. Their adventures on the Congo, in the jungle, and in the Sahara left Little Doc with so many kinds of fever that he landed in the hospital. From there he turned homeward, and realized his dream at last—he was made a member of the Cotton Valley Boosters Club.

Reviewed by E. D. Branch
Book Week p1 Ag 26 '45 2700w

Booklist 42:18 S '45

"The beauty and menace of Africa dominate the book. Little Doc's route is practically that of the author and includes the Sahara and Cairo. The feeling, in spite of the mishaps that befall the travelers from America, is gentle, gay, and essentially home-town. Happily, they come back to Cotton Valley and eventually to the Boosters Club. Next to the evocation of the mystery of Africa, it is the geniality of the book that 'stimulates and transmits pleasure.' Not one word is lost in piling up the terrible beauty of the scene." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 25 '45 700w

"An original story, with warm characterization and rich color."
+ Kirkus 13:259 Je 15 '45 210w

"More persuasive to international and interracial understanding than a dozen conferences, this idyll makes black Africa as homey as Cotton Valley, Louisiana. . . Bestseller material—for pay, regular and YP collections." E. L. Lewis
+ Library J 70:685 Ag '45 80w

"As for Little Doc and his world of Cotton Valley, the locale for the beginning and end of this novel, not much can be said. Mr. Burman light-heartedly pictures his river folk as innocent dolts with the thought processes of retarded children. This is the characterization of Hollywood and the uncomic comic strips but it is several degrees removed from reality. . . But if the reader will concentrate on Africa and resign himself to the dialogue and characterization, he will be rewarded with interesting glimpses of a primitive, colorful, still dark continent." N. K. B.
+ — N Y Times p28 Ag 26 '45 450w

"A good enough story, but one that Mr. Burman's readers are likely to compare disparagingly with his warm, vivid chronicles of the Mississippi."
New Yorker 21:73 S 1 '45 120w

"Mr. Burman has taken a fresh idea and developed it into a pleasant story. But whether the setting is Congo or Nile, it is still the old Mississippi that keeps rolling along. . . 'Rooster Crows for Day' should please the tens of thousands who like the dripping paddle wheel and the hooting whistle of a Mississippi steamboat wherever it is. The African photomontage will not bother them and it will please those who want a more exotic setting." W. S. Lynch
+ Sat R of Lit 28:10 Ag 25 '45 900w

Reviewed by Edrie Van Dore
Springf'd Republican p4d O 14 '45 420w

"'Rooster Crows for Day' is a novel full of charm and sweet meanings. It will not, certainly, keep you awake at night. But if, on the contrary, you are already tossing wakefully, it will sooth your troubled spirit into the reassuring calm that precedes a quiet sleep. And this is a great deal higher praise for Mr. Burman's beautiful little novel than it may offhand seem to be." F. H. Bullock
+ Weekly Book Review p1 Ag 26 '45 750w

Wis Lib Bul 41:101 O '45

"A stilted, unconvincing, and immature story." Orville Prescott
— Yale R n s 35:192 autumn '45 200w

BURNET, DANA. The pool. 54p $1 Knopf
45-5907

An American tank officer and an English WAAF find a common interest when the officer describes a Maine trout pool, his favorite haunt. Beside an English counterpart of the pool, they plight their troth. After D day the officer is seriously wounded; the girl is killed by a bomb, but with a smile the officer goes to rejoin his Nancy beside another pool.

"'The Pool' couldn't possibly move or interest a mature mind, and probably wasn't intended to. It has no literary merit whatever. The style is slick, the boy and girl are without character or individuality or life, and the ideas of immortality propounded are sentimental and essentially irreligious. It left me wondering about the reader who, the dust jacket says, 'in these tender pages will find solace and inspiration.'" William Maxwell
— Book Week p8 Jl 22 '45 450w

Booklist 42:18 S '45

"A story of young love against a background of war that is thoughtful and moving, even if it lacks the highest note of faith. Slight, idyllic, the charm of the little story lies in nuance and overtone."
+ — Cath World 161:524 S '45 90w

"It is a story that will give comfort to many who are facing loss; a story of a conviction of life beyond death, set in the period of the invasion of Normandy, and told simply, with muted emotion values and sincerity and depth of feeling."
+ Kirkus 13:204 My 15 '45 170w

"It is a little hard to believe in either Richard or Nancy, however one may sympathize with the writer's intent. The book has a sermonlike quality, with the romance a shining parable of love in a time of violence. Readers who enjoyed the nostalgic simplicity of Nathan's 'But Gently Day' or Kantor's 'Happy Land' should find their own meaning in 'The Pool.' Others may discover it too slight and too generalized to compel conviction and a sharing of the lovers' emotions." E. W. Leary
N Y Times p24 Jl 29 '45 320w

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 8 '45 160w

BURNET, DANA. The question. 41p $1 Knopf

The question is asked of the Lord by a West Virginia miner and his wife, and is stated thus: "Why did our boy have to go and get killed to keep Your world in order, O Lord?" The story is told in parable form.

"A beautiful little book for a big and wretched world." Eddie Doherty
+ Book Week p12 S 23 '45 270w

Kirkus 13:320 Ag 1 '45 130w

"For a gracious and timely answer to this question, or for solace and comfort to a friend who has experienced some saddening experience of the war, or just for half an hour of earnest but delightful reading, 'The Question' is a rewarding book." J. Z. Nichols
Springf'd Republican p8 O 10 '45 110w

BURNETT, WHIT, ed. Time to be young; great stories of the growing years. 440p $3 Lippincott

808.83 Children in literature and art. Short stories—Collections 45-3301

Anthology containing some fifty stories or chapters from books, all demonstrating the ways of childhood and youth. Partial contents: Roof sitter, by Frances Eisenberg; Very special shoes, by Morley Callaghan; The good night kiss at Combray, by Marcel Proust; And these went down to Burlington, by MacKinlay Kantor; A day's wait, by Ernest Hemingway; The word, love and speech, by Helen Keller; A heavenly place for a boy, by Mark Twain; Father teaches me to be prompt, by Clarence Day; The great mountains, by John Steinbeck; Death in the fifth grade, by Marjorie Marks; A mother in Mannville, by M. K. Rawlings; Black boy, by Kay Boyle; The stranger within our gates, by Robert Benchley; A visit of charity, by Eudora Welty; Youth's furnishings, by C. O. Skinner; A young boy's love, by Havelock Ellis; Examinations at Harrow, by W. S. Churchill; The best things come in small packages, by Sally Benson; Her first ball, by Katherine Mansfield; Too early spring, by S. V. Benét.

Reviewed by John Norcross
Book Week p7 My 20 '45 400w

Booklist 41:266 My 15 '45

"This one is cream right off the top of the bottle. One of the few literary forms America can lay claim to with justifiable pride is the short story, and Whit Burnett has seen to it that the short stories in his new anthology, 'Time to Be Young,' are representative of the best."
+ Boston Globe p15 My 2 '45 150w

Kirkus 13:21 Ja 15 '45 130w

BURNETT, WHIT, ed.—Continued
"A most useful anthology for all who would know youth. An artistic contribution as well." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 70:306 Ap 1 '45 90w

"Writers generally find childhood's insights and purity of feeling very attractive, and most recall them with love, cherishing their early anguish along with their joys, sometimes sentimentalizing both. Included here are straightforward autobiographical fragments, rich with youthful reminiscence, by such accomplished raconteurs as H. L. Mencken, George Santayana, Mark Twain, Winston Churchill. There are, too, a number of pieces of ironic or indulgent humor by some masters of that genre, Robert Benchley, Clarence Day, Wolcott Gibbs, James Thurber and Ludwig Bemelmans." Gertrude Buckman
+ N Y Times p26 Ag 5 '45 340w

"Some of the stories are pathetic, some nostalgic and tender, and some are very funny; nearly all are interesting in one way or another."
New Yorker 21:86 Ap 21 '45 100w
Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 29 '45 170w
Wis Lib Bul 41:66 Je '45

BURNETT, WILLIAM RILEY. Tomorrow's another day. 223p $2.50 Knopf 45-9319

"A story about an easygoing young gambler who gets into complicated trouble by marrying a girl on whom another gambler has his eye." New Yorker

Reviewed by John Norcross
Book Week p26 N 11 '45 270w
Booklist 42:184 F 1 '46

"Narrative has suspense, and the boys-in-the-back-room atmosphere is managed with this author's usual unpretentious skill." H. W. Hart
Library J 70:1025 N 1 '45 80w

"Lonnie, the present hero, is far too uncomplicated to carry a full-length novel: he seems more like a high school graduate to whom life is still a thrilling game. . . 'Tomorrow's Another Day' will scare the daylights out of you at times. It will tell you precisely how a big-time horse race is fixed—and how to make a living at stud poker. But if you are at all given to analyzing your fun after you've had it, you can hardly escape the conviction that its people will look much better on the screen." C. V. Terry
N Y Times p12 N 18 '45 550w

"In spite of two extremely interesting minor characters—a jumpy, middle-aged ex-sportswriter and a deceptively mild veteran of the Chicago gang days—and the brisk authority Mr. Burnett always imparts to his rambles through the underside of urban life, this story . . . is a fairly perfunctory job, not much better than the run of novels by this author's energetic imitators."
New Yorker 21:102 N 10 '45 80w

Reviewed by George Conrad
Weekly Book Review p14 N 25 '45 450w

BURNSHAW, STANLEY. The bridge; a play; with an introd. by John Gassner. 126p $2.25 Dryden 812 45-5911

"This drama in blank verse is an abstract, almost an allegorical, treatment of the problem of building a bridge from the harsh present to the glorious future of humanity. Within the ranks of the workers for this end (and these all seem to represent labor), there are tensions between those who seek a slow and patient advance that is like building a granite causeway across the ocean and those who would set up a commanding symbol of man's dauntless spirit and thereby fling a bridge across the void. Both are opposed, sometimes subtly, sometimes brutally, by figures representing capital and the law." Christian Century

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson
Book Week p9 Jl 15 '45 450w

Reviewed by Alan Creighton
Canadian Forum 25:170 O '45 600w

"The play is on a high level of idealism, in language often eloquent but never inflated."
+ Christian Century 62:861 Jl 25 '45 150w
Library J 70:636 Jl '45 20w

Reviewed by A. S. Downer
Poetry 67:104 N '45 850w

"I found the play stimulating. I dare say I have not got from it more than a tithe of what the playwright intended. In any event, I wish more plays of this kind could be tried out on our stage. Along with Louis Untermeyer and Alfred Kreymborg, three well-known directors of university dramatics, including the famous Carolina Playmakers, have given this one their hearty endorsement." W. R. Benét
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:37 O 6 '45 1100w

"'The Bridge' is a symbolic play in verse, highly praised on the jacket by Louis Untermeyer and introduced by John Gassner with somewhat tempered enthusiasm. This reader can only report that he was never able to connect the symbolism with those living realities we ask for in a play, and even the vague events which were going on were off stage and merely talked about."
— Weekly Book Review p24 S 30 '45 100w

BURROWES, ELISABETH. Little Thunder; pictures by Roberta Paflin. [28p] $1 Dutton 45-5192

Picture story book for the very young, showing the adventures of a small Indian lad, and his major adventure with a buffalo. For ages four to five.

"Most small boys and girls are eager for stories about Indians and this is a good one. . . There is a good seasoning of humor in both Roberta Paflin's colorful illustrations and Elisabeth Burrowes' simple prose. This is particularly good for children who are beginning to read." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p12 O 7 '45 130w
Kirkus 13:271 Je 15 '45 170w

"The pictures in color have plenty of action, but the people in them are singularly un-Indianlike. As a fairy tale and as a book about Indians 'Little Thunder' is unconvincing." A. T. Eaton
— N Y Times p28 Ag 12 '45 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 12 '45 220w

BURT, MAXWELL STRUTHERS. Philadelphia, holy experiment; il. with photographs. 396p $3.75 Doubleday
974.811 Philadelphia—History 45-2767

Combination of history and biography in which the author attempts to explain the essence of the city of Brotherly Love to itself and to outsiders. "Struthers Burt had to write this book, because as he admits, 'I am a Philadelphian, bone of the bone, and so I cherish a passion, often against my better judgment, for the city I am going to berate, compliment, despise and hold up to admiration.'" (Weekly Book Review) Index.

"There is a great deal of sound factual material in this book, a lot of the author's likes, dislikes, prejudices, and opinions—with most of which the reader will agree. But it can hardly be termed an orderly book. There is more enthusiasm than method in its making. And perhaps that is why it is so charming. It is a human and a living document—a letter from a Philadelphian to his city." R. E. Danielson
+ Atlantic 176:131 Jl '45 240w

"All in all, it would be hard to find a civic history yielding as much information in as readable a fashion. The feeling for words and the imaginative virtuosity noticeable in Burt's distinguished novels, such as 'Interpreter's House' and 'The Delectable Mountains,' are gratifyingly apparent in 'Philadelphia: Holy Experiment.'" Jack Conroy
+ Book Week p4 Ap 1 '45 700w

Booklist 41:234 Ap 15 '45

"You can agree with Mr. Burt or not but you will have a marvelously good time reading his story, the story of a man in love—with a city." E. A. Laycock
+ Boston Globe p21 Mr 21 '45 450w

"The best town or city history I have read." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 28 '45 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '45

"Mr. Burt writes with just the sincerity and just the sophistication his subject demands, and often with the satire which has been well described as disenchanted idealism. For never a city has more obviously the defects of her qualities and the qualities of her defects than Philadelphia." Katherine Bregy
+ Commonweal 42:49 Ap 27 '45 550w

"This urban picture is drawn by a gifted author who has 'read almost everything so far written about Philadelphia,' and so many documents 'that frequently the only relief was aspirin.' The omission of a bibliography conforms to the practice in the 'Seaport Series,' to which this is a notable addition. The book is one to be read and enjoyed rather than used for reference, though much sound scholarship has gone into the making of it." R. H. Brown + Geog R 36:176 Ja '46 490w

Kirkus 13:29 Ja 15 '45 130w

Nation 160:464 Ap 21 '45 60w

"In just the right tone of voice, sometimes tart but always affectionate, Mr. Burt has written this delightful survey of the big Home Town's history and habits. Like everyone who ever thinks attentively about Philadelphia he is torn sometimes by anxiety and indignation; yet cheerfulness keeps breaking in. Everyone has always been baffled by Philadelphia's mingled charm and hypocrisy, her terrific reservoir of mechanized power and her indolence in the realm of ideas. Is it that she exhausted her psyche by too much activity in the eighteenth century?" Christopher Morley
+ N Y Times p3 Ap 1 '45 900w

"The book is a once-over-lightly performance, touching on nearly everything you'd expect—Franklin, scrapple, corruption, the Ladies' Home Journal, Main Line manners—with good humor if without any special perceptiveness. The illustrations are mostly from prints and portraits."
+ New Yorker 21:92 Ap 14 '45 80w

"Mr. Burt may not be an historian, but as a biographer and a novelist he has produced a book obviously owing much to the historians that preceded it—some interesting, he admits, some not, but all worthy—yet a book infused with a breath of life rarely found in formal histories." M. A. D. Howe
+ Sat R of Lit 28:54 Ap 14 '45 1150w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 15 '45 550w

"Author Burt's highly readable history is as sprawling and leisurely as the city itself. It has a disproportionate amount of material on Philadelphia's early days, very little on its post-Civil War boom and stagnation, or on its wartime present. Philadelphia, Holy Experiment is crammed with little-known historical facts, ranging from Alexander Hamilton's love affairs to the beginnings of Pennsylvania's coal mining and glass blowing."
+ Time 45:99 Mr 26 '45 480w

"In 'Philadelphia: Holy Experiment' Mr. Burt has done for his native city what no other American writer has succeeded in doing for the place of his birth. Like a trusted family physician, he has carefully taken the public pulse of the heroine of this 'civic biography' and has given us a beautiful clinical demonstration of the patient's malady and how it came about. . . There is about this book much of the wit and charm of the Quaker City. It is heartily recommended to all, especially to New Yorkers and Bostonians, who, as we say in the Navy, didn't get the word." Carl Bridenbaugh
+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ap 1 '45 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 41:53 My '45

BURT, MRS OLIVE (WOOLLEY). Peter's silver dollar. 94p il $2 Holt

622.3422 Silver—Juvenile literature. Dollar
45-8058

Fact book for small boys, describing in story form how Peter Brown learned the steps in the mining, milling, and refining of silver, which finally took shape in silver dollars. Illustrated with photographs.

Churchman 159:7 N 15 '45 30w

"Good source material. . . Schools and libraries will be particularly interested."
+ Kirkus 13:338 Ag 1 '45 40w

Reviewed by V. W. Schott
Library J 70:822 S 15 '45 70w

"The processes are accurately and clearly described, and the book is illustrated with many fine photographs. An excellent factual book for 7 to 9 year olds." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 S 9 '45 130w

Sat R of Lit 28:82 N 10 '45 20w

"The author made painstaking preparation for the work by getting first-hand information from authoritative sources about silver mining and all the subsequent processes that culminated in Peter's dollar—the first money he ever earned. The big cyclopedias tell more about the processes, but there is much more about them here than most people know."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 22 '45 180w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 26 '45 180w

Wis Lib Bul 41:102 O '45

BURTON, EARL, and BURTON, LINETTE. Exciting adventures of Waldo; il. by Helen Stone. (Whittlesey house publication) 64p $2 McGraw 45-35180

Waldo, a little wooden decoy duck is set adrift on a river and floats into a number of adventures. His friendship with Kit is the best thing that happens to him and his success in holding that friendship fills him with happiness.

"The story is interesting and well written and the book has been made exceptionally handsome by the distinctive illustrations of Helen Stone. But more than that, there may be comfort here for the apartment-bound child who is unable to have a real, live pet."
+ Book Week p19 N 11 '45 200w

Booklist 42:60 O 15 '45

"Unfortunately, I feel that the pictures are older than the story in appeal, and that, the story, though good, does not quite measure up to expectations, for precociousness mars it, and cutting might have profitted it. . . The adventures are good reading aloud for five year olds and first graders."
— + Kirkus 13:337 Ag 1 '45 150w

Reviewed by Margaret Miller
Library J 70:892 O 1 '45 70w

"Both authors and artist have endowed Waldo, the imperfect decoy duck, with real personality." M. C. Skinner
+ Library J 70:952 O 15 '45 70w

"[Waldo] is a duck to remember and young children will admire and love him, for his story mingles make-believe with reality in joyous fashion, qualities reflected in Helen Stone's imaginative illustrations." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p18 S 2 '45 120w

Sat R of Lit 29:44 Ja 19 '46 450w

"A very satisfying story for young children." M. K. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 30 '45 60w

"The story is told in large type on large handsome pages with brightly colored pictures; it has a sympathetic quality that will appeal to little children." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 O 14 '45 200w

Wis Lib Bul 41:113 N '45

BURTON, JEAN. Garibaldi, knight of liberty; il. by Egon Hood. 225p $2.50 Knopf

B or 92 Garibaldi, Giuseppe—Juvenile literature 45-7486

Fine biography of the Italian patriot, written for junior and senior high school ages. Emphasis is on Garibaldi's military achievements, rather than the human interest side of his life. Map. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 42:22 S '45

Reviewed by A. W. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:464 N '45 70w

"Historically, Miss Burton sheds light on the modern struggle in Italy, the struggle between church and state and between principalities. Schools, and libraries have too little literature on this important area."
+ Kirkus 13:318 Jl 15 '45 110w

"A most acceptable biography, in both content and style." R. M. Davis
+ Library J 70:823 S 15 '45 70w

New Yorker 21:139 D 8 '45 40w

"To a lover of history and of Italy this is a thrilling book, enriched by many of Garibaldi's words which even in translation retain their original strength and their Italian flavor. To one who, as a child, read De Amicis' 'Cuore,' the diary of a schoolboy inspired by the same love of country, it is an unexpected treasure. The illustrations are in perfect harmony with the text." B. W. S.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:77 N 10 '45 450w

BURTON, MILES. Not a leg to stand on. 214p $2 Doubleday [8s 6d Collins] 45-5455

Detective story.

Kirkus 13:209 My 15 '45 80w

"The plot is ingenious, but the story lags in the telling." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p14 Jl 8 '45 120w

"A sound problem, well presented and painstakingly worked out—in the dogged British style which sometimes leaves one rather cold."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 Je 30 '45 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p89 F 24 '45 90w

"An entertaining item of the mildly brain-cudgelling sort. Hardly up to this author's standard, but readable all the way." Will Cuppy
+ — Weekly Book Review p11 Jl 1 '45 150w

BUS FEKETE, LASZLO, and FAY, MARY HELEN. Embezzled heaven; a play in a prologue and three acts. 100p $2 Viking

812 45-1620

Play, adapted from Franz Werfel's novel of the same name (Book Review Digest, 1940). It is about the Czech cook who tried to gain a place for herself in heaven.

Booklist 41:206 Mr 15 '45

"The play reads well and should be purchased for all drama collections as well as for the general literature sections which would naturally include Werfel. Recommended."
+ Library J 70:266 Mr 15 '45 70w

BUSCH, NOEL FAIRCHILD. Lost continent? 204p $2.50 Harper

940.52 Europe—Description and travel. Europe—Politics 45-9632

"One of Life's editors puts down his random observations of people and personages of postwar Europe, and airs, in graceful, stylish prose, his rather subjective opinions on such things as the Tito government, British economic recovery, French women, de Gaulle as a leader, and the future of Europe, if any." New Yorker

Reviewed by Quentin Gore
Book Week p14 Ja 13 '46 500w

Kirkus 13:450 O 1 '45 130w

"A collection of brash but entertaining essays." F. S. Adams
N Y Times p5 D 23 '45 650w

"Mr. Busch, who has a journalist's eye for anecdotes, is frequently entertaining and writes of serious questions in a languidly didactic fashion that should infuriate people with preconceived opinions about them."
New Yorker 21:122 N 17 '45 80w

"Anecdotes of his personal experiences, written in breezy, journalistic style, make entertaining reading, as do the sketches of various people who particularly impressed the author, although occasionally there is a lack of relevance to the book's subject, as indicated by its title. For example, the very serious reader who is anxious to arrive at definite conclusions as to the future of Italy may question the life-history of an American diplomat occupying 18 pages of a 37-page chapter entitled 'Italy.'" R. S. Ullery
+ — Springf'd Republican p4 D 8 '45 420w

BUSH, DOUGLAS. Paradise lost in our time; some comments. 117p $2 Cornell univ. press

821 Milton, John—Paradise lost 45-6171

"In its original form this book consisted of the four Messenger Foundation lectures delivered at Cornell University in November 1944. Mr. Bush concerns himself first with the paradox of the modern reaction against Milton, as exemplified in the movement led by T. S. Eliot and F. R. Leavis. . . In chapters devoted to the religious and ethical principles, the dramatic quality, and the poetical texture of Paradise Lost, Mr. Bush disposes of such older misconceptions as Blake's that Milton was of the devil's party without knowing it, and such modern errors as Eliot's that Milton lacked a visual imagination. The portions of the book which explore Milton's Christian humanism and the doctrine of right reason speak with clear voice for the validity of Paradise Lost in our time." U S Quarterly Bkl

"I must take issue with Mr. Bush on [an] important point. One of the leaders of the anti-Milton movement is Ezra Pound. Mr. Bush uses this as a weapon in Milton's defense with a syllogism that runs something like this: Ezra Pound hates Milton, Ezra Pound is a fascist, therefore Milton is good. Mr. Bush should be ashamed of himself. That Pound is a foolish man politically has nothing to do with the fact that he is an astute critic and one of the major poets of our time. For the most part the book is intelligent, healthy counter-criticism to the current praise for the modern metaphysical school of poetry." John Senior
+ — Nation 161:186 Ag 25 '45 350w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:4 S '45 200w

BUSH-FEKETE, LADISLAUS. See Bús Fekete, L.

BUSINESS executives and corporation encyclopedia, 1944. (V 1) 2444p il $15; incl monthly suppl $25 Inst. for research in biography

650.58 Corporations—Directories. U.S.—Biography (44-4411)

"This first edition of Business Executives and Corporation Encyclopedia is made up of two parts: a who's who which lists some 15,000 business executives and gives biographical sketches of 8,000; and an encyclopedia of American corporations including chiefly those listed on the New York Stock Exchange and New York Curb Exchange, insurance companies and banks. The book is designed as a reference tool for investors, banks, corporations, libraries and newspapers. Two-thirds of the content is devoted to biographical sketches of business executives listed alphabetically, ranging from brief entries with very little biographical information to a four-column informal sketch for Charles Henry Davis which includes his activities in the 'Bull Moose' campaign of 1912 and such irrelevant items as his tribal names as Grand Sachem of the Six Nations Iroquois. The last one-third of the book is the encyclopedia of American corporations. Although these are not arranged in alphabetical order, there is an alphabetical index to companies. Under each corporation are listed the names of its officers and biographical data for its principal executives. Cross references in the main biographical section refer to these sketches." Subscription Bks Bul

"The format, on the whole, is satisfactory although the binding is rather flimsy. Buckram binding would be more satisfactory. Pictures of biographees are blurred and of limited value, since they appear without identification and are frequently so placed that they might accompany any one of several biographical sketches. . . The biographies in the book under review are uneven. Some contain no early biographical data but emphasize the business career of biographees. Others include miscellaneous material only indirectly related to their business careers. Instances of careless editing or proofreading are evident in the misspelling of names. . . Since material on the careers of business men is fragmentary and widely scattered, another contribution to this subject is welcome. Despite its defects, therefore, Busiess Executives and Corporation Encyclopedia is recommended for reference collections in larger public libraries or in business branches and for special libraries covering business fields."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 16:1 Ja '45 700w

BUTLER, CHARLES EDWARD. Cut is the branch; with a foreword by Archibald MacLeish. 61p $2 Yale univ. press

811 World war, 1939—Poetry A45-1966

"Somewhat uneven in technique, these poems, the most recent addition to the Yale series of younger poets, are marked by the bitterness of conflict between the poet and a world at war. There is a considerable range in verse forms, in aptness of phrase, and maturity of treatment. The mood of the book, with its stress on the endless pathos of war, may determine its significance and appeal. A few of the poems appeared in the New Yorker or Harper's." Booklist

"The prevailing impression of the book as a whole is that of sincerity—of the actuality of significant impression and emotions, shared with genuine, though unsteady, poetic power." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Ap 15 '45 360w

Booklist 41:250 My 1 '45•

Christian Century 62:1321 N 28 '45 30w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 23 '45 470w

"This is perhaps the most distinguished volume of American verse to have come out of the war. It is a slim volume written by a staff sgt. of the US army air forces who was formerly a young librarian. True that Mr. Butler is not a finished poet, true that his technique is often unsure and imitative, but also true that his perceptions and reactions are sensitive, deep and unique, compassionate without being soft, nostalgic without being sentimental, hard in a modern way without being merely intellectual. It may be that the book will not have a wide appeal but I believe it should have a definite, eager purpose among cultivated civilians."

+ Kirkus 13:217 My 15 '45 100w

Reviewed by F. W. Dupee

Nation 160:606 My 26 '45 280w

"The uneccentric colloquialism which was probably Rupert Brooke's best gift to recent poetry is the idiom employed by Mr. Butler, except occasionally when what he is saying delivers him over to the cadence of Housman or Yeats. A repeated note in his poems is an emotion, between pity for the victim and rage at the necessity, evoked by the slaughter in battle of the young. But this emotion is held under dignified control; it does not grow sloppy." F. C. Flint

N Y Times p8 Ag 26 '45 180w

New Yorker 21:66 Je 16 '45 30w

"Borrowing the experiences of others imaginatively as he does, to more or less good advantage, he also borrows the mannerisms of certain poets, not to such good advantage. He is best when he is nearest to himself in his material. His faults, which are those common to any really sensitive growing poet, and his virtues, which are rich and unusual, promise much for the future. It's a little wry to speak of a poet in his thirties as promising. But the book of poems Charles Butler will write after the war will be both warmhearted and salt; it will be both immediate and exalted; and it will be a very good book, if this first one is any indication." John Holmes

+ Poetry 66:280 Ag '45 900w

"Another volume of war poems simply and clearly written but not destined to leave a lasting impression. . . One might expect from the poet's experience with war to find these poems reflecting greater depth and intensity than they do, but curiously enough he does not write about war as a soldier but 'as a civilian sees war and feels war—and hates it.' " C. M. Sauer

Springf'd Republican p4d My 6 '45 180w

"Mr. Butler is a soldier who has served with the American forces in this country during the war and can write simply and movingly. . . His effort to 'choose the true voice from the voices,' to recover 'the old remembered country of the heart,' which he laments elsewhere as an exile, has its reward in the personal quality and insight of his best poems. As yet he more often states his desire for creative intimacy than fully realizes it. His style is too explicit, but it shows promise of a real inwardness."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p480 O 6 '45 190w

"Simple, personal, only occasionally satiric, seldom dramatic, and carrying not at all the inflection of a public voice, Charles Butler's war poems are quite unlike those of the more sophisticated 'intellectual' young poets of the Second World War. There is in his manner, for instance, more of Rupert Brooke than of Karl Shapiro. He is at his best perhaps in the poems, not about war at all, such as 'Big City Summer,' or 'The Horse Breaker,' with its beautiful long-flowing lines, full of wind and sunlight and the thunder of 'wild herds running free.' " Ruth Lechlitner

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 12 '45 400w

BUTLER, GEORGE PAUL, ed. Best sermons, 1944 selection. 362p $3 Ziff-Davis

252 Sermons (44-51581)

Fifty-two sermons selected from a total of 6,146 submitted to the editor and his advisory committee composed of ten Catholics, Protestants, and Jews. All the sermons were preached during 1944, and are arranged under such subjects as: The Christian life; The Christian religion; The church; The church and war; Devotional study; Faith; History; Immortality; The intellect; The Jewish New Year; Missions; The Orient; Peace; Prayer.

Reviewed by B. L. Conway

Cath World 160:568 Mr '45 270w

" 'Good Sermons' would be a more accurate as well as a more modest title. The hundred thousand ministers in the United States preach probably more than five million sermons in a year. Only a fraction of one percent of these can have passed under the scrutiny of the editor. But with the advice of competent Protestant, Catholic and Jewish committees he has selected the preachers who seem most likely to have preached some of the 'best' sermons, and worthy examples from each of these."

Christian Century 62:144 Ja 31 '45 100w

"It would certainly be dangerous to give such a book to anyone who didn't understand Christianity, for he would be thoroughly confused as to what this strange religion might be—so contradictory are the many views presented. But as examples of what is being preached from Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish pulpits it has a certain weird fascination." J. H. Titus

Churchman 159:16 My 1 '45 240w

Special Libraries 36:61 F '45

BUTLER, GERALD. Dark rainbow [Eng title: Their rainbow had black edges]. 211p $2.50 Farrar [7s 6d Jarrolds]

45-9502

A sensitive young Englishman enlists on the day his honeymoon ends, and is sent to a distant camp for training. Boredom and loneliness for his Elizabeth turns Ranny into a deserter and worse, and the book ends in tragedy.

"Ranny is not a heroic character, but Butler has made out a rather convincing case for a potential hero warped and misdirected by boredom and inactivity. He has also offered a pretty shrewd—though somewhat oblique—commentary on the nature of 'heroism' itself and the imponderable elements of accident and circumstances conditioning its manifestations." Jack Conroy

Book Week p14 N 18 '45 400w

Kirkus 13:378 S 1 '45 180w

"Poignant story of young married love written with sensitive feeling and deep understanding. Author who has a following in England is not well known to American readers. Not essential for purchase but good average story for those who enjoy reading about 'that sickly flame' of young love." S. E. Sherman

Library J 70:1026 N 1 '45 70w

"It is all too unbelievably and protractedly coy. The unhappy ending is as superficial as all that went before. It is hard to accept the notion that this is a superior enough example of current English writing to have been worth importing." A. B.

— N Y Times p16 N 18 '45 280w

"Since the deserter's motivation is seldom clear enough, the tragedy which ensues does not quite come off. Nevertheless, the chase over the now familiar English countryside and in blacked-out railway compartments is a professional piece of work, and the author's friendly attitude toward his caddish hero may be the start of a postwar trend."

New Yorker 21:118 N 17 '45 140w

" 'Dark Rainbow' exhibits the swift intelligence and the sensitive perceptions of an unusually able young modern writer. Mr. Butler is, it appears, both fresh and facile—a little too fresh and a whole lot too facile. He skims the surfaces of his story with the lightness of a swallow. Acceptable as this little novel is, we are not unreasonable, I think, in expecting more—a good deal more—at some future date of the author of 'Dark Rainbow.' " F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p10 N 25 '45 650w

BUTLER, JOHN CHARLES. Sheet metal, theory and practice; drawings by Ludger O. Genereux. 173p $3 Wiley

621.792 Sheet metal work 45-1118

"Textbook for training sheet metal workers. Most of the material is applicable to all branches of sheet metal work but written specifically for marine sheet metal work." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 41:182 F 15 '45

Library J 69:814 O 1 '44 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:10 Ja '45

BUTLER, NINA. Anahita and her dancing bear; il. by Grace Mallon. 98p $1 Hebberd

45-11144

Anahita is a little Persian girl, who dances with a snake charmer's troupe, in order to earn enough money to pay for the damage her dancing bear had caused when he robbed the honey merchant's booth. For ages ten to twelve.

Reviewed by G. E. Joline

Library J 71:58 Ja 1 '46 70w

+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 9 '45 120w

BUTTERFIELD, WILLIAM HENRY. Effective personal letters, for business and social occasions. 305p $4 Prentice-Hall

395 Letter writing 45-6966

"The primary purpose of this book is to provide a variety of specimen letters for ready reference in simplifying the preparation of personal letters in business. Some of these letter examples can be used for specific purposes with very little alteration or adaptation. Others will serve to suggest an appropriate approach to a situation, and to provide the general framework of a suitable letter." (Pref) The specimen letters are grouped under the headings: Letters of appreciation; Letters of condolence and sympathy; Letters of congratulation and good wishes; Letters of seasonal good wishes; Letters of welcome; Letters of introduction; Letters of recommendation; Letters of invitation; Miscellaneous courtesy letters; Letters soliciting contributions to charity organizations. Index.

Booklist 42:51 O 15 '45

"This book will fill a want as it concerns letters not easily located, 'personal letters'—courtesy letters every business and professional man needs."

+ Library J 70:686 Ag '45 70w

BUXTON, CHARLES RODEN. Prophets of heaven and hell. 116p $2 Macmillan [6s Cambridge]

804 Virgil (Publius Vergilius Maro). Dante Alighieri. Milton, John. Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von [A45-4966]

"This posthumous work is founded in the belief that the four poets chosen from different ages shared the same purpose, 'to embody in a single work of art a connected view of life as a whole,' and that it was time to recall the general reader to their masterpieces and answer his preliminary questions upon the beauties, intellectual history and importance to civilization at present of the four. The result is, as the title-page has it, an introductory essay." Times [London] Lit Sup

"This is an interesting book, not primarily for what it says about any of these poets. . . The interest of the book is that it gives such a vivid account of the right way to read great poetry. Charles Roden Buxton read and reread and reread again these four great poets. He maintains, and rightly, that their greatness consists not just in the beauty of their form but in the profundity of their subject." A. D. Lindsay

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 28 '45 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p406 Ag 25 '45 120w

Reviewed by Samuel Chew

Weekly Book Review p30 N 25 '45 700w

BYRD, SAM. Hurry home to my heart. 150p $2 Houghton

45-9672

Brief, impressionistic novel of small town life in the present day South. The heroine is a young girl in love with one of the town boys who goes away to war. The other part of the book is a realistic picture of D-Day on Omaha beach.

"Byrd tells his story of the bitter veteran and his colorful sweetheart with charm and understanding. There is more than a suspicion, upon finishing the book, that he is also writing the kind of plotless, formless novel that will dominate the immediate postwar years." Ralph Peterson

+ Book Week p20 N 18 '45 340w

Kirkus 13:406 S 15 '45 180w

"While this is a valid and still significant subject, the present result is bewildering. In a turgid, at times almost incoherent, style, emotional changes are rung on the problems of a beachhead operation, wounding and convalescence, the home front and false alarms of unwed motherhood. One becomes lost in the arbitrary scene-shifting, the abrupt changes of mood, and dialogue which is an odd mixture of slang and poetic effusion." F. W. L.

N Y Times p17 N 18 '45 120w

"Mr. Byrd has no more ability than a jack rabbit for creating character, but he does have a certain and rather engaging feeling for the comfortable routine of life in a Southern country town."

New Yorker 21:130 D 1 '45 80w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p22 D 9 '45 200w

C

CADY, EDWIN LAIRD. Industrial purchasing; with hints on working with purchasing agents. 256p $2.75 Wiley

658.7 Buying 45-4576

Information for students or trained purchasing agents and sales managers. Discusses inter-departmental relations and the responsibility of the purchasing department, as well as the need for cooperation for company advancement. Index.

Booklist 41:317 Jl 1 '45

"Only up-to-date book on the subject."

+ Library J 70:307 Ap 1 '45 40w

CAILLIET, EMILE. Pascal, genius in the light of Scripture. 383p $3.75 Presbyterian bd.

B or 92 Pascal, Blaise 45-3607

"This volume succeeds the author's Clue To Pascal [Book Review Digest, 1944]; the series will be completed with The Heart of Pascal, a selection of Pascal's writings." Christian Century

---

Reviewed by W. W. Burke

Cath World 161:519 S '45 450w

"Professor Cailliet is erudite, and something better; his learning is not a mass of notes but an organism in which all the parts seem to respond like the muscles of a body. He treats questions of fact capably and honestly. His language is direct, even when he deals with concepts; and the organization of his book throws into relief both the spiritual drama and the material of Pascal's thought. This is a book for the thoughtful reader only; but whoever enjoys seeing what is in man's mind will find it of immense interest." R. H. Goodale

+ Christian Century 62:885 Ag 1 '45 750w

CALDWELL, JANET TAYLOR (MRS MARCUS REBACK) (MAX REINER, pseud). Wide house. 533p $3 Scribner

45-3096

Life in up-state New York in the 1850's viewed in the light of the experiences of a vixenish red-headed widow, Janie Cauder, and her handsome Irish cousin, Stuart Coleman. Racial and religious intolerance play a large role in the book.

"Well, it's a big book, a redundant outpouring, a sincere blast at evil and a paean for good. It will make you grumble, read, think." Edith Roberts

+ Book Week p16 Ap 22 '45 600w

Booklist 41:255 My 1 '45

Kirkus 13:138 Ap 1 '45 170w

" 'The Wide House' is [not] unreadable. Like the late Elizabethan, Mrs. Caldwell holds her audience by the sheer power to mystify. She loads her sentences with explosive words (at the least provocation her characters writhe, curse, foam, shriek, pant). She adds flavor and probability to her incidents by giving them a superficial historical setting and interspersing her novel with lofty passages (like the ones on racial prejudice) which have the ring of contemporary truths. There's no denying that these are good tricks which should fool some of the people some of the time." Nona Balakian

N Y Times p6 Ap 8 '45 600w

"On the whole, this seems to be the Taylor Caldwell to end all Taylor Caldwells, and maybe high time, too."

— New Yorker 21:90 Ap 14 '45 270w

"Far from being a great work or a perfect one, 'The Wide House' is yet a good novel, apparently accurate in its descriptive background, and interesting in any case for its being one more facet in a nation's life." Edrie Van Dore

+ — Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 15 '45 480w

"The author develops her plot as if she were winding a number of balls of yarn which must all be finished at the same time. Occasionally she seems bothered over which thread to pick up next, but by the last page she has tucked each loose end into place. . . That the characters themselves never quite come alive must be laid to two counts. In the first place, Miss Caldwell is writing about people of such extreme temperaments that they are almost abnormal. . . Secondly, it is difficult to feel any real sympathy for these people." B. A. Thacher

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 8 '45 800w

Wis Lib Bul 41:68 Je '45

CALDWELL, LYNTON KEITH. Administrative theories of Hamilton and Jefferson; their contribution to thought on public administration. 244p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press

353 Hamilton, Alexander. Jefferson, Thomas. Political science A44-4703

"Dr. Caldwell attempts to prove with careful documentation that the much-publicized controversies between Hamilton and Jefferson were not fundamental. He indicates that their dissensions, which have been perpetuated by melodramatic writers, were exaggerated because of their partisan ambitions and contrasting temperaments. Aside from their political rivalry and personal antagonisms, Dr. Caldwell believes that the basic difference in their administrative theories lay in their attitude toward 'the control of political power.' Hamilton favored unitary, centralized governmental responsibility and concentration of authority. Jefferson advocated separation of power, federalism, home rule, and limited government." Am Pol Sci R

"The present study, unfortunately, is not quite free from the usual difficulties connected with a field like 'administration,' a subject matter almost as complex as it appears to be vague. Although it is clear that Mr. Caldwell is using the term 'administrative' in its broadest connotation . . . the term is neither defined nor utilized with any consistency throughout. Carelessness about a concept so fundamental to the author's study encourages frequent ambiguities of judgment. . . A credit line is due for the careful organization of this book, and for its writing, which is workmanlike and confident in tone." Adrienne Koch

+ — Am Hist R 50:811 Jl '45 700w

Reviewed by F. P. DeLancy

Am Pol Sci R 39:207 F '45 370w

"This is, indeed, a valuable book." H. R. Enslow

+ Ann Am Acad 238:212 Mr '45 400w

"Mr. Caldwell's attempt to view these two founders of our Constitutional system from the administrative point of view has proved highly rewarding. It was inevitable that the material should keep bursting out of the mold, but this in no way mars the product." J. R. Pennock

+ Columbia Law R 45:97 Ja '45 750w

"In a significant contribution Dr. Caldwell deals with ideas rather than with events; but he draws upon analysis of public policy as well as upon extensive documentation to present summaries of administrative doctrines. His condensation of elaborate and, especially in the case of Jefferson, sometimes inconsistent masses of evidence is accomplished with maturity and skill. . . This book is not only a useful digest of administrative history; with great applicability to modern problems, it offers the sagacious observations of powerful minds bent in different ways upon the public service." F. L. Burdette

CALDWELL, L. K. —Continued
+ Pol Sci Q 60:154 Mr '45 600w

CALDWELL, TAYLOR. See Caldwell, J. T.

CALIFORNIA. UNIVERSITY. Education and society. 196p $2.50 The university
370 Education—U.S. A44-4578

"The Faculties of the two Departments of Education of the University of California at Berkeley and at Los Angeles, contribute a timely volume of topical essays which add up to a discriminating analysis of the motives and the methods underlying progress in the evolution of the American educational system. The volume here noted is one of several to be offered in commemoration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the institution with which the authors are identified. In substance this particular collection of writings reflects the knowledge of past developments in the various phases of education which is essential to appropriate planning and effective guidance of future developments." El School J

"The book reports, but gives only moderate space to, the contributions of laboratory study to children's learning. One wonders how much this reflects an awareness of the limitations of the scientific laboratory—scientific in the natural science sense—as a locale for discovering how people learn. One also finds little attention given to pedagogical techniques narrowly conceived. . . But whatever the shortcomings of the papers may be from the perspective of one who is apprehensive about individually stated needs rather than a social philosophy dictating educational policy, and a narrow vocationalism undisciplined by a theory of general education for democratic living, they should give serious pause to those teachers who have not asked themselves what knowledge is for." E. S. Johnson
+ — Am J Soc 50:411 Mr '45 700w

"This volume will be read with appreciation by students of education at all stages of progress in professional training or in service." N. B. Henry
+ El School J 45:298 Ja '45 750w

"Despite two criticisms—the one relating to the absence of any form or sequence of argument that might help the reader to organize his generalizations and the other to certain factual inaccuracies—many of the essays are decidedly well written and provocative. Freeman's is one of the best. He reaffirms the validity of the scientific approach to the study of education, to which he personally has contributed a great deal." S. M. Corey
+ — Library Q 15:156 Ap '45 500w

"As one might expect, these diverse chapters vary considerably in approach, style, and merit. Some are merely summaries of elementary ideas or findings, others are more analytical and evaluative, and a few are really vital in both content and literary style. All, however, are definitely readable, and the volume as a whole presents a concise and informative picture of public education as it has developed and now operates in one of our foremost American states." E. G. Olsen
+ Social Educ 9:138 Mr '45 400w

CALKINS, RAYMOND, ed. Daniel Evans, teacher, preacher, theologian. 236p $2 Pilgrim press
B or 92 Evans, Daniel 45-620

"Dr. Evans had a long and distinguished career and was widely known in religious and theological circles throughout the country. . . Several fitting tributes to Dr. Evans by close friends and associates are incorporated in the book, but they are comparatively brief and together cover only thirty pages. The longest of these is by Frederick H. Page. The main body of the book consists of Dr. Evans' autobiography, one of his sermons, and two of his addresses." Crozer Q

Christian Century 62:792 Jl 4 '45 350w

Reviewed by T. F. Opie
Churchman 159:16 Ap 1 '45 90w

"The book as a whole is worthy of the man, and the man in every way worthy of the book." A. C. Knudson
+ Crozer Q 22:177 Ap '45 700w

"Daniel Evans is rich material for both reflective and active readers." N. F. S. Ferré
+ J Religion 25:229 Jl '45 300w

CALVIN, DELANO DEXTER. A saga of the St Lawrence; timber and shipping through three generations. 176p il $3.75 Humphries
971.4 Calvin, Delano Dexter, 1798-1884. Lumber trade. Steam navigation A45-5168

"Delano Dexter Calvin felled a tree and founded an empire. His grandson and namesake tells the story. The tree grew on a spot at the foot of Lake Ontario then nothing but a name on a map, Garden Island. From Calvin's inspiration there rose in the wilderness a community, never large in itself . . . which built or maintained a fleet of sixty vessels, steam, sail, and towing; ranged states and provinces on both sides of the international border for timber, controlled millions of acres of it, and exported millions of cubic feet of it to Europe; sent members to two Parliaments; had branch firms and agencies from Hamilton, at the head of Lake Ontario, to Quebec down the St. Lawrence, and, across the seas, to Glasgow and Liverpool. The enterprise endured through three generations, as long as there was timber to be floated from the Great Lakes to the sea." Canadian Hist R

"The author has had access to a treasure-trove, in surviving account books and correspondence, and in marine and timbering data, all sifted to the great benefit of history. His book is full but not long, and well illustrated with photographs and diagrams appropriately placed in the text. Garden Island was one of several timber and shipping exploitations on Lake Ontario, others being centered in Port Britain, Port Dalhousie, and Collins Bay on that Lake. The Calvin enterprise was unique in its extent, and is the first to be so well documented and expounded." C. H. J. Snider
+ Canadian Hist R 26:322 S '45 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p608 D 22 '45 360w

"Mr. Calvin's book is a sober, wholly factual, and eminently valuable contribution to the history not only of Canadian business but of the Dominion itself."
+ Weekly Book Review p31 N 18 '45 200w

CAM, HELEN MAUD. Liberties and communities in medieval England; collected studies in local administration and topography. 267p maps $3.75 Macmillan [15s Cambridge]
942 Local government—Great Britain 44-51017

"This is a 'collection of sixteen studies in medieval local history linked together by the belief that medieval local government can only be understood through much short range study of particular places and institutions.' It accomplishes fully the usual intent of such publications: to reach more readers than have the separate pieces scattered (in this instance from 1923 to 1939) through reviews and bulletins or as delivered before learned societies; also, and of greater importance, to make clearer the general drift and result of so large a fraction of the author's life work." Am Hist R

Reviewed by A. B. White
+ Am Hist R 50:519 Ap '45 650w

"The author's analyses are empirical, concrete, and perhaps a bit antiquarian. She proceeds on the premise that the general characteristics of local government in the Middle Ages can be described only through the concrete analysis of specific localities and particular institutions. The zeal of local antiquarians for their particular localities tends at times to weaken the comprehensiveness of their perspective; their concern is often diverted from essential movements and common tendencies to the interesting oddities which any given place, by its very particularity, affords. The author, in an introductory essay, 'In Defense of the Study of Local History,' shows herself aware of such dangers, and ably but not too briefly attempts to reconcile the apparent heterogeneity of her book by illustrating a few of the common origins she later discloses."

+ Harvard Law R 58:906 Jl '45 700w

CAMMAERTS, EMILE. Flower of grass. 176p $2 Harper [6s Cresset]

B or 92 Christianity—Evidences. World war, 1939-1945—Religious aspects 45-5796

Spiritual autobiography of this Belgian poet, essayist, and historian, who has occupied the chair of Belgian studies at the University of London since 1933.

"Cammaerts provides us with an illustration of the difficulty the Christian has in avoiding, on the one hand, political irresponsibility, and on the other, too much faith in political arrangements. If his strictures on liberal Christians at this point are very much needed, his own viewpoint seems to me hardly distinguishable from that of those Christians in Germany who failed to protest against nazism until it interfered directly with the church's function of preaching the word of God. One must not leave the impression that Cammaerts has written a belligerent or harshly critical book. He is about as irenic and charitable as a man can be who is wholly convinced that liberalism and humanism have led us into the abyss." H. F. Reissig

+ — Christian Century 62:1128 O 3 '45 850w

"Written in exquisite prose, with spiritual sensitivity and profundity of thought, this book is an absorbing record of a unique spiritual pilgrimage. Professor Cammaerts is singularly equipped as an historian and a poet to sense and express the needs and failures of the modern world; particularly does he expose the weaknesses of the humanism which once held him. Its greatest value lies in its frankly autobiographical character." J. H. Titus

+ Churchman 159:14 N 1 '45 180w

Kirkus 13:364 Ag 15 '45 280w

"Professor Cammaerts writes dogmatically and oversimply but with an ease and clarity derived from a long career of popular exposition." R. G. Davis

+ N Y Times p4 Jl 8 '45 900w

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster

Sat R of Lit 28:54 N 17 '45 550w

"To the Christian who is orthodox in Mr. Cammaerts's sense, the book will likely prove confusing, since it is concerned importantly with those intellectual issues which the orthodox Christian faces but indirectly. So many dynamic ideas are introduced only to be denied, that serious doubts on many issues may be set up in his mind. On the other hand, Mr. Cammaerts's thinking is vibrant with emotion of the sort that every religious man is happy to recognize in another. It is this faculty for intense feeling which, beyond its tendency to overcome his ability to express it, may be the factor which gives distinction to his book." J. M. Brinnin

+ Weekly Book Review p8 S 9 '45 550w

CAMP, WILLIAM MARTIN. Skip to my Lou. 401p $2.50 Doubleday

45-7981

Novel about a family from the Ozarks, lured to California by tales of high pay in the shipyards. The father of the family, Vigo, a ne'er-do-well, did not like work there any better than he had in the peaceful Ozarks. But Lou, his wife, managed to hold her little family together until the oldest boy joined the marines, and Vigo disappeared. Then Lou and the three younger children returned to their native Ozarks.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p8 Ag 26 '45 550w

Kirkus 13:259 Je 15 '45 260w

N Y Times p34 S 16 '45 500w

"Mr. Camp fills his novel with so much backwoods flavor—whole sections are puckery as a persimmon and pungent as hickory smoke—that one expects his characters to be mere backwoods types. But his people come through that dense idiom with sharpness and reality." Walter Hammond

+ Sat R of Lit 28:42 S 29 '45 750w

"The writing is amateurish and repetitious and the characters are highly overdrawn. One can scarcely imagine a woman as levelheaded and sensible as Lou being enamored of a man as lacking in character as Vigo; a family of children as obedient and sweet as the Jolly offspring: a woman as debased as Mamie, simply because she could not have children. The book is the kind that will please those who like this kind of book. The title, taken from an old ballad, and the Ozark dialect are the best parts of the book." L. B. Hill

— + Springf'd Republican p4d O 14 '45 420w

"There is a wealth of material here, with the mass migration of poor whites and Negroes, suddenly earning more money in a week than many had ever been able to earn in a year. The author writes of them with sympathy and understanding. His California background, with the trailer camps and the shipyards and housing projects, is more real than his Arkansas background. One moves through the book as part of this crowd, adjusting himself as they do, to a new life in a new place. There is a near race riot, and there is the story of Mamie with her new permanent and her red nail polish whose career as a prostitute has a terrifying end. The book holds the reader's interest to the last." C. M. Simon

+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 9 '45 600w

CAMPBELL, ALFRED STUART. Wizard and his magic powder; tales of the Channel Islands; il. by Kurt Wiese. 114p $1.75 Knopf

Folklore—Channel islands 45-4135

Collection of legends and folktales from the Channel islands. Some of the stories are of the kindly wizard of Jersey who by putting on his thinking cap is able to help his neighbors. The last tale is the legend of the Guernsey lily. For ages six to ten.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p11 Jl 15 '45 230w

Booklist 41:305 Je 15 '45

Bookmark 6:16 Ag '45

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 21:273 Jl '45 70w

"The stories are varied in background and appeal which makes it a good read aloud book for a family group, as well as good story hour material."

+ Kirkus 13:221 My 15 '45 80w

"Brief, hearty, good reading-aloud tales with large print, humorous pictures and a certain charm for eight- and nine-year-olds." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 70:587 Je 15 '45 70w

"Because of Mr. Campbell's desire to stress the fact that fairies and wizards are accepted as a part of daily life in the islands, the tales have lost something of their native poetry. But the book makes a pleasant addition to the folklore shelf of 6 to 10 year olds." A. T. Eaton

+ — N Y Times p20 My 27 '45 110w

New Yorker 21:127 D 8 '45 50w

"Kurt Wiese has made fascinating drawings for these folktales of the lovely islands that lie between England and France. The stories, good to tell and to read aloud, are, too, an excellent introduction to the longer, more literal stories of Elizabeth Goudge." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:37 My 19 '45 360w

"There is entertainment here for listeners, and for little folks who can read. Perhaps they will like best, because they are on the edge of the fairy-tale age, the concluding story of Michelle, who was really taken to fairyland in a carriage drawn by moles, and given wings there."

CAMPBELL, A. S.—Continued
+ Weekly Book Review p6 My 20 '45 270w
Wis Lib Bul 41:86 Jl '45

CAMPBELL, MRS ALICE (ORMOND). No light came on. 261p $2 Scribner [7s 6d Collins] 45-3361

Detective story.

"Pleasingly skittish."
+ Kirkus 13:76 F 15 '45 90w

"The story is a bit contrived, but the solution is logical and satisfactory to all but the murderer." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p22 Ap 8 '45 130w

" 'No Light Came On' is a fair evening's entertainment, but no great shakes." L. S. M.
Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 29 '45 200w

" 'No Light Came On' gathers momentum until the difficulty for excitable readers will be how to turn the pages slowly enough to keep track of events. In the frenzy caused by harrowing details some anxiety to skip paragraphs in order to know 'what happens next' may be pardonable, but very soon this leads to the idea that every single character, including the one who tells the story, planned to murder that widow and steal her jewels. . . The author's powers of character-drawing and scene-painting are as commanding as her sense of suspense."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p29 Ja 16 '43 150w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p16 Ap 15 '45 100w

CAMPBELL, MRS GRACE MACLENNAN (GRANT). Higher hill; il. with 15 wood engr. by Franklin Carmichael. 320p $2.75 Duell
A45-3720

Story of pioneer life among the Scotch settlers in Ontario, during the period of the War of 1812.

Booklist 41:301 Je 15 '45

"A warm, nostalgic thrill comes to the feminine reader of Grace Campbell's new book The Higher Hill. At first its source is puzzling. Then memory floods in. The long ago days when we were fifteen and brought home from the Sunday school library the books of Annie S. Swan, Amelia E. Barr and sometimes, daringly, Augusta J. Evans-Wilson. There is the same delightful air of almost reality, strewn with apple blossoms, buttered scones for tea, tall, handsome lads, a near villain, and a piquant hint of unknown sin somewhere in the world." Eleanor McNaught
+ Canadian Forum 24:242 Ja '45 210w
Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '45
Kirkus 13:92 Mr 1 '45 150w

"This is a wholesome, pleasant and undistinguished story." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p17 My 20 '45 130w

"Mrs. Campbell has a nice eye for women busy in a fragrant kitchen, a facility for picturing homey farmyard scenes, and a sincere sense of family loyalties, but in spite of that her novel is never more than a prettified story with careful historical trimmings."
+ New Yorker 21:91 My 19 '45 70w

Reviewed by Edrie Van Dore
Springf'd Republican p4d My 20 '45 300w

"Under Grace Campbell's touch life acquires clarity and beauty, for it is shot through with the glow that comes from those 'extra and unnecessary things' which often are so much more immediate in their impact on the human spirit than big but far off things. Her special gift lies in the creation of domestic atmosphere, of a feeling of home and countryside, where families and neighbors work and play and sometimes sorrow together, and the air is charged with the emotional currents that flow between them. Their loves, their loyalties, their strength to endure; in short, their daily living is made to come alive in simple, singing prose that makes for effortless reading." Jennings Rice
+ Weekly Book Review p2 My 20 '45 650w
Wis Lib Bul 41:84 Jl '45

CAMPBELL, ROBERT BHAIN. The task, with a foreword by Norman Rosten. 88p $2 Farrar 811 45-8511

Collection of forty-three poems by a young Michigan writer who died in 1940 at the age of twenty-nine. "The American wars with the Scot in him, and the poet with the economist. All this violent interior activity is subjected to the twin disciplines of an exacting ear for rhythm and a commendable respect for the traditions of his art." (Canadian Forum)

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p13 O 7 '45 60w

"In spite of its unevenness, his poetry is good reading. Would his vigor have conquered his sentimentality, his syntax have become as logical as his verse-structures, his images have fused the concentration of significance he tried to give them—in a word, would his poetry have matured in quality—had he been allowed to mature in years? . . Mr. Rosten took too much pains with the time-space poet, and not enough with his poems. Consequently the reader has no picture of their chronology, and no idea whether the poet considered the 'manuscript collection' ready for publication." Margaret Avison
Canadian Forum 22:223 D '45 210w

"It is a genuine, if minor, contribution to the many faceted crystal that is contemporary American poetry."
+ Kirkus 13:310 Jl 15 '45 80w

"Campbell's profession was poetry. He took his calling very earnestly indeed. This seriousness keeps the poems from being no more than forty-three competent metrical experiments, although his marrying of conventional forms with contemporary innovations makes many of them fresh and technically alive. But his determined zeal to reflect his times, since it in large part succeeds, relegates his poems in spirit to the past. They are already more important to the historian than to the lover of verse." Donald Stauffer
+ — N Y Times p20 Ja 6 '46 1050w

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner
Weekly Book Review p20 Ja 13 '46 550w

CAMPBELL, SAMUEL ARTHUR. Eeny, Meeny, Miney, Mo—and Still-Mo; lessons in living from five frisky red squirrels; il. by Will Forrest. 237p $2 Bobbs 599.32 Squirrels—Legends and stories
45-9842

Another story of the wild animals of the sanctuary of Wegimund. This time the chief actors are the Squints, a group of five baby red squirrels, and Duke who was on furlough. The Squints were named as in the title, and the story is made up of their activities while Duke was there, and after his address became c/o Postmaster, San Francisco.

"The adventures of these five, spiked with the homely, good-sense woods philosophy for which Sam Campbell is noted, make lively, and sometimes very moving, reading for the whole family."
+ Book Week p22 N 11 '45 130w

"It is a gay, tender account with, as usual, excellent nature observation shared in a readable way. . . You will find the volume among the children's books in the shops and libraries, but it belongs, rather, on a 'family' shelf, if there were one. It should delight all ages of animal lovers, and make good reading aloud in front of a Christmas hearthfire."
+ Christian Science Monitor p8 D 8 '45 250w

"An ineffectual, rambling, pretentious book, over and under any recognizable age group appeal."
— Kirkus 13:316 Jl 15 '45 150w

CAMPBELL, WALTER STANLEY (STANLEY VESTAL, pseud). The Missouri; il. by Getlar Smith; maps by George Annand. (Rivers of America) 368p $2.50 Farrar 917.8 Missouri river. West—History
44-51595

The latest volume in the Rivers of America series. It contains an introductory statement which discusses the river as highway, boundary, and outpost. Then the history and legend of this exciting section of the country follow, with stories of the Indians, traders, settlers, and slavery arguments, which centered round the turbulent Missouri. Bibliography. Index.

"Some day in the distant future when the Missouri, like the Tennessee, is carefully hogtied, bridled and handcuffed, when a series of dams impound its waters and control its flow, Stanley Vestal will need to write a sequel to this fascinating story of the longest American river and Getlar Smith will need to supply more of his vivid illustrations. In the meantime this book will serve the purpose very well indeed." J. T. Flanagan
+ Book Week p1 F 11 '45 1600w

Booklist 41:184 F 15 '45

"I like Mr. Vestal best perhaps when he describes the plainsmen, idealistic and individualistic, to whom the Plains are Oceans of Glory and the Bad Lands not bad lands but Lands of Awe! Certainly he is more at home with the 'cow poke' and the cattle industry than he is with steamboats and rivermen. . . Some readers of this book are liable to feel that Mr. Vestal has not done his opportunities justice. He has written a light, readable, anecdotal book, sometimes a little casual and eccentric in its choice of matter, gossipy rather than meaty, choppy rather than well integrated. But in parts of it one feels the long roll of the wide Mizzoura." H. R.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 25 '45 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '45

"26th title in the Rivers of America series, and in top brackets for its vitality, enthusiasm and unhackneyed presentation of material."
+ Kirkus 12:528 N 15 '44 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Berthel
Library J 70:68 Ja 15 '45 110w

"It is a study that anyone remotely interested in the American West will read, although he certainly will not read it for style. Mr. Vestal's prose is choppy and pedestrian, his material is not skillfully organized, and it does seem that he now and then wanders pretty far from the subject to fill his pages, as if the river itself were not overflowing with 'copy' as well as mud. Notes, an index and a bibliography enhance its value as a reference work." J. K. Hutchens
+ — N Y Times p6 Ja 28 '45 800w

Reviewed by Allan Nevins
Sat R of Lit 28:30 F 17 '45 700w

Time 45:99 Ja 29 '45 450w

"It is a tremendous panorama of history that the Big Muddy has witnessed, and Mr. Vestal, a man by inclination and long residence eminently fitted to chronicle its story, has done it proud. Because of the great mileage of the river, the book has been broken into sections, each with a sectional map at its head, and the river's story told, in general sectionally instead of chronologically. This unusual method works out very well in the present case, for the author is careful to avoid repetition. . . With a fair index and good bibliography with notes, this volume is a notable addition to the many fine books in the Rivers of America Series." Stewart Holbrook
+ Weekly Book Review p1 Ja 28 '45 1250w

Wis Lib Bul 41:46 Ap '45

CAMPBELL, WILLIAM EDWARD MARCH (WILLIAM MARCH, pseud). Trial balance; the collected short stories of William March. 506p $3.50 Harcourt
45-9325

Collection of short stories by the author of Company K (Book Review Digest, 1933). "The stories are arranged chronologically, presumably as written, the first in 1928, the last in 1944. Thus, by both this sequence and also by 'Trial Balance,' the title itself, we are invited to study the writer's development in technique and ideas." (Sat R of Lit)

Reviewed by Russell Maloney
Book Week p2 O 21 '45 300w

Christian Century 62:1321 N 28 '45 50w

"The emphasis is largely on psychological stories—I'd hoped he'd tapped the rich vein of understanding evidenced in Company K for some stories about this war—but his war stories, if you could call them that, are written in rather nostalgic vein. The civilian stories have more vitality. Highly individual, he is a writer who attracts some—repels others—but is never negligible."
+ — Kirkus 13:441 O 1 '45 170w

"March's writing is classic in its undistracted realism, its bareness, its freedom from salable amenities. And this too may make it forbidding, for he is wholly free from certain fashionable vulgarities: from salaciousness, regionalism, humanitarianism. These current trappings are worth taking one at a time. . . He can be protesting, and inept, and sometimes his satire is obvious. Yet his best work . . . [reflects] the alternate play of two qualities that Anatole France perceived in fiction that is to be classic—pity and irony." Alistair Cooke
+ — New Repub 113:754 D 3 '45 2000w

"What is surprising is not the uncommonly uneven quality of the lot but the equally uncommon durability of some of the author's best work, particularly 'The Little Wife,' as fine a study in hysteria now as it ever was. Altogether, there are six or seven pieces in the group that are worth serious attention. Not a very high score, but not an especially low one, the mortality rate among short stories being what it is."
New Yorker 21:105 O 13 '45 90w

"From the start, he has been one of the finest technicians writing the short story in English. There is no story in the book that I could find in which he does not achieve the effect he intended, nor does the editor's hand ever itch for the censorous pencil. His characterizations, whether bold or subtle, are expert. His descriptive passages are horrible or lovely; they invoke the mood he desires. His later stories show a gathering force and economy of method and also a stronger and clearer statement of his ideas. It seems to me entirely clear from 'Trial Balance' that William March is one of our most flexible and most powerful writers." John Farrar
+ Sat R of Lit 28:44 O 13 '45 850w

Time 46:108 N 5 '45 100w

"'Trial Balance' contains no footnotes, no biographical introduction, no explanatory material whatever except the dates of the stories. A few prefatory notes, giving the original publication source of each story, would have been welcome, but the stories are quite able to stand by themselves. For the time being, the balance is definitely in Mr. March's favor." Richard Match
+ Weekly Book Review p4 O 14 '45 600w

CANADAY, JOHN EDWIN (MATTHEW HEAD, pseud). Devil in the bush. 184p $2 Simon & Schuster 45-9497

The Belgian Congo is the scene of this tale of murder and mystery.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p24 N 18 '45 230w

Kirkus 13:382 S 1 '45 80w

CANADAY, J. E.—Continued

"Mr. Head's The Smell of Money was the detective-literary find of 1943, and in his new book the literary side takes precedence."

+ New Repub 113:654 N 12 '45 90w

"Mary Finney is a thoroughly competent detective and a person so well worth knowing that we should like to hear more of her." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p23 N 25 '45 130w

"The plot probably won't completely satisfy addicts of the orthodox mystery, but they'll have to admit that the atmosphere is good and eerie."

+ New Yorker 21:108 N 10 '45 80w

"Admirable, exotic."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:56 N 17 '45 40w

Time 46:108 N 19 '45 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p43 N 11 '45 130w

CANBY, HENRY SEIDEL. Family history. (Riverside press publication) 118p il $3 Houghton

929.2 Canby family 45-7187

History of the American branch of the Canby family. The author traces the Canbys back to 1565, in a little English town near Doncaster in Yorkshire, and brings the chronicle down to the present.

Kirkus 13:333 Ag 1 '45 80w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p6 Ag 26 '45 330w

"This slender volume is a valuable and interesting domestic historical document. A sort of reverse, upside-down history which describes the material, the personalities, out of which public events and ordinary history are made. Even at that, however, in any other hands but those of someone like Dr. Canby, it could be very dull, as most genealogical inquiries are. It is not dull. Dr. Canby has far too curious, and lively, and entertaining a mind for that." Struthers Burt

+ Sat R of Lit 28:32 O 6 '45 1400w

CANNELL, MRS KATHLEEN BIGGAR (EATON). Jam yesterday. 238p $3 Morrow

B or 92 45-7367

An American woman, who spent a large part of her life in France, wrote these recollections of her early life in Canada and the United States, while living in Paris during the German occupation. The heroine is the author's beautiful Canadian mother, who made life beautiful for her children under all circumstances.

"There is some 'cute' baby talk at which those allergic to phonetically rendered prattle may writhe in anguish, but on the whole 'Jam Yesterday' is as pleasantly seductive as a well-executed scenic print of the era it describes." John Norcross

+ — Book Week p22 D 9 '45 450w

Booklist 42:55 O 15 '45

"A fetching, if a bit garish, original, designed for pleasure and entertainment."

+ Kirkus 13:309 Jl 15 '45 210w

"An entertaining and refreshing picture of a family of unpredictable children and their charming mother. Recommended for all libraries." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 70:819 S 15 '45 70w

"Any four youngsters can generally stir up a considerable ruction, but the young Eatons had a real flair for jams of all kinds. Their adventures are told with humor, verve and gaiety, but no great distinction." Barbara Bond

+ — N Y Times p10 O 21 '45 440w

"A book that keeps its tang to the last word, carrying not only the excitement of childhood but the child's unfailing appetite for excitement." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 23 '45 850w

CANNON, JAMES PATRICK. History of American Trotskyism; report of a participant. 268p $2.75; pa $2 Pioneer pubs.

335.4 Communism—U.S. Socialist workers party 44-9728

"[This] book deals with the inception, growth and development of the Trotskyist movement in the United States. . . Along with the two companion volumes already published—In Defense of Marxism, by Leon Trotsky and the Struggle for a Proletarian Party, by James P. Cannon—this history provides what is in essence the balance sheet of the experience in the United States of building with the methods of Lenin a proletarian party—the fundamental instrument for the emancipation of the working class and for the socialist reorganization of society." Introd

Am Soc R 10:453 Je '45 30w

Foreign Affairs 23:338 Ja '45 10w

CANNON, WALTER BRADFORD. Way of an investigator; a scientist's experiences in medical research. 229p $3 Norton

B or 92 Medical research 45-6479

Combination of autobiography, anecdote, and sidelights on scientific research of the last half century, by an American doctor who spent fifty years as student and teacher at Harvard. "Walter Cannon arrived at Harvard an unknown boy from the Middle West and remained to become one of its most distinguished professors. In World War I his researches in the treatment of wound-shock were outstanding, and in the present conflict he pioneered the use of dried blood-plasma." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 42:16 S '45

Bookmark 6:13 N '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '45

"The work, rather than the man, presented with pleasing formality and sagacity."

+ Kirkus 13:102 Mr 1 '45 110w

"The Way of an Investigator is autobiographical. After more than a half-century of scientific investigation and social service, Cannon has modestly set down something of his life and beliefs. Following one of his own precepts, he has written with clarity and brevity. There is no straining after dramatic effects, no profound abstract ponderings, no flowery language. It is a simple, homespun account of the full and happy life of a great American. . . Cannon's book is not only a delightful and inspiring autobiography but it is also an essential handbook for anyone who plans to enter a career of scientific research." Bernard Jaffe

+ New Repub 113:229 Ag 20 '45 950w

"The reader of 'The Way of an Investigator' will meet a gregarious, entertaining and a very wise fellow-countryman. Dr. Cannon has brought 'The American Scholar' up to date, and he has added a humor and humanity that Emerson never knew. Both Emerson and Dr. Cannon view learning with high seriousness, yet the Sage of Concord would have been annoyed not amused (as Dr. Cannon was amused) if he had been the recipient of the kidding and misinterpretations which followed some of Dr. Cannon's more startling discoveries. . . It is to be hoped that many in a world which has known too much of 'Mein Kampf' will now choose to read of another life and to walk in the way of Walter Bradford Cannon." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p4 Jl 8 '45 1100w

Reviewed by Carl Binger

Sat R of Lit 28:25 S 15 '45 2500w

"It is quite impossible to find a label that can appropriately be attached to this book for purposes of classification. It is not an autobiography, although there is much biographical material in it. Neither is it strictly a critique of the scientific method, although it contains much sage advice about procedures in research laboratories. Nor is it a survey of the progress of knowledge concerning human physiology made during the lifetime of its author, although it gives many revealing glimpses of the truly revolutionary advances on that particular frontier of science. But label or no label, it is a truly great book. This is so, largely because of the fine personality, wide learning, deep understanding and companionable nature of Dr. Cannon." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:1 Je '45 900w

"The pace of this book is leisurely, and its tone is one of understatement. The casual reader will find nothing sensational, but the young scientist will obtain here the mellowed advice of an eminent leader, and the interested layman will learn something significant about the thoughts of the man in the laboratory." H. M. Davis
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 29 '45 900w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:13 D '45 280w

"This book provides rather important insight into the scientific mind, its methods, aims and attitude toward the social welfare. Dr. Cannon is not of those who regard science as simply a cold, factual producing agency, equally ready to supply synthetic vitamins or poison gas. . . Sections having wide interest are those in which the author tells of his work among the wounded of World War I, leading up to the wonderful current use of blood transfusions and of reports on his acquaintance with such great figures as Pavlov, Bayliss, Richet, Juan Negrin, Dr. Lim, of China, and Dr. Satake, of Japan." H. M. Parshley
+ Weekly Book Review p10 Ag 12 '45 550w

CANTAROW, ABRAHAM, and TRUMPER, MAX. Lead poisoning. 264p $3 Williams & Wilkins

615.928 Lead poisoning SG44-311

"This publication presents an extensive review of lead poisoning, particularly of material published within recent years. The authors discuss the absorption, transportation, deposition and excretion of lead, the pathology and pathological physiology and clinical manifestations of lead poisoning, treatment, chronic lead poisoning, lead in blood, body fluids and excretions, normal intake of lead, lead products in industry and the biochemical analysis of lead." Am Chem Soc J

"The authors have made a signal contribution in bringing the literature of lead poisoning up to date. The work has been well planned and successfully carried through. . . The book may well be recommended to all who are interested in lead." L. T. Fairhall
+ Am Chem Soc J 67:695 Ap '45 250w

"The authors have made a valuable contribution to the literature on plumbism, and this volume is, therefore, highly recommended to all those interested in occupational disease and industrial medicine." F. H. Goldman
+ Am J Pub Health 35:524 My '45 550w

Reviewed by E. P. Laug
Chem & Eng N 23:404 F 25 '45 300w

"The authors give a surprisingly complete and clearly presented account of every possible phase of the very important subject of lead poisoning. . . The typography of the volume is excellent. It closes with a well prepared index. This volume deserves wide circulation among physicians, chemists, chemical engineers and plant operating staff; and even the intelligent workman who may be exposed to lead fumes can read it with profit." J. C. Olsen
+ Chem & Met Eng 52:223 Mr '45 450w
Library J 70:489 My 15 '45 60w

"A well-documented account of the symptoms and treatment of plumbism and of the tests by which the disease may be diagnosed and studied. It is a book which industrial physicians and factory executives have been needing for some time." T. L. Davis
+ N Y Times p26 Jl 15 '45 150w

Reviewed by Leonard Greenburg
Survey 81:182 Jl '45 400w

"The book is a valuable contribution to the literature on plumbism, and will be most useful to all those interested in occupational disease and in industrial medicine."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:48 Mr '45 320w

CANTOR, NATHANIEL FREEMAN. Employee counseling; a new viewpoint in industrial psychology. 167p $2 McGraw

658.3 Employment management. Industrial relations. Welfare work in industry. Psychology, Applied 45-3267

"A study of the counseling movement in industry, presenting a definite social and psychological theory underlying employee counseling, and outlining the training, skills, and procedures needed by the personnel consultant in reaching the real causes of employee dissatisfaction—so often psychological, out-of-plant problems involving the deeper emotions. In non-technical language and with detailed illustrative material from actual cases, the book provides the data and information needed to set up a workable employee-counseling program in either the small factory or extensive industrial plant." Publisher's note

---

"A sound body of literature in the field of employee counseling is gradually developing, and this book is a real addition. In fact, it should be placed beside Management and the Worker by Roethlisberger and Dickson and Counseling and Psychotherapy by Carl R. Rogers as the most important books in the field." B. B. Gardner
+ Am J Soc 51:349 Ja '46 420w

Reviewed by E. W. Noland
Am Soc R 10:567 Ag '45 350w

"This book is a valuable contribution to the literature on employee relations. It is written for those who have done, or will do, other reading in this field. Since it is timely, concise, and readable, it is recommended to those who wish to keep abreast of developments in industrial personnel procedures in general and employee counseling in particular." D. L. Johnson
+ Ann Am Acad 241:187 S '45 550w
Booklist 41:295 Je 15 '45
Library J 70:220 Mr 1 '45 70w

CAPOZZI, FRANCIS CLEMENT. One world and one God; a twentieth century homily. 94p $1.50 Luce, J.W.

280 Church unity 45-18947

A plea for church unity and the brotherhood of man. The author does not spare his criticism of Catholics or Protestants for their part in the continuance of disunity.

Christian Century 62:1065 S 19 '45 70w

"Now that Germany is licked and will be put in her proper place, we wonder what the little writers of little books will do for illustrations of what is monsterous. Pastor Capozzi's little book is top heavy with it and mars an otherwise exquisite text by venomous expressions. . . He advances some good and original ideas. Freed of the blemishes mentioned, the book could have been expanded into twice its size and not exhausted the subjects." A. L. Byron-Curtiss
+ — Churchman 159:15 N 15 '45 120w

CARFRAE, ELIZABETH. Tomorrow sometimes comes. 258p $2 Putnam

44-51041

Novel of England beginning a few years before the war began, and extending over the early days of the bombing of London. The heroine is a young office secretary who makes the wrong marriage and later finds the man she really loves. But when her husband is caught in a raid and paralyzed for life, Lilla goes back to him.

"Ample amatory values for rental readers (not strictly up to P.L. standards)."
Kirkus 13:6 Ja 1 '45 80w

"An entertaining romance. As the title implies, Lilla finds at the end that jam tomorrow but never today isn't always so, at least not in a Carfrae book." B. S.
+ N Y Times p18 Ja 28 '45 160w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman
Sat R of Lit 28:33 F 17 '45 350w

CARFRAE, ELIZABETH—Continued

"With interesting people this might have been an interesting novel, but the verdict must be that Miss Carfrae previously has done much better." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p15 F 4 '45 120w

CARLETON, MRS MARJORIE CHALMERS. Cry wolf. 217p $2.50 Morrow 45-369

Mystery story.

"Mrs. Carleton has written a story of strange undercurrents, mystery, mood, and a great deal of suspense." Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p12 Mr 11 '45 110w

Booklist 41:185 F 15 '45

"First class."

+ Boston Globe p13 Ja 17 '45 60w

"A first, which makes fine, feverish entertainment."

+ Kirkus 12:486 N 1 '44 200w

"The plot has pace; the manse is traditionally eerie, the heroine is charming. Situations and dialogue, however, are often clumsily handled." R. D. O'Brien

+ — N Y Times p18 Ja 28 '45 80w

"Not a very orderly story, but fairly blood-curdling, at least."

New Yorker 20:80 Ja 13 '45 70w

"Agreeable."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:20 F 3 '45 40w

"Written in a subdued narrative style that is a welcome change from books with pages of badly written dialog streaming with gore, it is recommended as a tale of mounting suspense and horror." L. C.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 14 '45 70w

"Mrs. Carleton has drawn her characters with skill and the writing is excellent. The machinery of the mystery is intricate, and the bearings need a little more oil of logic." Lisle Bell

+ — Weekly Book Review p14 Ja 14 '45 170w

CARLISLE, NORMAN V., and others. Modern wonder book of the air. 316p il $2.50 Winston

629.13 Aeronautics

"As much information about aviation and every kind of airplane as can be packed into 300 pages, with almost as many pictures as pages. A book for older young people and adults." (Christian Century) Index.

Booklist 42:169 Ja 15 '46

Christian Century 62:1417 D 19 '45 40w

CARMER, CARL LAMSON. Taps is not enough. 12p $1 Holt

811 World war, 1939—Poetry 45-4801

A drama composed for CBS and given as a special broadcast on V-E Day. Its message is that we have won a victory, but not a war.

Kirkus 13:241 Je 1 '45 70w

"Recommended."

+ Library J 70:636 Jl '45 30w

"The dramatic impact of the poem is somewhat lost on the silence of the printed page where each word counts more than the over-all effect of the phrasing and the waves of rhythm which unmistakably carried its meaning to the shores of the world on V-E Day." Nona Balakian

N Y Times p8 My 27 '45 350w

"Taken as a whole, Taps Is Not Enough is a brave and strangely moving piece. . . It is plain that the faults of Taps Is Not Enough are the faults of a genre and not necessarily of Mr. Carmer. The sentimental images of hand organs in the rain, and big-league baseball, and blueberry pie are apparently inescapable. The long, loose lines of blank verse, more rhetorical than dramatic, seem to be demanded by the multitude of listeners whose response to the spoken word has been dulled by the repetitious inanity of commercials. Further, the radio poet writes with the knowledge that if he cannot move men's reason with his words, some studio hack will ferret out enough themes from Tschaikowsky to give the listener an emotional hypo and get the desired effect. And that, I believe, is the essential difficulty." A. S. Downer

+ — Poetry 67:101 N '45 800w

"Mr. Carmer has had much practice as a radio commentator. He has, in the past, written better poetry than this; but what is conveyed in this brief book is good propaganda for an active peace. It can be read and immediately understood by everyone. And it should be read." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 28:38 N 17 '45 110w

Theatre Arts 29:542 S '45 120w

Wis Lib Bul 41:99 O '45

CARMER, CARL LAMSON. Wildcat furs to China; the cruise of the sloop Experiment; il. by Elizabeth Black Carmer. 76p $2 Knopf 45-8463

Tale for children about the voyage of the sixty-foot sloop, Experiment, from New York to China—the second American ship to sail to China and return.

Booklist 42:60 O 15 '45

"Carl Carmer tells the story of the voyage, as seen by the two boys in a delightful and amusing fashion, accompanied by brilliant and appropriate pictures. Moreover, it is a true story, with incidents and names taken direct from old records of the beginnings of our trade with China." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:458 N '45 160w

Kirkus 13:436 O 1 '45 90w

"Recommended for ages eight to ten." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 70:1026 N 1 '45 80w

"Since this is a true story of real people Mr. Carmer hasn't tried to adorn it with fictional drama. He has even underplayed some of the impact with which those exotic scenes and people must have struck the boys, but he has made a readable narrative full of colorful details of this momentous voyage to warm the imaginations of 8 to 12-year-olds. There are many drawings by Mrs. Carmer, some of them stiff, but the seascapes in color are exciting." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p35 S 30 '45 180w

"Carl Carmer discovered the story of the Experiment when he was doing research on 'The Hudson' in the Rivers of America Series. He presents it in his own words, taking no liberties with characters or events. From an adult point of view, the book seems slight. . . As it stands, however, all characters and events are authentic. It should be of great interest to boys and girls too young for the usual books on the early trade with China but not one bit too young to have their imagination stirred by a stirring period in the history of the two countries. The illustrations in color and in black and white are interesting and effective." R. A. H.

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:70 N 10 '45 350w

Wis Lib Bul 41:128 D '45

CARNEGIE, DALE. Biographical roundup; highlights in the lives of 40 famous people. 233p $2.50 Greenberg

920 45-2296

"Colorful pageant of the currently important men and women of world of science, politics, sports, theater and battle fronts of the world. . . These are not biographies with the usual birth, home environment, education, social reactions and achievements but spotlights pointed to the actual reason for the subjects' importance." Library J

"Style is simple and convincing. . . Choice of personalities is timely and will fill an actual need. For older boys and girls." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 70:165 F 15 '45 70w

"A good deal of the information set forth has been bandied about in newspaper columns, magazine articles, press releases, etc. A good deal of it has not, and this fresh information is readable and interesting. Mr. Carnegie's prose is also a thing to be watched. Mr. Carnegie's knowledge is also unique. He says that Mussolini 'remained incredibly ignorant and superstitious,' and as proof cites the fact that the Duce believed that 'the moon has a profound effect upon human destiny.' One thing he does for his subjects is bound to please them. He translates their earnings into portions of a million dollars. A Carnegie hero does not make $200,000. He makes a fifth of a million. By that token we are all millionaires and the Carnegie system of success has succeeded, a fact everyone will be glad to know." Thomas Sugrue

Sat R of Lit 28:76 Ap 14 '45 400w

"Brief and anecdotal, they are competently journalistic, geared to the mental intake of the broadcast listener. Statesmen, writers, actors, soldiers and industrialists are in the net and all are heartily indorsed. The one exception is Mussolini, on whose shaved head the author unloads some choice epithets."

Weekly Book Review p21 Mr 4 '45 90w

Wis Lib Bul 41:67 Je '45

CARNEGIE ENDOWMENT FOR INTERNATIONAL PEACE. Division of international law. Handbook of international organizations in the Americas; prepared by Ruth D. Masters and other staff members of the Division. 453p $5 The endowment; Columbia univ. press

341.1 International cooperation. American republics 45-4166

"A compendium of information concerning the organization and functions of 109 international organizations which have headquarters in the Western Hemisphere." Foreign Affairs

"Dr. Masters and her colleagues drew the criteria intelligently and have assembled a mass of information that would be unavailable to the private student without endless searching. The volume will hence immediately take its place as an indispensable reference work. . . The inclusion of various North Americans, temporarily in Central American countries on business or in diplomatic posts, is to be questioned. Various other irregularities of inclusion are apparent. Both E. J. Kyle and Boaz Long are listed as ambassadors to Guatemala. . . To take only high executive officials, the volume omits the first, second, and third presidential designates, and the secretaries of labor, finance, agriculture, interior, and development of Costa Rica; the minister of agriculture of El Salvador; the secretaries of foreign relations, interior, finance, war, public works, and public education of Guatemala; the secretaries of foreign relations, finance, public works, and war of Honduras; the minister of public works of Nicaragua. . . The examples in this itemization are trivial in themselves, but they (and others) are evidence of an editorial looseness that is regrettable." R. H. Fitzgibbon

+ — Am Pol Sci R 39:1050 O '45 650w

Foreign Affairs 24:171 O '45 20w

"Many organizations that should be included are missing. . . The handbook has been prepared with great care, its information is accurate, and all interested in Inter-American affairs will be grateful to the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace for this additional aid given to a field to which it has already so largely contributed." S. G. Inman

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:30 Ag 4 '45 750w

"A valuable work of reference."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p347 Jl 21 '45 120w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:67 D '45 240w

CARR, EDWARD HALLETT. Nationalism and after. 76p $1.25 (3s 6d) Macmillan

320.15 Nationalism and nationality. International cooperation 45-9050

"In this essay the professor of international politics at the University College of Wales traces the origin and development of nationalism and discusses its future role." Book Week

"Prof. Carr, whose 'International Relations Since the Peace Treaty' (1937), and 'Conditions of Peace' (1942) established him as one of the outstanding English authorities in the field, has made another thought-provoking contribution to the literature having to do with the all-important subject of a durable peace." M. P. Akers

+ Book Week p6 O 14 '45 500w

Booklist 42:90 N 15 '45

"This little book is stimulating even though at times aggravating. The analysis of the growth of nationalism over three centuries is concise and tidy, with much brilliant comment and significant detail, but it shows the difficulties of trying to explain recent history without a deeper understanding of our class-dominated society than Prof. Carr has employed." F. R. Scott

+ Canadian Forum 25:222 D '45 280w

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 1 '45 500w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin

Commonweal 43:52 O 26 '45 750w

Current Hist 9:550 D '45 100w

"This is by no means easy reading; it is however an important recapitulation as well as a springboard for future action. It will probably be limited to students, experts, international authorities interested in general theory."

Kirkus 13:327 Ag 1 '45 150w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf

New Statesman & Nation 29:243 Ap 14 '45 500w

CARR, JOHN DICKSON (CARTER DICKSON, pseud). Curse of the bronze lamp. 214p $2 Morrow

45-5064

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p11 Jl 29 '45 170w

Booklist 42:77 N 1 '45

"Entertaining puzzlement."

+ Kirkus 13:168 Ap 15 '45 70w

New Repub 113:86 Jl 16 '45 60w

"Carter Dickson, veteran mystery-monger that he is, has surpassed himself, and that takes some doing." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 Jl 1 '45 100w

"This baffling event is finally figured out by Sir Henry Merrivale, who is not, in this instance, preoccupied with sealed rooms and who is at his best and his funniest in this mystery."

+ New Yorker 21:72 Je 23 '45 80w

"Get it!"

+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 Je 30 '45 50w

"Sir Henry Merrivale, of the War Office, all but turns himself inside out with his comic act, but the main show is Mr. Dickson's puzzle, a most elaborate affair worked out with his usual skill. A really sensational trick." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p14 Je 24 '45 130w

CARR, WELLS. Know thyself! character analysis as a game and a guide. 205p $2 Daye

137.8 Characters and characteristics. Personality. Conduct of life 44-7790

A collection of more than a hundred questionnaires, each including a dozen or more searching questions, which if answered honestly will tell the victim if he is able, alert, attractive, clumsy or charming, hotheaded and irresponsible, or imaginative and intuitive, etc. etc.

Reviewed by Leonard Bullen

Book Week p11 S 10 '44 310w

Kirkus 12:396 S 1 '44 90w

Reviewed by Robert Fontaine

Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 25 '45 300w

CARRIGHAR, SALLY. One day on Beetle Rock; il. by Henry B. Kane. 196p $2.75 Knopf

574 Natural history—Sierra Nevada mountains. Zoology—Sierra Nevada mountains 44-9635

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Far from a world at war is this vivid world untouched by man. Yet it is not a peaceful world, in one sense, for life and death are near neighbors in any forest anywhere. Nature, too, is cruel and cold. But with her it is almost always life against life and not lives against lives. Part of the pleasure of this rewarding book derives from the wood engravings by Henry Bugbee Kane, a worthy successor of Mr. Bull and a naturalist in his own right." David McCord

+ Atlantic 175:137 F '45 380w

Bookmark 6:6 Ja '45

"Sally Carrighar has chronicled the interlinked lives, over a period of twenty-four hours, of nine wild creatures in one small area of earth. . . She has done it in a sure and sensitive prose and she has done it with insight and powerful persuasion. 'One Day on Beetle Rock' is one of the small, fine company of books that are not merely popular animal stories, or merely scientific studies of animals, but animal literature." Alan Devoe

+ Sat R of Lit 28:29 F 24 '45 550w

"'One Day on Beetle Rock' is fine example of what might be done in many nooks and corners of our American wild places. It is a book of high readability and authenticity. May Sally Carrighar bring us more such observations, of the same lucidity, spice and mellow philosophy." W. G. Vinal

+ Springf'd Republican p4d F 11 '45 600w

Wis Lib Bul 41:17 Ja '45

CARROLL, GORDON, ed. History in the writing, by the foreign correspondents of Time, Life & Fortune. 401p $3 Duell

940.53 World war, 1939-1945 45-35152

Dispatches by some of the foreign correspondents of Time, Life, and Fortune, arranged chronologically to form a continuous story of the present war from 1941 to D-day in 1944. Includes brief biographical sketches of the contributors and index.

"It is not precisely a connected narrative of the European and Pacific fronts, but the reader's memory is refreshed by an introduction to each episode—and they are in chronological order. . . Carroll winnowed 8,000,000 words from those files to achieve a book-length compendium, and did his work exceedingly well. . . Examples of superb reporting are too numerous to be listed here. 'History in the Writing' deserves a prominent place on everyone's World War II bookshelf." W. F. Morse

+ Book Week p3 Jl 29 '45 220w

Booklist 42:11 S '45

Bookmark 6:9 N '45

"It would be unjust to name any 'gems' among the contributions. Every reader will pick his own favorites. And there is so much excellent reporting in the book that picking will not be easy." E. S. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 18 '45 750w

Current Hist 9:326 O '45 50w

Kirkus 13:195 My 1 '45 130w

"When Luce correspondents stick to straight combat reporting, as they generally do in this volume, they are, next to the New Yorker's overseas reporters, about the best in the business. Few men handle combat narrative more ably than Will Lang, Jack Belden and Robert Sherrod. But what they wrote for this 'book' was intended for immediate magazine publication, not for history. In 'book' form, their work lacks, except in a few passages, any interest as writing and fails to give a correlated account of the war's progress." Herbert Lyons

— New Repub 113:320 S 10 '45 480w

"Whether one likes or dislikes the publications these correspondents work for, the fact is evident, as this collection of their dispatches demonstrates, that a more able group of journalists has rarely been gathered together."

+ New Yorker 21:70 Jl 28 '45 160w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:7 D '45 240w

"A few of the dispatches attempt to analyze national moods, and these are not so successful. Once in a while—but rarely—a whiff of the self-conscious, artificial Time-style of writing creeps in; and there is an occasional bit that smacks of the downright phony. The bulk of the book, however, is clear, crisp descriptive writing by young men in the midst of the fighting." Marcus Duffield

+ — Weekly Book Review p18 Ag 5 '45 600w

CARROLL, MRS MARY (TARVER). Keep my flag flying: Daniel Webster; decorations by Addison Burbank. 284p $2.50 Longmans

B or 92 Webster, Daniel—Juvenile literature 45-8857

A biography of Daniel Webster set forth in story-book fashion for young people's reading. The title comes from Webster's last request: "Raise a lantern at the masthead of my little shallop, and . . . put the flag up. . . I want to keep my light burning, and my flag flying until I die."

"Mrs. Carroll never forgets that she is telling a story, and she has woven the dramatic incidents of Webster's life so skillfully against the picture of his day that highlights and shadows emerge with an effect of complete reality."

+ Book Week p24 N 11 '45 230w

Kirkus 13:299 Jl 1 '45 60w

"This biography has the fascination of a novel for both adults and young adults. A noble, courageous character is beautifully revealed in fine style." M. L. Goodwin

+ Library J 70:1139 D 1 '45 30w

School & Society 62:239 O 13 '45 20w

CARROLL, MRS RUTH (ROBINSON), and CARROLL, LATROBE. School in the sky. 136p il $1.75 Macmillan

45-4769

Miss Peckett of Parsons Corners, U.S.A. had a hard time teaching geography to her young pupils. So she chartered a fast plane, hired a cow to go along to supply fresh milk, and took her little class skyward and around the world. For ages six to twelve.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p14 Je 10 '45 360w

Booklist 41:305 Je 15 '45

"The book is a perfect setup for humorous situations and funny adventures, of which the authors take full advantage, while tucking in a reasonable amount of geographic information. A shade too long, but very good fun on the whole."

+ Kirkus 13:64 F 1 '45 210w

"Even though the spirit of nonsense isn't, like Miss Peckett's piloting, always sustained at the same level, it is fine and free enough to set children of six and up off on imaginary flights of their own." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p18 Je 17 '45 130w

"If the gay picture-book story is meant to teach facts about geography, it certainly allows you to acquire knowledge in a pleasant way. . . As for Miss Peckett—anyone would be willing to go to school if she were their teacher! The long, thin book is illustrated with lots of pictures that are as amusing and as pleasantly informing as the text." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:38 My 19 '45 270w

"A good time is had by all, especially the cow, and if geography emerges slightly scrambled, you don't expect serious instruction in a plane like that." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 My 6 '45 220w

CARSON, MRS JULIA MARGARET (HICKS). Son of thunder, Patrick Henry. 244p $2.50 Longmans

B or 92 Henry, Patrick—Juvenile literature 45-7826

An intimate biography of Patrick Henry, for junior and senior high schools. Beginning when Patrick was nine years old it covers the main events of his career and outlines the political issues of his time. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 42:78 N 1 '45

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:465 N '45 110w

Kirkus 13:272 Je 15 '45 110w

"A most readable biography. . . Recommended for seventh to ninth graders." Elizabeth Burr
+ Library J 70:981 O 15 '45 70w

Sat R of Lit 28:79 N 10 '45 20w

School & Society 62:175 S 15 '45 20w

Social Studies 36:332 N '45

"Although Patrick Henry played an important part in the Revolutionary period of American history, his most recent biography was published in 1891. This is not an attempt to write a new biography, but does present a very vivid picture of the dramatic career of the great Virginia leader. Being dependent upon existing sources of information, it carries with it the limitations of these sources." W. H. Mohr
+ Social Studies 36:373 D '45 240w

"The book covers the events of his career in a spirit that rouses 'an instantaneous sympathy.' "
+ Weekly Book Review p16 N 11 '45 500w

CARTER, MRS MARGERY (ALLINGHAM). See Allingham, M.

CARTER, THOMAS DONALD, and others. Mammals of the Pacific world. (Pacific world ser) 227p il $3 Macmillan

599 Mammals. Zoology—Islands of the Pacific. Zoology—Australia A45-1976

"The book on mammals is the first of seven volumes prepared under the auspices of The American Committee for International Wild Life Protection to acquaint the newcomer with the life of the Pacific region. Its authors are members of the Department of Mammals of the American Museum of Natural History. . . Animals are described as concisely as possible in their respective classes, while 'a discussion of the ancient history of the region from the standpoint of animal development and movement' is given. This provides information on 'how animals reached islands from their continental homes, how they survived after arrival, and the character of the evidence for such histories.' A geographical index is arranged alphabetically for the convenience of the reader, and many authentic drawings add to his understanding of the animals considered." Scientific Bk Club R

Booklist 41:295 Je 15 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '45

Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 My '45 180w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:49 S '45 80w

Wis Lib Bul 41:81 Jl '45

CARTWRIGHT, MORSE ADAMS, and BURCH, GLEN. Adult adjustment; a manual on the coordination of existing community services and the establishment and operation of community adjustment centers for veterans and others [pub. by the Inst. of adult education]. 84p il $1.50 Teachers college

355.115 Veterans 45-35119

"This book deals with the problem of educational and social adjustment of men and women returned from military service or displaced from war industry." (School & Society) Partial contents: The adjustment problem in the community; How an adjustment service operates; Organizing the adjustment center; The counselor and the counseling process; The tools of the counselor. Sampler record sheets, a suggested floor plan for adjustment service offices, and a bibliography are appended.

Booklist 41:332 Jl 15 '45

School & Society 61:432 Je 30 '45 20w

CARUSO, MRS DOROTHY PARK (BENJAMIN). Enrico Caruso, his life and death. 303p il $2.75 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Caruso, Enrico 45-4326

The wife of Enrico Caruso tells the intimate story of the three brief years of their very happy marriage, with glimpses of his earlier life. She describes his methods of keeping fit, his care of his voice, his many charities, and the character of the man as she knew him. Included are his letters to her, written while he was on tour, many photographs and caricatures, and a discography of Caruso's recordings.

Reviewed by Felix Borowski
Book Week p7 My 20 '45 180w

Booklist 41:285 Je 1 '45

Reviewed by C. W. Durgin
Boston Globe Je 6 '45 360w

Reviewed by B. L. Conway
Cath World 161:277 Je '45 300w

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 21 '45 450w

Kirkus 13:102 Mr 1 '45 170w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 161:41 Jl 14 '45 2100w

"A book which excites, though it is not a work of art, an imaginative response comparable with that which is directed toward a work of art. This is not only an intensely human document but one which, undoubtedly because of its rarely wonderful subject, seems to approach unconsciously the stature of art. A stone-deaf man could enjoy this book on Caruso quite as well as, if not more than, one who has often heard his singing, quite as well as one who said, 'Wonderful performance—I wouldn't have missed it for worlds.' " Marguerite Young
+ N Y Times p1 My 20 '45 1950w

"The story will give pleasure to those who enjoy true stories of married love, as well as those who like to read about famous singers. . . Mrs. Caruso's lovingly-drawn portrait of her husband is that of a great singer, who was also an extraordinarily picturesque and amiable character." Francis Rogers
+ Sat R of Lit 28:10 Je 2 '45 700w

"When the story of a man's life is told with deep personal feeling as the only motive, and is based on the reality of intimate emotional understanding, it can command an acceptance of its content as being the true nature of a man. You recognize its authenticity immediately, as you do suddenly in some portrait of a stranger; you know the person must have looked just so. Dorothy Caruso, in writing of the life and death of her husband, Enrico Caruso, is one of the rare cases in point. As you read her book you know that Enrico Caruso, working, singing, loving, suffering and dying, must have been just so." Muriel Draper
+ Weekly Book Review p4 My 20 '45 900w

Wis Lib Bul 41:82 Jl '45

CARVETH, LYSLE. Jungle boy; il. by Anne Vaughan. 103p $2 Longmans

Children in the Philippine islands 45-9772

Story of a little Igorot boy, born in the mountains of Luzon, and how, led by a magic white deer, he journeys down to the lowlands. There he learns the ways of other people and finally leads those who have befriended him back into the mountains away from the danger that threatens them.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p23 D 9 '45 160w

Booklist 42:151 Ja 1 '46

Christian Century 62:1417 D 19 '45 40w

CARVETH, LYSLE—Continued

"An appealing tale." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:456 N '45 100w

"A strange place and a strange people are successfully interpreted, in an unusual story."
+ Kirkus 13:370 Ag 15 '45 150w

"Simple, poetically told story containing a wealth of material on native life and folk beliefs. Appeal primarily for the exceptional child." H. M. Perkinson
+ Library J 70:1190 D 15 '45 80w
Sat R of Lit 28:56 N 10 '45 20w
Social Studies 37:48 Ja '46 20w

"The 10 to 12 year-old will enjoy Lysle Carveth's 'Jungle Boy.'" E. B. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 16 '45 150w

CASE, MRS JOSEPHINE (YOUNG). Written in sand. 161p $2 Houghton

Eaton, William—Fiction 45-1816

Short historical novel based on a little-known episode in American history: the invasion of Tripoli in 1805 by General William Eaton, a red-haired Connecticut Yankee bent on suppressing the Barbary pirates. His efforts were highly successful, but the victory was not followed up, due to official appeasement, and the hero died a disillusioned and unhappy man.

"Mrs. Case belongs to that school of authors who document themselves well on their historical themes and then enliven their narration with imaginary conversations. Sir Walter Scott gave great popularity to this technique, but he called his books novels. Mrs. Case has not written a novel, but a dignified, straightforward, and dramatic narrative. The average reader will regret that he was not supplied with a little more historical background at the beginning, but the story as written will hold his attention and compel his admiration." R. E. Danielson
+ Atlantic 175:137 Ap '45 420w

"'Written in Sand' is in its way a little classic. . . Not the least of the author's skills is her lucid, noble but not ornate, prose style. Also by a subtle use of psychological flashback into Eaton's early life in the opening up of the American continent, the book takes on an added richness of reference and texture." Sherman Conrad
+ Book Week p6 F 25 '45 320w
Booklist 41:237 Ap 15 '45

"One of the most thrilling and superbly handled yarns published in a blue moon." J. H. Powers
+ Boston Globe p13 F 7 '45 240w

"Because this chronicle of what happened so long ago covers ground that has been fought over in these last years by another American force and their allies, and because there is again a possibility that hard-won military victories may be discounted by civilian indecision and poor judgment, Mrs. Case's book has a particular element of timeliness. Whether timely or not, this account of Eaton's dream, his indomitable performance, and his disappointment is exciting enough to be read for its merit simply as a story of hard adventure." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 F 9 '45 700w
Kirkus 13:2 Ja 1 '45 250w

"For the audience that enjoys 'desert movies' this book may serve as an interlude, but for devotées of the historical novel 'Written In Sand' has little to offer." Alexander Cowie
N Y Times p6 F 11 '45 310w

"The book is informative and unpretentiously written and sticks quite close to fact. Furthermore, it runs to only a hundred and sixty pages, which is such a cheerful departure from the usual historical novel that there is a temptation to welcome this modest chronicle more enthusiastically than it probably deserves. It is perhaps too much to hope that Mrs. Case's work marks a trend on the part of novelists to make minor episodes of history that rate a hundred and sixty pages into books of a hundred and sixty pages."
+ New Yorker 20:83 F 10 '45 120w

Springf'd Republican p4d F 18 '45 700w

"The best part of this book lies in Mrs. Case's description of the trek across the desert. Ably she portrays the wretchedness of an army pushing forward without equipment and without food, of betrayal and vacillation in the ranks of Arabs presumably fighting for the victory of their leader, Hamet, of the bravery of the American marines and their comrades, the Greeks. But one closes the book with sense of disappointment, of curiosity whetted but not satisfied. A page note at the end of the book gives the facts of Eaton's life after his return to America. There is enough in this material to demand a greater effort to the memory of this fighting Yankee." Margaret Evans
+ — Weekly Book Review p6 F 18 '45 650w

CASE, ROBERT ORMOND, and CASE, VICTORIA. Last mountains; the story of the Cascades. 236p il $2.75 Doubleday

917.951 Cascade range 45-7717

The Cascade mountains were the last mountain barrier which the American pioneers had to surmount on their way to the valleys of the Pacific slope. This is a regional story of the Cascades of Washington and Oregon, their history, legends, geology, fishing, Indians, and economic picture. No index.

Booklist 42:35 O 1 '45

"Specialized sectional material pleasantly dispensed."
+ Kirkus 13:264 Je 15 '45 130w

"The beauty of the region and the sportsman's joy in mountain climbing on mighty Mount Rainier and beautiful Mt. Hood are also well told. This is a regional book with more than regional interest. Recommended." A. R. Eaton
+ Library J 70:683 Ag '45 90w

"I do not like the spirit of the preface. . . The preface, in effect, levels a threefold curse against anyone (local citizen, historian, or scientist) who shall be so pedantic as to point out errors in the work. This is not playing fair. . . Readably written, 'Last Mountains' will be of use and interest to those who plan to employ the old-time and now revived American phrase 'Fill 'er up!' and point the radiator-cap northwest." G. R. Stewart
+ — N Y Times p18 S 30 '45 450w

"A charming volume, easy to read and informative, without being heavy, to native and outlander alike." Stewart Holbrook
+ Weekly Book Review p20 O 14 '45 1100w
Wis Lib Bul 41:111 N '45

CASEY, ROBERT JOSEPH. Battle below. 380p il $3.50 Bobbs

940.5451373 World war, 1939—Naval operations—Submarine 45-6451

Stories of the activities and accomplishments of the men who man the United States submarines. The book was written in the spring of 1943 with the special cooperation of the Navy department, but was held up by censorship, and not published until June, 1945. Glossary. No index.

Reviewed by Lloyd Lewis
+ Book Week p1 Jl 29 '45 900w
Booklist 42:11 S '45

"A book that will hold your interest from the first page to the last—a book written with verve and distinction." B. L. Conway
+ Cath World 162:281 D '45 250w
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 11 '45 220w
Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '45
Nation 161:410 O 20 '45 280w

Reviewed by Herbert Lyons
New Repub 113:322 S 10 '45 60w

"It is an exciting and informative work. Its report of the tales, legends and routines of the sub-sea fighters is full of bite and exuberance. . . 'Battle Below' and 'This Is Where I Came In' are two volumes that will keep Mr. Casey's name his favorite green as long as memories of World War Two survive. They are first-rate reportorial works of art." Ben Hecht

+ N Y Times p5 Jl 29 '45 200w

Reviewed by A. J. Liebling

+ New Yorker 21:62 Ag 18 '45 1150w

"This book is a narrative straight as a sword, from which emerges the story of how that happy marriage of courage and skill was achieved which made our submarines more than any other group the fleet that won the war." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 28:26 N 24 '45 450w

Reviewed by G. W. Bragdon

Springf'd Republican p4 Ag 11 '45 300w

"Mr. Casey was fascinated by the grim submarine warfare and spent weeks and months making friends with men who fought under the water and drawing out their stories. Then he wrote this book in the spring of 1943 and the Navy sat on it for two years, only now releasing it for publication. But Mr. Casey's stories have lost nothing in freshness by the wait because he is a pioneer in drawing a comprehensive picture of the battles below the waves . . . Reading this collection of tales about the undersea war, one comes to share his enthusiasm—without, however, wanting to share submarine experiences. Although rather loosely strung together, and inevitably repetitious in spots, his stories are skilfully told. He succeeds admirably in conveying the terror—and the fascination—of this grisly phase of warfare." Marcus Duffield

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Jl 29 '45 900w

CASEY, ROBERT JOSEPH. This is where I came in. 307p $3 Bobbs

940.548173 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 45-6483

Records five years of the European war as it appeared to this veteran Chicago newspaperman. He draws no complete picture of the war, and gives no moralizing on the subject; he just recounts in witty prose one man's view of the European conflict.

"Here indeed is a grand book. It covers old ground, true, but it is heroic ground which will continue to find new celebrants to tell the story which changed the world. Casey's book will always be among the best of these." A. C. Spectorsky

+ Book Week p1 Jl 29 '45 750w

Booklist 42:11 S '45

Reviewed by B. L. Conway

Cath World 162:281 D '45 150w

Christian Science Monitor p12 S 4 '45 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '45

"A must book."

+ Kirkus 13:237 Je 1 '45 170w

Reviewed by Herbert Lyons

New Repub 113:322 S 10 '45 120w

"Of the many styles adopted by our war correspondents in which to wrap up their tales of battles, sufferings and derring-do, I prefer Robert J. Casey's. He is one of the few reporters of our day whose wit and personality do not strike their colors in the presence of a major event. . . 'This Is Where I Came In' is one of the important books of the war. It is a great American document." Ben Hecht

+ N Y Times p5 Jl 29 '45 750w

Reviewed by A. J. Liebling

New Yorker 21:62 Ag 18 '45 1150w

"The episodes are related in a casual way, which suggests that Mr. Casey is only telling what happened to another commuter out of Grand Central; and in consequence the most astounding characters and incidents take on a matter-of-fact air. The air is deceptive. Mr. Casey has skilfully used art to conceal art; and the persons of his dramas have been clothed, even if ever so little, in his own highly romantic and generous spirit. They are none the worse for that." W. H. Hindle

+ Sat R of Lit 28:28 S 8 '45 450w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:7 D '45 240w

"This is just about the best personal history to be found of the western front from that stormy June opening day until late in dreary autumn when Casey wearied of too many wars and went home to rest—and write. It is strictly a personal history and not at all complete, nor meant to be. Casey writes only of what he saw or heard or felt. He ignores vast sections of the front, but his own beat comes very much to life. His opinion of the various generals are not without interest." Joseph Driscoll

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Jl 29 '45 1000w

CASPARY, VERA. Bedelia. 187p $2.50 Houghton

45-5841

Detective story in which the strange character of the murderess is of more importance than the process by which her crimes are traced to her.

Reviewed by R. J. Bender

Book Week p2 Jl 15 '45 360w

Booklist 42:38 O 1 '45

Kirkus 13:207 My 15 '45 170w

"You must read 'Bedelia' to see just how slick Miss Caspary's technique of soft-shoe terror can be—how frightening she can make the chatter at an innocent dinner party, the lure of a lady's deshabille, the glimpse of a black pearl in a dresser drawer. The fact that pure evil rides home with one on the subway or yawns contentedly in the next holiday rocker is not easy for the average citizen to contemplate. As a novelist Miss Caspary has adjusted herself perfectly to the fact and contemplates it clearly. So, for that matter, does Bedelia." William Du Bois

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 1 '45 500w

"Especially for admirers of the psychological-horror story."

+ New Yorker 21:72 Ag 11 '45 90w

"Absorbing."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 Jl 28 '45 30w

"The path of the crime mystery is so well trodden and has been followed by so many clumsy boots, that any delicate walker deserves immediate recognition. A large blue bow is awarded to Vera Caspary for her story Bedelia." V. C. Clinton-Baddeley

+ Spec 175:602 D 21 '45 180w

"Unfortunately Bedelia and her associates never quite come off their paper pages. It isn't because 1913 seems a fusty era—the atmosphere is one of the best parts of the story—but rather because Miss Caspary so accentuates Bedelia's coyness and femininity that she is 100 per cent bisque doll. No bisque doll was ever a realistic murderess. Sorry, Miss Caspary." L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 15 '45 360w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p14 Jl 8 '45 250w

CASSATT, MARY. Mary Cassatt, by Margaret Breuning [ed. by Aimée Crane]. (Hyperion art bks) 46p il pl $3 Duell

759.13 Cassatt, Mary, Paintings, American 44-47987

"A number of relatively inexpensive picture books dealing with the work of individual artists and accompanied by appreciative texts have been successfully produced in recent years. This one combines an excellent selection of paintings, drawings and prints by Mary Cassatt with a well written text giving a general account of her work. The eight color reproductions, though not perfect, are reasonably faithful to the originals. The text deals briefly with Miss Cassatt's biography." U S Quarterly Bkl

---

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:2 Mr '45 170w

Reviewed by Thomas Craven

Weekly Book Review p12 Ja 7 '45 120w

CASSIDY, FRANCIS PATRICK. Molders of the medieval mind; the influence of the fathers of the church on the medieval schoolmen. 194p $2 Herder

377.8 Church and education. Fathers of the church. Scholasticism 44-8018

"This book sets itself out to study the influence of patristic authors upon the thought of medieval scholasticism. The jacket indicates that it is 'calculated to stimulate the reader's desire to acquire greater first-hand acquaintance with the Church Fathers.' For that purpose, there is provided a sketch of the lives and works of some eighteen among them —from Saint Justin in the second to Saint John Damascene in the eighth century—with particular comment upon their pedagogical concepts. The whole is prefaced with a survey of Roman education and a chapter on the ideals and techniques of Christianity; it is brought to a close with a discussion of the patristic attitude toward the pagan classics. There is an index and a bibliography of eight pages." Commonweal

Reviewed by F. Duncalf
Am Hist R 50:831 Jl '45 320w

Reviewed by J. F. Thorning
+ Cath World 160:477 F '45 300w

"A man closes this book with the awareness that only the surface has been seen; the vast riches of the patristic period are still intact for him who would understand the molding of the medieval mind." H. G. J. Beck
Commonweal 40:500 S 8 '44 380w

CASSIRER, ERNST. Rousseau, Kant, Goethe; two essays; tr. from the German by James Gutmann [and others]. (History of ideas ser) 98p $1.50 Princeton univ. press [10s Oxford]

193.2 Rousseau, Jean Jacques. Kant, Immanuel. Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von A45-3734

"The two essays that compose this little volume are contributions to an understanding of Kant's position in the thought-streams of the eighteenth century; attempted correctives of the customary view that pictures him as a solitary thinker, immured against external interests and stimuli. The first essay seeks to trace the possible influence of Rousseau upon Kant, while the second seeks to determine the possible influence of Kant upon Goethe. The first credits Jean-Jacques with having awakened the son of Königsberg 'from dogmatic slumber,' with having presented new questions to his mind and 'stimulated him to new solutions;' while the second underlines the similarities in the world-views of the great critical philosopher, to whom 'a priori knowledge disclosed no distinctive and independent realm beyond experience,' who admitted no ultimate difference between 'poetry' and 'truth.'" Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Jl 29 '45 70w

"Both essays speak eloquently for Cassirer's two main intellectual loves, namely, his never failing interest in the history of philosophy and in the great historical figures of philosophy and his passionate devotion to literary giants. . . Professors Gutmann, Kristeller and Randall have done an admirable job of idiomatically excellent translation." P. A. Schilpp
+ Christian Century 62:1007 S 5 '45 1250w

"That the editor of Kant's collected works, that the author of 'Die Philosophie der Aufklärung' brings ample knowledge and ability to his present task is certain. But I should say that it was nearly as certain that the second essay stands on surer ground than the first. This is not due to any fault or failure of Mr. Cassirer's, but due simply to the fact that Rousseau himself is so slippery, so many-sided an object." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 28:39 Je 9 '45 950w

CASTLE, WILLIAM, and JOSEPH, ROBERT. Hero's oak. 334p $3 Reader's press 45-37861

"The setting is Vermont, the time 1910 to 1936, and the people, Polish immigrants; the story, strangely and hauntingly, is primarily that of a woman and a tree—a beautiful, passionate, willful golden woman and a great towering oak about which clung a legend that the first man who came to a girl standing beneath its shade would be her husband. But this novel is more, much more, than just the story of beautiful Marja Jaworaska and the tree known as 'Krupa's Oak.' It is the story of Aleksander Krupa, the immigrant, and his victory over the land he took up in the new world and his strange defeat. And it is the story of his son, Jan Krupa, who rose in station and became a doctor, only to meet defeat through the same strange cause." Book Week

"Though there is much in the book that will give you a living and typical picture of these Poles who came to be Americans, this is not a novel on the theme of immigration as such. It is a novel about a single family who were human beings first, immigrants second, and who were in no way whatever typical. That is the second triumph of this excellent new team of authors. 'Hero's Oak' is a book to baffle and entertain and hold you to the last dramatic page." Edith Roberts
+ Book Week p4 N 25 '45 310w

Booklist 42:128 D 15 '45

"Thoroughly readable, if not distinguished."
+ — Kirkus 13:458 O 15 '45 170w

"The two young authors have produced a tour de force that is always effective, even when its melodrama is most obvious. . . 'Hero's Oak,' unfortunately, does not live up to its high promise. The fastidious reader, who insists that dramatic fitness is no longer a proper substitute for life-in-the-raw, may gag over the 'big' chapters with which Messrs. Castle and Joseph wind up the novel." James McBride
+ — N Y Times p13 N 18 '45 450w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p16 Ja 20 '46 100w

CAVANNA, BETTY. Black spaniel mystery. 221p $2 Presbyterian bd 45-3916

Mystery story for young readers.

"The characterizations are none too sound, either of adults or children—the story is marred by false values. But the beguiling cockers on the jacket will lure customers."
— + Kirkus 13:222 My 15 '45 70w

"This combination dog and mystery story is guaranteed an enthusiastic audience of readers of ten to fourteen years of age." Margaret Miller
+ Library J 70:688 Ag '45 80w

"Very popular subject combination but that does not seem to compensate for the fact that the characterizations are poor and the plot and sequence of events not at all convincing. Not recommended." A. H. McGinity
— Library J 70:689 Ag '45 80w

"This is a well-written, well constructed mystery for 12-year-olds and up, in which young people act their age." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p15 Je 3 '45 130w

"This is a mystery that can and will be read more than once." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Je 10 '45 290w

CAVE, HUGH BARNETT. I took the high road. See Miller, N. M.

CAVE, HUGH BARNETT. Wings across the world; the story of the Air transport command; il with official photographs. 176p $2.50 Dodd

940.544 U.S. Army air forces. Air transport command. World war, 1939-1945—Transportation 45-8282

Beginning the story of the Air Transport Command in 1940, this volume tells of the organization of the Command, of the part played by commercial air lines and of the early dangerous flights to the Arctic, Africa, India and the South Pacific. Includes a chapter on the Naval Air Transport Service, a discussion of postwar aviation probabilities, and a list of Army and Navy transport planes.

Reviewed by G. A. Scheuer
Book Week p11 O 14 '45 360w

Booklist 42:52 O 15 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '45

"A good, brisk job, not bothering about the deeper implications. The photographs are excellent. Air enthusiasts will want this one." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p7 S 23 '45 750w

"As one who has recently travelled around most of the world in ATC planes, I should regret that anyone might think that this book is the magnificent story of its audacity, imagination, organization, and high technical competence through which it rapidly became an instrumentality without parallel just as it is without precedent in the flying annals of man. Mr. Cave has put down only a small part of the story in an earnest but sketchy book. The rest awaits the telling." D. L. Cohn
Sat R of Lit 28:33 O 6 '45 150w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield
Weekly Book Review p4 S 30 '45 550w

CAVINS, HAROLD M. National health agencies; a survey with especial reference to voluntary associations; including a detailed directory of major health organizations. 252p $3 Am. council on public affairs

610.6273 Public health—U.S. SG45-276

"Mr. Cavins divides national health organizations into two groups: professional agencies such as the American Medical Association, and promotional agencies such as the National Committee for Mental Hygiene. He discusses factors which led to their founding, traces the development of ten of them in some detail, and describes 82 others briefly." J Home Econ

"National health agencies are fortunate to have been given a historian gifted with the ability to extract from dusty records and from the memories of the few who remain, a flowing account of the origins of 10 national agencies and of 4 of their older professional voluntary organizations. With admirable conciseness, vividness, and human touch, the significant events unfold and the reader easily imagines he was on the scene." P. S. Platt
+ Am J Pub Health 35:1093 O '45 360w

Booklist 42:105 D 1 '45

"A useful addition to any home economics department reference shelf." H. P. H.
+ J Home Econ 37:523 O '45 80w

CERF, BENNETT ALFRED, ed. Laughing stock; over six-hundred jokes and anecdotes of uncertain vintage; il. by Carl Rose. 244p $1 Grosset

817.08 Humor 45-8448

Collection of over 600 jokes, old and new, with an index ranging from actors, good and bad, to Yale, yes-men, and Yonkers.

Reviewed by C. W .Morton
Atlantic 177:163 Ja '46 180w

Book Week p4 S 30 '45 90w

Booklist 42:53 O 15 '45

Kirkus 13:455 O 1 '45 90w

N Y Times p14 O 7 '45 90w

"Mr. Cerf evidently believes that anecdotes —like dogs and blankets—should be aired regularly. Like dogs, some have lost their bite, and like blankets, some are mothy, but with 600 choices the laugh ratio is high."
Weekly Book Review p20 O 14 '45 110w

CERF, BENNETT ALFRED, ed. Modern American short stories; with an introd. and critical and biographical notes. (Forum bks) 384p $1 World pub.

Short stories—Collections 45-35161

Contents: A white heron, by S. O. Jewett; Mammon and the archer, by O. Henry; The sculptor's funeral, by Willa Cather; The heathen, by Jack London; Little Miss Marker, by Damon Runyon; A caddy's diary, by Ring Lardner; For they know not what they do, by W. D. Steele; Pigeons en casserole, by Bessie Breuer; The standard of living, by Dorothy Parker; Clay shuttered doors, by H. R. Hull; The secret life of Walter Mitty, by James Thurber; The circus, by K. A. Porter; That evening sun, by William Faulkner; The short happy life of Francis Macomber, by Ernest Hemingway; The king of the cats, by S. V. Benét; The raid, by John Steinbeck; Warm river, by Erskine Caldwell; Afternoon in the jungle, by Albert Maltz; Almos' a man, by Richard Wright; The shepherd's daughter, by William Saroyan; Livvie is back, by Eudora Welty; Hook, by W. V. Clark; The man in the Brooks brothers shirt, by Mary McCarthy; The girls in their summer dresses, by Irwin Shaw.

Booklist 42:21 S '45

"Bennett Cerf says, in his introduction to 'Modern American Short Stories,' that 'this book is intended solely to provide amusement for the reader . . . there is no thought whatever of providing a textbook or pretentious "survey of the short story in America".' Mr. Cerf's anthology therefore, can hardly be reviewed except on personal grounds: one either agrees with his literary taste or one doesn't. 'Modern American Short Stories' is, on the whole, an excellent collection, and, in spite of Mr. Cerf's assertion, representative." Howard Moss
+ N Y Times p34 S 16 '45 700w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
Sat R of Lit 28:50 O 13 '45 500w

CHAIKOVSKII, PETR IL'ICH. See Tchaikovskii, P.I.

CHALMERS, ALLAN KNIGHT. Constant fire. 172p $2 Scribner

234.2 Faith 44-9653

"Dr. Chalmers likens faith to a constant fire which both stands as a beacon and creates energy for constructive achievement. He believes that the Church has a vital part in everything that affects human life, and he defines Christianity not as a consolation for the discouraged, but as the one powerful driving force which brings courage and confidence in an uncertain world." Publisher's note

"One might wish that the book were a little better organized—it lacks coherence in spots—and that the author gave more credit to the non-pacifist Christian position. But these are minor criticisms of a work that enheartens as it opens up new resources to the reader who seeks light and strength." J. H. Titus
+ — Churchman 159:16 Mr 1 '45 120w

"The book is clearly not intended as a searching analysis of our troubled hour, though it lacks nothing in reality and genuineness. It is rather a spirited persuasion toward the achievement of spiritual resources competent in this sobering day of destiny. Written in the readily moving style of one to whom the life abounding is clearly a personal joy, people of all walks of life will find in The Constant Fire the light of good horizons rather than the mere dust of the road. The laity, including many of our younger folk, will turn to these pages with real profit." I. M. Rose
+ Crozer Q 22:188 Ap '45 250w

"This book has an appropriate title. Its pages, like a fire, have warmth and illumination. They blaze with no leaping passion, but rather burn with a steady glow. Those who doubt or are frightened may well seek the radiance of such a light." J. H. Holmes
+ Weekly Book Review p10 S 30 '45 270w

CHALMERS, AUDREY. Poppadilly. 38p il $1 Viking

45-8413

Poppadilly was a mischievous elf. On his journey one day he met a little mouse who wanted to be bigger, and the results were amusing. Picture-story book for beginners.

CHALMERS, AUDREY—Continued
Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p27 N 18 '45 180w
Kirkus 13:296 Jl 1 '45 80w

"Recommended for the easy book shelves." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 70:980 O 15 '45 40w

"Delightful and convincing characters in a fresh and amusing corner of the world of make-believe. And in Mrs. Chalmers' drawings they all seem actually to come to life on the page' A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p26 S 23 '45 120w
Wis Lib Bul 41:128 D '45

CHAMBERLAIN, ELINOR. Appointment in Manila. 232p $2 Dodd 45-9485

Mystery story.

Booklist 42:129 D 15 '45

"A lively and literate item." E. H.
+ New Repub 113:814 D 10 '45 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p32 O 28 '45 180w

"A Red Badge Prize mystery, notable more for the interest of its background than for any great skill in plotting."
New Yorker 21:116 O 20 '45 80w

"Grade-A."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:37 O 27 '45 60w

"Olivia Brander, portrait painter with a gift for bringing out hidden character traits in her doodlings, tells the tale with enough guile to keep the puzzle interest rolling along and generous helpings of local color based upon the author's life in Manila, where she was a teacher of English. You're to wonder which of Don Julian's three executives is a killer." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p20 O 21 '45 100w

CHAMBERLAIN, GEORGE AGNEW. Red house. 221p $2.50 Bobbs 45-4052

Mystery story.

Boston Globe p17 My 16 '45 40w
Kirkus 13:145 Ap 1 '45 50w

"The extremely effective build-up leads to an ending that rather flattens out. Even so, the story will give chilling, gruesome entertainment to anyone who likes the Brontë-esque type of horrors. The ominous setting, eerie characters, even the weather, round out an explosive mystery." Barbara Bond
+ — N Y Times p22 My 6 '45 150w

"Good melodrama—with romantic trimmings—and colorful treatment of too little known American cultural back-eddy."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:26 Ap 28 '45 40w

"Mr Chamberlain has written many highly readable stories, but this mystery boogie-woogie is not one of them." H. O. Austin
— Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 22 '45 150w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p14 Je 3 '45 130w

CHAMBERLAIN, NEIL W. Collective bargaining procedures; with an introd. by J. Douglas Brown. 141p $2; pa $1.50 Am. council on public affairs

331.116 Collective bargaining 44-6814

"Mr. Chamberlain discusses the techniques involved in negotiating a collective agreement as distinguished from the substantive matters which comprise it. He has done an able research job and states accurately the intricate problems involved in collective bargaining from the moment the issues are framed to the time when the final agreement is made. He discusses, inter alia, the contract proposal and how it comes into existence; the negotiating committees and how they are selected and what functions they perform; conference organization; place and time factors; procedure in conference; use of economic data; the group relationships involved, including the bargaining committee and its constituents, the company and its employees, the bargaining parties and the public, the government and other interest groups; the resolution of deadlocks; and the final agreement." Columbia Law R

"Dr. Chamberlain's book is a valuable contribution to the better understanding of the techniques of negotiating collective agreements. . . The book is well organized and clearly written. The exhaustive discussion of the process of negotiation, together with Dr. Chamberlain's criticism of existing practices, will certainly make useful reading not only for those who have only a limited knowledge of the technical questions involved, but also for those who have to solve the problems of collective bargaining in their daily work." Kurt Braun + Am Econ R 34:934 D '44 1300w

"This book is based largely on interviews with labor and employer representatives. In publishing it, the American Council on Public Affairs has performed another useful service." Garland Downum
+ Am Pol Sci R 38:1026 O '44 170w

"The major weakness of the work seems to be found in the absence of any note on the methodology of the study, and in the omission of footnotes and source references in the early chapters. These deficiencies will doubtless restrict the use of the monograph largely to union and employer representatives who are themselves involved in the procedures of collective bargaining. To these groups in particular, however, the work may serve well as a practical handbook on negotiation methods and procedures." P. A. Dodd
+ — Ann Am Acad 237:243 Ja '45 550w

"All of these matters are well known to seasoned negotiators of labor contracts. They are not so well known to others. Mr. Chamberlain renders a distinct contribution to labor literature by embodying his findings in a permanent record." Emil Schlesinger
+ Columbia Law R 45:99 Ja '45 900w

CHAMBERLAIN, SAMUEL (PHINEAS BECK, pseud). Ever New England; photographs; with an introd. by Donald Moffat. [274p] $5 Hastings house

917.4 New England—Views 44-40339

Compilation of 286 full-page photographs of New England scenes, which first appeared in the photographer's New England calendars from 1940 to 1944.

Booklist 41:285 Je 1 '45
Christian Science Monitor p15 Ag 25 '45 30w

"Each of the six States is richly represented. Vacationers will remember their winter and summer pleasures. Natives in exile will find the book next-best to a trip home—unless they find it too tantalizing. From all viewpoints Mr. Chamberlain has again done extremely well by the New England he loves." C. B. Palmer
+ N Y Times p7 My 13 '45 430w

CHAMBERLAIN, THOMAS H. il. See Generals and the admirals

CHAMBERLIN, WILLIAM HENRY. America: partner in world rule. 318p $3 Vanguard

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy. World politics. World war, 1939—Influence and results 45-6515

A discussion of the problems which face the peace-makers at the close of World war II. "The purpose of this book is to draw up a balance sheet—in advance—of the consequences of the second world war. Mr. Chamberlin discusses developments in almost every part of the world, but his argument is everywhere dominated by two major preoccupations: distrust of the Soviet Union and disapproval of the recent foreign policy of the United States." (Weekly Book Review)

Reviewed by A. O. Sarkissian
Ann Am Acad 242:164 N '45 270w
Booklist 42:4 S '45
Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 161:442 Ag '45 270w

"Mr. Chamberlin believed eight months ago that the war was heading toward a bad peace. It would be, he feared, a peace based on opportunism and appeasement, and suffering from far too much hypocrisy. The sort of evidence by which he would support that thesis is more abundant now than it was then. And it would be hard to deny his facts. Nevertheless, the total impression left by his book is hardly satisfying." P. H.
+ — Christian Century 62:1010 S 5 '45 450w

"Mr. Chamberlin needs to be reminded that, when cynicism is carried too far, it becomes moral irresponsibility. Many thinkers are just as disturbed as he at the outward state of the world. But they look beyond the outward state, because they know it is not always what it appears to be. To a larger degree than most persons suspect, the challenge confronting mankind today is one of faith. Mr. Chamberlin's book does little to bolster faith." H. M.
Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 21 '45 700w
Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '45
Kirkus 13:152 Ap 1 '45 170w
Reviewed by Albert Guérard
Nation 161:260 S 15 '45 900w
Reviewed by Hans Kohn
N Y Times p14 Jl 29 '45 850w
New Yorker 21:70 Ag 11 '45 120w
Reviewed by Frederick Gruin
Sat R of Lit 28:34 Ag 25 '45 1350w

"Mr. Chamberlin is scarcely an impartial authority either on the Soviet Union or on American foreign policy. Readers of his earlier books will recall that in 'The World's Iron Age,' published in 1941, he predicted the military defeat of Russia by Germany as 'almost a certainty,' and criticized the interventionist policies of the Roosevelt administration on the ground that 'a nation which embarks on a crusading war is far more likely to endanger its own liberty than to implant liberty anywhere else.' Now that it is Germany and not Russia which has undergone military defeat, Mr. Chamberlin is recommending policies which would logically lead to a 'crusading war.' One must conclude that Mr. Chamberlin's anti-Soviet prejudices are so strong that he cannot be regarded as a sound interpreter of world affairs." H. M. Parkes
Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 22 '45 1000w
Wis Lib Bul 41:98 O '45

CHAMBERLIN, WILLIAM HENRY. The Ukraine; a submerged nation. 91p $1.75 Macmillan 947.7 Ukraine 44-47714
For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"A reader seeking information 'in a nutshell' on the so-called Ukrainian question might be interested in this volume, although as a historical narrative it is not beyond reproach. . . On one occasion Mr. Chamberlin drops a remark, 'In view of the many acts of oppression and terrorism which characterized the Soviet regime in the Ukraine it may seem surprising that the Ukrainians showed such an uncompromising spirit of resistance to the German invaders.' An unbiased treatment of the subject might have prevented this surprise. Possibly the Ukraine is not quite as 'submerged' today as Mr. Chamberlin would like the reader to believe." G. V. Lantzeff
Am Hist R 51:158 O '45 240w

"Unfortunately, Mr. Chamberlin tends to write in paragraphs without knitting the paragraphs together. The result is that the narrative account is jumpy and at times repetitious. Yet the book as a whole is a useful and objective study." E. C. Helmreich
+ — Am Pol Sci R 39:394 Ap '45 300w

"In reading the book, one is unable to escape the impression that the author did not delve deeply into the sources of the earlier history of the Ukraine. On the other hand, chapters dealing with the more recent events bear the stamp of the author's wide knowledge in the field of Soviet history, of his own experiences there for some twelve years, and of his thorough acquaintance with the current literature in the field examined." D. F. White
+ — Ann Am Acad 238:207 Mr '45 450w

"In the present small book Mr. Chamberlin is at his best. In its less than ninety pages, one may obtain a skillfully painted picture of a people whose story of tragic suffering surpasses in pathos even that of the Irish and the Poles." Joseph McSorley
+ Cath World 161:278 Je '45 190w
Foreign Affairs 23:519 Ap '45 50w
New Repub 112:309 F 26 '45 180w

CHAMBERS, DANA, pseud. See Leffingwell, A.

CHAMBERS, ELWYN WHITMAN. See Chambers, W.

CHAMBERS, WHITMAN. Action at world's end. 222p $2 Dutton
45-2058

The time is the present, the scene a Mexican port. Lieutenant Ken Lowrie, an American naval officer, goes ashore incognito to investigate the murder of another officer, and runs into trouble. He has to fight his way thru a welter of espionage, falangists, plots and counterplots, before he finally rejoins his ship.

"OK."
+ Kirkus 13:97 Mr 1 '45 60w

"A first-rate piece of pulp magazine fiction. . . It will undoubtedly be read with pleasure by a lot of people who are avid for fast-moving stories involving these ingredients. For others, whose bent in that direction is not too highly developed, it will prove intensely annoying. They will feel that if Mr. Chambers wants to write an ingenious tale of spies and high adventure, why fine, but does he have to write in a manner so off-handedly derivative that it seems as though he were pretending not to be writing a book at all? His unrelenting series of tough-and-virile clichés gets to sounding like a satire by S. J. Perelman. Apart from this defect—and after one has got used to it—'Action at World's End' is successful." Jane Cobb
+ — N Y Times p26 Ap 22 '45 270w

"Adequate war-time thriller with finish that explodes satisfactorily all over the map. Exciting."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:36 Mr 31 '45 40w
Springf'd Republican p4d My 20 '45 110w
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p23 My 20 '45 50w

CHAMBERS'S technical dictionary; comprising terms used in pure and applied science: medicine: the chief manufacturing industries: engineering: construction: the mechanic trades: with definitions by recognised authorities; ed. by C. F. Tweney and L. E. C. Hughes; rev. ed, with supplement. 975p $6 Macmillan [20s Chambers]
603 Technology—Dictionaries 44-9657

"Comparison of the present edition with the 1940 edition, which was reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin, January 1941, [Book Review Digest, 1940, 1941] reveals that the changes in the main part of the book are slight. The same plates have been used with only an occasional change of a word or sentence. Thus most of the criticisms made in the review of the 1940 edition still hold true. Among these, one of the greatest is the very definite English emphasis in both terminology and spelling. In this, as in the 1940 edition, three- or four-line definitions

CHAMBERS'S technical dictionary—Continued
seem to predominate though many are considerably longer. The shortening of some definitions through the use of other technical terms necessitates reference to several definitions for complete understanding unless the user has some knowledge of the meaning of allied terms. . . Accent and pronunciation where indicated represent those of the contributors themselves. A check of the vocabulary shows that most of the words listed may be found in an unabridged dictionary, in some cases with clearer and fuller definitions. The bibliography has been omitted from the 1944 edition and a 24-page supplement of definitions has been added." Subscription Bks Bul

---

"A new and revised edition to bring this excellent work up to date in the inclusion of the new terms, such as the sulphonamide drugs and the improved knowledge of vitamins. . . Nearly a thousand new definitions are added in a 24-page supplement to the original."

+ Current Hist 8:249 Mr '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:58 O '44

"Chambers's Technical Dictionary is not recommended."

— Subscription Bks Bul 16:3 Ja '45 340w

CHAMPION, SELWYN GURNEY, comp. Eleven religions and their proverbial lore; a comparative study; foreword to the Am. ed. by Rufus M. Jones. 340p $3.75 Dutton [18s Routledge]

290 Religions 45-6243

"A reference book to the eleven surviving major religions of the world." (Note on title page) The book is primarily an anthology of 4890 quotations from the sacred books of Buddhism, Christianity, Confucianism, Hebraism, Hinduism, Islam, Jainism, Shinto, Sikhism, Taoism, and Zoroastrianism. Each group of quotations is introduced by a historical and descriptive sketch. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. O. Supple

Book Week p19 S 23 '45 290w

"The chapters, each written by an expert in the religion treated and many of them by adherents, give compact histories of the religions and systematic expositions of their teachings. These are excellent and informative. . . Such a presentation of the proverbial lore,' the ethical maxims and the religious insights of the eleven great religions is a help in the direction of mutual understanding." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 62:1254 N 14 '45 700w

"This study represents a vast amount of research on the part of the author, and clergymen and scholars of all faiths should find it a most valuable addition to their libraries."

+ Kirkus 13:363 Ag 15 '45 170w

"It cannot be said that the quotations adequately represent man's entire religious faith. But in showing what the great religions have in common this book has interest and importance. Certainly it is a rich mine of proverb and quotation, not all of it strictly religious, and including folk-sayings as well as excerpts from formal religious writings." N. K. Burger

+ — N Y Times p18 S 16 '45 400w

Special Libraries 36:451 N '45

Springf'd Republican p6 S 7 '45 480w

CHANDOS, DANE. Village in the sun. 260p $2.75 Putnam

917.2 Mexico—Social life and customs 45-7050

Describes month by month the year which the author spent on the shores of a Mexican lake. First he rented, then bought land and built a house. His account includes his household troubles, the village activities, his visitors, the plant and animal life about, and marriages, births, deaths, and fiestas among the villagers.

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

Book Week p11 S 30 '45 60w

Booklist 42:35 O 1 '45

Bookmark 6:11 N '45

" 'Village in the Sun' is a factual, warm and lively account of life in a typical Mexican village. It is highlighted by humor and shaded by the serious things which make up a Mexican's life." L. F. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 27 '45 300w

"This catches the contagion of leisurely atmosphere, and is replete with entertainment and disarming humor."

+ Kirkus 13:291 Jl 1 '45 130w

"Not sentimental nor condescending. Although the colloquial speech is translated too literally throughout, the book is warmly recommended." Margaret Owen

+ Library J 70:819 S 15 '45 100w

"A pleasant, sunlit book."

+ New Yorker 21:98 O 6 '45 80w

"All in all I feel that Chandos's book may well take its place alongside that other charming story of Mexican rural life, Flandreau's 'Viva Mexico,' written fifty years ago. In fact Chandos's book is better. Some novelists have captured the same flavor, writers such as Azuela, Romero, Cuellar—but they are Mexican." Carleton Beals

+ Sat R of Lit 28:46 O 13 '45 500w

" 'Village in the Sun' is full of colorful accounts of the changing Mexican scenery—of extravagant appeals to the ear, the eyes, the nose, and to that other extremely important sense, the sense of the ridiculous. To fill the cup to overflowing, 'Village in the Sun' is written like a song." F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p3 S 30 '45 750w

CHANG HSI. Chang Hsi and the treaty of Nanking, 1842; by Ssŭ-yü Têng. 191p $4 Univ. of Chicago press

327.51 China—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Foreign relations—China A45-937

"This is a fully annotated translation of Chang Hsi's diary, a Chinese eye-witness account of the Sino-British Treaty of Nanking, August, 1842. Chang was merely a favored servant of I-li-pu, the Chinese imperial commissioner, but he played such an intimate role in the negotiation of this epoch-making treaty that students of modern China will want to study this diary which has been publicly available in Chinese only since 1936." U S Quarterly Bkl

---

"Dr. Têng, in presenting a translation of a recently discovered diary of a Chinese subordinate who participated in the events leading to the Anglo-Chinese treaty of Nanking, has checked every statement against . . . other sources and verified the diary's trustworthiness and value. The contribution is a worthy one. . . Besides the translation, discussion of other accounts, and an excellent bibliography, there is an occasional note which is illuminating." L. C. Goodrich

+ Am Hist R 51:159 O '45 280w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 F 11 '45 90w

"Dr. Têng has rendered this fundamental piece of primary material still more valuable through his elaborate reference to and collation with Western materials."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:30 Mr '45 80w

CHANSLOR, TORREY (MRS ROY CHANSLOR) (TORRE BEVANS, MARJORIE TORREY, pseuds). Artie and the princess; pictures by [the author]. 107p $2 Howell, Soskin 45-4373

The adventures of an ingratiating little dragon with such a long name he was called Artie for short. On an exploring trip he met a little princess, just about his own size and the two lonely small people became great friends. When a disagreeable cousin made trouble for the princess and his no less disagreeable father made even more trouble Artie and his parents came to the rescue, with a revival of an old time dragon characteristic.

"Marjorie Torrey's illustrations are always handsome, and I am sure I have never met a sweeter little princess nor a more endearing baby dragon than in the pictures for 'Artie and the Princess.' The story will be welcomed by the cheering-section-for-fairy-stories."
+ Book Week p19 Je 3 '45 130w
Booklist 41:344 Jl 15 '45

"An engaging story . . . somewhat overlong, for the average small listener, but charming."
+ — Kirkus 13:181 Ap 15 '45 130w

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist
Library J 70:492 My 15 '45 50w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p18 Jl 8 '45 90w

"A delightful story, half fairy tale and half nursery rhyme, which children will thoroughly enjoy. The enchanting illustrations by the author are just what has come to be expected of the author of 'Penny.' " W. H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 6 '45 180w

"It is derivative, for without all the other fairy stories, it would not have been written, but familiarity of incident never hurt such a story with a little child. The colored pictures have the same charm as those in 'Penny,' though war-time paper absorbs some of their natural brightness, and the drawings are among this artist's best. All the pictures are affectionate, even when Artie spits fire and scares himself so he runs away from himself—not the easiest thing in the world to do."
+ Weekly Book Review p10 My 20 '45 220w

CHAO, MRS BU-WEI (YANG). How to cook and eat in Chinese. 262p $3.50 Day
641.595 Cookery, Chinese. China—Social life and customs 45-4266

"A Chinese woman living in America writes of differences in taste and etiquette in our country and hers, and uses in her recipes only materials easily obtainable here. Otherwise it is genuine Chinese cookery, not Chinese-American. Diagrams show seating plan for a dinner party, and how to hold chopsticks. Table of contents in Chinese and English." (Booklist) Index.

"Somewhat confusing, but charming, reading. Housewives who are currently struggling to keep meals appealing will find the book a gold mine of ideas. Most of the dishes require materials that are available. When meat is called for, a little goes a long way." E. R.
+ Book Week p8 Je 24 '45 180w
Booklist 41:282 Je 1 '45
Bookmark 6:6 N '45

"As witty a piece of writing about cooking [as] this reviewer has ever seen. A good cook looked over the recipes for the reviewer and said 'The broccoli recipe wouldn't eliminate that strong taste.' But the Chinese are like that: they want all the taste. The cook added, 'But these recipes are worth trying, just for something new. You won't know how they will come out until you have tried them. And they certainly are not fattening.' "
+ Boston Globe p17 Ap 25 '45 120w

"A real treat awaits all of you who have not seen this new book. First, you will chuckle over it; then you will try out this or that dish. . . If you want to serve real Chinese meals, you will find every instruction needed, from menus, charts for seating guests, and diagrams showing use of chopsticks to suggestions for general conduct. Terminology throughout is clever, and the way of numbering the recipes makes for quick reference." M. M. Kramer
+ J Home Econ 37:594 N '45 250w

"This is not a practical cookbook for any but the most ardent experimenters. . . But if time and interest carry one past these hurdles, here is a cookbook that not only shows how to cook and what and in what combinations, but stresses the ways in which the etiquette of Chinese food—preparation and service—varies from our Occidental ways."
+ Kirkus 13:197 My 1 '45 110w

CHAPELLE, MRS GEORGETTE LOUISE (MEYER) (DICKEY MEYER, pseud). How planes are made; drawings by Jeanne Bendick; prepared by Aviation research associates. (Young America's aviation lib) 63p $1 Harper
629.1341 Airplanes 45-8499

The sixth volume in the Young America's aviation library series. It explains just how planes are made, showing first how parts are made, how fitted together, and how the large units are made into the whole plane. Describes the work of the designers, engineers, and the test pilots. For grades four to seven.

Booklist 42:60 O 15 '45

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:466 N '45 20w
Kirkus 13:472 O 15 '45 80w

"Clearly and concisely described." A. H. McGinity
+ Library J 70:979 O 15 '45 50w

"Well made and well illustrated, it has the authentic quality and the clarity of its predecessors."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:82 N 10 '45 30w

CHAPMAN, MRS ELISABETH (COBB). See Cobb, E.

CHAPPELL, CLOVIS GILLHAM. If I were young. 217p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury
252 Sermons 45-977

"This is a volume of sermons designed especially for young people. The author is a prominent Southern clergyman who has had twenty volumes of sermons published and has a large following among Protestant church people." Kirkus

"They are full of sound sense stated in such a way that they make right living seem reasonable."
+ Christian Century 62:145 Ja 31 '45 70w

"While the text does not always live up to the stimulating chapter headings—'I'd mind my own business,' 'I'd avoid being half-baked,' 'I'd encourage myself,' 'I'd have a good time,' etc., the author knows what young people are thinking about and offers healthy advice based on scriptural wisdom." J. H. Titus
Churchman 159:15 D 1 '45 70w

"His sermons are simple, direct, practical. Older readers as well as the young will find them helpful and preachers will find many suggestions for illustrations for their own sermons."
+ Kirkus 13:57 F 1 '45 60w

CHAPPELL, MATTHEW NAPOLEON, and HOOPER, CLAUDE ERNEST. Radio audience measurement. 246p il $3.50 Daye
621.384193 Radio broadcasting. Sampling 44-5827

Study of methods and principles of measurement by which listener reaction to radio programs can be measured. Describes methods of measuring, arrangement of data, and contains tables, charts, a glossary, and index.

Theatre Arts 29:127 F '45 220w

" 'Radio Audience Measurement' will be a necessary reference work for advertising and radio men. But listeners themselves will find it of interest, showing them the methods by which their lives and habits are investigated in a relatively painless manner." James Stokley
+ Weekly Book Review p19 O 1 '44 360w

CHARLES, JOAN. Son and stranger. 265p $2.50 Harper
45-2913

A psychological novel which tells once more the story of the evils wrought in a young boy's life and character by an over-possessive mother's love.

CHARLES, JOAN—Continued

"The style, perhaps intentionally, fits precisely the nature of the major character of the book. It is soft-spoken, cultured, and deadly; fingers of remorseless steel within the velvet glove." Sterling North
Book Week p2 Ap 15 '45 310w
Booklist 41:255 My 1 '45

"A psychologically toned novel of human relationship, handled with intelligence and probity."
+ Kirkus 13:5 Ja 1 '45 170w

"In writing about this popular mal du siècle the author has avoided most of the popular pitfalls. She builds the book with care, but the structure doesn't show. She keeps her language under control, her issues clear and impersonal. And she balances nimbly between the two greatest mistakes of the genre: saying too much and suggesting too little." Nancy Flagg
+ N Y Times p28 Mr 25 '45 300w

Reviewed by E. P. Werby
Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 25 '45 360w

"Although the novel is fundamentally successful, certain minor difficulties tend to mar its pages. To produce tension the author switches often into the present tense, so often that the device becomes visible as machinery. And she overuses the little rhetorical question. But her restraint and her sensitivity in presenting a theme of classic horror in its full significance have produced a novel that is more than an unusual tour de force. That she has an individual creative talent there is no doubt." Colby Walworth
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 18 '45 650w
Wis Lib Bul 41:54 My '45

CHARLOT, JEAN. Charlot murals in Georgia; introd [by] Lamar Dodd. 180p il $6 Univ. of Ga.

751.73 Mural painting and decoration 45-2594

"The Franco-American painter, Jean Charlot, was one of the principal figures in the revival of fresco painting in Mexico twenty years ago. . . Since then he has continued to paint the Mexican scene and to write with distinction on modern art. Between 1941 and 1944, Charlot made three murals in Georgia. The first, representing a cotton gin surrounded by Negroes, is in the post office at McDonough. The second, dealing with art, music and the theatre, and the third, an allegory of the conquest of Mexico and the liberation of Europe, are at the University of Georgia. . . These murals are abundantly illustrated in this book by 178 photographs and four color plates. They include a great many details, diagrams, and a number of preliminary drawings, which enable the reader to follow the progress of the work. Jean Charlot's introduction and the extracts from his diary explain the mechanical, spatial, and esthetic problems the artist faced and the way they were solved." U S Quarterly Bkl

---

Reviewed by Sister Mary of the Compassion, O.P.
Cath World 161:440 Ag '45 600w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:1 Je '45 250w

CHASE, MARY ELLEN. The Bible and the common reader. 316p maps $2.50 Macmillan

220.88 Bible as literature. Bible, Whole—Introductions 44-47518

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Bookmark 6:3 Ja '45

"In so far as it sets forth the literary riches of the Authorized Version, it is a splendid piece of work. . . It is unfortunate for the 'common reader' of this volume that Miss Chase did not follow her own advice and confine herself to a discussion of the King James Version." E. H. Peters
+ — Cath World 161:275 Je '45 500w

"As a tribute to the literary excellence of the Bible, this volume deserves highest praise. Its perusal will bring to any minister new insights and promote better public reading of Scripture. Lovers of the Bible will be glad to know that the students at Smith have such instruction. They will welcome the contribution to a renewed appreciation of the English Bible. Most of all they will hope that it reaches the common reader, whoever he is, and wins him to the author's enthusiasm." W. N. Donovan
+ Crozer Q 22:170 Ap '45 1000w

"The title of this book makes too modest a claim. Certainly, the 'common reader' who reads this book carefully from beginning to end will, by so doing, become a much more discriminating as well as appreciative reader of that literary classic, the King James Bible. It is not hard to understand why those Smith College students who took Miss Chase's course became 'devotees' of the Bible in the King James Version, as claimed in the Preface to this book." C. E. Purinton
+ J Religion 25:230 Jl '45 300w

"An enthusiastic book-by-book exegesis which many will find useful." + Nation 160:522 My 5 '45 60w
Wis Lib Bul 41:26 F '45

"The limitations of a largely literary and humanistic approach to these writings appear even where no dogmatic scheme is desiderated. Thus Miss Chase's chapter on the traits of the Hebrews, with its emphasis on their vitality and their suffering, is somehow unsatisfying. And the general concepts of spiritual experience and progress in religious ideas are no longer recognized as the best keys to the religion of Israel. Thus, a certain level of insight of the prophets is not perhaps sufficiently brought forward. . . All in all, however, the author has done a timely and significant service in the cause particularly of the Old Testament. . . Her approach, her candor, her zest, her literary culture, her taste, her irreproachable style, all conspire to make her an exceptional interpreter of this ancient library." A. N. Wilder
+ — Yale R ns 34:745 summer '45 1200w

CHASE, STUART. Democracy under pressure; special interests vs the public welfare. (When the war ends) 142p $1 Twentieth century fund

328.368 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. U.S.—Economic policy 45-922

This is the fourth volume in the author's series of books dealing with present and post-war economic and political problems. Here Mr Chase deals specifically with the place of the so-called "pressure groups"—"big business, big labor, big agriculture"—which attempt to force their will on Congress.

"In his treatment of the complicated power relations of our society, Mr. Chase seeks refuge in exhortation and uses concepts that have no operational meaning or no 'referent' susceptible of exact analysis. The writer who addresses himself to the multitudes has a higher duty than to make complex problems seem simple. His job is to make them as clear as possible, but if today we can see only 'as through a glass darkly, then face to face' this is preferable to artificial simplification and secularized political pietism." Pendleton Herring
— Am Econ R 35:707 S '45 750w

"The book is written in Chase's usual lucid and forceful style. If widely read, it would not only bring the pressure groups into disrepute but would stimulate public thought on how to cope with the problem they pose." R. C. Angell
+ Am J Soc 51:163 S '45 300w

Reviewed by Louise Overacker
Am Pol Sci R 39:383 Ap '45 600w
Am Soc R 10:456 Je '45 100w

"The book as a whole does not add up to a carefully worked out platform for social improvement, but proves to be a pile of reform planks and some sticks. The subject matter covers a wide range of problems, but the brevity of treatment gives little opportunity for incisive and penetrating analysis of a particular problem. Mr. Chase is zealously trying to steer a middle course between laissez faire and authoritarianism. It is not an easy course to follow, even though he limits himself primarily to socially desirable ends rather than means." H. L. Childs

— + Ann Am Acad 240:170 Jl '45 650w

Reviewed by F. E. McMahon
Book Week p2 Ja 28 '45 450w

Booklist 41:146 Ja 15 '45

"It has been pointed out, in criticism of this book, that labor as a pressure group has shown a much more intelligent interest in full employment policies than has business, and that on this ground Mr. Chase should not be so critical of its pressure politics at Washington. But his book makes a very useful contribution to the process of keeping our minds open." F. H. U.
+ — Canadian Forum 25:99 Jl '45 280w

"The chief usefulness of the book resides in the extent to which it will introduce the uninformed to a more realistic conception of American economic life than the traditional generalities afford. . . Certain inconsistencies, omissions, and fallacies detract from the book's value. A more hostile tone is disclosed toward business pressure groups than toward those representing labor and agriculture. . . Stylistically, the book has the defects of its virtues. The manner is loquacious, even hearty. Knowing familiarity is achieved, perhaps more than occasionally, by the use of colloquialisms and journalese." James Travis
— + Cath World 161:88 Ap '45 550w

Christian Century 62:207 F 14 '45 500w

"Pressure groups are his anathema and, by laying bare the activities of blocs, lobbies, monopolies, and associations, where these exercise undue power for their own benefit, he performs a public service. . . Mr. Chase's book serves a first-rate purpose in showing the danger to democracy of the Me First Boys. It is short, cogent, and easy reading." G. R. E.
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 23 '45 500w

"Mr. Chase has now given us the fourth in a 'Series of Guide Lines to America's Future.' It is called 'Democracy under Pressure—Special Interests vs the Public Welfare.' It is probably the best yet issued in this series. For it does a useful job extremely well. In very simple, straightforward fashion, with his immense gift for stating clearly and understandably rather complex matters, Mr. Chase paints the picture of the pressures which so greatly influence our lives through government. He covers the ground very fully in the 142 pages of his book."
+ Commonweal 41:402 F 2 '45 1050w

Current Hist 8:443 My '45 170w

Foreign Affairs 23:515 Ap '45 30w

Reviewed by G. B. Gerard
J Home Econ 37:174 Mr '45 150w

"Cogent reasoning—clarity of presentation."
+ Kirkus 12:555 D 15 '44 400w

Reviewed by A. B. Lindsay
Library J 70:68 Ja 15 '45 120w

Reviewed by Benjamin Ginzburg
Nation 160:224 F 24 '45 1350w

"Mr. Chase has done some of the best writing of his career in this book." B. B. Seligman
+ New Repub 112:266 F 19 '45 330w

"Mr. Chase, one of the few living economists who can write on their chosen subject without sounding like an occult practitioner muttering incantations, has lost none of his ability to be clear, concise, and convincing."
+ New Yorker 20:67 Ja 20 '45 180w

Reviewed by E. E. Schattschneider
Pol Sci Q 60:473 S '45 500w

"Incisive and engrossing little book." Herbert Harris
+ Sat R of Lit 28:11 F 24 '45 1350w

"This book is a forthright analysis of pressure groups in America, written in the author's usual clear and pungent style." P. R. Grim
+ Social Educ 9:327 N '45 500w

Reviewed by Ordway Tead
Survey G 34:298 Je '45 400w

"Lively, stimulating and openly disdainful of ideology, Mr. Chase still wears the blinkers of his own beguiling theories." H. W. Baehr
+ — Weekly Book Review p20 Mr 25 '45 800w

Wis Lib Bul 41:36 Mr '45

CHASE, STUART. Tomorrow's trade; problems of our foreign commerce; guide lines to America's future as reported to the Twentieth century fund. 156p $1 Twentieth century fund

382 U.S.—Commercial policy 45-10372

"This volume is the fifth in a series of reports written for the Twentieth Century Fund by Stuart Chase to give the general reader [an] understanding of the great issues of postwar America. . . In [this] volume Mr. Chase seeks to clarify the foreign trade and investment perplexities that must be dealt with, not tomorrow, but today." Foreword

Booklist 42:142 Ja 1 '46

"Stuart Chase's gift for assimilating masses of technical and controversial material and then presenting it in a lively and highly readable form is nowhere better revealed than in 'Tomorrow's Trade'. . . This is a book which needed to be written, and one can feel relief now that it has been done. Any intelligent reader who wants to understand foreign trade can find the basic answers here." E. M. Thornbury
+ Nation 161:740 D 29 '45 600w

Reviewed by B. B. Seligman
New Repub 114:100 Ja 21 '46 300w

CHASE, STUART, and TYLER, MARIAN (MRS STUART CHASE). Men at work; some democratic methods for the power age. 146p $2 Harcourt

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy. Employment management. Regional planning 45-35098

"This book is concerned almost exclusively with . . .the conflict of the individual with the factory, and his conflict with a planned society. It is a book of concrete examples. . . Five of the chapters deal with work in factories, four of them war factories. . . Three of the chapters deal with economic planning and how to make it more democratic. One is concerned with a great watershed, the TVA region; one with a town in a western state, whose resource base was threatened, one with a small community of a hundred sharecropper families in Missouri." p. 6 and p. 7

Reviewed by Malcolm Keir
Ann Am Acad 242:196 N '45 400w

Reviewed by Justin McCarthy
Book Week p7 Je 24 '45 400w

Booklist 41:294 Je 15 '45

Bookmark 6:4 N '45

Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 16 '45 480w

Commonweal 42:414 Ag 10 '45 150w

"Chase writes so convincingly, so entertainingly that he sometimes makes things too easy, too simple—but he is readable."
+ — Kirkus 13:241 Je 1 '45 130w

Reviewed by M. S. Stewart
Nation 161:44 Jl 14 '45 170w

New Repub 113:86 Jl 16 '45 190w

Reviewed by L. M. Hacker
N Y Times p23 Jl 22 '45 1050w

"It's a good thesis, but Mr. Chase, whose book is largely an expansion of articles written for the Reader's Digest, doesn't come anywhere near making full use of it."
+ — New Yorker 21:79 Je 2 '45 120w

"Mr. Chase—gifted and penetrating when it comes to analysis—lacks the true reporter's descriptive and re-creative talents. He draws all the right inferences from his material, but its presentation becomes only a moderately interesting array of truisms instead of something that could increase our understanding by seeing what happened." Herbert Harris
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:11 Je 23 '45 700w

CHASE, STUART—Continued
Reviewed by Ordway Tead
Survey G 34:348 Ag '45 400w
Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:37 S '45 280w

"The new gospel is expounded with the author's customary eloquence and enthusiasm. Like other people, authors have a right to exaggerate the importance of their discovery and even the novelty of their prescription. Making all allowances for such exaggeration, Mr. Chase has, nevertheless, focused attention upon a vital problem of our industrial society." Philip Taft
+ — Weekly Book Review p5 Je 3 '45 1100w
Wis Lib Bul 41:81 Jl '45

CHATFIELD, HERBERT WALTER. Varnish constituents. 496p il $7 Interscience [35s Hill, Leonard]

667.7 Varnish and varnishing. Oils and fats. Gums and resins [44-7753]

"A photo-offset edition of an English technical book on the properties and uses of varnish constituents of natural and synthetic origin. Oils, natural and synthetic resins, solvents, plasticisers, waxes and pitches, driers, anti-oxidants and rubber and its derivatives." Library J

Reviewed by Grinnell Jones
Am Chem Soc J 67:505 Mr '45 330w

"This book is slightly broader in scope than in title, including some discussion of the manufacture and properties of varnishes. The author has chosen a field that has not been covered by any other recent single volume work. The result is creditable, but not outstanding. Perhaps the greatest value of this volume lies in the fact that it assembles quite up-to-date information for the general reader and student. The experienced varnish technologist may find it of limited value, but is likely to gain some new facts or concepts." W. R. Fuller
+ — Chem & Eng N 23:667 Ap 10 '45 550w

"This book is presented in a clear, very much to the point manner, and the subjects dealt with are valuable at this time." J. J. Mattiello
+ Chem & Met Eng 51:199 O '44 450w
+ Library J 70:33 Ja 1 '45 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:66 O '44

CHATTO, CLARENCE I., and HALLIGAN, ALICE L. Story of the Springfield plan; pref. by John Granrud; introd. by Clyde R. Miller. 201p il $2.75 Barnes & Noble

370.9744 Education—Aims and objectives. Toleration. Education—Springfield, Massachusetts 45-35151

"Springfield's experiment in education for racial, religious, political and economic democracy, which has been presented to the world at large through photographs, moving pictures and the radio, now comes to us as nearly in textbook form as such an understanding can. . . Dr. Granrud himself outlines the plan's essentials: to destroy four delusions and replace them by four loyalties. . . The book itself goes through the school system and into the community, showing how these principles permeate not only the curriculum but extracurricular activities." Weekly Book Review

Book Week p10 Ag 26 '45 250w
Booklist 42:31 O 1 '45
Reviewed by W. T. Gouch
Cath World 162:92 O '45 400w

"This is a comprehensive and brightly written account of the famous experiment conducted during the past five years in the schools of Springfield, Massachusetts. . . The story it has to tell is an important and significant one."
+ Christian Century 62:1097 S 26 '45 210w
Reviewed by George Streator
Commonweal 42:580 S 28 '45 180w
Current Hist 9:459 N '45 60w

"The problems of diversity of race and religion, as well as economic and industrial problems, are all present in Springfield. The book gives the reader a vivid account of how these are being met and utilized for the training of children for more efficient citizenship in a democracy." F. E. Brooks
+ El School J 46:50 S '45 650w

"Excellent material for senior high school and college social and political science classes; good for anyone over twelve years of age. Recommended for both adult and juvenile."
+ Library J 70:823 S 15 '45 70w
Reviewed by G. E. Cartmell
Library J 70:824 S 15 '45 70w
Reviewed by Naomi Horowitz
New Repub 113:381 S 24 '45 180w
New Yorker 21:74 S 1 '45 180w
Reviewed by Ordway Tead
+ Sat R of Lit 28:22 S 15 '45 280w
School & Society 62:175 S 15 '45 20w
Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 12 '45 270w
Reviewed by V. T. Thayer
Survey G 34:449 N '45 450w

"Although of primary interest to teachers, who will find suggestions on materials and methods, the book is of interest also to the general reader."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:27 D '45 220w

"The arrangement is like that of a textbook, easy to handle, but the subject matter is of interest to more than the teaching profession."
+ Weekly Book Review p18 Ag 19 '45 270w

CHAYTOR, HENRY JOHN. From script to print; an introduction to medieval literature. 156p $3 Macmillan [12s 6d Cambridge]

809 Literature, Medieval [A45-3275]

"Under five headings: 'Reading and Writing,' 'Language and Nationality,' 'Style and Criticism,' 'Prose and Translation' and 'Publication and Circulation,' some of the fundamental divergences between medieval and modern methods of composition, appreciation and dissemination of literary productions are discussed by Dr. Chaytor with admirable lucidity and with a wealth of illustrative examples taken mainly from the early French and Provençal writers." Times [London] Lit Sup

"Many people must have felt a desire to learn how, in the Middle Ages, 'books' were made, published, and circulated, before the days of printing. . . These and other questions Dr. Chaytor sets himself to answer; and it is not easy to over-praise the skill with which he has done so in the space at his disposal, or the ease and lightness with which he wears his learning." E. E. Kellett
+ New Statesman & Nation 29:145 Mr 3 '45 850w
Publisher's Weekly 147:2222 Je 2 '45 420w

"It seems a pity that this valuable book, which in its sub-title claims to be 'an introduction to medieval literature,' should so predominantly be based on the author's special field of studies, that of Romance philology. It involves a serious falsification of perspective to view the current reading matter of the Middle Ages mainly as identical with the literatures composed in the different vernaculars, and practically to ignore medieval Latin. . . If the author had made it clear that his study was to be regarded as an examination of certain most important and widely applicable problems of medieval literary history from the specialized angle of the evidence afforded by the Troubadours and the Chansons de Geste, there could be nothing but the highest praise for this learned and very readable book."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p92 F 24 '45 700w

CHENEY, SHELDON WARREN. Men who have walked with God. 395p $3.75 Knopf

149.3 Mysticism 45-8427

"Being the story of mysticism through the ages told in the biographies of representative seers and saints with excerpts from their writings and sayings." (Subtitle) Contents: The golden age and the mystic poet Lao-Tse; The Buddha, the great light and the bliss of Nirvana; The age of reason in Greece: Pythagoras and Plato; The tardy flowering of Greek mysticism: Plotinus; Christian mysticism, from the Founders to Saint Bernard; The mediaeval flowering: Eckhart and the friends of God; Fra Angelico, the saintly painter and tool of God; Jacob Boehme, the shoemaker-illuminate of the Reformation; Brother Lawrence, the lay monk who attained unclouded vision; A mystic in the age of enlightened scepticism: William Blake. Index.

Reviewed by F. E. McMahon
Book Week p15 S 23 '45 300w

Booklist 42:51 O 15 '45

"This is a lovely book for a beginning. Mr. Cheney is very 'adjectival,' as the Scots say, but he has a most discriminating taste in quotations and he lets every one he mentions speak for itself. And he is aware, throughout his often gushing enthusiasm, that the 'slow crab-like movement sideways,' which is how E. M. Forster describes humanity's progress, is something subtle and elusive, a snark that may well be a boojum after all. But he uses his own yard-stick, and sometimes beats the reader with it, too. . . Mr. Cheney's book is so full of good things, and is so readable, so quotable, so well told, that it is impossible to put down, and it should be as steady a seller in the field of comparative mysticism as Henry Osborn Taylor's 'Medieval Mind' was in its day and way." Anne Fremantle
+ — Commonweal 43:51 O 26 '45 900w

Kirkus 13:364 Ag 15 '45 170w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue
N Y Times p7 O 7 '45 1500w

"The essays are superb and, while not popular in the common, or Will Durant, sense, have been written for readers who have made no special study of the subject."
+ New Yorker 21:86 S 22 '45 120w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:16 D '45 280w

"Mr. Cheney's difficulty is that he wishes to claim for mysticism more than mysticism will itself support, and he sweeps between his covers nearly any religious aspiration, nearly any form of idealism, nearly any esthetic of einfühlung. It is mysticism which suffers. In his inclusiveness, Mr. Cheney describes a state of mind without the claims either of a rational theology, and austere ethics founded on an adequate sense of sin and guilt, or of that 'teleological suspension of ethics' which is the true condition of mysticism and in which its genuine contribution to thought and life must exist if it exists at all." Mark Schorer
Weekly Book Review p4 Ja 6 '46 1500w

CHERNEV, IRVING, and HARKNESS, KENNETH. Invitation to chess; a picture guide to the royal game. 221p $2 Simon & Schuster
794.1 Chess 45-3974

By means of many illustrations, both diagrams and photographs, and simple explanatory texts, this book is designed to teach the novice the principles of chess and show him how he can enjoy playing the game even though he does not become a "master." The authors are editors of the magazine Chess Review.

Booklist 41:297 Je 15 '45

"In this book, the text often takes second place to photographs and diagrams. Words are so carefully chosen and organized, in explanation of the illustrations, that the publishers would seem justified in saying that the book is specifically designed for persons who don't know one chess piece from another." E. C. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 My 10 '45 330w

"The latest and the best of all chess primers." Dana Brannan
+ N Y Times p10 My 20 '45 310w

"Clear and cerebral, as a book on chess should be."
+ New Yorker 21:92 My 19 '45 60w

"The authors point out that the thrilling game of chess deserves a far greater popularity in our land. Their book will certainly help achieve that goal." Herschel Levin
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Je 7 '45 240w

CHERNICK, JACK J., and HELLICKSON, GEORGE CARROLL. Guaranteed annual wages. 146p $2.50 Univ. of Minn.
331.23 Wages A45-3109

A report on the extent of guaranteed annual wage plans now in force in the United States, and on its advisability as a solution to intermittent employment and indirectly to other forms of unemployment. The authors are a University of Manitoba professor and a veteran newspaperman, now on the staff of the Minneapolis Star-Journal. Bibliography. No index.

"This study is well worth reading. It presents the theory of the guaranteed annual wage clearly. Perhaps the difficulties of its practice need fuller attention." C. L. Larsen
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1235 D '45 350w

"This book is highly recommended for those who wish to be informed on what is likely to be a matter of increasing public interest and controversy in the period ahead." K. B. Williams
+ Ann Am Acad 242:195 N '45 500w

Booklist 41:316 Jl 1 '45

Reviewed by E. A. Beder
Canadian Forum 25:144 S '45 300w

Commonweal 42:242 Je 22 '45 750w

Eng N 135:116 N 1 '45 240w

"With the appointment of a national committee to study the question of guaranteed annual wages, universal interest in this excellent book on the subject should be presumed."
+ Kirkus 13:154 Ap 1 '45 170w

New Repub 113:54 Jl 9 '45 240w

"Messrs. Chernich and Hellickson have given fairly popular treatment to a subject which has many technical facets. It is one of the best stimuli to discussion of the annual wage so far available." J. A. Loftus
+ N Y Times p24 S 23 '45 900w

"Within the limits they have set themselves, the authors . . . have turned out a readable, informative, and useful little book." Herbert Harris
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:42 Je 9 '45 1150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p496 O 20 '45 300w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:23 S '45 280w

" 'Guaranteed Annual Wages' is a welcome discussion of an important issue." Philip Taft
+ Weekly Book Review p11 Jl 8 '45 600w

CHERNISS, HAROLD FREDRIK. Aristotle's criticism of Plato and the Academy. v 1 610p $5 Johns Hopkins press [25s Oxford]
185.1 Plato. Aristotle (44-8516)

"This is the first volume of a projected two volume work devoted to a study of the comments made by Aristotle on the teachings of Plato and his school. It takes account of everything heretofore written on the subject in German, French, Italian and English. . . The chief interest lies in this: Aristotle though a pupil and friend of Plato, was unsparingly severe in his criticism of his master's teaching, and scholars have differed for centuries over the justice of his interpretation and the validity of his criticism. This book aims at settling the controversy once for all." U S Quarterly Bkl

---

"Obviously Cherniss' books and his results will have to be taken into account in any future work that pretends to be serious dealing with either Plato, Aristotle, or their predecessors. Since this is so, it is regrettable that Cherniss did not put his results in more easily accessible form. The very thoroughness of his inquiry means a tremendous mass of commentary, documentation, and minute argument. It is not easy to organize such material, but something more could have been done." G. R. Morrow
+ — Ethics 55:314 Jl '45 2100w

CHERNISS, H. F.—Continued
Times [London] Lit Sup p201 Ap 28 '45 1100w

"The chief value of the book lies in its exhaustive analysis of Plato's doctrine of ideas. It is an outstanding piece of scholarship, certainly one of the half dozen most impressive works on Greek philosophy that have been produced in this country. While without interest for the general reader, it should be in the library of every university."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:16 Mr '45 240w

CHESTERTON, GILBERT KEITH. Father Brown omnibus. 974p $3 Dodd

"Including The Innocence of Father Brown; The Incredulity of Father Brown; The Scandal of Father Brown; The Wisdom of Father Brown; The Secret of Father Brown." (Subtitle) The first edition of this Omnibus was published in 1933 (Book Review Digest, 1933). This 1945 edition adds eight stories making a total of fifty.

"If you have ever followed Father Brown's amazing peregrinations and deductions with delight, you'll welcome this gigantic volume which contains all the stories concerning the amazing little priest and his friend and acolyte, Flambeau." Elizabeth Bullock
+ Book Week p10 Je 3 '45 90w
Boston Globe p17 Ap 25 '45 50w

"While it is pleasant to have all the stories brought together under one cover, the greatest value of the new omnibus is not that it adds the final and least notable series, but that it brings back the matchless earlier tales which have been too long unavailable." Howard Haycraft
+ N Y Times p4 Ap 22 '45 850w
New Yorker 21:92 Ap 21 '45 60w

CHEYNEY, PETER. Sinister errand. 181p $2 Dodd [8s 6d Collins]
45-7538

Combination spy and detective story, the scene of which is London during the time of the V-bombs.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p17 S 23 '45 110w
Booklist 42:77 N 1 '45

Reviewed by Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p23 Ag 26 '45 180w

"Nobody eats or sleeps in the course of this tale, and you probably won't, either, once you've got into the spirit of things."
New Yorker 21:64 Ag 25 '45 80w

"Excitement plus."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:38 S 22 '45 50w

"The adventures are as brisk as any in earlier tales by Mr. Peter Cheyney, and though there is less humour the excitement never slackens. The one drawback is that the new spy-detective has no very distinctive character."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p202 Ag 28 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p17 Ag 19 '45 150w

CHEYNEY, PETER. They never say when. 222p $2 Dodd [8s 6d Collins] 45-1822

Detective story.

"Readers who remember with pleasure Cheyney's 'The Stars Are Dark' and 'Dark Duet' are going to be disappointed. The suggestion is that you pass this one by—and wait impatiently for the next, which may well be tops once more." Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p11 Mr 18 '45 110w

"Enjoyable."
+ Boston Globe p13 F 14 '45 30w

Reviewed by Freda White
New Statesman & Nation 27:342 My 20 '44 60w

"Callaghan fans know him as an insouciant fellow who sets a fast pace. Brilliant bluffing is his specialty. You'd hate him in real life, but he reads well. . . Charming ladies, old English inns, illicit town clubs, and of course a murder, keep the going lively." Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p24 Ap 8 '45 130w

"Typical Callaghan yarn—with lovely ladies falling for Slim's blandishments, and despicable villain driven to deserved death. Fluff."
Sat R of Lit 28:37 F 17 '45 40w

"This is a tale of missing jewels told in Mr. Peter Cheyney's blithest manner. Who owns them, who ought to own them, who steals them, who has them, and who is giving them back to whom, puzzle Callaghan and in this he is not alone."
Times [London] Lit Sup p233 My 13 '44 60w

CHIN, STANLEY HONG, and FOWLER, VIRGINIE. Two lands for Ming; il. by Stanley Chin. 254p $2 Scribner

Children in China 45-3117

"This is the story of the boys of the Poy Gee School and of life in the village of Shew Ton in southeast China. It is especially the story of Kwok Ming who has a slightly different heritage from his cousins and his friends for he, because his parents were born in America, is an American. . . And then comes the news that he is to go to America. . . He has no sooner begun to get used to his school in San Francisco than war in China becomes a reality and Kwok Ming, longing to be of some service to China even in this faraway country, discovers that with his talent for drawing he can help America understand his other land." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 41:344 Jl 15 '45

"This is an unusual story of an American-born Chinese boy at school in China. Because it is drawn from the actual experiences of Stanley Chin, the details of village life not far from Canton, before the war, may be confidently accepted as accurate. . . The attractive line drawings give added flavor to this understanding interpretation of the feeling of one who has two homelands."
+ Horn Bk 21:196 My '45 130w

"The episodes in which he experiences appreciation and awareness of the new land while sharing with others his loyalty to his Chinese background is fresh in approach, unpretentious, interesting and well-written."
+ Kirkus 13:222 My 15 '45 130w

Reviewed by Margaret Miller
Library J 70:308 Ap 1 '45 70w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p18 Je 17 '45 140w

"Much of this story is doubtless autobiographical. The author is a young Chinese artist, born in Kwangtung Province and now serving in the American Army. . . The story is subordinated to the background, but because of the fascination of China and her customs and traditions to many people this does not detract from the interest and charm of the book. It does mean, however, that it is more likely to be used for supplementary school reading than enjoyed as a story." R. A. Hill
+ Sat R of Lit 28:28 Ap 21 '45 400w

"The special quality of the story is [that] it is in essence autobiographical. Stanley Chin is now in the Army Special Services Branch; during a precious furlough he made the pictures for the book and for a year worked on his part of the story. It brings China nearer than many a more pretentious work: the spirit is sound, the details vivid."
+ Weekly Book Review p10 My 20 '45 500w
Wis Lib Bul 41:103 O '45

CHITTENDEN, GERTRUDE EMMA. Living with children. 163p il $1.75 Macmillan

136.7 Child study. Children—Management
44-5166

"Miss Chittenden is head of the department of child development at Iowa State College and has had much experience in research and in teaching in this field. . . Much emphasis is placed on the importance of the experiences and environment of childhood in determining the effectiveness and happiness of the adult. The most significant chapters deal with meeting the child's needs in the home. . . Emphasis is also placed on the importance of the home in helping children to control their emotions and to grow in independence. It speaks of war as being a part of children's total experience, which, when properly met in the security of the family, need not be a damaging experience." J Home Econ

"The book is simply written, and the facts and data presented are convincingly authoritative and reliable. It is intended for young parents or as an introductory text for students of child development and would very nicely satisfy either group. The most interesting feature of the book is the many practical suggestions, with illustrative cases, given for the training and discipline of children from babyhood through the college years. . . The psychological necessity of recreational facilities both at home and in the community is ably presented with illustrative examples from scientific investigations." S. F. West

+ J Home Econ 37:47 Ja '45 250w

Social Forces 23:236 D '44 40w

CHRESTIEN, F. H. Evelyn and the fish; il. by the author. 48p $2 Duell

45-4611

Picture-story book about Evelyn, the elephant, and the goldfish, plus bowl, which she adopted. The goldfish longed to travel, so Evelyn took it on a personally conducted tour. Children of five to nine.

"My daughter and I agree that the pictures in 'Evelyn and the Fish' are very funny but we have a quaint conviction that it takes a good story to make a good book. . . This is an attempt at fantasy which falls sadly short of the mark. Even fantasy has to have some point and meaning, and the point of this one is not too clear." P. A. Whitney

— + Book Week p11 My 27 '45 160w

"For all children who like the Babar books."

+ Kirkus 13:180 Ap 15 '45 170w

"A picture book that holds lots of fun for children." Olive Brain

+ Library J 70:491 My 15 '45 60w

"No rhyme nor reason complicate Evelyn's adventures, which are composed of the giddiest fantasy. Although no creature can ever displace Babar in our affections, Evelyn is likely to run him a close second. She is presented in pictures beautifully patterned with fascinating details and lovely color, but it would have been nicer if they were better placed in relation to the text." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 22 '45 180w

— Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 29 '45 120w

CHRISTIE, AGATHA (MILLER) (MRS M. E. L. MALLOWAN). Remembered death. 209p $2 Dodd 45-1871

Detective story.

"This is not Agatha Christie's best, certainly, but a satisfactory tale, nonetheless." Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p11 Mr 18 '45 130w

Booklist 41:210 Mr 15 '45

"Best of the week."

+ Boston Globe p13 F 14 '45 60w

"So skillfully has Agatha Christie told the story that the dénouement will probably come as a surprise to nine readers out of ten." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 F 11 '45 120w

New Yorker 20:84 F 10 '45 90w

"Standard brand."

Sat R of Lit 28:37 F 17 '45 50w

"There's no blinking the fact that Hercule Poirot does something for Agatha Christie mysteries, whether he keeps the author on her toes with his cute remarks, or whatever. . . Mrs. Christie piles on a deal of plush romance and keeps the suspense going, too, if you really care about Rosemary and her circle, all of them synthetic starers into space. The denouement is more like an explosion in a mystery grab bag than a considered climax; which is no great crime in a puzzle arranged merely to amaze. Any Christie, we always say, is better than none." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p16 F 11 '45 160w

CHRISTMAN, HENRY. Tin horns and calico; a decisive episode in the emergence of democracy; introd. by Carl Carmer. 377p il $3.75 Holt

333.53 Anti-rent troubles, New York, 1839-1846 45-1319

A history of the Anti-rent troubles in New York state in the 1840s. The Anti-renters were farmers opposed to the terms of the leases granted the tenants by the Van Rensselaers and other large landholders of the region.

"With a complex of material, Henry Christman has built a fascinating story, though his documentation inevitably weights his prose from time to time. Truth is a stirring thing and the story of the Anti-Rentists makes one of the finest chapters of the American story." Ralph Peterson

+ Book Week p4 Mr 18 '45 500w

Booklist 41:204 Mr 15 '45

Boston Globe p21 Mr 21 '45 40w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 3 '45 700w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook

Current Hist 8:541 Je '45 550w

Kirkus 12:419 S 15 '44 170w

"Recommended for those interested in background history of Hudson valley towns or in struggle to establish democratic practices in this section of early republic." D. F. Lucas

+ Library J 70:68 Ja 15 '45 130w

"Fortunately the author's narrative skill matches his pertinacity in research, and his book is absorbing reading as well as a real contribution to American history." Keith Hutchison

+ Nation 160:366 Mr 31 '45 420w

"It is good that the story of the tenants' war has at last been so fully and so ably told, for it has both intrinsic importance and symbolic significance. Some ninety years later much of the pattern of the anti-rent struggles was reproduced in the farm-holiday battles in Iowa and South Dakota, and there are parallels in recent labor history as well. I have emphasized the general pattern, for it is as a study of the process of social struggle that Tin Horns and Calico has greatest value. It is only fair to say, however, that the story is a lively one and that Mr. Christman has caught a great deal of its color." Granville Hicks

+ New Repub 112:393 Ja 19 '45 950w

"Of this revolt against the landed aristocracy Henry Christman writes sympathetically, with remarkable insight and after a careful investigation of the sources. . . As Carl Carmer remarks in the Introduction [the] book is a history lesson for all Americans to read and ponder." J. A. Krout

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 18 '45 1500w

"The author is at all times the partisan, with no sympathy to spare for anyone suspected of up-rentism, but he has not tampered with the issues involved, and he has earned the right to his opinion. . . Historians will pause in their reading of Tin Horns and Calico at several points. One would, from Mr. Christman's account, scarcely believe, for example, that Governor Silas Wright was a liberal famed for his integrity. The bibliography, though comprehensive, omits a few highly pertinent works which the author, to be sure, may have consulted. Such are the details which can be adjusted among those professionally interested. They scarcely detract from a work which vividly re-creates an important episode in the progress of American democracy." Louis Filler

+ — Pol Sci Q 60:622 D '45 900w

CHRISTMAN, HENRY—Continued

"'Tin Horns and Calico' provides an eminently readable and authoritative study of an episode in American history that was far more reaching than the usual regional incident." W. S. Lynch

+ Sat R of Lit 28:8 Mr 17 '45 1050w

"The book is amply illustrated with old photographs and the end papers are topographical maps. It is beautifully printed and bound, there is an 11-page bibliography, an appendix of folk-songs, a complete index, and an introduction by Carl Carmer. Such a volume should properly be evaluated by historians, but the casual reader finds it inspiring and engrossing, and there are lots more casual readers than historians." Edrie Van Dore

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 25 '45 650w

"The author makes no profession of impartiality. He sees but one side of the story, and his work is thus a partisan narrative rather than a detached analysis. It is, however, based upon a careful study in a variety of sources, but is addressed more to the general reader than to the professional student of history."

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:25 Je '45 160w

"Here for the first time the whole story is straightened out in a fine historical study that makes an absorbing tale. And if Mr. Christman strains at the leash a bit in exploring the ramifications and significance of his story, that is always the privilege of the historical monographist." F. T. Marsh

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Mr 18 '45 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 41:37 Mr '45

CHRISTY, ARTHUR, ed. The Asian legacy and American life. 276p il $3.50 Day

327.73 East (Far East)—Relations (general) with U.S. U.S.—Relations (general) with East (Far East). Civilization, Oriental 45-4340

A volume of essays presenting summaries of the debt owed by American civilization to the East. Contents: The sense of the past, by A. E. Christy; The Orient and western music, by Curt Sachs; The Orient and western art, by L. P. Roberts; Our agricultural debt to Asia, by W. T. Swingle; Ties that bind, by S. B. L. Penrose and O. J. Caldwell; The Orient and contemporary poetry, by J. G. Fletcher; Transcendentalism in contemporary literature, by W. Y. Tindall; Living religions and a world faith, by W. E. Hocking; Understanding and reunion: an oriental perspective, by A. K. Coomaraswamy; Conclusions: East and West, by P. S. Buck. Index.

Booklist 41:332 Jl 15 '45

"Ten years from now, this book will not be dated as a prewar, wartime or postwar book. It is solid stuff of permanent value, laying a foundation of knowledge and understanding of essential facts. Copying Kant, it might be called prolegomena to any future cultural relations between the Orient and the Occident. . . This book should go far toward making the well disposed intelligent and the intelligent well disposed." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 62:980 Ag 29 '45 1400w

Reviewed by Randall Gould

Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 18 '45 550w

"The book stimulates and, though we cannot agree with a number of its liberal religious propositions, it should attain its end, the awakening of interest in, and true understanding and appreciation of the Asiatic and his culture." P. F. D'Arcy

+ — Commonweal 42:339 Jl 20 '45 320w

"The values, spiritual and materialistic, of the East and West are here discussed and compared with acumen and understanding. Thoughtful scholars—among others, J. G. Fletcher, W. E. Hocking, A. K. Coomaraswamy, P. E. Puck—have made clear in fascinating chapters to what extent the Orient has influenced the art, the literature, the religion, even the agriculture, of the Occident. . . Definitely a contribution to intercultural education and so recommended." G. O. Kelley

+ Library J 70:585 Je 15 '45 140w

"To sum up, this well-written book seems to me to have little purpose; yet it is full of that out-of-the-way learning which it is perhaps a personal idiosyncracy to like. The illustrations are good." Ralph Bates

Nation 161:64 Jl 21 '45 600w

New Yorker 21:72 Je 16 '45 130w

Reviewed by Witter Bynner

Sat R of Lit 28:12 Jl 21 '45 1400w

"It is a fascinating book, valuable not only for what it contributes toward interracial understanding, but for its emphasis on a neglected aspect of our own cultural history. The contributors have worked independently and each chapter reflects an individual point of view, but all have agreed to Mr Christy's 'one principle—that intercultural exchange involves more than the commodities or bric-a-brac which cross the oceans on the bottoms of ships, the records compiled by attaches in consular offices overseas and trade treaties favored by chambers of commerce.'" W. H. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 17 '45 470w

Time 45:96 Je 18 '45 330w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:4 D '45 320w

Reviewed by Eleanor Lattimore

Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 29 '45 1000w

CHURCHILL, HENRY STERN. The city is the people. 186p il maps $3 Reynal

711 City planning 45-6336

"Henry Churchill is one of those modern architects who are more interested in whole communities than in single buildings and more interested in people than in the transient brick, stone, cement, steel, wood or plastics in which communities are, so to speak, clothed. His present little book is an approach to city planning by way of an examination of the achievements and failures of the past and the opportunities and difficulties of today. Mr. Churchill thinks we 'are seeking new physical urban settings just as we are seeking new social and economic patterns.'" N Y Times

Reviewed by Ray Runnion

Book Week p4 Jl 15 '45 180w

Booklist 42:9 S '45

Bookmark 6:8 N '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 12 '45 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '45

Kirkus 13:174 Ap 15 '45 250w

"One of the best balanced studies I know on the protean subject of city planning." Albert Guerard

+ Nation 161:161 Ag 18 '45 300w

Reviewed by Paul Goodman

New Repub 113:84 Jl 16 '45 700w

"Mr. Churchill does not write with a lively pen. Many of his sentences one has to read twice before the meaning is clear. He is, nevertheless, honest and in earnest and has ideas that any one concerned with life in cities, now and in years to come, ought to know about." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p21 Ag 12 '45 1000w

"Here is a book on city planning that anybody can read and everybody ought to. Reading it, moreover, will be a pleasure rather than a chore, for its story is so engagingly told that even those portions which have technical implications are easy to follow. . . There is no planning as such in the book, although there are some good illustrations. There are, in fact, no specific recommendations. But the reader who is prepared to use a little imagination should have no difficulty in drawing up his own program of civic action. If the book is as widely read as it deserves to be, competent planners will have their work made easier, but the phonies and the spectacular bluffers will have theirs made harder." Guy Greer

+ Survey G 34:449 N '45 400w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:49 D '45 360w

"The great merit of Mr. Churchill's book is that, briefly, unobtrusively, adequately it covers the whole range of city planning. He neither spurns the past nor ignores the future. But his main concern is with the next step: what can we do today? In this I find him more inspiring than the major prophets, Le Corbusier or Frank Lloyd Wright: through some Wellsian trick they ravish us into the New Jerusalem or Radiant City. The time has come for comprehensive schemes which can be submitted to the electorate, like the proposed reconstruction of Toledo." Albert Guerard

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ag 12 '45 550w

Wis Lib Bul 41:110 N '45

CHURCHILL, WINSTON LEONARD SPENCER. Dawn of liberation; war speeches; comp. by Charles Eade. 417p $3.50 Little

940.5342 World war, 1939—Great Britain 45-6452

Speeches and messages of the British Prime minister delivered between February and December 31, 1944.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 Ag 5 '45 400w

Booklist 42:11 S '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 S 15 '45 350w

Current Hist 9:325 O '45 40w

"All in all, a good refresher course in 1944 history—delivered with Churchill's pungent phrase and stimulating vigor. A Public Library must."

+ Kirkus 13:263 Je 15 '45 210w

"Recommended for every library." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 70:683 Ag '45 70w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 3 '45 90w

"Winston Churchill has the incongruities and inconsistencies of his genius. It is real genius—one must conclude that. It is genius not because it is one man's individualistic and egotistic expression but because the one man stands for so much that is British and, beyond that, at his very loftiest, so much that is the bone, blood and sinew of democracy. His vision may not permit him to see that an East Indian can put as much pride and passion as a Briton into a demand for freedom, but Churchill's most inspired phrases can be translated into any language which has a word for freedom." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p3 Ag 5 '45 850w

New Yorker 21:68 Ag 4 '45 170w

Reviewed by Norman Angell
Sat R of Lit 28:5 Ag 4 '45 3850w

Spec 175:298 S 28 '45 180w

"Mr. Eade's editing reaches its usual high standard of accuracy, although it is a pity he did not include, as a companion to the Prime Minister's broadcast to France at the moment of disaster in 1940, the French original of his speech in liberated Paris on November 11, perhaps in its associations the finest ceremonial occasion, and to Mr. Churchill himself certainly one of the most moving, in the year."

Times [London] Lit Sup p352 Jl 28 '45 750w

Reviewed by Joseph Barnes
Weekly Book Review p3 Ag 19 '45 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 41:99 O '45

CIERPLIKOWSKI, ANTOINE (ANTOINE, pseud.) Antoine. 243p $2.75 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 45-35100

"Antoine's autobiography in which he traces story of his fabulous progression from Polish peasant to high mogul of the realm of the coiffeur. He has styled the hair of the great and near great and spices his book with personal anecdotes of such women as the Divine Sarah, the Duchess of Windsor, Eleanora Duse and Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. His own eccentricities are expressed in his six story glass house in Paris with its bubble glass staircase and his glass coffin bed designed to protect the occupant from electric rays in the air." Library J

" 'Antoine' is a fascinating book for women because of the author's expert and worshipful approach to the serious business of making women beautiful. It is fascinating, too, to men, because it is a remarkable success story, artistically and financially." Dale Harrison

+ Book Week p8 My 27 '45 450w

Booklist 41:300 Je 15 '45

Reviewed by Ann Dean
Boston Globe Je 13 '45 360w

Kirkus 13:50 F 1 '45 170w

"Chatty, gossipy, informal, distinctly for women only. Recommended." H. A. Carpenter

+ Library J 70:305 Ap 1 '45 100w

"It is too easy to dismiss 'Antoine'—the book and the author—as simpleminded silliness. Like Salvador Dali, Antoine is a complicated case. He has a genius for calculating his chichi, for making his eccentricities pay off. And though his book seems to worship at the shrine of the Most High Fashion, sometimes a glint of mockery pierces the reverent gloom." Nancy Flagg

N Y Times p6 Je 3 '45 550w

"The man has a way with hair, no doubt about it; without even trying, he can make a reader's stand on end."

New Yorker 21:82 My 26 '45 180w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 27 '45 360w

"Antoine's impressions of his clients are artfully recorded, and in spite of the glitter of his career the portrait he draws of himself is quite surprisingly human and unaffected." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p23 O 7 '45 220w

CLAPHAM, SIR JOHN HAROLD. Bank of England; a history [1694-1914]. 2v 306;460p il $7.50 Macmillan [42s Cambridge]

332.11 Bank of England 45-4368

"A voluminous study, undertaken by a distinguished English economic historian at the request of the Bank itself for its 250th anniversary and based on records hitherto inaccessible to the general student. . . The first volume covers the eighteenth century, the second the nineteenth and the early part of the twentieth. Together they give the story of the growing significance of the Bank, first in its own country and later in the financial affairs of the world." N Y Times

---

"While the text is naturally replete with facts and figures, the author has made an excellent story out of it, entwined as the bank's affairs were with the political and economic life of the Empire. The bank attains a personality of its own; its officers show their human side, and one almost forgets the hero is an institution."

+ Current Hist 9:48 Jl '45 120w

Kirkus 13:79 F 15 '45 90w

"Having enjoyed access to the archives and account books of the Bank, Sir John Clapham has produced a mine of information in which many other writers will quarry profitably. The general reader, however, will probably find the book hard going and its pages overladen with figures. Nevertheless, this work is particularly welcome today when the Bank of England seems about to suffer a sea-change as a result of the rising tide of socialism in Britain." Keith Hutchison

Nation 161:159 Ag 18 '45 550w

"Economic historians and many others will find these two volumes invaluable as sources." W. B. Smith

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 19 '45 1500w

"American readers should be interested in this book for a number of reasons. It is written by the dean of living economic historians and it is a characteristic product—keenly analyzed, pungently, often wittily, phrased—of his pen." L. M. Hacker

+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 9 '45 1350w

CLARE, THOMAS HENRY. Lookin' eastward; a G. I. salaam to India; as told to [the author's] wife, Irma M. Clare. 322p $2.50 Macmillan

940.548 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939—Religious aspects. World war, 1939—India 45-4873

Personal narrative of a United States Army chaplain, covering his experiences with the 341st Bombardment Group in India.

Booklist 42:12 S '45
Reviewed by T. F. Opie
Churchman 159:17 O 1 '45 150w

"Interesting, often entertaining, personal story."
+ Kirkus 13:103 Mr 1 '45 160w

"Homespun, unvarnished and timely. Recommended." M. E. Clark
+ Library J 70:413 My 1 '45 60w

Reviewed by W. H. Hindle
Sat R of Lit 28:8 Jl 14 '45 310w

"The author was reported missing in a plane accident about a year ago, and the book is made up from letters written to his wife during his two years in India. It is amusing and entertaining, and also has its more serious moments. The boys and officers of the squadron talked to the chaplain about their reactions to India and everything else, and he overheard and jotted down many of their conversations. He certainly understood his men, and they certainly liked him. The result is an excellent account of how they behaved and reacted during their first two years in India." Beach Conger
+ Weekly Book Review p14 My 13 '45 450w

CLARK, JOHN BIGELOW. The dreamers. 282p $2 Doubleday 45-8185

The setting is a small Italian island in the Mediterranean. With the coming of the war all the island's foreign colony departed except a German baron, an old English university professor, and two American pacifists. The action of the story takes place around these four, and two young Italians. The island is a peaceful place until the Germans take it over as a submarine base, and then horror descends.

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson
Book Week p2 S 9 '45 420w

"Mr. Clark can write. His narrative and his description are excellent. His subject matter is full of the horror of history." L. A. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 O 27 '45 160w

Kirkus 13:302 Jl 15 '45 170w

"Mr. Clark is a writer of real talent who has not completely grasped his theme. Some of his observations on nazism (as symptomatic of behavior that is not peculiarly German) are acute and worth while. But his island never becomes magic like Thomas Mann's mountain; it never becomes a place which contains the complex dilemma of our time." Saul Levitt
+ — N Y Times p26 Ag 26 '45 400w

"Once you have accustomed yourself to the quality of Mr. Clark's novel, it is likely to provide a considerable amount of perverse, perhaps horrified, amusement. The materials of the story, which centers about the Nazi occupation of an island in the Mediterranean, are plainly brutal and tragic. . . And this is the story Mr. Clark tells us in the smooth, swirling, slick-paper style of a popular romance. His touch is light and unmistakably gay. The effect is startling in its incongruity." R. L. North
Sat R of Lit 28:41 S 29 '45 410w
Weekly Book Review p10 Ag 26 '45 230w

CLARK, JOHN MAURICE. Demobilization of wartime economic controls. (Committee for economic development. Research study) 219p $1.75 McGraw

338.91 Industry and state—U.S. U.S.—Economic policy. Reconstruction (1939-)—U.S. 45-409

"Third in a series on postwar studies sponsored by the Committee for Economic Development. Author believes that wartime controls must be eliminated to let free enterprise make jobs. However, he contends that all controls should not be disbanded, but lifted gradually; that price ceilings after the war should be dropped on textiles, but kept on durable goods, such as automobiles, until production warrants a change. Also, some form of War Labor Board should be maintained to help small business and prevent speculation." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Shaw Livermore
Am Econ R 35:722 S '45 900w
Am Soc R 10:575 Ag '45 130w
Foreign Affairs 23:695 Jl '45 30w
Library J 70:118 F 1 '45 70w
Reviewed by B. B. Seligman
New Repub 112:266 F 19 '45 600w
Reviewed by P. L. Gamble
Springf'd Republican p4 O 13 '45 550w
Reviewed by H. D. Lasswell
Survey G 34:298 Je '45 220w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:17 Mr '45 240w

CLARK, ROLAND. Pot luck; introd. by John P. Holman; il. by the author. (Countryman press bk) 101p $3.50 Barnes, A.S. 45-3536

A volume of gunning tales illustrated with pictures in black and white and in color by the author-artist. Contents: Pot luck; Brand from the burning; Five-shot Adam; Not alone the leopard; 'Gator-hole blind; Blue Peters or goose.

"The quality lies chiefly in the contagious love of the out of doors, keen insight into men and wild life, and a quiet humor. Lovely sketches used as chapter heads and several full pages in full color."
+ Kirkus 13:155 Ap 1 '45 150w

"One of those little volumes of hunting tales of which sportsmen never seem to tire. This one, by an expert in the genre, is better than most, and the background of sleet, raw wind, and high-hearted dogs will unquestionably delight its audience."
+ New Yorker 21:92 Ap 7 '45 40w

Reviewed by L. E. Bigelow
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 8 '45 180w

CLARK, THOMAS BLAKE. Robinson Crusoe. See Tweed, G. R. Robinson Crusoe, USN.

CLARK, VALMA. Horn of plenty. 247p $2.50 Duell 45-8603

Tale of family life in an upstate New York farming country. Effie, the hired girl, who is a paragon of efficiency in her housekeeping, and in managing the turbulent Rathbones, is the central character.

"The reader who relishes the noise and rowdiness and bickering of a large family will like the Rathbones. They have superficial vitality and their antics are fairly amusing. 'Horn of Plenty' is good hammock reading." J. T. Flanagan
Book Week p3 S 9 '45 270w
Booklist 42:76 N 1 '45
Kirkus 13:277 Jl 1 '45 170w
Reviewed by Hilda Lake
N Y Times p14 N 18 '45 220w

"'Horn of Plenty' is a book you will read with relish and finish with reluctance."
+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 9 '45 200w

CLARK, WALTER VAN TILBURG. City of trembling leaves. 690p $3 Random house 45-35081

The "City of Trembling Leaves" is Reno, Nevada, but the story does not concern divorce or high society, but deals only with the adolescence and early maturity of Tim Hazard, a sensitive boy whose ambition is to be a composer.

"This is a fine novel, a little overlong and wordy in spots, but so was young Timmy when self-conscious, and he was forgiven." Mari Sandoz

+ Atlantic 176:130 Jl '45 240w

Reviewed by E. D. Branch

+ Book Week p3 Je 10 '45 750w

Booklist 41:286 Je 1 '45

"Here is a book that is American in all its implications. It is big, full of beauty and hope. It is the record of an American boy's torments and thrills, his slow maturing, his inhibitions, his aspirations. It is a story of adolescent love and of creative activity in America." E. A. Laycock

+ Boston Globe My 31 '45 420w

"This is a very young book with intensity of spirit but unevenness of accent. The development of the artist is a tempting theme and Mr. Clark has successfully translated it into fictional terms with page on page of beautiful writing interspersed with tedious passages." Norah Piper

+ — Commonweal 42:267 Je 29 '45 250w

"The man can write. He writes so well that it is worth working one's way through his spate of words to get at the meat, to seek out the marrow of the bone, to come upon occasional passages that don't need excision. He writes so well that one resents the final result not being better than it is. The temptation is to blue pencil for the sake of bringing the whole into sharpened focus."

+ — Kirkus 13:138 Ap 1 '45 340w

"Superbly written book which compares favorably with Thomas Wolfe's Look Homeward Angel. . . For discriminating readers." M. H. McElfresh

+ Library J 70:488 My 15 '45 70w

"The point is, of course, that no novel is bigger than its people and that Timothy Hazard and his associates, although they are considered by their author to be persons of stature and dignity, are actually third-rate types. This is not as apparent in the first half of 'The City of Trembling Leaves,' where Tim is still a boy and his biography is chiefly a morbidly protracted shadow-fight with sex, as it is when Tim and his friends grow up and their sentimental maunderings are presented as mature struggles for salvation, their beery bitterness as a tragic commentary on the life of the artist." Diana Trilling

— Nation 160:702 Je 23 '45 950w

" 'The Ox-Bow Incident' [Book Review Digest, 1940] whatever its historical basis, was from the literary point of view a successful piece of creative fiction. 'The City of Trembling Leaves' bears all the marks of an autobiographical novel. And despite the chronology of its publication it also bears—in content, length and style—the characteristics of a first novel. Where 'The Ox-Bow Incident' was taut and sinewy, 'The City of Trembling Leaves' is leisurely, contemplative, microscopically detailed and laden with passages of devotedly ornamented prose." Lincoln Barnett

+ — N Y Times p4 My 27 '45 850w

"This book is a Far Western book, and, like the fiction of the Pacific slope, like John Steinbeck and William Saroyan, it does not quite meet the requirements of an Easterner. It seems too easygoing and good-natured, too lacking in organization, always dissolving into an even sunshine, always circumventing by ample detours what one expects to be sharp or direct." Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 21:75 My 26 '45 1700w

"The culture of this city is done with such thoroughness as to make any urban reader relive forgotten parts of his youth. And if what one reads now is true—that Europeans are hungry for books about present day American life—here is one that will enlighten them. . . 'The City of Trembling Leaves' has something of the quality of a long and wonderful day out of doors, where you start from home early in the morning and come back late at night, tired out but full of mindless well being." William Maxwell

+ Sat R of Lit 28:13 Je 2 '45 900w

" 'The City of Trembling Leaves' is a very long novel, and like many very long novels—most of them, perhaps—it would be better if it were shorter. It is uneven. Yet it possesses a magic all its own. For in it Mr. Clark has succeeded in evoking delicately and tenderly that season of commingled hope and despair, ecstasy and misery that each of us recalls as his own youth." Jennings Rice

+ — Weekly Book Review p4 My 27 '45 950w

Wis Lib Bul 41:84 Jl '45

"Mr. Clark pours into his book too much of everything, too much scenery, too much youthful sex, too much youthful questing for certainty, too many irrelevant characters. He has an ecstatic joy in words and fine skill in their use, but, like Thomas Wolfe, whom he somewhat resembles in this book, he has overwritten and underedited. Yet his gifts are great, his future is rich with promise." Orville Prescott

+ — Yale R n s 35:191 autumn '45 320w

CLARK-KENNEDY, ARCHIBALD EDMUND. Art of medicine in relation to the progress of thought. 48p pa 75c Macmillan [2s Cambridge]

610.9 Medicine—History 45-7681

"Dr. Clark-Kennedy, as Fellow of Corpus Christi College, Physician to the London Hospital and Dean of its medical school, has been able to look at his profession from several points of view. And in this reprinted lecture—delivered at Cambridge, as one of a series on the History of Science—it is upon Medicine as an Art that he has laid the chief emphasis. . . In this little book Dr. Clark-Kennedy has epitomised the progress of Medicine from the Hippocratic era to the present day of X-ray and radium therapy and penicillin. He has indicated the increasing mastery over physical disease brought about by the methods of exact observation and experiment, the discovery of the microscope and the adaptation of many originally non-medical researches in almost every field of study." Spec

"Dr. Clark-Kennedy covers much ground in a short space. The approach is not too technical, and what he is saying should be of interest to any serious-minded reader." N. K. B.

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 12 '45 180w

"For all who are interested in the history of Medicine, how it has been affected by prevalent modes of thought and how it has, in its own turn, influenced these, this little, modestly priced, book can be most unreservedly recommended." H. H. Bashford

+ Spec 174:530 Je 8 '45 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p370 Ag 4 '45 60w

CLARKE, EDWARD T., ed. Junior model planes. See Powell, J. D.

CLARKE, MRS IDA CLYDE (GALLAGHER). Men who wouldn't stay dead [Eng title: Men that wouldn't stay dead]; il. by Dorothea Braby. 288p $3 Ackerman [3s 6d Long]

133.1 Ghosts 45-4580

Collection of twenty-eight ghost stories, many of them based on family traditions among the great and near great, including Napoleon, the Hapsburg family, Walt Whitman, and Andrew Jackson.

Booklist 42:2 S '45

"As a roundup of nonfiction shades it is a good job and an interesting experiment in anthologies, but from the point of view of literary and entertainment qualities it cannot compare with fiction." R. F. H.

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 My 31 '45 650w

CLARKE, WILLIAM KEMP LOWTHER. Eighteenth century piety. 160p il $2.75 Macmillan [10s 6d S.P.C.K.]

266.3 Society for promoting Christian knowledge. Christian literature—Bibliography. Newman, Henry 45-1688

"The purpose of this book is to contribute to the history of the S.P.C.K., first by sum-

CLARKE, W. K. L.—Continued
marising the books published by the Society in the eighteenth century; secondly by telling the story of a great and good man, Henry Newman, Secretary from 1708 to 1743." (Pref) Index.

"The rather forbidding title of this volume should not prevent it from being read with considerable pleasure, particularly by specialists in the history of the Church of England, or by anyone who is interested in the religious aspect of a wonderful time. . . Mr. Clarke's interesting little book will serve to remind us that a genuine piety, and even a genuine mysticism, is restricted to no period, and to no Church, or (remembering the beautiful picture of the Lama in 'Kim') are they restricted to Christianity." Cuthbert Wright
+ Commonweal 41:570 Mr 23 '45 650w

"Notable figures of devoted laymen like Henry Newman, William Stevens and their friends, clerical and lay, stand out in these pages, which are a real contribution to social, no less than ecclesiastical history."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p633 D 30 '44 480w

CLEGHORN, SARAH NORCLIFFE. The seamless robe; the religion of lovingkindness. 163p $2 Macmillan
248 Kindness 45-3833

Brief essays on lovingkindness and the part it can play in the life of today, with ample proofs of its effects in the past.

Christian Century 62:759 Je 27 '45 80w

"It is all very simple and very sentimental. To those who, like the Athenians of old, are ever seeking to tell or hear some new thing, this book may have an appeal."
Kirkus 13:61 F 1 '45 130w

"Tough-minded folk who call themselves realists may not like this little book. They will want to argue about it and it should not be read as argument, but as testimony, as exposition of a way of life. In these pages a rare person has revealed her insight, and it is that of a gentle but courageous spirit." F. E. Johnson
+ Survey G 34:416 O '45 400w

"Makes quiet, but stimulating, reading."
+ Wis Lib Bul 41:65 Je '45

CLEMENS, CYRIL. The man from Missouri. 209p il $2.50 Int. Mark Twain soc.; for sale by Didier pubs
B or 92 Truman, Harry S. 45-8325

Brief anecdotal biography of President Truman. Index.

Christian Century 62:1097 S 26 '45 10w
Kirkus 13:455 O 1 '45 110w
School & Society 62:224 O 6 '45 40w

"Though not as full or as interestingly written as the McNaughton-Hehmeyer book, 'The Man From Missouri' gives perhaps a more personal view of the President. The author, Cyril Clemens, a relative of Mark Twain and an author and lecturer of note, gathered his data from those best acquainted with his subject at different periods of his life." L. B. Hill
+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 30 '45 330w

CLEWES, WINSTON. Violent friends. 226p $2.50 Appleton-Century [8s 6d Joseph, M.]
Swift, Jonathan—Fiction 45-2044

The violent friends are Dean Swift, and his Vanessa and Stella. The period covered in this novel is from Swift's return to Ireland as Dean of St Patrick to the death of Stella.

"Under the circumstances the author has done extraordinarily well. His story is, of necessity, more one of love's pains than of its delights, but he has managed to make it moving and has kept it a love story for all its limitations. He has taken a few liberties with time and place, as he confesses, but he has taken none with the central facts, for his one great assumption, that the marriage did take place, can hardly be regarded as invention since almost all scholars now support it. Most commendable of all is his refusal to offer some glib explanation of the great central mystery of Swift's tortured mind." Bergen Evans
+ Book Week p1 Mr 18 '45 1450w
Booklist 41:225 Ap 1 '45
Cath World 161:188 My '45 130w

"The book gets off to a somewhat unpromising start. The staccato style, the abrupt bits of narrative (almost like stage-directions), and the heightened dialogue all suggest that Mr. Clewes began to write with his mind fixed upon the stage—or upon his 'movie rights.' But presently all this is softened down. Swift becomes a less stagy and far more credible figure and there is shrewd and subtle analysis of character and motive. Scene after scene, whether dealing with the personal relationships or with public affairs, is brought vividly before the reader's eyes. Both women are convincingly drawn, and the fragrant beauty of Stella's character is suggested by a multitude of sensitive little touches." S. C. C.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 5 '45 550w

"A literary biography of rare quality which is also a compassionate and sensitively perceived rendition of one of the most enigmatic —and tormented—love stories of the past. . . At a time when good biography is as lacking as it is now, this may fill a dual purpose and have a wider audience than books of its kind have had."
+ Kirkus 12:551 D 15 '44 260w

"Mr. Clewes has kept very close to the accessible evidence. It is a little unfortunate that he should have presented so persistently the disgruntled, brusque, overbearing side of Swift's character, to the almost total exclusion of his sense of humour which, as he was writing Gulliver at this time, could not have been wholly suppressed by his political disappointments. Nor are we quite satisfied with the explanation given of the chastity of his relations with Stella and Vanessa. Nevertheless, this is a story well worth reading." J. D. Beresford
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 S 22 '44 120w

"This novel, published on the day of Swift's birth, March 13, and in the year marking the 200th anniversary of his death, is a notable addition to the literature concerning Swift and his period. There is beauty in it, and tenderness, and much truth and sympathy for a great and a tortured soul." N. K. Burger
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 18 '45 550w
New Yorker 21:94 Mr 17 '45 100w

"The author has wrought a novel which, while following faithfully Swift's history as we know it, allows him to form a convincing and moving story. Imaginative biography is at best one of those Scylla and Charybdis things where the author must avoid the creaky documentation of literary carpentry on the one hand and the dernier cri theorizing of a Maurois's 'Ariel' on the other. Winston Clewes steers well between them though the monster's cave and the whirlpool are dangerously close at times. . . All in all, there is in this novel a distinguished handling of personalities and events that have challenged some of the best writers in the English language." W. S. Lands
+ Sat R of Lit 28:9 Mr 17 '45 750w

Reviewed by John Hampson
Spec 173:272 S 22 '44 500w

"The speed and excitement of the story as a story, the two big scenes of Swift's marriage and the rupture with Vanessa are compelling. The bare frame of the little we know of Swift's love for these two women, Mr Clewes has dressed with psychology and insight. If Swift was a torturer, he was also tortured. If he tries to cut all his emotions with a blade of reason, in the end it lacerated him." Lee Varley
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 11 '45 550w

"Mr. Clewes, after a shaky start, brings a telling emotional clarity and restraint to his reading of their relationship. His imagined conversations between Swift and Stella, between Swift and Vanessa also, whether or not the situation they disclose tallies in all respects with one's own guess, are done with searching delicacy and cast a steady illumination upon the immediate action of the story."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p449 S 16 '44 1200w

Reviewed by Marion Sturges-Jones
Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 18 '45 650w

Wis Lib Bul 41:68 Je '45

CLOETE, STUART. Against these three; a biography of Paul Kruger, Cecil Rhodes and Lobengula, last king of the Matabele; il. with maps and portraits by Roland Cosimini. 472p $3.50 Houghton

968 South Africa—History. Kruger, Stephanus Johannes Paulus. Rhodes, Cecil John. Lobengula, king of the Matabele 45-5877

"A vigorous, colorful retelling of the crowded chapter in South African history that was dominated by three vigorous, colorful men—Paul Kruger, the 'Oom Paul' of the Boers; Cecil Rhodes, the man who thought exclusively in terms of empire; and Lobengula, the last of the great Kaffir kings." (New Yorker) Historical summary. Index.

Reviewed by Arna Bontemps
Book Week p6 Ag 5 '45 550w

Booklist 42:12 S '45

Bookmark 6:13 N '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 S 29 '45 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '45

Reviewed by Edward Skillin
Commonweal 42:432 Ag 17 '45 600w

Current Hist 9:325 O '45 130w

"A rich and unusual background, but the average reader will find it involved, almost confusing reading."

+ — Kirkus 13:173 Ap 15 '45 250w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
Nation 161:263 S 15 '45 120w

"As a dramatically rich and historically pertinent account of the clash of three cultures, 'Against These Three' is utterly absorbing. As a job of writing, it would be better for a final draft and more careful editing. Journalistic metaphors drop exhausted in their traces. Subordinate and main clauses change places in the middle of a sentence. We leap about in time and space at the author's whim and are lost among obscure chieftains whose names all begin with M. . . But the material is so good and its meaning made so impressive that 'Against These Three' achieves its effect despite wandering and iteration." R. G. Davis

+ — N Y Times p3 Jl 22 '45 1450w

"History never pitted three more dissimilar men against each other, or saw a more dramatic clash of temperaments, ambitions and social points of view, and Mr. Cloete has written a book about them that not only sheds new light on the opening up of the Dark Continent but gives H. Rider Haggard a brisk run for his money."

+ New Yorker 21:60 Jl 21 '45 120w

"Mr. Cloete does justice to both [Kruger and Rhodes] and illuminates both with an astonishing wealth of detail and anecdote. Much of the detail comes from recognized authorities and some no doubt from Mr. Cloete's own family connections with Kruger and Rhodes. It may be suspected that he has sometimes drawn on his own imagination when these sources failed. The final result none the less remains an authentic portrait." W. H. Hindle

+ Sat R of Lit 28:8 Jl 21 '45 1050w

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 22 '45 600w

Time 46:100 Jl 23 '45 1800w

"At times the author seems almost overwhelmed by the significance of the events and personalities which he is treating, and his rhetoric becomes a bit over-charged, his distinctions obscure rather than subtle, his point repetitious. But in the main his style has the simple clarity and vividness that mark his excellent South African novels. Assisted by maps, diagrams illustrating Boer and Zulu tactics, charts to make plain the involved chronology of the development of South Africa and portraits of the three, the book provides an excellent and absorbing introduction to the history of a subcontinent, as well as an exciting narrative of the birth of a nation." H. W. Baehr

+ — Weekly Book Review p1 Jl 22 '45 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 41:99 O '45

CLOKIE, HUGH MCDOWALL. Canadian government and politics. 351p $4; text ed $3.50 Longmans

342.71 Canada—Politics and government
44-51434

"This book [contains] . . . a description and analysis of Canadian political institutions. Attention is centred on organs of government, constitutional problems and political processes rather than on economic policies and social purposes. . . Where controversial issues are involved, the writer has sought to treat them on the basis of underlying assumptions that he judges to have widest acceptance. It has been thought advisable to devote little or no space to those phases of war government that may be deemed transitory." (Pref) Bibliographies at end of chapters. Index.

"In its design and range this survey is a most useful pioneer study, not least because of its chapters on bibliographies, statistical tables, and documentary appendixes. In execution it is less satisfactory, particularly in its discussion of the contemporary working of federal institutions where the author shows himself less familiar with Ottawa than should be the case." F. H. Soward

+ — Am Hist R 51:154 O '45 240w

"Professor Clokie's book is well-balanced—with enough historical background to make his descriptive matter intelligible and no more delving into the intricacies of adjudication than seemed necessary to explain where governmental powers are placed." W. B. Munro

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:797 Ag '45 850w

"The experts on Canadian government may find points on which they will disagree with Professor Clokie, but the present reviewer has found his work to be objective, well written, and full of illuminating suggestions with respect not only to Canada but also to the operation of federal institutions generally." William Anderson

+ Ann Am Acad 240:161 Jl '45 650w

Booklist 41:333 Jl 15 '45

"A valuable feature of the book is the bibliography for each chapter. This volume helps in the understanding of the practical world we Canadians live in." F. R. Scott

+ Canadian Forum 24:211 D '44 700w

"The requirements of a textbook on any subject are a matter of fairly common agreement: simplicity in writing, comprehension in treatment, successful compression, accuracy, and effective arrangement. All of these features in good measure are present in Canadian Government and Politics. In brief, it is a successful text. There will, however, be different opinions as to the author's arrangement of subject matter and on certain of his interpretations." A. Brady

+ — Canadian Hist R 26:328 S '45 350w

Foreign Affairs 23:699 Jl '45 20w

"An admirable handbook for the student of Canadian affairs." M. R. K. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 5 '45 180w

"In 'Canadian Government and Politics' Professor Clokie, head of the Department of Political Science at the University of Manitoba, has done good service to Canada and to its students. Here is a dispassionate, comprehensive picture of the Canadian scene." P. J. Philip

+ N Y Times p28 Ap 15 '45 750w

"The work fulfills its purpose as an introduction for new students of Canadian public affairs. However, its necessarily elementary character makes the 'further reading' lists essential reading for an understanding of Canadian government and politics." C. P. Redwood

Pol Sci Q 60:317 Je '45 380w

CLOSE, UPTON, pseud. See Hall, J. W.

CLURMAN, HAROLD. Fervent years; the story of the Group theatre and the thirties. 298p il $3.50 Knopf

792 Group theatre. Theater—U.S. 45-5287

Historical and personal sketch of the Group Theatre and its members, which flourished and then went out of existence, during the years 1931 to 1941. The author was one of its three directors from 1931 to 1937, and sole director from 1937 to 1941. Illustrated with photographs of the Group and some of their Broadway productions. Index.

Booklist 41:336 Jl 15 '45

"Mr. Clurman has written with the utmost frankness about his colleagues and himself. Some of them probably will not care much for what he says about them. Perhaps we shall have a long series of rebuttals. They will make interesting reading. The Group put up a good fight. It is sad to note that today many of its members, including the author, are working for Hollywood." L. A. Sloper

Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 15 '45 550w

"Not for those uninitiated in theatre, but for those concerned with its evolution, of interest, from the personal, autobiographical, analytical angles."

+ Kirkus 13:174 My 1 '45 260w

"Any informed person, or those desiring to be informed about the theater, will read this book avidly. Highly recommended for all collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 70:529 Je 1 '45 120w

"Once Mr. Clurman's narrative gets under way, it is sharply observant, passionately insistent on the theatre as an art and, one feels, uncommonly frank about himself and his fellows in the Group adventure. It evokes again the clamorous excitement attending the production of such successes as 'Awake and Sing,' 'Waiting for Lefty,' 'Men in White,' 'My Heart's in the Highlands,' 'Golden Boy.' It does not gloss over the failures." J. K. Hutchens

+ N Y Times p6 Je 10 '45 800w

"In spite of its shortcomings and aberrations, it is a pity to have had the Group now reach the obituary phase. For its well-being our theatre should be enlivened by many such bands of fervent young people. It stands in desperate need of idealists, visionaries, and malcontents. If such groups do appear, as we trust they will at the war's conclusion, Mr. Clurman's book should have much to teach them. Especially about what not to do. One can only hope that, when the next of them emerges, and the time comes for it to have its case history written, it will find as able and honest an historian as Mr. Clurman, and that he will have a happier story to tell." J. M. Brown

Sat R of Lit 28:24 Je 30 '45 2250w

"The points that the Group's existence proved were well worth making in a theatre that is rapidly disintegrating through lack of the thing the Group sought so passionately to achieve—'continuity'. The reasons for its failures are as important as the elements of its success, and Mr. Clurman's book should be read both as a warning and as a stimulant—a warning against the over-fervency of these fervent years, a stimulant for everyone with the courage and vision to attack the impossible."

Theatre Arts 29:605 O '45 800w

"The Fervent Years is a record of defeat staved off for a decade, but it is more than that. Mr. Clurman is very frank in his discussion of the causes of the final downfall of the Group Theatre, and they are not wholly to be found in the difficulties which confront the commercial theatre. Theatre groups will find in this book both a vade mecum and a warning."

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:6 S '45 240w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Weekly Book Review p12 Jl 8 '45 270w

CLYMER, ELEANOR LOWENTON. Grocery mouse; with pictures by Jeanne Bendick. 94p $2 McBride

45-5126

A disobedient little mouse, who lived with his family under the floor of a grocery store, went out to explore in broad daylight, contrary to his mother's orders. He was joined by another small rebel and the two escaped to the park, where they lived in an old felt hat. When the fall rains came the little creatures were glad to go back to the warm store.

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 21:273 Jl '45 80w

Kirkus 13:221 My 15 '45 150w

"This lively story will delight children from six to ten; illustrations are perfect. Junior Literary Guild selection. Recommended." V. W. Schott

+ Library J 70:534 Je 1 '45 70w

"The mouse-scale proportions of this story will delight readers of 6 to 9 for whom the minute has a special appeal, and so will the delicious humor. Jeanne Bendick's pictures are not entirely successful. Some of them are funny and charming but others are too impressionistic to be easily seen." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p18 My 20 '45 150w

"The humor snaps, and the pictures in color are eccentric enough to make it clear that there won't be any nature lore in the book." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Je 17 '45 240w

CLYMER, ELEANOR LOWENTON. Little Bear island; pictures by Ursula Koering. 143p $2 McBride

Two seven-year-old cousins spend a summer vacation on an island as guests of their great aunt and uncle. Everyday doings are the chief component of this story for ages six to nine.

Booklist 42:132 D 15 '45

"A very pleasant story. . . The clear type and direct style, that is rarely precious, will satisfy the older self-readers . . . while for reading aloud to the younger age it is perfect 'chapter' reading. Jeanne Bendick's illustrations are more than dependable."

+ Kirkus 13:337 Ag 1 '45 130w

"Everyday doings told without much lift. Characters are a little young for the nine-year-olds who would be able to read the book. Usable if a very large collection is needed for this age." E. W. Turpin

Library J 70:1190 D 15 '45 70w

"Great-Aunt Mary and Great-Uncle George, whom any child would like to own as relatives, steer the children through new experiences and into new friendships, with genial wisdom."

+ N Y Times p8 Ja 6 '46 70w

COAN, OTIS WELTON, and LILLARD, RICHARD GORDON. America in fiction; an annotated list of novels that interpret aspects of life in the United States. rev ed 162p pa $1.75 Stanford univ. press

016.813 American fiction—Bibliography. U.S.—History—Fiction—Bibliography A45-1239

"Designed as a student aid for all adults interested in American civilization, the first edition of this useful bibliography was issued in 1941 [Book Review Digest, 1942]. The contents are grouped under such headings as Pioneering, Farm and Village Life, Politics and Public Institutions; the volume concludes with an author index. Works of interest only to specialists are omitted. The compilers give brief digests of such imaginative writing as may help readers to understand their country better." U S Quarterly Bkl

Booklist 41:272 My 15 '45

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:53 Je '45 80w

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). Big green umbrella; il. by Helen Sewell. [28p] 50c Grosset 44-47950

"A light-hearted little story of what happened to a green silk umbrella at a time when ladies wore crinolines and little girls pantalettes. When the umbrella twisted out of its owner's hands in a high wind and flew away over the Delaware River, the Thomas family knew they had seen it for the last time. However (after it had taken a trip to China and back), Amanda and the other Thomases did see the umbrella again and learned of the part a little Chinese girl played in its return trip." N Y Times

Commonweal 41:257 D 22 '44 10w

"It all makes a friendly story, with real flavor. Helen Sewell's illustrations are gay and charming." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p16 F 4 '45 100w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 1 '45 160w

COBB, ELISABETH. My wayward parent. 255p il $2.50 Bobbs
B or 92 Cobb, Irvin Shrewsbury 45-9845

An affectionate, informal biography of Irvin Cobb, written by his daughter.

"Daughter Buff inherits the vocabulary but little of the artistic discipline of her talented pop. What her copy needs is a good sound spanking with a big blue pencil." Sterling North
Book Week p2 N 4 '45 600w
Booklist 42:109 D 1 '45

Reviewed by M. W. Bayley
Christian Science Monitor p20 N 21 '45 480w

"With sentiment that is never mawkish, with retrospective gusto, Irvin Cobb's daughter tells of her father, and necessarily of her mother and herself."
+ Kirkus 13:359 Ag 15 '45 190w

Reviewed by Russell Maloney
N Y Times p7 D 30 '45 600w

"Light comedy routine . . . written in a disturbingly glib and breathless fashion; exuberant is the publishers' term for it, and exuberant it is, too. This little memoir to the late Mr. Cobb could, in fact, serve as the book to end books about madcap families and their goings on."
— New Yorker 21:106 N 10 '45 60w

"Elizabeth Cobb has not only written an entertaining book, filled with funny stories and good citations from her father's works, but she has effectively recreated by her breezy style and humorous detachment something of the homespun personality of her wayward parent." Grace Frank
+ Sat R of Lit 29:12 Ja 12 '46 320w
Springf'd Republican p4d N 25 '45 240w

"This memoir of the life of the popular journalist, short-story writer, after-dinner speaker, lecturer and some time motion-picture actor is by no means complete. It is, however, a loving, warm-hearted and discriminating portrait of one of the most amusing figures of the last generation. . . A pleasant book, this, touched with tenderness and tragedy, and with many glimpses of happy days, and brave days." Stanley Walker
+ Weekly Book Review p4 N 18 '45 800w

COBB, IRVIN SHREWSBURY. Cobb's cavalcade; a selection from [his] writings; ed. by B. D. Zevin. 465p $1.95 World pub.
45-11442

"The book is divided into three parts: Gay stories, grim stories, and a collection of the inimitable Judge Priest stories. The humorous group is made up of half-a-dozen of Cobb's best-known laughs, among them one of his Negro tales, 'The Parker House Roll.' That favorite of the author's, one that is invariably numbered in any list of the world's greatest short stories, 'The Belled Buzzard,' is in the second division, with other good ones." Christian Science Monitor

Reviewed by J. T. Flanagan
Book Week p11 Jl 29 '45 500w
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 14 '45 280w

"Cobb, Mr. Zevin tells us, feared that his non-humorous work would be eclipsed by his universal reputation as a funny man. Oddly enough, a casual 'Cavalcade' reader might get the opposite impression, for the 'grim' section contains the book's most effective writing. . . Cobb's stories of treachery and violence are the real revelation—or rediscovery—of this 'Cavalcade.' Such taut items as 'Fishhead' and 'The Escape of Mr. Trimm' are, Mr. Zevin remarks not unjustly, 'reminiscent of Poe and H. P. Lovecraft,' and amply deserve this latest incarnation." Richard Match
+ N Y Times p26 Jl 29 '45 270w

"The editor, by collecting the stories of an author who was as soundly American as Mark Twain, has done a valuable service to those capable of recognizing the vital in the sentimental and the original in the homely."
+ New Yorker 21:69 Jl 28 '45 60w

COBBAN, ALFRED. National self-determination; issued under the auspices of the Royal inst. of int. affairs. 186p $4.50 (15s) Oxford
323.1 Self determination, National 45-5451

"Professor Cobban shows that national self-determination was a natural development from the theory of popular sovereignty. Once the principle began to be accepted that political authority should reside in the mass of individuals composing the State, it was natural to add that the individual should himself be free so far as possible to decide to what State he should belong. It was assumed therefore that a social group, with common ideals and inhabiting a common territory, had a right to constitute a separate political unit if it so desired. It was only later that this idea developed into what Professor Cobban calls the principle of 'national determinism,' i.e., that wherever a cultural group, based on a community of language, exists, that group ought ipso facto to form a State." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Ann Am Acad 242:166 N '45 700w

"This is an important study in the area where political philosophy and international relations meet and overlap, and is based upon a careful historical analysis of the relevant documentary material."
+ Foreign Affairs 24:158 O '45 40w

"Dr. Cobban's book is far more analytic than Professor Carr's, and it is a valuable examination of the history and philosophy of nationalism and the doctrine of self-determination. Where he is purely historical and analytical, the nationalistic illusion which is so overwhelming in Professor Carr does not affect his vision. But whenever he considers the problem of 'power' in the relations between the Great Power and the small state, he falls a victim to it." Leonard Woolf
+ — New Statesman & Nation 29:243 Ap 14 '45 500w

"The Royal Institute of International Affairs has seldom made a more useful contribution to the scientific study of international relations than in the publication of Professor Cobban's able analysis of the doctrine of national self-determination. Professor Cobban's approach is strictly historical. An outstanding merit of his book is its ample and exact documentation."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p254 Je 2 '45 600w

COCANNOUER, JOSEPH A. Trampling out the vintage. 221p $2.75 Univ. of Okla. press
B or 92 Agriculture—Study and teaching
Agr45-117

The author of this book was a farm boy in Oklahoma and Kansas forty to fifty years ago,

COCANNOUER, J. A.—Continued
watching and working with his mother as she followed good scientific principles in her farming without knowing they were anything but good sense. Since then he has taught and fostered agricultural learning at home in the United States and abroad in the Philippines and China. His book is in part autobiography, in part exposition of his agricultural teaching theories.

" 'Trampling Out the Vintage' is much more than the well-told story of an eventful life. It is a document in American social history, a statement of a fundamental American problem." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 Ap 1 '45 500w
Booklist 41:208 Mr 15 '45

"It is a life deeply interesting, because so simple and direct. The story is plainly told, as informally as in a letter; but it never lags, nor is it ordinary." M. J. Taylor
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 23 '45 600w

"This book stands near the top in the field of personal agricultural writing. Mr. Cocannouer has fought a good fight—in the Oklahoma sand hills, in the Philippine jungles and in California. Men and women on the farm, city dwellers with roots in the soil and those who work for any of the myriad facets that stem from State and national farm programs will enjoy his story. 'Trampling Out the Vintage' is the history of a man's life dedicated to the goal of a better life on the farm." H. S. Pearson
+ N Y Times p27 Mr 18 '45 500w

"Mr. Cocannouer's informal autobiography is without literary pretensions and is innocent of journalistic spit-and-polish. It is a simple, straightforward story of a man who feels deeply about the soil, who acquired his feeling very early in life, and who has spent his years doing what he could to protect it and to improve the practical art of farming." P. M. Wagner
+ Weekly Book Review p20 Ag 26 '45 550w

COCHRAN, HAMILTON. Silver shoals. 320p $2.75 Bobbs
Phips, Sir William—Fiction 45-9673

A historical novel which tells a tale of treasure hunting in the seventeenth century. Told in the first person the story relates the adventures of a young English boy, a ship chandler's clerk, who is driven by personal reasons to flee from his native land. He ships with Captain William Phips, sails to New England, finds a sweetheart there, and later joins Phips in his treasure hunt off the Bahamas.

Reviewed by F. N. Litten
Book Week p11 N 4 '45 400w
Booklist 42:128 D 15 '45
Kirkus 13:280 Jl 1 '45 230w

"Mr. Cochran has painted Phips in broad, effective strokes in this semi-fictional refurbishing of history; readers of 'Windward Passage' and 'Captain Ebony' will know that he is truly in his element when he is outfacing hurricanes, tiger sharks, Boston Puritans, and the rascally brethren of the coast. . . A standard romance between Phips' secretary and a Massachusetts beauty . . . may be safely ignored in favor of the all-out action scenes just mentioned; but the somewhat anticlimatic finale in London is well worth reading for its backstage glimpses into the life of a fuddy-duddy monarch and his court." William Du Bois
+ — N Y Times p37 N 4 '45 240w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p22 O 28 '45 150w

COCKRELL, MRS MARIAN (BROWN). Shadow castle; il. by Olive Bailey. (Whittlesey house publication) 122p $2 McGraw
Fairy tales 45-7408

A modern fairy tale for ages eight to twelve. It is the story of a little girl who followed a small white dog thru a mountain tunnel, emerging in an enchanted valley where the Shadow castle stood. There she heard the story of the forty-eighth son of a fairy king.

"Here is a book as interest-compelling as any breathless comic strip adventure. But here is good writing as well, and an underlying philosophy of kindliness."
+ Book Week p23 N 11 '45 270w

"An over-elaborated fantasy, rather charmingly dressed out with wood cut type of decorations by Olive Bailey."
Kirkus 13:314 Jl 15 '45 170w

"A lovely fantasy filled with fairy princes and princesses, goblins and dragons, magic and charms. Has all the necessary requirements for a good fairy tale." D. M. MacDonald
+ Library J 70:752 S 1 '45 60w

"The horns of elfland sound an eerie, humorous tune in this light-hearted modern fairy tale. The author's prose, slipping often into the commonplace, doesn't always match the mood which she creates, but her inventiveness is free and lively and Olive Bailey's pictures capture its imaginative quality." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p37 S 16 '45 180w

"Although the resemblance to the immortal 'Alice' ends with the introduction, Miss Cockrell's adequate text and Olive Bailey's distinctive illustrations make this a worth-while addition to fairy lore." M. L. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 7 '45 150w

COFFIN, ROBERT PETER TRISTRAM. Poems for a son with wings. 123p $1.75 Macmillan 811 45-3824

Collection of poems written by this Maine poet, for his son, a fighter pilot in the United States navy.

Booklist 41:336 Jl 15 '45

"There is a good deal of first-rate poetry in the new book, dealing with the subjects for which the poet is noted, the Coast of Maine people and the local scenery. The poems about his son, a fighter pilot, are deep and tender; they will strike a responsive chord in any parent's heart. The most distinctive poems, we feel, deal with scenery from the air." Pearl Strachan
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 21 '45 500w

"Many an American family may find these poems—deeply felt and quite affecting—a reflection or accentuation of their own reactions. . . The whole book has a quiet, lyrical, unpretentious quality."
+ Kirkus 13:105 Mr 1 '45 100w

"Virile, yet simple and tender, there is a fatherliness in all these. Recommended for all libraries." E. L. Lewis
+ Library J 70:413 My 1 '45 60w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 21:66 Je 16 '45 210w

Reviewed by S. H. Hay
Sat R of Lit 28:34 S 1 '45 550w

"Again in 'Poems for a Son with Wings,' Robert Coffin captures crystal moments, finds wonder in the commonplace, and makes ordinary living seem extraordinary. In verse that technically is rather rough going at times, the author never loses his rugged Down East phraseology seasoned by wide-eyed reverence and a residue of thought that lingers after the page is turned." A. M. Jakeman
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d My 20 '45 480w

"Mr. Coffin does not always survey with an artist's selective eye nor record with clean, economical lines: he slops over into weird varieties of mystical extravaganza that are anything but characteristic of his own New England scene—or, for that matter, of any American scene. He is apt to explode, rocket-fashion, into an apotheosis of flame, lightning and thunder, with a penultimate shower of cherubim and seraphim. Yet when he fore-goes his mystical mixtures and takes his Nature straight, Mr. Coffin's work is nearly always good." Ruth Lechlitner

+ — Weekly Book Review p14 Ag 26 '45 400w

COHEN, ARMOND EMANUEL. All God's children; a Jew speaks. 104p $1.50 Macmillan
296 Jews—Political and social conditions. Jews—Religion 45-9283

In a highly personal style (the chapters are in the form of letters addressed to "Dear Neighbor") the author discusses some of the problems of Jewish-Christian relationships. Partial contents: Where do we come from; The Jews and their religion; Don't blame Jesus; Am I an international plotter; I am a a capitalist and a communist; Are the Jews clannish; What about Palestine; Where do we go from here.

Booklist 42:141 Ja 1 '46
Christian Century 62:1385 D 12 '45 80w

Reviewed by T. F. Opie
Churchman 160:16 Ja 15 '46 150w

"You can read this book in two hours—and it will be two hours well spent. The author is an orthodox rabbi, and he does not pull his punches." M. S. Enslin
+ Crozer Q 23:110 Ja '46 90w

"Every Christian in America, Catholic and Protestant, should read this book, and many a Jew would profit by it, too. For here a Jew speaks his mind on the question of Jewish-Christian relationships, and he does so frankly but with restraint, true tolerance and in a broad and liberal spirit. . . It is as if a Jewish friend, a kindly and understanding one, dropped in for a series of evenings and tried to make clear his point of view. Church groups and others interested in inter-cultural relations could well plan a series of discussions based on this book."
+ Kirkus 13:365 Ag 15 '45 220w

"Oversimplification and irrelevant personal convictions mar this commendable effort by an American Zionist to interpret the Jew's daily life, religious customs and social aspirations for his Christian neighbors. Until a better organized book is written, however, this book will be useful as a primer for promoting interracial understanding." Scott Adams
+ — Library J 70:889 O 1 '45 60w

"This slim little volume covers outstanding fallacies about the Jewish people and supplies straightforward, simple answers with which to dissipate these fallacies. . . The unhappy feature about such volumes is that they rarely fall into the hands of the bigoted and the prejudiced and those who need them most. Yet if such volumes are used by ministers and teachers and editors and those who mold public opinion they will add to their resource material with which to keep at the eternal battle of building more wholesome inter-group relations." A. L. Sachar
+ Weekly Book Review p36 D 2 '45 180w

COHEN, HARRY. Panorama of prejudice. 150p $2 Bloch
296 Jews—Political and social conditions 45-3488

"This 'panorama' presents a selection of the shameful facts concerning the persecution of the Jews and the disabilities under which they suffer even in places where they are not persecuted." Christian Century

"The author admits that this study of anti-Semitism is 'an enlarged pamphlet rather than a book.' His processes are those of the partisan pamphleteer, but criticism is disarmed by his frank admission of it. . . His picture of conditions in America is exaggerated and distorted. In this reviewer's opinion, he does not discover the real historic roots of modern anti-Semitism. He thinks the Jews are hated only for their virtues. But judged as a passionate pamphlet, it is pointed toward justice."
+ — Christian Century 62:20 Ja 3 '45 150w

"While the author is earnest and sincere, the book indicates a lack of training in the handling of historical and socio-psychological materials." R. H. Abrams
Crozer Q 22:272 Jl '45 800w

COHEN, LESTER. Coming home. 378p $2.75 Viking 45-4134

Story of a young marine, wounded in the battles of Guadalcanal, his return to his native city, Pittsburgh, and the harder fight he made there against political corruption.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p3 My 20 '45 450w
Booklist 41:286 Je 1 '45

"This is only a novel, but it is far-reaching in its implications. It indicates that American soldiers and marines are going to demand justice when they return from war if they find such conditions. Anyone reading this novel, who has shirked in the total war effort, will certainly have a big scare thrown at him." Hy Hurwitz
+ Boston Globe p13 My 23 '45 180w

"Coming Home is vital and timely but because of its style, its air of breathlessness, one reads it at breakneck speed, driven along from one shocking disclosure to another in a state of indefinite expectancy. It is as if the author had deliberately aimed at producing a book that would have a greater percentage of heart-throb to the square inch than any other book in the western hemisphere." Alan Creighton
+ — Canadian Forum 25:120 Ag '45 450w
Kirkus 13:141 Ap 1 '45 210w

"Without straining logic at all, the author has swiftly painted the history of Allegheny County's high and low society, tied them together, added the Dneiperstroi dam, Japanese air power, a pinch of future Manchuria. But it is a statistical rather than an emotional logic, and the effect is sometimes that of setting music to a large blueprint. Yet the individual characters are well realized, and their rapidly paced stories make engrossing melodrama." Kenneth Fearing
N Y Times p21 My 13 '45 360w

"Mr. Cohen has no more style than a jack rabbit, but his book affords a certain entertainment."
New Yorker 21:90 My 19 '45 120w

Reviewed by Phil Stong
Sat R of Lit 28:22 Je 2 '45 500w

Reviewed by Emanuel Slotnick
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 29 '45 250w

"In spite of an occasional lack of subtlety, and frequent lapses into sentimentality, 'Coming Home' is a rich book, which attempts a great deal and realizes it well enough to be constantly swift and interesting." Barbara Klaw
+ — Weekly Book Review p6 My 13 '45 550w

COHEN, MORRIS RAPHAEL. Preface to logic. 209p $2.50 Holt
160 Logic 44-51579

"Not an introductory book on the principles of logic but a consideration of the subject matter of formal logic, its component parts and their relation to writing and speaking, and other practical affairs. Some of the material has been given in lectures or has appeared in scholarly journals." (Booklist) Index.

"A new book by Prof. Cohen is an important event, not because he writes so little but because he writes so well. . . A great book by a great man." E. B. Zeisler
+ Book Week p4 F 18 '45 500w
Booklist 41:180 F 15 '45

"It is regrettable that [this] book is not meant for the general reader, as the publisher's blurb pretends. . . Mr. Cohen, although on the side of the Moderns in his interests and knowledge, considerably bolsters the position of the Ancients through his criticism of the pretensions of positivism. His contribution, however, is mainly that of a catalyst. His attempts at positive reconstruction fall woefully short, even discounting their admittedly fragmentary character, as when he suggests that the need for ethics lies in the fact that 'we must integrate all of our desires into one coherent system so that we can attain self-respect.' But considered as a catalyst of the inadequate notions of science prevalent in the world today, Mr. Cohen's work proves the truth of his contention that logic can be 'a great liberation.' " Otto Bird

COHEN, M. R.—Continued

Commonweal 41:499 Mr 2 '45 350w

Current Hist 8:443 My '45 50w

"This would be an excellent book to put into the hands of a young philosopher; it would have to be a very exceptional student of logic who had nothing to learn from reading this book—and a hopelessly stolid man who failed to enjoy the experience." Max Black

+ Ethics 55:318 Jl '45 400w

Reviewed by M. G. White

Nation 160:134 F 3 '45 500w

"To the many individuals for whom Professor Cohen's lectures or books have provided a stimulus to, as well as an example of, the life of reason, his new work on logic will be a welcome addition to the all too scanty list of his published works. Like its predecessors, Reason and Nature and Law and the Social Order, the present volume consists of a series of studies rather than a systematic treatise. This does not mean, however, that the chapters of the book are unrelated either as to issues or essential doctrine. On the contrary, Cohen's vigorous and challenging defense of logic as the science of 'possible being,' his insistence on the objectivity of rational reflection and discourse, and his unrepentant conviction as to the validity of metaphysical generalization and hypothesis, appear as recurrent themes, giving the essays a coherence which belies the apparent diversity of their contents." H. D. Aiken

+ New Repub 112:306 F 26 '45 950w

"This analysis of logic, by one of the country's foremost logicians, will be rather tough going for the general reader. The author writes extremely well and has a certain verve, but his specialized vocabulary keeps on getting in his way, despite all his skill in using it. However, students of the subject should find the book stimulating."

+ — New Yorker 20:68 Ja 20 '45 80w

"To all teachers embroiled in the entangling problems of pedagogy and the current conflicts of educational philosophies, this little book will offer illumination and guidance in that its contents are based on the motif of freeing thought from fallacy, obscurantism, and obfuscation. . . To those who are unfamiliar with Dr. Cohen and would like a thumbnail sketch of his thought one might say that, despite his conviction that 'philosophic labels are libels,' he belongs to the tradition of philosophy where one looks not only for the use-value of thought but also for the dignity of thought, where one looks toward philosophy not only as a measure of salvation from woe but as an end in itself." Martin Wolfson

+ School & Society 61:429 Je 30 '45 750w

"A book by Morris Cohen is always distinguished by its clarity and reasoned common sense, and this, his latest work, is no exception to that rule. . . Professor Cohen advances a chastened 'frequency view' of probability and accepts the view that probability is a relation between assertions and evidence rather than a fact about the real world. In this doctrine, and in the refusal to recognize the important consequences for philosophy of indeterminism and relativity, are to be found the only weaknesses in this book."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 1:8 Je '45 200w

"Professor Cohen's great influence on contemporary philosophers has lain largely in the direction of intellectual criticism and the raising of fundamental logical issues. Nearly twenty years ago he published a volume called 'Reason in Nature.' In this new book, 'Preface to Logic,' he brings to bear his acute and humanistic mind on the place and figure of logic in philosophy and in the world." Irwin Edman

+ Weekly Book Review p4 F 4 '45 1350w

"The book is lucidly and vigorously written. It has one fault of manner to which I am afraid those of us who work in philosophy are particularly prone. It takes too obvious and unholy a joy in spitting the enemy on its sword. If Mr. Cohen has a choice between putting a theory positively and putting it in such a way as to expose the fathomless obliquity of misguided opponents, his delight in the smoke of battle makes him lean to the latter. He is like the horse in Job that sayeth among the spears 'Ha! Ha!' Each man to his taste. Mine is for less contentiousness among these timeless issues." Brand Blanshard

+ — Yale R n s 35:170 autumn '45 900w

COHEN, OCTAVUS ROY. Danger in paradise. 225p $2 Macmillan

Detective story.

Kirkus 13:7 Ja 1 '45 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p12 Mr 18 '45 150w

"A cheerful item in Mr. Cohen's current bright-lights manner." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p16 Mr 18 '45 100w

COHN, NORMA. Little people in a big country; pictures by children of Soviet Russia. [31p] $1.50 Oxford

136.7475 Children as artists. Uzbekistan—Juvenile literature 45-3305

Original pictures painted by children of Uzbekistan in Soviet Russia. They show what these children are thinking about and what they are doing. Brief explanatory text accompanies each picture.

Book Week p22 Je 3 '45 150w

Booklist 41:257 My 1 '45

Bookmark 6:16 Ag 1 '45

Canadian Forum 25:99 Jl '45 70w

"The drawings possess an extraordinary degree of charm, as children's drawings are likely to do, and betray how deep-seated are regional preferences for color combinations and design elements. Call it Soviet propaganda if you will, the book is one of the loveliest in recent years." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 43:123 N 16 '45 70w

Horn Bk 21:193 My '45 60w

Kirkus 13:159 Ap 1 '45 90w

Reviewed by M. A. Webb

Library J 70:415 My 1 '45 50w

"It remains outstanding among books of the year." M. C. Skinner

+ Library J 70:949 O 15 '45 70w

"This collection is a small but steel-true instrument for building that understanding which is needed to make us one world." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 8 '45 150w

New Yorker 21:124 D 8 '45 80w

"At a time when so many of the art treasures of the world are being destroyed, these works of art made by the very young citizens of one of our Allies have a very special value. They seem to point the way to a future that will be rich in opportunity and adventure. . . The reproduction of these pictures is excellent. In fact, the book is a treasure to book lovers as well as to the children." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:29 Ap 21 '45 360w

"The paintings of these little people are not so much efforts to express themselves as to express, so that other people can share it, just what they love in their life and their land. Everything about the book sings together, from the jacket to the two-colored endpapers." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 My 20 '45 350w

COLCORD, JOANNA CARVER. Sea language comes ashore; il. by Larry. 213p $2.25 Cornell maritime

427.9 English language—Slang. Naval art and science—Dictionaries. Seafaring life—Dictionaries 45-966

After an introductory essay on "sea language" in general, this book consists of a glossary of sea terms now used in many cases also on shore. The arrangement is alphabetical with explanatory and historical notes usually from three to ten or twelve lines long.

"Pungent, apt and humorous is the lingo of the sailor man, and the two standard collections of same are the 'Glossary of Sea Terms' (1942) by Gershom Bradford of the U.S. Navy, and the 'Universal Dictionary of the Marine' (1769) by William Falconer. Miss Colcord's delightful little book usefully supplements these major works." Peter Quinn
+ Book Week p10 Ja 21 '45 450w

Booklist 41:181 F 15 '45

Cath World 161:525 S '45 100w

"Miss Colcord has put everyone who speaks American greatly in her debt. She has made us conscious of the strong sea savor of much of the language we speak." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 F 12 '45 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '45

Library J 69:1002 N 15 '44 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:6 Ja '45

"[A] fabulously interesting work on speech which traces the lusty effect of salt-water transfusions on the landsman's language." C. B. Palmer
+ N Y Times p14 Mr 11 '45 500w

New Yorker 20:68 Ja 20 '45 60w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 21 '45 600w

"The preparation of 'Sea Language. . . was a sort of busman's holiday from Miss Colcord's professional writings which are a must in every social work library. She did it, she says, as a labor of love, 'strictly for fun.' It is fun too for anyone with a feeling for the color and romance of the English language." Gertrude Springer
+ Survey G 34:105 Mr '45 300w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:59 S '45 80w

"An attractive assignment, this, and carried out with precision and sly good humor." Stanley Walker
+ Weekly Book Review p2 F 11 '45 950w

COLDWELL, MAJOR JAMES WILLIAM. Left turn, Canada; with an introd. by Eric Estorick. (British Commonwealth ser) 247p $2.75 Duell

329.971 Canada—Economic policy. Cooperative commonwealth federation 45-5358

"Author, leader of Canada's fast-growing third political party, the Democratic Socialist CCF (Co-operative Commonwealth Federation), after brief, historical survey enlarges upon party's postwar plans. Amongst other subjects deals with economic and social planning, nationalization of banks, education for democracy, etc. Especially interesting chapter on Saskatchewan where, in 1944, party established first socialist government on North American continent." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p6 Jl 8 '45 270w

Booklist 41:316 Jl 1 '45

"One of the chief merits of the book from the standpoint of the Canadian reader, is that it is written primarily for outsiders. Mr. Coldwell has orientated the struggle for economic democracy in Canada to Canada's historical background and her evolution as the leading 'middle power' in a world where international collaboration has become an urgent necessity. Most Canadians are in need of thus looking at their country from the outside, of envisaging Canada's special position in the general setting of decaying capitalism and the rise of planned economic and social organization. . . While it may seem a minor point, Mr. Coldwell's exposition will actually have performed a major service if it only cures journalists, inside and outside Canada, and including some Canadian exiles, of the habit of referring to Canada's socialist party as the 'Canadian Commonwealth Federation.' " C. M.
Canadian Forum 25:143 S '45 850w

Foreign Affairs 24:168 O '45 40w

"An important book for balance in better understanding of what is happening—politically, economically, socially, in Canada."
+ Kirkus 13:171 Ap 15 '45 130w

"Well written with not too much political bias. Not only will United States and Canada have to face many similar problems but both will have to co-operate more closely, thus Canada's development is of more importance to Americans than commonly realized. Recommended for public and educational libraries." H. H. A. Bernt
+ Library J 70:486 My 15 '45 140w

Reviewed by King Gordon
Nation 161:89 Jl 28 '45 450w

"Mr. Coldwell is an excellent guide to an elementary knowledge of Canadian public life when one discounts his frankly avowed political and economic sympathies." W. H. Chamberlin
+ Sat R of Lit 28:28 Jl 28 '45 600w

Reviewed by Alzada Comstock
Springf'd Republican p4d Je 24 '45 650w

"Mr. Coldwell tells the story of his party soberly and factually, but with the note of argument which one might expect from a party leader during a major campaign. Sometimes this note is a little shrill; campaign issues are usually not very hardy, and 'date' rapidly. But on the whole the author has done much to clarify one of the most challenging political phenomena in this hemisphere." H. W. Baehr
+ — Weekly Book Review p4 Je 24 '45 550w

COLE, FAY COOPER. Peoples of Malaysia. 354p il maps $4 Van Nostrand

919.1 Malay archipelago. Ethnology—Malay archipelago 45-5386

"The history, life, and customs of the Malaysian peoples are described by a scientist who has spent many years living and studying among them. Malaysia includes the Philippines, Bali, Java, Borneo, Sumatra, and many of the smaller south Pacific islands, and a chapter is devoted to each of these geographic entities following a short historical survey of the whole area. Presentation is readable and documentary notes appear at the end of the book along with appendixes containing a wealth of anthropological data." Booklist

---

Booklist 41:317 Jl 1 '45

"The oddities of the tribes and their beliefs make entertaining reading."
+ Current Hist 9:323 O '45 40w

"[Some] chapters deal with Borneo, Bali, Java, Sumatra, and Nias. These do not have the detailed and vivid information given for the Philippines, probably because the author spent considerably more time in the Philippines than in Malaya or the Netherlands Indies. This may also explain why these chapters contain a few factual inaccuracies. . . As the author devotes a large part of the book to such primitive groups as the Pygmies and the Sakai, readers may receive the impression that these peoples occupy an important place in Malaysia. Although they are anthropologically extremely interesting, because of their numerical negligibility, their cultural level, and their geographical isolation, they actually figure little in the foundation 'on which we must build if we are to assist in the establishment of self-governing states.' A chapter, instead of a few hints, on the status of the nationalist movement in the various parts of Malaysia and a discussion of the postwar plans of the returning Dutch and British would greatly help those readers who are anxious to know where other Malayan peoples stand compared with the Filipinos." K. J. Pelzer
Geog R 35:694 O '45 950w

"In this book Dr. Cole, one of the foremost authorities on the anthropology of the region, presents a well written and interesting description of Malaysian peoples."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:18 S '45 220w

COLEGROVE, KENNETH WALLACE. American Senate and world peace. 209p $2 Vanguard [7s 6d Allen, G.]

328.739 U.S. Congress. Senate. U.S.—Foreign relations 44-191

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"The book ends with an excellent bibliography and an appendix carrying the 'Records of Isolationist Senators.' It is a challenging volume and constitutes a splendid example of vigorous, forthright discussion of a great problem facing the American people." J. E. Harley
+ Columbia Law R 45:94 Ja '45 1200w

"I can thoroughly recommend this illuminating study to those who wish to know why the United States excluded itself from the last peace and why, in spite of the clear desire of its people to collaborate with the United Nations, it is difficult for them formally to commit themselves to the coming settlement." Norman MacKenzie
+ New Statesman & Nation 29:144 Mr 3 '45 1200w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan
Spec 174:152 F 16 '45 800w

"This is a timely book combining scholarship with a welcome readiness to discard some of the academic discretion usually thought fitting in the writings of professors of political science. . . Interesting in itself, this book is interesting, too, as an example of that national stocktaking which marks American life to-day."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p74 F 17 '45 650w

COLES, MANNING, pseud. of ADELAIDE FRANCES OKE MANNING and CYRIL HENRY COLES. Green hazard. 254p $2 Doubleday 45-1736

More adventures of the British intelligence agent, Tony Hambledon, this time masquerading as a famous inventor of explosives right under the eyes of the Nazi leaders in Berlin.

"The book will give you a pleasant enough evening and there's a nice twist in that Goering and Goebbels are brought in as characters in the plot. However, I found it distasteful when, toward the end of the book, Goering is all of a sudden depicted as a sort of left-handed knight errant who is not such a bad guy after all." Elizabeth Bullock
+ — Book Week p11 Mr 18 '45 180w

Booklist 41:210 Mr 15 '45

Bookmark 6:20 Ja '45

"Splendid spy stuff."
+ Boston Globe p15 Ja 31 '45 60w

Kirkus 12:525 N 15 '44 130w

"Exciting and frequently hilarious."
+ New Repub 112:238 F 12 '45 70w

New Statesman & Nation 29:362 Je 2 '45 20w

"It is an amusing story, but it is not Manning Coles at his best." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p22 F 11 '45 160w

"Not very terrifying, but quite funny in spots."
New Yorker 20:84 F 3 '45 60w

"Adequate spy-stuff."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:27 F 10 '45 40w

"Manning Coles has enough situations up his sleeve to hold most customers, even those who know the hero will get along right up to the end. Tommy has an unlimited supply of false beards and you can't fool him when others seek to emulate his skill at make-up; at one point several characters are batting around in disguise at the same time and place. When things look darkest, he can always spring one of his booby traps. Upshot is a speedy enough yarn brightened by the debonair wise-cracks of the aforesaid Thomas Elphinstone Hambledon, pride of the British Intelligence. . . A necessity for those who like to catch up with history in this particular way." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p12 Ja 28 '45 240w

COLLIER'S, THE NATIONAL WEEKLY. Stop or I'll scream! an album of more than 300 funny drawings by nearly fifty cartoonists; ed. by Gurney Williams. 160p $2 McBride

741.5 Humor, Pictorial 45-35175

Collection of cartoons selected from Collier's magazine, representing the work of Steig, Soglow, Alain, Coe, Price, Partch, etc.

Booklist 42:33 O 1 '45

"Genial conviviality in the merchandise bracket."
+ Kirkus 13:360 Ag 15 '45 80w

"It is not only a funny book, with an obvious kinship to the comic strip, it is a record of the times—of its manners (and ill manners), its customs and its costumes, with, of course, much about the war service in its lighter aspects and the minor griefs of wartime rationing and so on on the home front."
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 26 '45 180w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p5 D 2 '45 50w

COLLIN, HEDVIG. Wind island [il. by the author]. 96p $2 Viking 45-37890

"This is the story of a fisherman's family who live on the little Island of Fanoe off the coast of Denmark." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 42:169 Ja 15 '46

"Every armchair traveller from six up will want this book."
+ Kirkus 13:337 Ag 1 '45 90w

"This story . . . is full of word pictures so clear and colorful that the reader feels he has gone walking on the smooth white beach, entered the trim houses, gathered gulls' eggs with the children and searched for amber in the seaweed carried to the island after a storm." A. T. E.
+ N Y Times p18 N 11 '45 130w

"A beautiful and distinguished book for children. . . Hedvig Collin is well known as an artist in the Scandinavian countries, in Europe, and in America. To the children this will be just a jolly, exciting story with delightful pictures. To their elders it is a book that deserves its place among the arts." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:79 N 10 '45 900w

"One of the loveliest books to come to our children—indirectly—out of the war." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 D 16 '45 350w

COLLINS, C. CODY. Love of a glove. 128p il $3 Fairchild

391.4 Gloves 45-5755

"Blend of romance, legend, history and fashion report about gloves. . . [Includes] many photographs of historic interest showing actual gloves of the great—Mary Queen of Scots, Henry VIII, Elizabeth, Anne, Catherine de Medici, Tutankhamen and others." Weekly Book Review

Booklist 42:123 D 15 '45

Library J 70:751 S 1 '45 20w

Weekly Book Review p22 My 20 '45 100w

COLLINS, FREDERICK LEWIS. Uncle Sam's billion-dollar baby; a taxpayer looks at the T V A. 174p $2.50 Putnam

627.1 Tennessee valley authority 45-8061

"Amusing dialog within a family circle and among its close friends forms the framework for this discussion of the T.V.A., which concludes that the project is by no means what its publicists represent it to be. Granting good intentions on the part of at least some of the authority's promoters and personnel, an engineer, a businessman, and a housewife provide the main arguments that the whole scheme is a financial and engineering fraud foisted upon a gullible American public. Not documented." Booklist

"Strange things are printed and sold as books these days. This little item is one of the strangest. . . All of Collins' characters exhibit the same blatant implausibility as the sort of Americans you see pictured in certain advertisements, discoursing on various modern comfits and gadgets, on why we owe it to our boys to keep America Just as it was Before the War, and on intimate problems of personal hygiene. The conversational style of Collins' Mr. Tait is so coy it turns your stomach." Russell Lord
— Book Week p17 S 23 '45 550w
Booklist 42:52 O 15 '45

"The book is a cleverly written piece of anti-TVA literature. It all sounds very plausible. But when the engineer reader discovers some obvious misstatements of fact and half truths with respect to engineering matters he begins to suspect that the same may be true of the author's statements with respect to the TVA financial operations."
— Eng N 136:160 Ja 10 '46 240w

Reviewed by A. G. Mezerik
— New Repub 114:57 Ja 14 '46 2150w

"The book is significant only as it indicates that there is still a widespread view that people are fools. The utilities seem to have been behaving pretty well lately but if their friends begin to talk to the American people as if they were intellectual suckers, the people may begin to wonder if in other ways also they are being made suckers of again." Jonathan Daniels
— Sat R of Lit 28:54 O 13 '45 270w

Reviewed by C. S. Ascher
Survey G 34:455 N '45 500w
Weekly Book Review p34 N 25 '45 200w

COLLISON, THOMAS. The superfortress is born; the story of the Boeing B-29. 218p il $3 Duell
629.134 Airplanes, Military 45-5953

"The story of the design, engineering and production of the Boeing B-29 Superfortress, and the important flights made by these airplanes up to their first bombing of Tokyo from Saipan. Written in popular style." Library J

Kirkus 13:268 Je 15 '45 80w

Reviewed by J. A. Sohon
Library J 70:486 My 15 '45 40w

Reviewed by F. S. Adams
N Y Times p7 Jl 15 '45 500w

"Mr. Collison's failure to limit the technical details in the early chapters and his unrestrained hosannahs throughout the book prevent 'The Superfortress Is Born' from approaching the American epic he so fondly believes it to be. Despite such faults, however, it remains an impressive narrative of our wartime production." Bill Reed
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:46 Jl 7 '45 550w

COLTON, ETHAN THEODORE. Toward the understanding of Europe. 86p maps $1 Assn. press 940.531 Europe—Politics. World war, 1939— Territorial questions 45-802

"Most Americans are only dimly aware of problems that are familiar to Dr. Colton after twenty years of residence and travel in Europe. He addresses this book to his fellow-countrymen to help them understand Europe—that turbulent mixture of political hopes, religions, economic needs, cultural traits, and national traditions. In terms of the honest emotions of common people he tells what it means to be a part of that mixture—to live at the 'crossroads of conflict,' to sit on the 'powder keg' of a continent." (Publisher's note) Bibliography.

"Although Dr. Colton's book affords keen insight into European problems, inasmuch as he offers no solutions, his readers may feel themselves even more bewildered than before. Furthermore, it is difficult to see how he thinks we ought to act in order to secure lasting peace which, he maintains, is our 'heavy responsibility.'" Arthur Freud
Ann Am Acad 240:146 Jl '45 280w

"There is no word of blame for Germany. 'Violations' of Germany's western frontier are mentioned, but not Germany's secret rearmament; reparations paid by Germany, but not the financial aid extended to Germany. The 'peace essentials' for the future have to do chiefly with economic rehabilitation, general limitation of armaments ('United Nations forces can easily manage to keep them within appointed bounds'), and a high court to adjust contested boundaries and other disputes."
Christian Century 62:304 Mr 7 '45 210w

"Dr. Colton at least is possessed of the essence of wit; he is willing, despite detailed and apparently voluminous knowledge of European history, to remain brief. Moreover, his thinking produces sentences with illuminating twists to them. He succeeds in awakening the reader between the facts. But he has not mastered the problem of making elementary information sufficiently exciting, or human enough, to compel the undeviating attention of the class of reader to which such a book is most useful. . . For the man or woman—or high school boy or girl, for that matter—who wants an introduction to the problems that are affecting all our lives more directly than ever before, this book can be recommended. It is about as free from prejudices as one can ask." C. W. M
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 16 '45 480w

COLVER, MRS ALICE MARY (ROSS). Homecoming. 245p $2 Macrae Smith co.
45-6564

The return of a young veteran from the South Pacific, starts the ball rolling in this novel about family life and readjustments in a present-day New Jersey town.

Booklist 42:166 Ja 15 '46
Kirkus 13:205 My 15 '45 130w

"Alice Ross Colver presents some plausible emotional tangles sensibly and sympathetically. . . It's all done with nice domestic touches and not too much grimness." Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p10 Jl 22 '45 80w

COLVIN, FRED HERBERT, and STANLEY, FRANK ARTHUR. Standard and emergency shop methods. 333p il $3.50 McGraw
621.9 Machine shop practice 45-8242

"This book is addressed primarily to engineers and others who are not experienced in machine shop operations but who need a practical knowledge of standard operations and the machines used for them. Under such headings as 'Making holes,' 'Boring machines and boring mills,' and 'Grinding operations,' it describes both standard operations and machines, and also novel and emergency methods devised, for the most part, during the war when the supply of machine tools was limited. The object of the latter feature is to illustrate the wide range of machining operations that can be performed with limited equipment." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 42:70 N 1 '45
Library J 70:531 Je 1 '45 90w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:37 Jl '45

COLWELL, MIRIAM. Wind off the water. 232p $2.50 Random house
45-4923

A story of three brothers, lobster fishermen, their wives and families. Their life in a small Maine village, during the winter, spring and early summer of 1942, is painted with stark realism, the simple joys of some, the rebellion of others, the final tragedy which visited one household.

"This Way Down East novel in which the earth turns a la Gladys Hasty Carroll from winter through spring to summer is the work of a 24-year-old Maine postmistress who could give some of the veteran fictioneers lessons in craftsmanship. In a remarkably short space she brings alive a fishing village and breathes similitude into a number of its inhabitants. . . There is no especially novel treatment in 'Wind Off the Water' nor is any part of it likely to linger long in the memory, but it is an easy-to-take and diverting dose." Jack Conroy

COLWELL, MIRIAM—Continued

+ — Book Week p6 Je 17 '45 320w

Booklist 42:18 S '45

"A realistic picture of an inbred, close-webbed way of life."

Kirkus 13:144 Ap 1 '45 130w

"This story of three families of brother lobster fishermen and others in the community, gives a vivid picture of how such people live and of how brothers and their families may differ. Some few may be concerned over the frank language. Not outstanding, though recommended if needed." E. F. Kelly

Library J 70:530 Je 1 '45 50w

"Nothing new is added to the familiar pattern of life in this small fishing town with the village store as its pivot, with the men's 'cracker barrel' group, the gossip and the inevitable near tragedy at sea. But the author makes the fullest use of the halftones and overtones of human gropings, of evasions and torments of the spirit; her scenes are vital and compact, gaining their effectiveness in some instances from a brutal simplicity; her dialogue is natural and easy, at all times faithful to the regional vernacular. It all makes a provocative, honest book." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p20 Je 17 '45 260w

"According to the jacket, the life of these people 'is good to turn to in these times of chaos.' De gustibus. . . If a life chiefly concerned with the weather, lobstering, physical functions, and petty local gossip is the best alternative available, chaos would seem to have its glamor. In any case this is not a novel for the squeamish. Those who like their Maine in terms of Mary Ellen Chase and Robert Tristram Coffin should leave it alone." Grace Frank

— Sat R of Lit 28:24 Ag 11 '45 450w

"Harsh weather and the isolation imposed by geography are the controlling forces in this first novel by a twenty-four-year-old postmistress of a Maine fishing village. 'Wind Off the Water' is a smoothly written book about the inhabitants of a typical, tight-knit, sea-rocked community on the Maine coast. . . Writing from experience, the author does a convincing job of making her characters fit their environment. Her plot is disjointed and over-casual, but the book as a whole strikes a note of reality." Barbara Auchincloss

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 Je 17 '45 400w

COMENIUS, JOHANN AMOS. Angel of peace; ed. by Milos Safranek; introd. by Matthew Spinka [rendered into English by W. A. Morison]. 125p $2 Pantheon bks.

172.4 Peace 45-6804

"Ambassadors of England and the Netherlands were meeting at Breda in 1667 to make peace between the two nations which had been intermittently at war for fifteen years. . . To the members of this conference, John Amos Comenius addressed this document as an exhortation to them to seek peace on Christian principles." (Christian Century) This small volume contains the Latin text with an English translation on opposite pages. There is also an Introduction of some fourteen pages dealing with the historical background of the work, written by Professor Matthew Spinka, author of John Amos Comenius, That Incomparable Moravian (Book Review Digest, 1944).

"The worst that can be said of this peace plan is that it is as utopian as Tsar Alexander I's 'Holy Alliance' a century and a half later; the best, that it holds up a Christian ideal which, whether attainable or not within the foreseeable future, has the merit of being right." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 62:81 Ja 17 '45 1000w

"The translator has been faithful to the author's meaning but without feeling bound to literal renderings. Sometimes one may complain of some loss of the suggestion conveyed by the original. . . [However] the emerging world situation makes the appearance of this book as timely as its contents are intrinsically valuable." J. T. McNeill

+ J Religion 25:300 O '45 500w

COMFORT, ALEXANDER. Power house. 464p $3 Viking [10s 6d Routledge]

45-4143

The scene of this novel by a young Englishman, is a French industrial town; the time is from the middle thirties till after the fall of France. The chief characters are a French intellectual, who becomes a soldier, and a worker in a textile mill.

Reviewed by Andre Maurois

Book Week p9 Ap 1 '45 600w

Booklist 41:269 My 15 '45

"Authentic in feel, but overladen with detail, erratic in shifting focus."

Kirkus 13:6 Ja 1 '45 180w

"Only one character goes all through the book, beginning as an engineer in a powerhouse and ending as a railway stoker. Notwithstanding its method, the vivid descriptions and the superabundant detail produce a powerful effect of personal experience that the reader cannot fail to share. Mr. Comfort knows his material with an astonishing intimacy and has a remarkable gift for describing it." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 22 '44 150w

"Because of its author's place among the younger British intellectuals, 'The Power House' claimed my attention. It was not able to engage it. I read the first two dozen pages three times without having any notion of what I was reading; then I made several firm attempts to break into the story at a later point of its development, each time without success. This report must therefore stand for the whole of my review." Diana Trilling

— Nation 160:368 Mr 31 '45 270w

Reviewed by Marjorie Farber

New Repub 112:450 Ap 2 '45 1200w

"Not nearly enough care seems to have gone to the making of this book. The only way, perhaps, for such a jumble of observation and hearsay to cohere into a work of art would be the impregnation of it with a vision and a philosophy. . . As a philosophy it is supercilious rather than profound." Henry Reed

— New Statesman & Nation 28:256 O 14 '44 600w

"A talented young Englishman named Alex Comfort has written about deeply moving events. . . The result is an interesting failure. Although the book is full of objective details and subjective impressions, its effect is usually thin and dreamlike; and although most readers will reject its political thesis, they will be concerned much less with the thesis than with the improbability of the characters and actions that are intended to prove it." D. S. Norton

— + N Y Times p4 Mr 25 '45 650w

"This is professionally known as painting on a large canvas, but the author uses a technique better adapted to writing the Lord's Prayer on the head of a pin. . . At the end of four hundred and sixty-four pages of this, you feel as if you had travelled from New York to San Francisco on a pogo stick."

— New Yorker 21:82 Mr 31 '45 250w

" 'The Power House' is certainly among the few challenging books of fiction produced by a young man in these war years. It marks Mr. Comfort as an author of remarkable talent, possibly of genius. It should be read by everyone interested in young writers. . . When the publishers say that Mr. Comfort's is a 'voice that will be heard.' I agree with them. When they say his is a voice 'of a new generation,' I am inclined to follow Mr. Comfort's method in dealing with the strong language of war, with—! Mr. Comfort seems to me to be a hangover of the past, of the sad boys at Oxford and Cambridge, with their sad counterparts in other lands and here at home. He has all the equipment of a fine writer, but, I suspect and hope, none of the equipment of a political leader." John Farrar

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:11 Mr 17 '45 1350w

"It is a very fine, true novel. May it be read as it deserves to be!" Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 173:296 S 29 '44 800w

"To this historian there is little difference between an army of liberation and an army of occupation. In this lies the memorable quality of this book. Not that it says much more than Eliot said 20 years ago in 'The Wasteland,' but it says it again, in a way that is more powerful because it is less literary and more brutal, because it is so matter of fact. . . The novel is also interesting for some remarkably well written scenes, though the writing, and the unity of the book as a whole is often very confusing. It is disjointed in style as if it were a translation by an amateur. Too often the style and the sentences ornamented with many syllabled medical terms, stand between the reader and the narrative. That is a pity." Lee Varley

+ — Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 8 '45 900w

Time 45:104 Mr 26 '45 30w

"'The Power House' is ambitious and talented. It is also an immature work. Mr. Comfort's particular style of naturalistic observation is relentless and sometimes powerful in effect; but it also reproduces much of the tedium of the French naturalistic novelists of a couple of generations ago or more and adds to the tedium a somewhat jarring gesticulatoriness."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p473 S 30 '44 550w

"Densely woven, tough-fibered, intense, 'The Power House' is not a book to induce relaxation. Its point of view, too, will arouse controversy. But approve of it or disapprove of it, no thoughtful reader is likely to deny its power and passion." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 18 '45 1100w

COMFORT, ALEXANDER. Song of Lazarus. 99p $1.75 Viking

821 45-8447

A volume of poems by the author of The Power House (Book Review Digest, August, 1945). "Comfort's contemplation is death, to the exclusion of almost everything else. Death is his business, it encompasses his vision, in his verses he may be said to look at life through the sockets of a skull. It is a sweet skull, bleached and picked clean and hard and dry like the cattle skulls in an O'Keefe painting." (Book Week)

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p13 O 7 '45 270w

Booklist 42:92 N 15 '45

Kirkus 13:456 O 1 '45 80w

Reviewed by Randall Jarrell

Nation 161:741 D 29 '45 950w

"Mr. Comfort suffers from a kind of cosmic simple-mindedness: death and the hateful. . . Of course, if Mr. Comfort were a great poet, if he could enchant, delight, dazzle or derange us, we would, willingly enough—if only for the transfigured moment—surrender to his vision. But his is at best a meager talent. He twangs, suffocatingly, the single string: Death, Death, Death; and whose fault is it but Mr. Comfort's if the poetry, by an ironically distorting echo, comes out Dead, Dead, Dead?" William Abrahams

— New Repub 113:723 N 26 '45 700w

"Alex Comfort has potentialities greater than these introductory poems, fine as several are, reveal." W. B. C. Watkins

N Y Times p8 N 18 '45 400w

"Alex Comfort illustrates something with which we are all so familiar, the border line between emotion and dream. His emotions, as well as his language, keep slipping into a haze. He can use ordinary language with good effect . . . but usually he is merely murmuring about eerie, obsessive pictures. . . Mr. Comfort ends by boring us. For only genuine feeling is fruitful and varied. Anxieties can merely repeat themselves, and we have come to know only too well every neurotic convolution of their pattern." Louise Bogan

— + New Yorker 21:98 N 3 '45 140w

"The first work by the young British author, Dr. Alex Comfort, to appear in this country was an excellent novel, 'The Power House.' Now, with the publication of this book of poems Comfort emerges, I think, as one of the most interesting writers of his generation. . . The group of poems called 'Elegies' are less successful than the shorter lyrics: in a more extended poem, the impact of Comfort's images is so compulsive and immediate that it often tends to impede or slow up the dramatic continuity of his theme. Also, particularly in 'Aeschines in Samos,' there is the predominant influence of Eliot; and the influence of Rilke is too strongly marked in other poems." Ruth Lechlitner

+ — Weekly Book Review p4 D 23 '45 450w

COMMAGER, HENRY STEELE, ed. Story of the second World war. 578p maps $3 Little

940.53 World war, 1939-1945 45-9850

"This book is not a history of the Second World War in any formal sense. What this book does present is a series of stories, episodes, vignettes, descriptions, analyses and historic statements by men and women who participated in or observed or analyzed the war, all bound together with a general historical narrative by the Editor." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by Lloyd Lewis

Book Week p6 D 30 '45 500w

Booklist 42:145 Ja 1 '46

"The sum-total is by no means a 'synthetic' product, but a graphic picture of the last war, seen through American and British eyes and neither lacking in specific and realistic details nor in evaluation of the events. The main share of credit for this achievement in the field of popular history must go to Mr. Commager, who selected the material, organized it in 13 well-rounded chapters and built the solid framework encompassing 161 individual contributions." E. S. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 D 8 '45 550w

"In endeavoring to organize this unwieldy mass of material by themes, Professor Commager has encountered serious chronological difficulties. . . Nevertheless, the narrative is often successful in bringing back something of the emotions with which we learned of the dramatic events of the war. From Otto Tolischus' vivid account of the panzer divisions penetrating the shell of the Polish border defenses and plunging through the soft yolk within, to William L. Laurence's memorable description of the dropping of the atomic bomb on Nagasaki, Dr. Commager has selected some of the best contemporary stories of the war." F. S. Adams

+ N Y Times p6 D 30 '45 550w

"His limited objective is to capture and make available the flavor of contemporary descriptions of the war, almost exclusively with respect to military and naval operations. Radio commentators, war correspondents, writers, and official statements provide the material. The editor's comments tie these observations together in a 'story' that is certainly not history, as Professor Commager admits. Nevertheless, it has and will continue to have considerable interest in revealing the attitudes of the articulate observers of events and the extent of their knowledge and opinions in a war in which security demanded silence concerning many activities. It is a decidedly worth-while and opportune experiment." Donald Armstrong

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:18 Ja 5 '46 500w

"The limits of the book should be understood. It is almost entirely a military record of the war; it pays small attention to political, economic or diplomatic developments. It is not a critical work; as Mr. Commager well says, we hardly know enough about the war

COMMAGER, H. S., ed.—Continued
to undertake the job of correcting and revaluating the sources. More than that, the book concentrates pretty much on the European war; the war in the Pacific receives only about one quarter of the volume. But, as a running account of the war on the ground, on the sea and in the air, recapturing many highlights in the graphic prose of eyewitnesses and participants, 'The Story of the Second World War' will fill a niche of its own." A. M. Schlesinger

+ Weekly Book Review p4 D 23 '45 750w

CONARD, HENRY SHOEMAKER. How to know the mosses; pictured-keys for determining many of the North American mosses and liverworts, with suggestions and aids for their study. 166p $2.50; spir $1.50 William C. Brown co, Dubuque, Iowa

588 Mosses 45-5613

"An easy-to-use handbook on the identification of many North American mosses and liverworts by Doctor Conard, professor of botany at Grinnell College. Simple descriptions of the most distinctive recognition characters are accompanied by black and white drawings. Introductory material, systematic list of mosses and liverworts, index and glossary." Bookmark

Booklist 41:334 Jl 15 '45
Bookmark 6:5 N '45

CONFERENCE ON SCIENCE, PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION IN THEIR RELATION TO THE DEMOCRATIC WAY OF LIFE, 4th, NEW YORK. Approaches to world peace; fourth symposium; ed. by Lyman Bryson [and others]. 973p $5 Harper

172.4 Peace. Science. Philosophy. Religion. Reconstruction (1939-)

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"For the political scientist interested in world peace as the resultant of world governance by contrast with the relative anarchy of the last three hundred years, the volume is illuminating, in that it shows the problem to have contexts and outreachings far beyond the power of formal institutions of international government, no matter how powerful, to control. To this reviewer, the value of a synthetic approach in terms of anthropology, archaeology, art, education, philosophy, psychology, and religion lies primarily in giving articulateness to points of view seldom thrown into juxtaposition, and so far wider bases of reference for the solution of the problems involved." M. W. Graham

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:597 Je '45 700w

"To all who are possessed of a real interest in the problems of enduring world peace this volume can be of practical assistance, not in offering a simple blueprint of things that must be done, but rather in the revelation of the complexity of ideas of what should be done, ideas often at variance with one another." Johannes Mattern

+ Ann Am Acad 238:203 Mr '45 500w

"A few of the essays in this volume, those dealing with disarmament, international political and economic organization, are relevant to this issue. The bulk of this volume seems to me, however, to be not merely irrelevant but a disservice to the cause of peace, for it distracts attention from the real source of trouble and hence from the real cures." Joseph Ratner

J Philos 42:247 Ap 26 '45 1150w

"Obviously, a book of this sort is not intended to be read as one reads Lippmann or Welles or Carr. It is meant to serve as a sort of encyclopedia to which the inquiring mind can turn, to discover what various kinds of scientists, philosophers, and religious teachers think concerning this probblem which overshadows all contemporary life. There are times, I confess, when I wonder how often books of this kind are actually used as they are intended. Perhaps that is an unfair question. At any rate, the full report of the conference is available here, and the pages I have read (I won't pretend to have read them all—yet) assay high in provocative ideas." Paul Hutchinson

+ J Religion 25:305 O '45 450w

"It will be clear to the thoughtful reader that this subject matter has quality as well as quantity. Here we find brilliant definitions of the nature and purpose of the good life. The very foundations of our civilization are laid bare and efforts made to rebuild this structure out of better materials. . . Here at last in convincing form are the realistic ways and means for securing a happy, harmonious humanity." C. D. Champlin

+ School & Society 62:438 D 29 '45 1650w

"It is impossible within so brief a review to do justice to the great amount of information and learning contained in this book. Some of the great thinkers of the various divisions of thought were present and must have stimulated each other in a remarkable manner. . . And as a record of what important people are thinking, the volume will rank high, as one would expect from the caliber of the contributors." L. A. Mander

+ Social Educ 9:91 F '45 900w

"It is of primary value and interest to the scholar, but the layman would do well to catch some of the objective and timeless attitudes brought to this study by these men of the classical tradition."

+ Survey G 34:69 F '45 100w

CONFERENCE ON SCIENCE, PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION IN THEIR RELATION TO THE DEMOCRATIC WAY OF LIFE. 5th, NEW YORK, 1945. Approaches to national unity; fifth symposium; ed. by Lyman Bryson [and others]. 1037p $5 Harper

301.152 Groups (sociology). Toleration. Nationalism and nationality. Education

"These papers were first presented at a symposium of the Conference on Science, Philosophy and Religion. This, the 1945 volume resulting from the Conference, is interesting not only for its discussions of the subject set for this year's theme but also for the light it sheds on the difficulty of integrating the findings of scientists, educators, theologians, editors, anthropologists, etc. Roughly, the book is divided into three parts—the chapters dealing with the subject of group relations, the papers discussing the problem of translating through educational materials ideas that are clear to experts, and those articles which analyze the Conference as an instrument for the communication of ideas among the experts themselves." Sat R of Lit

"In general, the volume is disappointing if one is looking for easy answers to the problem of national unity. But it is heartening to find so many able men thinking about it penetratingly and in a devoted spirit." R. C. Angell

Am J Soc 51:347 Ja '46 450w

Reviewed by Willard Shelton

Book Week p4 S 9 '45 180w

"Three things stand out in the present reviewer's mind as a result of perusing this weighty tome: First, the academic aloofness with which many of the contributors confront the imminent need for structural social change in 'the approach to national unity.' . . Second, the commendable disposition on the part of some contributors to recognize the limitations of merely intellectual education and to stress the roles of both commitment and effective social power in the realization of social justice. . . Third, the small amount of evidence in the volume to show that the conference procedures have measurably increased the unity within the diversity." J. L. Adams

+ — Christian Century 62:1257 N 14 '45 1200w

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 28 '45 600w

Reviewed by A. L. Byron Curtiss

Churchman 160:3 Ja 1 '46 240w

"It is an admirable volume of thought on philosophy and religion, with practical applications to present world conditions."

+ Current Hist 9:459 N '45 100w

"For all their good-will and their earnest desire to build a bridge of understanding between their various disciplines, these papers and the ensuing discussions show nothing quite so clearly as the inability of even exceptional scholars to rise above their own specialties and to view the problem of national unity comprehensively. Almost invariably the participants appear to have confirmed and even strengthened the beliefs each brought to the conference. This is not to minimize the thoughtful and often stimulating ideas expressed by the members of the conference. But the economists continue to believe that the causes of the crisis in our civilization, and its ultimate solution, are basically economic; the philosophers that they are intellectual; the religionists that they are moral." Francis Scott

+ — N Y Times p35 S 16 '45 900w

"A book such as this is naturally uneven and its appeal will vary from reader to reader according to his special intellectual interests and background. This is sourcebook stuff to be ploughed through and studied. The ideas in it are destined to filter through to most of us who are general readers through the more popular books which are our everyday fare. For the professional it is a must as were its predecessors; for the members of the laity who wish to keep in touch with the world of social ideas or who welcome the opportunity to stretch their minds it is an irresistible challenge." W. S. Lynch

+ Sat R of Lit 28:19 N 10 '45 900w

School & Society 62:128 Ag 25 '45 20w

CONFERENCE ON THE SCIENTIFIC SPIRIT AND THE DEMOCRATIC FAITH. 2d, NEW YORK, 1944. Authoritarian attempt to capture education; papers from the Conference. 152p $2.50 King's crown press

370.1 Education—U.S. Education—Aims and objectives

"The addresses and discussions contained in this brief volume were presented last summer at the second conference on the Scientific Spirit and Democratic Faith, held in New York City. . . Fundamentally, the thirty-three educators, scientists, philosophers and religious leaders who participated in the discussions make these major points: (1) Vocational education need not be divorced from the liberal arts; (2) the classics of ancient Greece and Rome are not sacrosanct; (3) the scientific method, the spirit of free inquiry, is essential in a democracy; (4) the future belongs to creative leaders, not defenders of the authoritarian past." N Y Times

Booklist 41:333 Jl 15 '45

Reviewed by E. S. Ames
Christian Century 62:884 Ag 1 '45 1000w

Reviewed by Leo Camp
Commonweal 42:268 Je 29 '45 600w

J Philos 42:548 S 27 '45 950w

Reviewed by Gail Kennedy
Nation 161:341 O 6 '45 850w

"Not all the papers make interesting reading. Despite the competent educators who voiced their views at the conference—John Dewey, Sidney Hook, Irwin Edman, Harry J. Carman, A. D. Henderson, Harry D. Gideonse, Bruce Bliven, Eduard C. Lindeman, among others—the resulting whole seems somewhat disjointed. . . None the less, and despite its obvious limitations, this volume should prove valuable to all who are concerned with the direction that American education is to take in the next decade. Critical issues are to be solved. It is difficult to believe that the 'authoritarians' in education are all wrong or that the 'progressives' are all right. Perhaps a good, solid middle ground exists that can combine the best features of both philosophies." Benjamin Fine

+ — N Y Times p16 Ag 12 '45 1000w

"This volume, voicing convictions which include not only those of the scientific humanists but of several with other philosophical premises, does indeed formulate some of the most acute tensions in today's educational thinking. This is a valuable and an illuminating service." Ordway Tead

+ Sat R of Lit 28:37 Je 23 '45 650w

Reviewed by W. C. Ryan
Survey G 34:451 N '45 450w

CONGER, ELIZABETH MALLETT. Valery; il. by Bill Crawford. 62p $1.50 Holt

Cows—Legends and stories 45-268

Dear little Valery was an ingratiating cow who joined the Whipple family in the days of her youth, and from the cute ways of childhood progressed to the stage where something drastic had to be done about it.

"This is not a book for grownups. Grownups are too literal minded about such matters, but children will revel in the tale of Valery's tyranny over the Whipples. The ending is especially satisfying." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p14 Ap 8 '45 250w

Booklist 41:227 Ap 1 '45

"Valery is not like any other book I've read. It has a nostalgic quality for me. It reminds me of bossy calves I knew and loved as a child on a Maine farm, the gambols of young cows in the high pasture, the strange secrets of barnyard visitors, the inexhaustible ingenuity of my brothers and of other lively boys of later and presumably more sophisticated generations. . . That all children will like Valery is too much to claim. To some children as to some adults it will seem 'a silly book.' But a book that brings the good gift of laughter at this time well deserves high praise. Long live Valery!" A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 21:346 S '45 400w

"Good to read aloud." K. H. McAlarney

+ Library J 70:267 Mr 15 '45 80w

"Some people found this story too farfetched and ridiculous, but to others it was hilarious fun." M. C. Skinner

Library J 70:951 O 15 '45 40w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p26 Mr 25 '45 140w

"The story is told with a fairly effective deadpan humor and illustrated with broadly comic pictures. The mental processes of the Whipples remind one just a bit of the Peterkins, but Lucretia Hale's book is in no danger of being supplanted."

New Yorker 21:130 D 8 '45 50w

"Mrs. Conger, hitherto writing for young folks on tanks and warplanes, reveals so rich a vein of drollery in her latest book that an eye should be kept on her for future fun. . . A neat new variation of the camel under the tent, the story has the blend of recognizable truth and complete absurdity that makes admirable fooling, and hilarious pictures move right along with it. We are going to need fun for children—indeed we are beginning to get a good new crop—and this is uncommonly good fun. And if, like another famous bovine, Valery appeals as much to parents as to children, anything that makes the family laugh together is all to the good just now." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 18 '45 300w

CONNOLLY, CYRIL (PALINURUS, pseud). The unquiet grave; a word cycle by Palinurus. 152p il $2.50 Harper

828 45-8964

"An odd volume of erudition, philosophy, self-deprecation and assorted evidences of spleen produced under an equally odd penname by Cyril Connolly, a British critic, author and editor. The original Palinurus was Aeneas's pilot, who fell into the sea under suspicious circumstances near the end of the classic voyage, and whose name is considered by Mr Connolly as an 'archetype of frustration.' Mr Connolly has decided that all of mankind is frustrated, with the major part of the resultant suffering falling on those who feel the disgrace the most—especially Mr Connolly." (Springf'd Republican) Index.

CONNOLLY, CYRIL—Continued

"Altogether it is an extraordinarily pleasing, extraordinarily stimulating book." Leo Kennedy

+ Book Week p6 O 7 '45 600w

"It may be a masterpiece. It is certainly a classic. Yet, like its author, it is in many ways most unprepossessing. This fat, lazy, cowardly, sensual, petulant, middle-aged man, who casts himself delicately, cynically, upon the carpet of our consciousness, is a sorry fellow. Only his absolute honesty, to borrow a Buchmanite term, excuses his exhibitionism. . . But it is when writing of writers, and of writing, that he is at his surest. Those who read his 'Enemies of Promise' know how great a critic he is; those who have read the monthly editorials in Horizon, throughout the war, know how subtle his analysis of the state of literature; of the mind that is in artists. In 'The Unquiet Grave,' there are distillations one longs for enlarged to man-sized drinks." Anne Fremantle

+ — Commonweal 42:625 O 12 '45 1850w

Reviewed by H. B. Charlton
Manchester Guardian p3 N 7 '45 300w

"It is one of those books which disturb and incite the mind, and I happen to feel that that is one of the primary functions of a book. But it is a function not often exercised in a period when culture itself tends to be regarded as merely another physical comfort which goes by the name of 'entertainment.'" Margaret Marshall

+ Nation 161:405 O 20 '45 700w

"It is a readable book because of, not in spite of, its irritations. . . Not the least of this book's virtues is its very complete index. The most frequent entries are Angst, Art, Baudelaire, Flaubert and Love." George Mayberry

+ — New Repub 113:550 O 22 '45 470w

"Mr. Connolly's book is neither formally ordered nor logically progressive, but only a brilliant exercise in chiaroscuro. At one point he quotes without comment an ultimatum from Mr. Eliot: 'The more perfect the artist the more completely separate in him will be the man who suffers and the mind which creates.' By this standard Mr. Connolly is a very imperfect artist in this particular book. But like Prufrock he demonstrates the truth of the proposition that introspection is always interesting." Carlos Baker

N Y Times p6 O 7 '45 950w

"People used to complain in London that Cyril Connolly was out of key with the wartime state of mind, but I think that we ought all to be grateful that one editor has resisted all pressures and followed his own tastes, and that one good writer has written not what was demanded by patriotism but a true natural history of his wartime morale." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 21:88 O 27 '45 1250w

"In some ways this book suggests a latter-day Amiel, a new kind of Puritan, whose conscience is in art, and whose Bibles are Flaubert and Sainte-Beuve. One may grow a little impatient both with the Anxiety and the Art in the book. But one cannot help being grateful for a book that so obviously has a personality revealed in it, a civilized one with a genuine love of the best and a blessed sense of style." Irwin Edman

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:12 N 17 '45 800w

"'The Unquiet Grave' for all its somewhat preciously articulated diatribes on the state of the world and its vinegary observations on mankind, is a brilliant book and one that is frequently intoxicating with its heady literary brew. . . It is probably inaccurate to say that the gloomy and exasperating Palinurus is a typical product of British ultraerudition. There is too much of Schopenhauer and Nietzsche to blame his disgust with man on British egotism alone, but there is no escaping at least a spiritual kinship with Oscar Wilde and other English wits who flowered in the Olympian literary atmosphere of London. Like them, Palinurus is always interesting, often clever and profoundly intelligent, and not infrequently just plain silly, as when he pontificates that 'the true index of a man's character is the health of his wife.'" R. F. H.

+ — Springf'd Republican p4d O 7 '45 550w

Time 46:108 N 5 '45 100w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
Weekly Book Review p5 N 11 '45 410w

CONRAD, VICTOR. Methods in climatology. 228p il $4 Harvard univ. press [22s 6d Oxford]

551.5 Climatology A44-5976

"This study, not concerned with instrumental technique, discusses the application of statistical methods to the original data of climatological observations. Parts 1 and 2 treat of the variations noted in the course of time at one fixed place, and offer instruction for computing periodical phenomena by means of harmonic analysis. Part 3 deals with the comparison of elements observed at the same time at different places, and arrives at their geographical distribution. Part 4 offers suggestions for writing and compiling a study of regional climate. There are numerous footnotes in lieu of a bibliography." N Y New Tech Bks

N Y New Tech Bks 30:10 Ja '45

"The book should appeal to all serious students of meteorology. It contains forty-six illustrations and forty-eight tables, as well as a good index."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p406 Ag 25 '45 160w

"It is primarily a book for the climatologist and not the statistician; the discussion presents no new ideas to the latter but the climatologist will find few other contributions to this subject."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:57 Mr '45 200w

COOK, ELLA BOOKER. These are my jewels. 320p $2.50 Dorrance

45-7300

"A romantic story of the south and a family of miraculously beautiful girls." Christian Century

Christian Century 62:981 Ag 29 '45 10w

"For entertaining reading and a refreshing return to old values, the story, even if a bit saccharine, brings nostalgic enjoyment." E. H. Dexter

Springf'd Republican p4d S 23 '45 240w

COOK, GLADYS EMERSON. American champions; pictures by [the author]. 64p $1.75 Macmillan

636.71 Dogs. Dogs—Pictures, illustrations, etc. Agr45-346

"Seventy-four breeds of dogs popular in the United States today are described in this sixty-four-page book. Each breed is identified by a black-and-white sketch of one of its famous champions. Brief description gives something of the history, appearance, personality and size of each dog. No index, but dogs are arranged according to the American Kennel Club groupings in the table of contents." Library J

Booklist 42:22 S '45

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:353 S '45 80w

"Libraries may find it useful as a reference book because of the photographic clarity and accuracy; but the ordinary boy who likes his mutt pal will find it swanky and stuffy."

Kirkus 13:298 Jl 1 '45 90w

Reviewed by J. E. Lynch
Library J 70:752 S 1 '45 90w

Sat R of Lit 28:72 N 10 '45 30w

"A reliable and delightful dog book. It is the sort of book one picks up to admire—and keeps for reference. Miss Cook has captured the beauty of her subjects, but in no instance does she permit artistry to interfere with proper delineation." Charlena Kibbe

+ Springf'd Republican p6 S 27 '45 200w

"What I like best about the book is that every dog looks at you as if he liked you and expected you to like him." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 12 '45 250w

Wis Lib Bul 41:103 O '45

COOKE, MORRIS LLEWELLYN. Brazil on the march; a study in international cooperation. (Whittlesey house publication) 303p il $3 McGraw

330.981 Brazil—Industries and resources. Brazil—Relations (general) with the U.S. U.S.—Relations (general) with Brazil 44-7171

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Although this volume does serve a useful purpose, a more discriminating type of book on Brazil is needed." Donald Sham

Am Econ R 35:441 Je '45 1950w

"Layman, scholar, and business-man will find this book one of the few studies of inter-American relations which happily combine interesting style with accurate research." W. S. Stokes

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:812 Ag '45 450w

Bookmark 6:5 Ja '45

"As a fairly complete picture of industrial activities in Brazil, this book seems to serve its purpose. It presents in popular form the more or less technical facts which will interest the prospective investor or the commercial minded visitor to the fourth largest country in the world."

+ Cath World 161:94 Ap '45 100w

Foreign Affairs 23:343 Ja '45 30w

"In Brazil on the March, Morris L. Cooke emerges as the artist-engineer. His canvas is the largest country in this hemisphere. He sees the great expanse, so blank in reality, as it will look when it has been filled with the tools which will make the life of 44 million Brazilians healthy and productive. . . He, with his staff, comprising the American Technical Mission to Brazil, was able to do a job of compiling facts in a land where the compilation of statistics is far from an advanced science. The Mission was something like a hospital unit, bringing industrial doctors to diagnose a special case. In this sense the book is an industrial case history for an entire country, I think the first of its kind. The doctors found a young giant—ailing in many important respects. They prescribed for the giant. . . All that is in this book. All of it emanates from a spirit aware of our time. Underlying the whole is an understanding of the social consequences of scientific discoveries which has moved on to the recognition that technology itself is a prime mover in social change." A. G. Mezerik

+ New Repub 112:305 F 26 '45 850w

"Unfortunately the business man and the adventuresome young American will read this stirring invitation to a new land of promise with the lack of discrimination customary in those who require 'simple language'. The trained reader will deplore the inexcusable errors in Portuguese terminology and will wince at the historical sections. . . These and other defects the trained reader will find in this volume; yet he will enjoy the book nonetheless for its wealth of current data, its theory of international trade, and its crusade in behalf of a good neighbor." A. K. Manchester

+ — Pol Sci Q 60:315 Je '45 600w

COOPER, GEORGE HENDERSON. Building construction estimating. 282p il $3 McGraw

692.5 Building—Estimates 45-5444

"This book is intended to be a standard textbook for a full course in technical and vocational schools and also for intensive study by properly qualified students in technical schools and colleges. Such students should be high-school graduates and should have at least two years of architectural drafting to their credit. . . The book forms a complete working plan for the instructor and contains all the required material, including two sets of plans, many specimen estimates, hundreds of construction terms, and all essential reference data. . . Chapters I to IX discuss contracting as a business, building codes, plans, specifications, contracts, and the general technique of estimating. This material comprises the first half of the course. Chapters X to XVII deal with the estimating of work that is customarily performed by the general contractor's own men. Chapters XVIII to XXIV treat of the work usually done by the subcontractors' men." Pref.

Eng N 135:127 Jl 12 '45 160w

Library J 70:33 Ja 1 '45 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:21 Ap '45

COOPER, MORLEY. The cruising yacht. (Whittlesey house publication) 206p il $3 McGraw

797.14 Yachts and yachting 45-3647

"The sailor-author tells how to judge and buy a new or used boat, how to equip it for coastwise and foreign cruises. Gives detailed discussion on fitting out, navigation and seamanship and many practical suggestions on needed equipment and gadgets. Chapters on cruising under sail and power and suggestions on postwar cruising in foreign waters. Illustrated." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 41:318 Jl 1 '45

"For those who yearn to own a boat on which they can live, be it ever so briefly, here is a practical handbook, for the middle income brackets."

Kirkus 13:29 Ja 15 '45 170w

"All boat owners and prospective ones will welcome this book on small pleasure craft both sail and power."

+ Library J 70:307 Ap 1 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:35 Jl '45

"The volume should be of greatest value to the prospective boatman who has never done much cruising and has determined to put a slice of money into a pleasure craft as soon as conditions permit. It does not dwell sufficiently upon the technicalities of navigation or the possible dangers of yachting to discourage the newcomer. The photographs of boats and harbors are tempting, and the chapter on 'Your Family and Your Boat' offers solutions to some very real problems." E. B. Schriftgiesser

+ N Y Times p10 S 2 '45 220w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 29 '45 600w

COOPER, RUSSELL MORGAN. Better colleges —better teachers. 167p pa $1.25 Macmillan

370.7 Teachers, Training of

"This report deals with the preparation of high school teachers in liberal arts colleges and was prepared for the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools." Social Studies

School & Society 60:399 D 16 '44 20w

"This report will be of particular interest to college administrators seeking to improve their programs of teacher preparation." O. T. Richardson

School R 53:245 Ap '45 1100w

Social Studies 36:140 Mr '45 60w

COPLAN, MAXWELL FREDERIC. Pink lemonade; commentary by F. Beverly Kelley. (Whittlesey house publication) [139p] $3.50 McGraw

791.3 Circus 45-4364

"[This book] quite frankly owes its being to the Ringling Brothers, Barnum & Bailey show which now is playing the Garden and is the largest of the large. It is essentially a picture book with a series of excellent photographs by Maxwell Frederic Coplan set to a running commentary by F. Beverly Kelley, who conducts the big show's formal relations with the public. . . The photographs take in all sides of the

COPLAN, M. F. —Continued
Big Show. There are scenes of the arrival in town, photographs of audiences, pictures, many pictures, of the performers." N Y Times

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p6 My 27 '45 230w
Christian Science Monitor p14 S 8 '45 120w

"Approximately 120 pages of superb photographs with very little but very interesting text. . . Size and quality of paper do not augur a long life and price is therefore high. But it's good." Gertrude Andrus
+ — Library J 70:587 Je 15 '45 70w

"Although the spring is no time for a cynic if one were about he might suggest that 'Pink Lemonade' has a family resemblance to an oversize souvenir program. The answer to that, no doubt, is that circus moments, recollected in tranquillity and in good pictures, still are circus moments. And as everyone knows, they are the best moments of spring." Lewis Nichols
N Y Times p7 My 6 '45 550w
Springf'd Republican p4d My 27 '45 300w
Theatre Arts 30:63 Ja '46 20w

"The first requisite for a good circus-picture book is that its pages should be large. . . These pages are little less than gigantic: their photographs are not only uncrowded but of strikingly dramatic quality and brought out by excellent reproduction. As a permanent reminder of a day at the circus it would be hard to beat."
+ Weekly Book Review p20 My 27 '45 90w

CORBETT, ELIZABETH FRANCES. The red-haired lady. 368p $2.75 Doubleday
45-5094

Character study of a beautiful red-haired authoress, who found that she preferred independence to marriage. She came to New York from Wisconsin in the 1920's and proceeded to write a book a year. She tried to be happy in her marriage but failed, and finally succeeded in establishing a way of life which suited her, but did not include marriage. When her only son went to war she decided at last to re-marry.

Booklist 41:322 Jl 1 '45
Kirkus 13:142 Ap 1 '45 150w

"Most of Cassandra's New York experiences have a guide-bookish flavor, from the first Waverly Place one-room apartment to the thirty-six-foot yacht off Staten Island. And her successive love affairs are more practical than palpitating." Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p19 My 27 '45 180w

"Embittered by a college romance that ended unhappily, Cassandra tried to be cynical about men but her resistance was low. Bachelors and married men mistook her red hair for the green light, and if a girl is going to write about love she needs material. Cassandra collects rather more than her quota, however, and many readers will feel that this novel is similarly overstocked. But it is rich in Greenwich Village lore in the lush twenties." Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p16 Je 10 '45 180w

CORCOS, LORIS. Size 1. [34p] il 60c Lothrop

"The book is made in the form of a shoe, with two eyelets and a white shoelace that may be threaded through them and tied. The pages inside the red shoe show various objects familiar to baby and name them in simple rhyme. There are Granny's glasses and Daddy's tie and a pincushion, scissors and a burning cigarette." Book Week

Book Week p6 N 11 '45 90w
Kirkus 13:420 S 15 '45 40w

"The pictures of everyday things are simple in form; the size and shape of the book make it a comfortable toy for children going on 2 and for 2 and 3 year olds." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p35 O 7 '45 130w
Springf'd Republican p4d D 9 '45 100w

"Just the size to hang on a baby's Christmas tree, and the shape and color—that of a neat little scarlet shoe—to make a proper decoration, this is a real book with a story and even a purpose."
+ Weekly Book Review p32 N 11 '45 130w

CORNELL UNIVERSITY. Safeguarding civil liberty today. See Safeguarding civil liberty today

CORNETET, WENDELL H., and FOX, DANIEL W. Applied fundamentals of machines. 323p il pa $2.50 McKnight
621 Mechanical engineering 45-1681

"A textbook of practical physics for the student mechanic, showing important industrial applications of basic machine theories. Intended for use as a laboratory manual, it contains numerous exercises and problems and outlines various experiments. A feature of the book is the large size of the photographs and diagrams." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Index.

"Clear and practical instructions on procedures and assignments supplemented with illustrative information units. Chapter references include trade literature. New and difficult words to aid the student listed. For evening and trade schools."
+ Library J 70:307 Ap 1 '45 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:26 Ap '45

CORRIGAN, MRS BARBARA. Voyage of discovery. 302p $2.75 Scribner
45-9987

The "voyage" was Cornelia's four years at Pacific State university, during which she discovered almost too much. It is an outspoken novel of college life in the 1930's.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 N 25 '45 280w
Booklist 42:149 Ja 1 '46

"An interesting first novel whose brilliant recording of campus argot and attitudes of the early 30's background the maturation of Cornelia Ross, wealthy, clever, intelligent, sometimes appalling, sometimes pathetic."
+ Kirkus 13:322 Ag 1 '45 210w

"Readers who take their fiction seriously will think more than twice before they pack their daughters off to college. For all its extravagances the novel is written with enough shrewdness to keep the reader wondering what will happen next, and to keep him amused by the older characters. As one would expect, the students are tiresome, but not Cornelia's family. Here is healthy, irreverent satire and college humor, as well as some untouched pictures of sorority life and student 'activities.' " R. A. Cordell
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:34 D 1 '45 400w

Reviewed by C. M. Sauer
Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 6 '46 300w

"Mrs. Corrigan has a fine eye for pettiness of character, and in Cornelia's sorority sisters she has collected a set of probably the nastiest wenches ever to appear in modern writing. Her pictures of Cornelia's divorced parents and of several of their relatives also demonstrate an acid touch which promises well for Mrs. Corrigan's future—if she learns that the palette of the human spirit is sometimes even larger than sex." Margaret Parton
Weekly Book Review p8 D 16 '45 500w

CORWIN, NORMAN LEWIS. On a note of triumph. 71p $1.50 Simon & Schuster
792 Radio entertainments 45-4802

"The Columbia Broadcasting System late in 1944 asked me to write an hour's program hailing victory in Europe, and this, basically, is it. For the eye's sake I have stripped the radio script of all technical directions, and restored a number of phrases. . . Since all radio writing is intended to be spoken, I arbitrarily divided the original script into lines. I did this simply as a means of scoring, to help actors in the mechanics of breathing, and not to give the appearance of a poem. It is not a poem." Foreword

---

Reviewed by Maurice Gnesin
Book Week p2 Je 10 '45 400w
Booklist 41:297 Je 15 '45
Bookmark 6:8 N '45

"Corwin's script on the problem of peace is as simple, direct, and pungent in its phrasing as much of young people's own language." M. C. Scoggin
+ Horn Bk 21:279 Jl '45 40w
Kirkus 13:217 My 15 '45 20w
Library J 70:636 Jl '45 30w

"In print, as a book, it carries no designations of parts, speakers, stage directions, types of voices, sound effects. It is, as Mr. Corwin says, stripped of all 'technical plumbing and bridgework.' Therein must lie its remarkable quality, the quality of Mr. Corwin. The lines of the script are broken, he tells us, to help 'the phrasing and breathing of actors,' not to give the appearance of poetry. Yet it comes out poetry—in eloquence, rhythm and idea. The change from voice to voice is not indicated, yet the antiphony is clear and dramatic. Whatever its merits as a broadcast program (it has been on the air at least twice), it makes remarkably good reading. . . His words are eloquent and powerful, carrying the full force of simplicity. At times his quick twists for irony seem labored and artificial, not the best of Mr. Corwin. Otherwise it is the work of the keen mind and vigorous approach that mark Mr. Corwin's distinguished contribution to radio." C. B. Palmer
+ N Y Times p8 My 27 '45 650w

"Although it's not one of the high-water marks in American literature, it is certainly on a par, as poetry, with some of the incantations composed for the radio by Archibald MacLeish."
New Yorker 21:79 Je 9 '45 80w

"If you wish to realize how fully radio has matured in an incredibly short time, and to comprehend its special possibilities when it is operating at its distinguished best, you have only to hear or read Mr. Corwin's 'On a Note of Triumph.' It provides an exception, both exciting and brilliant, to the average dramatic entertainments offered on the air." J. M. Brown
+ Sat R of Lit 28:22 My 26 '45 2200w

"This is no review of the printed script. Its passion, eloquence and depth need no appraisal here. But let it be said—to those who hesitate to buy the book lest it be a pallid ghost of the live show—that it reads extraordinarily well."
+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 20 '45 750w
+ Theatre Arts 29:542 S '45 550w

"'On a Note of Triumph' is a piece of writing that is possessed of great power and warmth and depth. It is worthy of a tremendous occasion in all respects save one; and that exception may be more a matter of editorial opinion than of literary criticism, as such. Mr. Corwin devotes very little space, and that late in the broadcast, to the terrible fact that for millions of fighting men in Asia and the Pacific, and for many more men in Europe, the war is far from ended, that the Asiatic Fascists, the 'Oriental Aryans,' still continue in fearful force and must be knocked as flat and as dead as are their Axis partners." R. E. Sherwood
+ — Weekly Book Review p1 My 13 '45 1150w

CORYN, MARJORIE. The marriage of Josephine. 313p $3 Appleton-Century
Joséphine, consort of Napoleon I, emperor of the French—Fiction 45-10147

A novel of late eighteenth century France, featuring Josephine de Beauharnais, and her second husband, Napoleon Bonaparte. The narrative takes Josephine from her imprisonment thru the first few years of her marriage, ending with the first faint rumbling of divorce.

"Miss Coryn's heroine talks much more like E. F. Benson's Dodo than the proud Creole first Empress of the French. And there is no suggestion even of the later recluse of Malmaison, whom Napoleon valued and visited constantly, long after their divorce, to take counsel of a sensible and practical nature. This reservation apart, I believe the author has done an excellent job. Josephine—if we can accept Miss Coryn's version of her—is well depicted." Arthur Meeker
+ — Book Week p1 N 25 '45 1200w
Booklist 42:128 D 15 '45

"A competent and sometimes spicy handling of history, convincing biography, and generally good reading."
+ Kirkus 13:380 S 1 '45 130w

"Though at times verbose, has excellent characterization, humor and imagination. A good deal of history is presented in sugarcoating. The style is informal and brings to life the glamor, the intrigue, the corruption of France in the 1790's. Recommended for general libraries." Barbara Overton
+ — Library J 70:1026 N 1 '45 70w

"It is possible that Josephine wasn't quite the simpering, empty-headed clotheshorse Miss Coryn seems determined to make her, but the author's interpretation is a fairly convincing one and it is certainly entertaining."
+ — New Yorker 21:128 D 1 '45 120w

"For an impractical and not very clever woman, Josephine certainly does rather well for a long time, and this account of her fluttery, muddled existence is an exceedingly amusing and well-written piece of work." W. H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 30 '45 360w

"This story, in its light and highly decorated way, captures the fleeting likeness of more than gallantry and more than a period, and its gaiety is irresistible." Iris Barry
Weekly Book Review p7 D 23 '45 450w

COSTA DU RELS, ADOLFO. Bewitched lands; tr. from the Spanish by Stuart Edgar Grummon. 203p $2.50 Knopf 45-8174

"The story, laid in a remote part of Bolivia, of a brutal landowner, his sensitive son, who has progressive ideas about labor, and the young man's love for his stepmother." New Yorker

---

Reviewed by Angel Flores
Book Week p10 S 23 '45 400w
Booklist 42:165 Ja 15 '46

"It is a short novel and the author, like a portrait painter, appears to be filling the background of the picture impressionistically in order to concentrate on the essential, which for him is to capture the atmosphere of life on an hacienda in the steaming Chaco, and to sustain a mysterious and exotic mood. That this was his chief preoccupation is evidenced by the title he has chosen for the book. Most readers will agree, I think, that he has succeeded in achieving this illusion, the credit for which must in large measure go to the peculiarly vivid qualities of his style." J. M. Byrne
+ Commonweal 43:20 O 19 '45 900w

"All his writing experience doesn't save this novel from seeming false and faint. But his training in international cynicism gives it a curious charm." Nancy Flagg
N Y Times p8 O 14 '45 600w

"The character of the violent father is extremely well done, and you get the feel of the lush, tropical country, but the novel is spun out too long. You can't help thinking of half a dozen writers who could have turned the story out very well in no more than five thousand words."
+ — New Yorker 21:85 S 22 '45 80w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman
Sat R of Lit 28:42 O 13 '45 400w

COSTA DU RELS, ADOLFO—Continued

"Unfortunately for the strength of the novel, its multiple themes are imperfectly woven together so that, despite a number of lively and colorful episodes and scenes, the work as a whole adds up to considerably less than the sum of its parts. Moreover, the social theme is conceived abstractly rather than novelistically and the general preachments of the hero on social questions are translated into action at the end of the book by a device altogether implausible and unconvincing. The problems of Bolivia and of its subject Indian masses, arising as they do from the servitude of centuries, require more for their solution than a rebellion occasioned by the hatred of a son for his rival father." B. D. Wolfe

Weekly Book Review p18 S 23 '45 650w

COSTAIN, THOMAS BERTRAM. The black rose. 403p $3 Doubleday

45-7847

Romantic tale of thirteenth century England and the Orient. The hero is Walter of Gurnie, illegitimate son of an earl, who leaves Oxford to travel in the East after the death of his father. He rescues a beautiful Greek girl, marries her, then loses her, and has some fabulous adventures in the land of Kubla Khan, before he returns to England.

Reviewed by Arthur Meeker, Jr.

Book Week p3 Ag 26 '45 650w

Booklist 42:18 S '45

Bookmark 6:15 N '45

"Their adventures on the way to Cathay and back again to England are legion and are told with fine gusto. Unfortunately the author has no comprehension of the Middle Ages, and only a superficial knowledge of history. He is most unjust in his portrait of the eminent Franciscan scholar, Roger Bacon."

+ — Cath World 162:283 D '45 250w

"Thomas B. Costain did voluminous research in preparation for writing his novel of the thirteenth century. Its background of history is richly furnished with information and local color. . . [It is] a story that, in spite of the attention given to the romance, derives its major interest from the remarkable tapestry of history against which it is enacted." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 25 '45 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '45

Reviewed by K. S. Marvin

Commonweal 42:602 O 5 '45 550w

Kirkus 13:273 Jl 1 '45 210w

"Descriptions of life and customs fascinating, plot juvenile. Good summer reading." H. G. Kelley

+ — Library J 70:685 Ag '45 70w

"Stemming from the uninhibited Rider Haggard tradition, and wasting no time in getting to the point, 'The Black Rose' should more than satisfy every reader who has been waiting for a sequel to 'Captain From Castile.' . . 'The Black Rose' is full-measure picaresque drama, and well worth the price of admission." William Du Bois

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 26 '45 750w

"To those who have not kept an eye on the popular historical novel of recent years, Mr. Costain's enormously pretentious romance will probably read like a parody of the genre. Anyone who has taken such novels as they came will, however, know that 'The Black Rose' is no more than the inevitable result of an industrious competition in which the winning author is the one who pumps the most hot air into his work."

New Yorker 21:73 S 1 '45 280w

"Mr. Costain has painted a picture book all his own. As such you are free to enjoy it, and by no means unlikely to have a whale of a time. But highbrows better keep out." Robert Pick

Sat R of Lit 28:26 Ag 25 '45 750w

"There is no doubt that Mr Costain is a capable historian. As a novelist he comes dangerously near the sugar-coated variety of information-novel so highly recommended as high school supplementary reading. This is not to condemn his purpose, which is obviously to portray the influence of three great figures of the Dark Ages. But when his purpose becomes, first, to tell a great story, and, second, to place that story in an authentic setting, then he may rank with Howard Fast and James Street as a writer of historical fiction." Margaret Cobb

Springf'd Republican p4d S 2 '45 480w

Time 46:108 O 29 '45 140w

"Mr. Costain writes brilliantly of those bloody, confused years when kings and barons struggled against each other, displaying a familiarity with the times worthy of a professional historian. In the Cathay section of the book the author is less sure and the thread of narrative becomes somewhat tenuous. . . Intensity grows in the final third of the book. . . The last hundred pages are superb, matching the best in any historical romance. What they contain cannot be whispered beyond a hint that they are based upon one of the most touching and appealing of all English legends." P. J. Searles

+ — Weekly Book Review p4 Ag 26 '45 550w

Wis Lib Bul 41:101 O '45

COTHREN, MRS MARION (BENEDICT). Buried treasure; the story of America's coal; il. with phot. by the author. 63p $1.50 Coward-McCann

622.33 Coal mines and mining—Juvenile literature 45-5242

Account of the formation and history of coal in America, with facts about coal mines and mining, how the miners live, some coal by-products, and a little about the future of coal. Illustrated with photographs. For grades five to eight.

Booklist 41:323 Jl 1 '45

Kirkus 13:224 My 15 '45 130w

Reviewed by M. B. Snow

Library J 70:752 S 1 '45 70w

"A very human fact book."

+ Weekly Book Review p12 My 20 '45 200w

COTT, TED. Victor book of musical fun. 169p il $1.50 Simon & Schuster

780.76 Music—Examinations, questions, etc. 45-4109

A collection of musical quiz games, anecdotes and cartoons. The author is a radio quiz master. Answers at end of book.

Booklist 41:318 Jl 1 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '45

Kirkus 13:125 Mr 15 '45 110w

"This is still a free country, and each man has the right to choose his own method of entertainment, no matter how odd. If quizzes happen to be one of your passions, and you know quite a bit about musical and musicological odds and ends, this volume should please you. Mr. Cott puts his questions nicely, tries hard not to be dull about it, and has amassed some really unusual bits of information." Mark Schubart

N Y Times p19 Jl 22 '45 260w

Weekly Book Review p10 My 6 '45 150w

COUNTS, GEORGE SYLVESTER. Education and the promise of America. 157p $1.50 Macmillan

370.973 Education—U.S. U.S.—Civilization 45-2650

"In this book the author critically re-examines our fundamental traditions and envisages their future modification and refinement in terms of the emerging technological, humanistic and industrialized age. . . The book is conceived largely and expresses supreme faith in education as a primary means for attaining our national aspirations." Editorial introd

Booklist 41:316 Jl 1 '45

"Once again Professor Counts has written a significant and challenging book. It is to be hoped that this volume receives the wide reading it so well deserves." Newton Edwards

+ Library Q 15:357 O '45 500w

School & Society 61:207 Mr 31 '45 40w

COUSINS, NORMAN. Modern man is obsolete. 59p $1 Viking

172.4 Atomic power. Peace. International cooperation. Civilization 45-9803

An expansion of the author's much discussed editorial of the same name, which first appeared in the Saturday Review of Literature on August 18, 1945. In it he discusses the present and future social and political implications of atomic energy. The appendix contains excerpts from The Federalist on the making of the Constitution of the United States of America (1788).

Reviewed by Louis Gottschalk

Book Week p30 N 11 '45 450w

Booklist 42:103 D 1 '45

"An important book."

+ Kirkus 13:461 O 15 '45 170w

Reviewed by Benjamin Harrow

Nation 161:560 N 24 '45 130w

"Of Mr. Cousins' essay Justice Owen J. Roberts has said: 'It is the best thing I have seen since the atomic bomb came to light . . . I wish every intelligent citizen could read it.' That is high praise, especially in view of Justice Roberts' own preoccupation with squaring the challenge of atomic power and the rule of law. It is deserved praise in that Mr. Cousins succeeds in communicating the desperate urgency for preventing the outbreak of a new and more terrible kind of war. It is not, indeed, until one puts the book down, a little breathlessly, that one realizes that the writer (in the manner of many an essayist working at white heat) has asked far better than he has answered." John Davenport

+ N Y Times p4 N 4 '45 1200w

"Probably more effective in its original and compacter form, but it still remains one of the most effective explorations of the subject, despite its rather high rhetorical content, that have been published since the atom was exploded outside a laboratory."

+ New Yorker 21:106 N 3 '45 90w

Springf'd Republican p6 N 20 '45 240w

COWDREY, BARTLETT, and WILLIAMS, HERMANN WARNER. William Sidney Mount, 1807-1868; an American painter; with a foreword by Harry B. Wehle. 54p pl $5 Columbia univ. press [25s Oxford]

759.1 Mount, William Sidney A44-4242

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Booklist 41:318 Jl 1 '45

"What the volume supplies above all is a meticulous and searching catalogue of Mount's work—paintings, drawings, prints—together with a list of copies, attributions, imitations and prints after Mount; second, a chronologically arranged bibliography from 1834 to the present; and, third, many illustrations. Especially pertinent is the inclusion in the catalogue of contemporary opinion of Mount." Howard Devree

+ N Y Times p5 F 4 '45 480w

"His work, so far as one may judge from the seventy or more reproductions in this book, is a genuine reflection of a phase of American life and has great liveliness of incident. . . But it is a pity that Miss Cowdrey and Mr. Williams have only been able to give monochrome reproductions of Mount's work. Two or three in colour would have added greatly to the value of their book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p177 Ap 14 '45 300w

"In every respect this monograph is an exemplary job, exhaustive and scholarly but at the same time within the grasp of the layman and elaborately illustrated. . . And not least there is a catalogue of Mount's work in genre and landscape in which the listings of the various works are accompanied by the published comments inspired by the pictures when they were first exhibited a hundred years ago." Thomas Craven

+ Weekly Book Review p5 F 11 '45 800w

COX, DORIS E. (MRS G. H. THOMAS), and WEISMANN, BARBARA WARREN. Creative hands; an introduction to craft techniques. 294p il $3.75 Wiley

745 Handicraft 45-3683

"Simplified procedures in a variety of simple practical handicrafts with an explanation of the principles of design and their applications to craft techniques. Primarily designed for adults with little or no pre-training. Will be useful for occupational therapy in rehabilitation work." Library J

Booklist 41:265 My 15 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '45

Library J 70:220 Mr 1 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:24 Ap '45

"Large photographs and admirable typography make this look more like a scholarly monograph than a guide to making things out of scraps and salvage, which in a way it is. Its distinction is that it manages to combine the two, by presenting basic techniques of a number of crafts in such a way that, from first to last, principles of design are made clear as well as methods of developing from them works of beauty."

+ Weekly Book Review p14 Jl 15 '45 270w

COX, HAROLD R. W. Greenhorns in blue pastures; il. by Lucina Smith Wakefield. 162p $2.75 Barnes, A.S.

818 45-35249

From a teashop near Vancouver to a fisherman's life on Coster island, British Columbia, was the step these greenhorns took. The author, his wife, his father-in-law and mother-in-law, made a success in both their ventures, as the story of their experiences will prove.

"This is good escapism, certainly far superior to the murky sex novels parading as history. And in a world where the atomic bomb hangs over us constantly like a pall, escapism like this is a pleasure. Enjoy it while you can." David Karno

+ Book Week p6 N 25 '45 340w

Booklist 42:124 D 15 '45

"The narrative, while a bit too florid in style, is fairly amusing." I. A.

N Y Times p30 N 25 '45 80w

Reviewed by R. M. Morgan

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 13 '46 270w

"Mr. Cox tells it with unfailing zest; the book is handsome to look at and relieving to read. It may not induce a rush to blue pastures around Coster Island, but it takes you to them in the right spirit, being a flight from the commonplace good for the nerves when other people make it. An added charm is the family itself; the narrator, his wife, an unpredictable father-in-law and a mother-in-law as vigorously herself as might be expected from a native of the Isle of Man. Whether fishing, furnishing or discussing, they always do it with brio."

+ Weekly Book Review p20 D 9 '45 180w

COX, WARREN EARLE. Book of pottery and porcelain; pictures selected by the author; lay-outs by A. M. Lounsbery. 2v pl $10 Crown

738 Pottery 45-880

"A comprehensive and interestingly written history of the art of ceramics from earliest times, and including modern American. Processes are described and criticism given on styles and pieces so that the book is a valuable guide for craftsmen, collectors, and laymen." Booklist

COX, W. E.—Continued
Booklist 41:166 F 1 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '45

"The biggest surprise for the reader is the style. Expecting a ponderous treatment commensurate with the size and scope of the book, he is at first puzzled and then happily impressed by the author's casual, unpretentious, and, at times, dryly humorous narration." F. G. Bratton
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 29 '45 600w

COXE, GEORGE HARMON. Jade Venus. 236p $2 Knopf 45-1560

Detective story.

Kirkus 12:553 D 15 '44 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p22 F 18 '45 110w

"Perfect for addicts of the talk-out-of-the-side-of-your-mouth school."
New Yorker 21:80 F 24 '45 80w

"Good."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:30 F 24 '45 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p18 F 25 '45 100w

COXE, GEORGE HARMON. Woman at bay. 256p $2 Knopf 45-9496

A mystery tale dealing with spies and international intrigue in Havana.

"Smooth writing, good pace, good yarn."
+ Kirkus 13:407 S 15 '45 60w

"A story packed with excitement and suspense." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p27 N 18 '45 130w
New Yorker 21:108 N 10 '45 90w

"Another alternately cool and torrid Coxe contrivance, deftly plotted, admirably characterized and packed with action."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:56 N 17 '45 40w

"Mr. Coxe delivers his goods with the increasing smoothness he has shown lately." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p43 N 11 '45 90w

COXHEAD, MRS NONA. Though they go wandering. 271p $2.50 Scribner
45-2839

A novel of middle-class American suburban life. When Marlowe McCann, a successful actress, is persuaded by her husband to give up her career and try to live a "normal, happy, healthy life," they take a house in Little Winton, a community not too far from New York. During a year of home keeping and neighborhood parties Marlowe's keen eyes read the signs of several unhappy marriages in their group and so when the time comes for her decision she makes it and goes back to the city and the theatre without too many regrets.

Reviewed by Clare Jaynes
Book Week p5 Ap 8 '45 450w

"With sympathy rather than malice, this is observant and telling—a story for women, some of whom may resent it."
Kirkus 13:70 F 15 '45 130w

"Miss Coxhead has worked hard in her milieu, with a stenographic ear and eye. People certainly do talk and act as she describes them. In fact, that's the reason why lots of other people stay home with a book—but not necessarily a book that merely mirrors the persons they are avoiding." Thelma Purtell
N Y Times p28 Ap 1 '45 180w

"Miss Coxhead weaves her story with a certain dexterity. Her characters, with the exception of Marlowe and Roger, speak and act in a patter and a pattern that is recognizable. She makes the mistake, however, of making Marlowe a little too beautiful and sensitive, of portraying Roger as too much of a stuffed shirt. While this novel contributes nothing new or challenging to the problem of marital incompatibility, it is an interesting picture of what happens to people who think they can find the answer to living the simple life." Rose Feld
+ — Weekly Book Review p6 My 6 '45 450w

CRABB, ALFRED LELAND. Breakfast at the Hermitage; a novel of Nashville rebuilding. 312p $2.75 Bobbs
45-3049

A novel of post-Civil war Tennessee, and a poor boy who realized his life's ambition—to build beautiful houses. The Hermitage of the title is Andrew Jackson's Tennessee home. This is the third volume in a trilogy of which Dinner at Belmont, and Supper at the Maxwell House (Book Review Digest, 1942 and 1943) were the others.

"That Crabb makes a gallant attempt I would be the first to admit. But his contrived love story of the daughter of the decaying aristocracy and the boy of yeoman stock who dreams some day of rebuilding the city never limps beyond the usual boy-meets-girl formula. . . What remains is a very dull novel of a diluted charm which is more dream than reality, written by a writer whose material is not sufficient to overcome his many shortcomings." Bucklin Moon
— + Book Week p2 Ap 8 '45 400w
Booklist 41:237 Ap 15 '45

"Mr. Crabb has a leisurely, diffused style, with many digressions, all in the interest of local history. There is humor in the tale, some sentiment, much of the vernacular with its traces of mountain talk and tall stories, there is measured elegance of a past era, and a wide assortment of characters, several of whom are handed down from the two earlier novels." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 12 '45 470w
Kirkus 13:115 Mr 15 '45 130w

"It is unfortunate that 'Breakfast at the Hermitage' lacks the dramatic underpinning of its predecessors. . . There is no mistaking Dr. Crabb's affection for his subject, or his ability to bring off an occasional scene with a larger-than-life impact. But no house under heaven can play hero in a novel, unless it stirs up an emotion stronger than pride. Of course, the point is hardly worth making for this leisurely, warm-hearted volume, though wearing the garb of the novel, is not a novel at all. Once a bewildered reader has adjusted to that fact, he can enjoy the word-painting for its own sake—much as he might enjoy an old picture-album that is no less real because it brings back a world he has never known." C. V. Terry
+ — N Y Times p18 Mr 18 '45 500w

"In the idioms and dialect of the section and in the reproduction of the shrewd and picturesquely expressed philosophy of the common man the author is a master. Incidentally he gives the best description of the Rebel yell this writer has ever heard." L. B. Hill
+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 27 '45 500w
Time 45:100 Mr 19 '45 30w

"Mr. Crabb knows Southern sensibilities, the half humorous pomposities and conscious flourishes, as well as a great deal of the minutiae of Tennessee history and tradition. His people are far too bright and good—or evil—for anybody's daily food, but it is a lively and living Nashville he writes of." Lorine Pruette
+ — Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 1 '45 850w

CRAIG, HARDIN. Literary study and the scholarly profession. 150p $2.25 Univ. of Wash.
807 Literature—Study and teaching
A45-2854

"Essays relating the study of literature to the philosophical, scientific and social backgrounds of contemporary culture." School & Society

"Anyone who is interested to preserve balance in American education looks for light and leadership in the pronouncements of the universities. The present volume offers neither. Confused and voluble, the author vibrates helplessly between his fixed idea that all modern problems are soluble by a return to Bacon and the ideas of the Renaissance, and his vague feeling that some change must be made in American education. He has no conception that the academicians themselves may have missed the boat." H. M. Jones
— Ann Am Acad 241:182 S '45 310w

"Thoughtful and scholarly lectures, by a veteran professor of English."
+ Christian Century 62:710 Je 13 '45 30w

"Among the many recent books dealing with the present state of the humanities in American universities, the present volume by Prof. Hardin Craig is in many ways unique in quality and attitude. . . It is good to note the genial and humanistic spirit that pervades the whole discussion—a spirit which cannot fail to hearten those, perhaps of more wavering faith, who have devoted their lives to literary scholarship." J. W. Beach
+ N Y Times p30 S 16 '45 500w

"In scrutinizing the profession that he has practised in half a dozen universities throughout the country, Hardin Craig has also given us a portrait of the literary scholar in action during the first half of the twentieth century. His victories may seem slight to the general public, his defeats and frustrations many; but Professor Craig has inherited from Bacon the firm belief that in 'the pleasure and delight of knowledge and learning it far surpasseth all other in nature.'" F. O. Matthiessen
+ Sat R of Lit 28:14 Je 9 '45 750w
School & Society 61:303 My 5 '45 20w

CRAIG, ROY NEVILLE, and others. Mental abnormality and crime; introductory essays; pref. by P. H. Winfield. (English studies in criminal science) 316p $3.75 (18s) Macmillan

364.34 Crime and criminals. Criminal psychology 45-1320

"The book is the second volume of a notable series called 'English Studies in Criminal Science' and is published with the imprimatur of the recently established Department of Criminal Science, Faculty of Law, of the University of Cambridge. In thirteen essays on various phases of criminal abnormality the authors, acknowledged experts in their fields, emphasize the need for 'treating' the criminal, instead of merely locking him up." N Y Times

"The contributions are uniformly good. In general, the psychiatry and psychology represented herein are realistic. No hobbies such as frustration and aggression, emotional insecurity, emotional deprivation are ridden to death as is sometimes true among more radical ortho-psychiatrists of modern vintage. The contributors seem to be well aware of important sociological aspects of crime and delinquency." W. C. Reckless
+ Am Soc R 10:447 Je '45 400w

"The book is a valuable addition to the literature. It is an authoritative and conservative presentation of one of the most troublesome problems in the field of criminal law." Winfred Overholser
+ Harvard Law R 58:628 Ap '45 800w

"'Mental Abnormality and Crime' is in many ways one of the most significant achievements in criminology. Scholarly, readable and often searching in its analysis of crime and abnormality . . . the book is unreservedly recommended." S. G. Kling
+ N Y Times p26 F 11 '45 500w
Times [London] Lit Sup p190 Ap 21 '45 950w

CRAIG, WILLIAM CHARLES, and SOKOLOWSKY, RALPH RAPHAEL. The preacher's voice. 132p il $2 Lutheran bk.

808.5 Voice. Speech. Preaching 45-3342

"Professor Craig is professor of speech in the College of Wooster. Dr. Sokolowsky, who died just before this book was published, is described as having been the foremost speech pathologist in Europe until he fled from the nazi terror and found refuge in America. Together they have produced what seems to be an expert and thoroughly practical treatise on the structure and use of the organs of speech, with special reference to the vocal needs and dangers of the ministry." Christian Century

+ Christian Century 62:401 Mr 28 '45 70w

"Here at last is a presentation of the minister's voice problem at once thoroughly competent in technical principles and informed by a sympathetic and intelligent anticipation of the questions every minister raises—or, at least, should raise—about his own vocal effectiveness." J. L. Casteel
+ Crozer Q 22:282 Jl '45 500w

CRANE, AIMEE, ed. Portrait of America; pref. by Bernard De Voto. (Hyperion art bk) 101p il $10 Duell

759.13 Paintings, American. U.S.—Pictorial works 46-42

Collection of paintings by American artists, chosen to designate various regions of the United States. There is a brief but comprehensive introduction by Bernard De Voto on the development of American painting.

Booklist 42:80 F 1 '46

"Does little credit to the sitter and an even greater disservice to the artist, for while Mr. De Voto has produced one of the most searching and penetrating essays on the role of the artist in American society ever undertaken (and in something under 3,000 words), this costly gift book, because of the mediocrity of its selection of plates, becomes just another shorn lamb on the altar of the American Scene." F. H. Taylor
— + N Y Times p7 Ja 13 '46 1100w

"The preface to this collection of pictures is the most searching and sensible examination of the development of American painting that I have read in many a day. I wish that more writers shared Mr. DeVoto's enthusiasm for American art, and that more of them took the trouble to inform themselves of the aims and achievements of our painters and of the conditions, social and critical alike—ignorance on one hand and snobbery on the other—which have made it so difficult for our painters to work in the spirit of independence. . . The book lives up to its title. It is indeed a portrait of America, a characteristic and exciting portrait, but not without certain weaknesses and imperfections." Thomas Craven
+ — Weekly Book Review p3 D 23 '45 1250w

CRANE, ALAN. Nick and Nan in Yucatan. [32p] il $2 Nelson
45-7023

Nick and Nan travel by plane from Mexico City to Merida, the capital of Yucatan. The story then is of life in their Uncle Fred's pale pink house and of sightseeing trips with young Fito. When Fito cannot accompany them to Uxmal, Nick and Nan are sad but on this trip the twins find the lost treasure necklace for which Fito has long searched.

"This is an informational story more distinguished by the beautiful lithographs of the author-artist than by the text."
Book Week p3 N 11 '45 60w
Kirkus 13:396 S 1 '45 100w

"A slight story built around information." K. H. McAlarney
Library J 70:892 O 1 '45 80w

"The text is slight, but the incidents of the tale will appeal to children and the book, with its many delightful full-page drawings in delicate colors, admirably conveys the atmosphere of a strange and lovely city. An attractive addition to the stories of Central America for 7 to 10 year olds." A. T. Eaton
+ — N Y Times p26 O 21 '45 80w

CRANE, MRS FRANCES (KIRKWOOD). Indigo necklace. 238p $2 Random house

45-2838

Detective story.

"This is, to date, the most successful adventure of the delightful young couple. And if, in the center of the book, you find yourself on a plateau of absorption in clues, where for the moment there seems to be no progress, you can beguile yourself the while by reading about what seems to be available in the way of fabulous food in some of the better New Orleans restaurants. Even in the midst of difficulties, Jean and Pat don't go hungry." Elizabeth Bullock

+ Book Week p18 Ap 22 '45 130w

Booklist 41:238 Ap 15 '45

"Best of the week."

+ Boston Globe p15 Ap 4 '45 60w

"Good entertainment."

+ Kirkus 13:22 Ja 15 '45 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p12 Mr 18 '45 150w

New Yorker 21:100 Mr 24 '45 100w

"Agreeable."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:36 Mr 31 '45 30w

"Readers, certainly, will have a grand time trying to pick the fiend. Miss Crane has stepped up her action this time without damage to the quality her readers expect—a sort of poise in the midst of the mystery scene. Done in elegant prose, this one has just what it takes." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p16 Mr 18 '45 210w

CRANE, JOHN, and KIELEY, JAMES F. United States naval academy; the first hundred years. (Whittlesey house publication) 53p il $5 McGraw

359.071173 U.S. naval academy, Annapolis

45-7020

A brief (50 page) introduction, giving a history and description of the academy, is followed by nearly two hundred pages of old drawings and paintings, and modern photographs showing views of the school and portraits of famous graduates and others.

Reviewed by W. H. Fetridge

Book Week p6 S 9 '45 310w

Booklist 42:123 D 15 '45

"The pictorial section of 300 illustrations is disappointing, as many pictures are included that have little, if any, association with the Naval Academy, and many well-known scenes which easily could have been obtained have been omitted." F. L. O.

Christian Science Monitor p12 S 15 '45 450w

Kirkus 13:216 My 15 '45 110w

"Mr. Crane and Lieutenant Kieley have not attempted to write a definitive history of the Naval Academy. In fact, the text of their book, though highly readable, is hardly more than an outline. At the end of the volume, however, more than 300 photographs, carefully selected and handsomely reproduced, supplement their story. These pictures of famous graduates, historic incidents, and past scenes vividly re-create the atmosphere of Annapolis." W. E. W.

+ N Y Times p14 O 7 '45 330w

"A profusely and finely illustrated book. . . The illustrations, which have been produced by the offset process, vary in quality chiefly because the originals from which they were taken also varied in quality. . . But many of the pictures are exceptionally fine and, taken together, present an excellent pictorial history of the academy with all its customs and social functions as well as the complete change in the type of navy, from the old days of wood and sail, on which the midshipmen are trained to serve." R. T.

+ — Springf'd Republican p4d S 9 '45 1100w

CRANSTON, ALAN MACGREGOR. Killing of the peace. 304p $2.50 Viking

973.913 League of nations. U.S.—Foreign relations. Versailles, Treaty of, 1919

45-7480

In diary form, beginning in 1916 and ending in 1923, the author has arranged the record of the defeat of the League of Nations, as it happened in Washington and elsewhere. Bibliography. Index.

"Cranston's book is journalistic, not scholarly, but thoroughly refreshing." C. A. Berdahl

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1210 D '45 400w

"This is a careful, accurate account of the losing of a peace and the forfeiture of a military victory. It is also an account of the ease with which the will of the people was thwarted by unscrupulous politicians. What has been done can be done again. What the Senate voted last July can be revoked, or our participation in the United Nations can be sabotaged. A lasting victory can be built only on an informed, alert, and dynamic public opinion. That is one of the lessons of Mr. Cranston's excellent book." R. A. Brown

+ Ann Am Acad 242:180 N '45 450w

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 Ag 26 '45 390w

Booklist 42:12 S '45

"To this reviewer, Mr. Cranston's interpretation, while well documented and historically in the main correct, appears to suffer from a measure of one-sidedness. Without justifying those who opposed Wilson for selfish reasons, it should be pointed out that there are two sides to quarrels, especially personal quarrels." E. S.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 S 1 '45 650w

Current Hist 9:549 D '45 80w

Kirkus 13:287 Jl 1 '45 170w

Reviewed by M. S. Stewart

Nation 161:410 O 20 '45 490w

"The sad yet fascinating story of how these men worked their evils to perform bears retelling and Mr. Cranston has chosen the easy and obvious way to retell it. . . He resorts to no tricks of style, sticks close to the known facts and whenever possible lets the protagonists speak in their own words. The result is an excellent, if somewhat one-dimensional, short history of the birth and death (as far as the United States was concerned) of the League of Nations." Karl Schriftgiesser

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 12 '45 1550w

"[The] method of writing would not seem to offer much chance for drama, but the drama is definitely there."

+ New Yorker 21:72 Ag 11 '45 80w

"The chief fault of the book, once we accept its primitive design, is that it does make sober history read rather too much like the narrative of a vast E. Phillips Oppenheim-Francis Beeding crime. In making up a running diary of this sort, certain complexities, intricacies, and fine shadings have to be omitted. But the author, using materials as old as the newspapers of 1918 and as recent as Stephen Bonsal's book, has presented much that is worth remembering in a form that is equally convenient for casual reading or for reference. . . For a study presenting the deeper relationships of facts and forces we shall have to look elsewhere, but Mr. Cranston has given us a useful and lively piece of narrative." Allan Nevins

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:11 S 8 '45 800w

Reviewed by G. W. Johnson

Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 12 '45 1500w

CRANSTON, MRS RUTH. Story of Woodrow Wilson. 478p il $3.50 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Wilson, Woodrow 45-10064

"The purpose of this book is to present within a single volume the life and achievements of Woodrow Wilson, with emphasis upon that part of his life which has particular significance now: Wilson's fight for peace, and his pioneer work for world security and world organization." (Foreword) Index.

" 'The Story of Woodrow Wilson' is a fine description of the human quality of the man. It is a warm and friendly story of a great President. The author is at her best in describing Wilson's aspirations and personal relationships. She has made judicious use of Wilson's letter collections and of the many scholarly volumes on Wilson. She is a trifle too uncritical, however, in weaving the President into his background." Walter Johnson
+ — Book Week p2 D 23 '45 400w

Reviewed by Homer Metz
Christian Science Monitor p18 D 20 '45 300w

Kirkus 13:330 Ag 1 '45 170w

"Its value as a biography is not from the critical or analytical viewpoint but as a readable account of the man and his times, written from a 1945 viewpoint. Recommended for the general reader." H. A. Wooster
+ Library J 70:1086 N 15 '45 90w

"The student of Wilson will be interested in Mrs. Cranston's defense of the second Mrs. Wilson against her defamers and in her castigations of Col. Edward M. House. The greatest fault of her biography is its defensiveness. Mrs. Cranston evidently believes that Wilson still has to be supported against his enemies. But in spite of this unfortunate characteristic her biography, for its fullness, stands with the best that has been written about the twenty-eighth President of the United States." Karl Schriftgiesser
+ — N Y Times p6 Ja 6 '46 650w

"Mrs. Cranston knows her subject extremely well, and, being an old friend of the Wilson family, she has had access to as much source material as any biographer could ask. The result is almost too concentrated for all but the most enthusiastic Wilsonites. Her insistence that the League of Nations was a practically unqualified success may startle some readers."
New Yorker 21:83 D 22 '45 130w

"Mrs. Cranston is decidedly sniffish about Colonel House and very, very tender toward Mrs. Wilson, Tumulty and Grayson. Her history, too, is subject to slight dizzy spells, as when she assumes that all men agree that the war of 1914-'18 was based wholly on a collision of economic interests. . . She was for years a worker for the League of Nations and her attitude is that of an enthusiast convinced that the League's admittedly praiseworthy work in squashing pimps and dope peddlers entitles it to respect in spite of its colossal failure to preserve the peace of the world. But with due respect allowed for these points, the reader will find her book a lucid if somewhat impassioned presentation of the Wilsonian epos within reasonable compass. . . Mrs. Cranston's book is of manageable size, yet it contains the essence of Wilsonism. It deserves wide reading." G. W. Johnson
Weekly Book Review p2 D 30 '45 900w

CRARY, SELDEN BRONSON. Power system stability; 2v; v. 1, Steady state stability. 291p $4 Wiley
621.3 Electric power (45-6365)

"The first of two volumes, written to provide the fundamental theory necessary for an understanding of electric power systems, operating under normal and abnormal conditions. The book will be of interest to engineers concerned with the design and operation of power systems. Under such headings as power flow, stability limits, composite systems, and equivalent reaction of synchronous machines, chapters one to five deal with the theory of the subject. The application of this theory to system design is discussed in chapters on long distance power transmission, turbine generators, and transmission line electric loadings. Volume II will deal with transient stability." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Kirkus 13:29 Ja 15 '45 90w
Library J 70:307 Ap 1 '45 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:23 Ap '45

"The book is clearly written and the author has succeeded, by free use of tables, diagrams, and curves, in presenting this difficult subject in a form that will be useful even to those who will not follow through the mathematical treatment. The text is well documented, and the serious student will encounter little difficulty in following the theoretical treatment of the problem if he has at his command a good working knowledge of modern electrical and mathematical theory, including complex quantities, hyperbolic functions, and differential equations."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:53 S '45 240w

CRAWFORD, ELEANOR D., ed. Beginning of the world [based on the King James version] il. by [the editor]. (Living Bible lib) [40p] $1.50 Duell
222.11 Bible. Old Testament—Stories
45-6553

"The first nine chapters of Genesis are pictured by Eleanor Crawford, sometimes charmingly, sometimes stiffly, in childlike, springlike colors that are gay and somehow innocent. Text is based on the King James Version and is completely interdenominational, being the first of a series of picture books covering both Old and New Testaments." Library J

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p11 Je 24 '45 40w

"A new project, which in idea is good—in performance disappointing."
Kirkus 13:181 Ap 15 '45 60w

"Colors and charming naiveté of some of the pictures make it worth buying for larger collections." G. M. Williams
+ Library J 70:491 My 15 '45 70w

Springf'd Republican p4d My 20 '45 200w

CRAWFORD, ELEANOR D., ed. Jesus shows the way; stories from the life of Christ [based on the King James version] il. by [the editor]. (Living Bible lib) [40p] $1.50 Duell
232.9 Bible. New Testament—Stories
45-6551

An interdenominational presentation of stories from the life of Christ, incorporating some of the miracles.

"The text is based on the original King James version, but Eleanor Crawford's skillful presentation has put the stories in their own beautiful words into a shorter form, more easily comprehended by children. Her many illustrations have vivid color and have been prepared with an eye for authenticity as to costume and other detail. They are a departure from the more formal type of Bible story illustration in that they catch something of the same appeal which comic books exert over children." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p11 Je 24 '45 40w
Kirkus 13:181 Ap 15 '45 60w

CREAGER, WILLIAM PITCHER, and others. Engineering for dams. 3v il maps $15 Wiley 627.8 Dams. Concrete construction. Hydraulics
45-1837

"A comprehensive work based on modern methods of dam design and construction as practiced in the United States. Intended for both practicing engineer and student, it deals at length with the theory of the subject and practical applications. Volume one is concerned with the general design of dams, investigation and preparation of dam sites, and the study of flood flows. Volume two discusses the design and construction of concrete dams, and volume three, earth, rock-fill, steel and timber dams. A bibliography is given at the end of each chapter, and each volume contains an index covering all three volumes. The work is based in part on Creager's Masonry dams, 1929, and Justin's Earth dam projects, 1932." N Y New Tech Bks

CREAGER, W. P.—Continued
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '45

"For several years there has been a real need by practicing engineers for a comprehensive treatment covering investigations of dam sites and the design and construction of various types of dams with their necessary appurtenant works. Each of the authors of this new set of books is a prominent and successful practicing engineer of long standing. With contributions from a few other well-known engineers on special phases of the overall subject, the authors have gone far in satisfying the existing requirement." K. B. Keener + Eng N 134:111 Je 14 '45 1050w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:6 Ja '45
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:50 Je '45 280w

CREDLE, ELLIS. Janey's shoes [il. by the author]. [28p] 50c Grosset

"Two children, who complain of the steep rocky road they have had to travel to get to Granny's house on the mountain, hear the story of the first trip Granny made up the trail when she was a little girl. Good pioneer atmosphere." Wis Lib Bul

Kirkus 13:200 My 1 '45 130w

"There are many stories like this in the building of America and each one adds its significant bit to the great mosaic. Ellis Credle's pictures point up the courage it took to follow that trail." E. L. Buell
N Y Times p18 Jl 1 '45 110w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:28 D '45 300w
Wis Lib Bul 41:55 My '45

CREIGHTON, THOMAS HAWK. Planning to build [il. by the author]. 228p $2.50 Doubleday

720 Architecture. Building 45-3306

Discussion of the significant problems which will confront layman and specialist in building in the immediate future. The author is an architect, and among the subjects he studies are: planning, design, construction, prefabrication, plastics, etc. No index.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p6 Ap 22 '45 310w
Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '45
Kirkus 13:29 Ja 15 '45 90w

"Mr Creighton is not an iconoclast in respect to old and more or less outmoded fashions, but he is alert to the promises and possibilities of the new. The future of concrete as a building material is one of many subjects that he discusses interestingly. Prefabrication is another. If he has overlooked any topic of value pertinent to 'planning to build,' few laymen, at least, will detect it."
+ Springf'd Republican p4 Ag 15 '45 220w

CRESPI, PACHITA, and LEE, JESSICA. Mystery of the Mayan jewels; pictures by Pachita Crespi. 164p $1.50 Scribner 45-3114

Mystery story for boys and girls. The background is Costa Rica and New York city.

"Not often do you find a mystery story for the eight to 12 ages as good as this one. It possesses the first requirement of a thoroughly exciting mystery—even to the matter of a holdup and a real trial—but building from that base are a good many other virtues."
+ Book Week p17 Je 3 '45 210w

"Good background material for schools and libraries in the authentic picture of Costa Rica; characters and plot are routine but appealing, the text direct, well paced."
+ Kirkus 13:222 My 15 '45 80w

"Plausible plot, well told, filled with the atmosphere of Spanish-American family life. For ages nine to twelve." D. M. MacDonald
+ Library J 70:355 Ap 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by B. W. Shaffer
Sat R of Lit 28:33 Jl 14 '45 310w

"If this is snappier than most mysteries for ten-year-olds, this is partly because it is based on something that really happened, whose facts have been toned down less than if it had been made to order. . . There are many drawings, interesting and informative." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 29 '45 200w

CRESSEY, GEORGE BABCOCK. Basis of Soviet strength. (Whittlesey house publication) 287p il maps $3 McGraw

330.947 Russia—Economic conditions. Natural resources—Russia 45-5887

"In a volume dealing with the twenty-four geographic regions of this vast country, an eminent geographer presents a multitude of data concerning the Soviet realm. Maintaining the factual approach throughout, the basic historical background of the country and people provides the broader knowledge necessary before individual geographic units are considered. The geological base, climatic characteristics, natural vegetation, soils, mineral wealth and industrialization are here considered. There follows the more detailed account of the many subdivisions of Soviet Europe, Middle Asia and Siberia. The final chapter, 'Geostrategy and the Future of the Union,' contains a discussion of the heartland idea as advanced by MacKinder and other geopoliticians, Professor Cressey's own beliefs on this matter and a few cogent observations on American-Soviet relations." Scientific Bk Club R

Booklist 42:4 S '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '45
Current Hist 9:324 O '45 70w
Foreign Affairs 24:167 O '45 30w
Kirkus 13:122 Mr 15 '45 210w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger
N Y Times p29 S 9 '45 270w

"Doesn't add a great deal to what was in the Webbs' book, but it, too, has substantial value." Hamilton Basso
+ New Yorker 21:57 Jl 21 '45 160w

"Mr. Cressey has written an invaluable book on the sources of Russia's strength—her geology and geography, her industrial and agricultural resources, and her manpower. A scientist by profession . . . he writes with a conciseness and a lucidity that make the most abstruse scientific explanations enjoyable reading. What enhances the value of the book is the skill with which the author interpolates enough history, sociology, anthropology, and common sense to make his exposition pregnant." Maurice Hindus
+ Sat R of Lit 28:26 Ag 18 '45 750w
Scientific Bk Club R 16:2 Je '45 240w
Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 19 '45 240w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:28 D '45 300w

"There has been a notable lack of reliable economic information on the Soviet Union in English, and Professor Cressey's book comes closer than any previous volume to filling one central gap: a readable one-volume economic geography of the entire Soviet Union. Professor Cressey is objective and scholarly and at the same time readable. His neatly organized, well indexed volume forms an indispensable reference book to serious students, while the lay reader can get an excellent picture of the ample rump of the Russian bear, so to speak, the geographic and historical factors which go to make Russia the tremendous power it is today." John Scott
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 22 '45 700w

CREWS, ALBERT R. Radio production directing. 550p il $3.50 Houghton

621.384193 Radio broadcasting 44-8604

"The first section of the book explains the characteristics of sound as the medium of broadcasting and the personal and educational qualifications of a good director. The 'tools' of broadcasting, such as equipment, sound effects, music and talent, are discussed in the several chapters of section 2. Section 3 explains the general procedures involved in the preparation and the presentation of programs. Several chapters in section 4 explain the specific techniques adapted to various types of programs, such as talks, dramatics, special events, and music. An Appendix provides a series of student problems and projects related to those chapters which emphasize the activities involved in directing programs." (School R) Index.

Reviewed by H. T. Murdock
Book Week p6 F 11 '45 400w

"Although this volume has been written primarily for use in training professional directors of radio programs, it provides information of value to teachers who direct the radio programs sponsored by their institutions and will be read with much interest by persons who participate in broadcasts on any occasion." N. B. Henry
+ School R 52:572 N '44 500w

CRISPIN, EDMUND, pseud. See Montgomery, R. B.

CRISS, MILDRED (MRS G. L. CATLIN). Dom Pedro of Brazil; il. by Victor J. Dowling. 308p $2.50 Dodd

B or 92 Pedro II, emperor of Brazil—Juvenile literature 45-42248

"Despite the confusion of relationships stemming from European royal marriages with which the book opens and the perplexities of South American politics with which it ends, this is an inspiring and interesting account of a great democratic ruler who set the face of Brazil toward future progress. Filled with colorful pageantry, romance, pretty gowns and the idealized Dom Pedro it has qualities which young people interested in Brazil's last emperor will most enjoy." Library J

"This is a distinguished biography for readers in their teens." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p14 Ap 8 '45 270w
Booklist 41:227 Ap 1 '45

"Told in full detail, told with warmth, humor and understanding. Highly recommended for historical information and the incentive to learn about our South American neighbors."
+ Kirkus 13:87 F 15 '45 190w

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus
Library J 70:222 Mr 1 '45 70w

"The style is stiff and so are the pictures: it was an era of whalebone. But the book leaves a sense of a definite, likable personality in surroundings often teeming with romance." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 F 25 '45 400w
Wis Lib Bul 41:86 Jl '45

CROCE, BENEDETTO. Politics and morals [tr. by Salvatore J. Castiglione]. 204p $3 Philosophical lib.

320.1 Political science 45-35095

"In ten essays, this veteran Italian statesman and philosopher offers to the planners of postwar peace a distillation and application of his own liberalism. Moral history and the necessity of a moral conscience by nations are emphasized in his analysis of elements, philosophy and types of politics, free enterprise, the bourgeoisie, international justice and Church-State relationship; but Christian, particularly Catholic, concept of liberty is opposed. Involved writing and difficult reading, possibly due to careless translating." Library J

Reviewed by Paul Honigsheim
Am J Soc 51:253 N '45 650w

Reviewed by G. H. Sabine
Am Pol Sci R 39:816 Ag '45 750w

"Those interested in fundamental philosophical questions pertaining to human society, and questions concerning society as politically organized in particular, will find this book provocative, but perhaps irritating and difficult to understand. It lacks an index, which would have been helpful." F. N. House
+ — Am Soc R 10:439 Je '45 550w

"As an expression of and contribution to the burning social and moral issues of the twentieth century, this book will be welcomed. It should be stated at the outset, however, that it can hardly reach even the educated layman, if uninitiated. The presentation is involved and lacks the clear organization and concrete style that other writings of the philosopher of the 'doctrine of the practical' reveal. This failure may well be blamed on the none-too-happy translation of the Italian original." Sigmund Neumann
Ann Am Acad 241:181 S '45 850w

Reviewed by Richard McKeon
Book Week p5 Ap 8 '45 550w
Booklist 41:294 Je 15 '45
Current Hist 8:440 My '45 30w

"This book is a hodgepodge, thrown together presumably in order to exploit a new and this time largely adventitious fame of its author in America. Its contents range from more or less discursive observations upon the subject announced as title to more rather than less discursive observations on historiography. . . The tone of ubiquity or dubiety, as you will, pervades even the section which seeks to justify the title of the book. . . Moreover, if this be history, it would seem to be the history of history." T. V. Smith
— Ethics 55:226 Ap '45 900w
Foreign Affairs 23:687 Jl '45 20w
J Philos 42:555 S 27 '45 600w

"Croce's name has been more to the fore in the past year than for some time previously, because of the part he is playing in the restoration of Italy. It is therefore of interest outside merely philosophical circles to discover just what is his conception of the role of the State and the Church, just what his judgment of democratic and liberal political concepts. This book will clarify our thinking in regard to his dominant trends. But Croce's arguments are difficult to follow, one could wish he had translated his concepts into language understandable in terms of current political issues. This is definitely a book for the intellectuals—not the average reader."
+ — Kirkus 13:127 Mr 15 '45 100w

"For larger libraries and serious readers." R. J. Hurley
Library J 69:1103 D 15 '44 110w

" 'Politics and Morals' is something of a pot-boiler. Even a pot-boiler by a great master may deserve respect, for some of the wisdom of the master is almost bound to seep into even his most casual work. This new volume by Croce contains passages in which the precision and profundity of a great mind are quite apparent. Croce understands both the moral basis of the political order and the difficulty of equating political standards too simply with moral ones. Yet the work is on the whole slight." Reinhold Niebuhr
+ — Nation 160:310 Mr 17 '45 350w

Reviewed by L. E. Denonn
N Y Times p20 Jl 8 '45 650w

Reviewed by René Albrecht-Carrié
Pol Sci Q 60:446 S '45 2150w

"Croce's book is a brave and hopeful volume. Some will feel that his understanding of the forces of history needs completion by a more profound understanding of the nature of man, and that his description of the interaction of the 'ethicopolitical' and the 'economicopolitical' needs correction in the light of the institutional nature of society, which he rather seems to ignore. Nevertheless, the historic and creative voice of liberalism has uttered once more an authentic note which speaks directly to the distress of our times." C. D. Kean
+ — Springf'd Republican p6 My 1 '45 650w

"The central issue in our times, discussed by one of the richest and keenest minds in the world: the result should be a book that every free responsible citizen ought to be eager to read. Yet I may safely and mournfully prophesy that 'Politics and Morals' will not make the best-sellers list. Aside from our general unwillingness to think, there are alibis. The translation is timid, to say the least." Albert Guerard
+ — Weekly Book Review p18 Ap 22 '45 800w

CROCKER, ERNEST CHARLTON. Flavor. 172p il $2.50 McGraw

664.1 Taste. Flavoring essences 45-4734

"A convenient reference source of information on any aspect of odor and taste. It contains a philosophy of flavor perception, the chemistry of flavoring agents and condiments and methods for developing and retaining flavor in processed foods and other products as well as methods for detection, correction and prevention of undesirable or 'off' flavors in commercial products. The book gives an odor classification system, for indicating the relative concentration of the four types of odor components, and contains a new and enlarged table of volatile chemicals used in flavoring arranged in fourteen classes according to their volatility." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"It is a good treatment of the subject, and especially commendable are the author's odor classification and set of standards for judging materials, the addition of texture to the sense of taste and smell when judging flavors, his interesting discussion on how we taste and how we react to taste. . . As to the commercial quality scoring, we believe the book would be of more value if the scoring of butter showed the grade and setup arriving at the different scores for the various grades. All in all this is a very valuable book to add to your food laboratory library." B. H. Smith

+ Chem & Eng N 23:1026 Je 10 '45 200w
Chem & Met Eng 52:263 S '45 50w
Library J 70:220 Mr 1 '45 70w

CROCKER, SABIN. Piping handbook. 4th ed 1375p $7 McGraw

621.186 Pipe. Pipe fitting 45-6937

"Fourth edition of a standard handbook. The first three editions were by James H. Walker and Sabin Crocker. In this edition Mr. Walker revamped the chapters: 'Heat Insulation'; 'Building Heating Systems' and 'Underground Steam Piping.' Book contains data necessary to effective use of piping in its engineering and industrial applications, even hydraulic systems for airplanes. New chapters on gas, refrigeration and hydraulic power transmission, piping and corrosion and new material on water-supply piping and flow." (Library J) For earlier editions under Walker see Book Review Digest 1931, 1939.

"We recommend this book for engineers and piping specialists and believe it deserves a place with Perry and Marks Handbooks." C. O. Brown

+ Chem & Eng N 23:1670 S 25 '45 950w
Chem & Met Eng 52:263 S '45 50w
Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '45
Eng N 135:128 S 6 '45 120w
Library J 70:751 S 1 '45 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:33 Jl '45

CROFTS, FREEMAN WILLS. Enemy unseen. 282p $2 Dodd

45-3502

Detective story

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p7 My 20 '45 130w
Booklist 41:302 Je 15 '45

"Ingenious"
+ Boston Globe p17 My 16 '45 50w

"English detection at its most leisurely and thoroughgoing."
New Repub 112:654 My 7 '45 30w

"The story is slow as are all the Inspector French stories, and it will not appeal to those who demand swift action on every page. It is rather for those who enjoy the solving of an intricate puzzle by a painstaking expert." I. A.

+ — N Y Times p28 Ap 22 '45 130w

"Ingenious, in a long-winded way."
New Yorker 21:82 Ap 21 '45 30w

"French fans will like it."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:26 Ap 28 '45 50w
Times [London] Lit Sup p353 Jl 28 '45 60w

"A riddle that should interest all Crofts fans." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p14 Ap 22 '45 110w

CROMWELL, OLIVER. Writings and speeches; with an introduction, notes and an account of his life by Wilbur Cortez Abbott [and others] 4v; v. 3, The protectorate, 1653-1655. 978p il $5 Harvard univ. press [21s Oxford]

B or 92 (37-11692)

"Volume 3 of Wilbur Cortez Abbott's 'Writings and Speeches of Oliver Cromwell' covers the years 1653-1655, during which Cromwell reached the peak of his power as lord protector of England. It was a time of stress at home and abroad. Cromwell, without benefit of Parliament but assisted by a number of astute advisers, labored diligently to administer his country well and to secure for it a favorable position in the turbulent international politics of the day." (Springf'd Republican) For volumes one and two see Book Review Digest, 1937, 1939.

"The suggestion may be offered—but it is offered with great diffidence—that Professor Abbott allows a personal equation to color some of the judgments in this volume. It may perhaps be also suggested that he has allowed the chronological framework to become so full and so exactly detailed that its multitudinous mesh almost hides Cromwell himself at times. . . The choice between the pursuit of chronology and the connected handling of a theme must always be a hard choice—as the compilation of so large a volume must equally be a heavy tax on the author's style and the lucidity of his expression. In its general substance, and in the new material which it furnishes, this third volume is perhaps the most helpful, and the most instructive, of all the three." Ernest Barker

+ Am Hist R 51:109 O '45 650w

"While nothing but a dry collection of state papers, just so much material to pick up in the hands and let run through, like kernels in a grain bin, it is an entertaining narrative and as hard a book to quit, once got into comfortable reading position, as any novel."

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 N 17 '45 170w

"Volume 3, like its predecessors, is distressingly formidable in appearance and in content. The narrative is so detailed, so laden with Cromwell's own writings, that it reads like a heavily-documented work, in addition to which there is a vast impedimenta of the usual footnotes and references to sources. The work definitely requires patience on the part of its readers. In return for that patience it provides a great amount of information which will be permanently useful to historians. All future works about Cromwell or his time are likely to lean heavily on Prof Abbott's careful scholarship." Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p6 My 4 '45 440w

"Mr. Abbott is the greatest authority on Cromwell and his collection of documents, strung together by a wise commentary whose art is all the more impressive for its apparent simplicity, is important for the scholar, the general reader and for all students of the problems of authority and liberty." Caroline Robbins

+ Weekly Book Review p24 Ag 5 '45 1550w

CROSS, CHRISTOPHER, and ARNOLD, WILLIAM RICHARD. Soldiers of God; il. with 34 official Signal corps photographs. 236p $2.75 Dutton

940.5478 U.S. Army. Chaplain corps 45-10559

Collection of sketches about the Army chaplains of World war II, with some mention of soldier preachers in other American wars, back to the Revolution. Contains a list of Chaplain casualties and decorations of World war II. Index.

Reviewed by Eddie Doherty
Book Week p18 N 25 '45 180w

Christian Century 62:1449 D 26 '45 30w

"Some of the stories recorded are thrilling to a degree and the whole narrative makes graphic and stirring reading." T. F. Opie
+ Churchman 160:17 Ja 1 '46 120w

"A frankly uncritical brief for Army chaplains, designed to gain recognition of their contribution, and as such a book which should have wide reading. It is to be regretted, however, that too many of these chaplains speak like swash-buckling generals."
+ — Kirkus 13:510 N 15 '45 130w

"A thrilling, inspiring and humbling book. . . Highly recommended." Barbara Overton
+ Library J 70:1086 N 15 '45 100w

Reviewed by Edward Allen
+ Sat R of Lit 28:25 D 22 '45 550w

CROSS, GENEVIEVE. The engine that lost its whistle; pictures by [the author]. [24p] $1 Cross publications, 116 John st, N.Y. 7

Picture-story book for young readers. It tells the story of the Fruit train that ran from South Haven, Michigan, to Toledo, Ohio, back in 1877 and later.

"This is a book which early readers will take pride in reading to the family." L. M. P.
+ N Y Times p12 N 11 '45 60w

"There is nothing particularly original about the story, but the pictures have vitality and humor and they are very well reproduced. The type-page is less pleasing. . . The perennial popularity of books like Wanda Gag's 'Millions of Cats' has convinced this reviewer that children like their type to harmonize with the pictures. These gay, continually moving drawings need a clear, plain, conventional type—not a script. It is, however, a very American picture book that the children of other countries would like to see." M. G. D.
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:43 D 8 '45 200w

CROW, CARL. China takes her place. 282p $2.75 Harper

951 China 44-9433

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"The outstanding value of this essay is its approach, namely, that of a Shanghai journalist and business man who has not the faintest hesitation in calling attention to the very considerable number of times in which he sized up erroneously what was going on. It is refreshingly unusual to find one who tells exactly what he thought (or thinks he thought) ten, twenty, or thirty years ago—and then points out how far astray he was. Much of the most interesting material is to be found in the footnotes—which are not composed of citations! The student or general reader who wishes precision of statement and dating of events had best avoid this work, but those who enjoy running and racy accounts of the rise and fall and, perhaps, rise again of nations and political parties and individuals will derive a good deal of satisfaction from Mr. Crow's latest literary exercise." H. F. MacNair
+ — Am Pol Sci R 39:395 Ap '45 300w

Bookmark 6:12 Ja '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '45

Foreign Affairs 24:170 O '45 60w

Reviewed by D. N. Rowe
Pacific Affairs 18:102 Mr '45 110w

Reviewed by H. L. Mitchell
Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 28 '45 360w

Wis Lib Bul 41:18 Ja '45

CROW, CARL. The city of Flint grows up; the success story of an American community. 217p il $3 Harper

977.437 Flint, Michigan 45-9711

"The story of the growth of the little fur trapper's trading post on the Flint River, known in 1812 as Grand Traverse, into a booming industrial city that sent tank destroyers, airplane engines and ammunition to the battlefields of our history's greatest war." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 42:161 Ja 15 '46

Kirkus 13:391 S 1 '45 150w

" 'The City of Flint Grows Up' is subtitled 'The Success Story of An American Community.' This is unfortunate. For Mr. Crow's last work (he died in the late summer of 1945), after an exciting beginning, never manages to concern itself with the city of Flint per se, but takes on the character of a glorified advertisement, intent on depicting the romantic climb to success of the Buick division of the General Motors Corp. That Buick was and still is located in Flint is the essence rather than the incident of this story." Emanuel Slotnick
— + Springf'd Republican p6 N 22 '45 480w

"The present book, says Mr. Crow—who died before its appearance—in an honest foreword, was undertaken at the suggestion of the Buick division of General Motors and with their financial help. . . There is no attempt at critical appraisal of the company's life and times; nothing indicates that Flint has often been an industrial battleground. But the forthright foreword precludes finding fault with the book on that score. There are, however, some errors outside the canon." Stewart Holbrook
+ — Weekly Book Review p31 N 25 '45 900w

CROWELL, MRS GRACE (NOLL). Between eternities. 56p $1 Harper

811 44-9494

Collection of short poems, some in sonnet form, by a well-known Texas poet. They are expressions of simple, emotional, and inspirational appeal.

"This is Grace Crowell's fifteenth volume of poems, and one could wish to have them all on one shelf. They would make a bright spot in anybody's library. Mrs. Crowell is never carried away by strange doctrines, ethical, religious or esthetic. Her ideas could be called conventional if they were not so freshly felt and so strongly expressed. . . Her favorite form is the sonnet, and few living writers handle this difficult measure more effectively."
+ Christian Century 61:1386 N 29 '44 110w

Wis Lib Bul 41:45 Ap '45

CROY, HOMER. Wonderful neighbor. 204p il $2.50 Harper

B or 92 45-9878

This story of American farm life in Missouri is a partial autobiography of Homer Croy. The wonderful neighbor of the title is one Newt Kennedy, whose simplicity and kindliness was a proverb in his home town.

"Homer Croy and I grew up not many miles and not many years apart; so near that the life he has put into 'Wonderful Neighbor' is my life too. . . This means that my deep enthusiasm for this warm, honest, sensitive book may be somewhat suspect—liable to discount on the ground of personal prejudice in favor of the material. On the other hand it qualifies me as an especially exacting critic. If Homer Croy had slipped on a detail or an incident I would know it. If his public sale or his courtroom scene or his family dinner were 'made up,' I would sense the falsehood. I find no such fault. This is his own life that he is giving, and the real life of all of us who grew up in that region before the turn of the century." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p5 N 18 '45 320w

Booklist 42:124 D 15 '45

CROY, HOMER—Continued

"In a style that is plain and simple and purposefully naïve, Mr. Croy depicts himself growing up on the farm next to Newt's. The picture is both romanticized and, at times in its barnyard scenes, fairly realistic, but modestly so." W. K. R.

Christian Science Monitor p10 D 22 '45 350w

"Full of some really good sketches of farm life, social and work, in the old days before cars and after. One could wish for more humor and less saccharine sentimentality along with the authentic 'country flavor'."

+ — Kirkus 13:413 S 15 '45 80w

"Substantially this is a sketch book; some of the bits are thin but most are very descriptive, or touching, or funny." Phil Stong

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:26 D 29 '45 270w

"Mr Croy hops rather loosely back and forth between past and present tense in recalling his familiar people, places and incidents of the past, and noting changes the years have brought, but he still turns out warm and humorous copy. Sometimes it's something more." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 2 '45 420w

"This tale of old Newt, and his relations with Homer, boy and man, is not one of Mr. Croy's better books. . . But it is good, sound, amiable, down to earth country stuff. This fashion of writing about one's childhood on the farm seems to be catching on, and maybe it isn't a bad trend at that. Mr. Croy's Newt saga, gabby though it is in spots, stands up pretty well with the best of them. Mr. Croy is a man who will match his bucolic recollections against the best of them." Stanley Walker

+ Weekly Book Review p14 N 18 '45 800w

CROZIER, WILLIAM PERCIVAL. The fates are laughing. 377p $3 Harcourt [10s 6d Cape, J]

45-6993

Historical novel based upon life in Rome in the last days of the Emperor Tiberius, and the years following his death. The heroine, Metella, an aristocratic young woman with advanced ideas about the freedom of slaves, has her troubles because of her modern beliefs, but eventually succeeds in marrying the man she really loves. Together they survive the upheavals of the time, and at the close of the book are afraid their young son may be too interested in the teachings of one Peter, out of Judea, lately come to Rome.

"Mr. Crozier, in this instance, follows an earlier and, to my mind, superior example. His easy, colloquial story of a Roman senatorial family living under the tensions and fears of the reigns of Tiberius and Caligula has a simplicity and a verisimilitude which remind the reader of that little-known masterpiece, Andivius Hedulio, by Edward Lucas White. Perhaps the unenlightening and rather forbidding title explains the comparative neglect by his countrymen of Mr. White's novel. The incredible sharpness of detail, combined with the strange, dreamlike unreality of Andivius, can never be duplicated or approached, but Mr. Crozier does succeed in a different manner, in telling his story quite as convincingly, as though it were told as of London today instead of Rome about A.D. 40." R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic 176:138 Ag '45 450w

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock

Book Week p1 Jl 22 '45 1400w

Booklist 42:18 S '45

Bookmark 6:15 N '45

Christian Century 62:1038 S 12 '45 150w

Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 25 '45 600w

Reviewed by Beth Foster

Churchman 159:15 D 1 '45 100w

"If W. P. Crozier was not so skillful a novelist as Robert Graves in 'I, Claudius,' he was thoroughly at home in the period and able to make it come alive. The plot is a simple one but it brings his Roman family of senatorial rank into Roman imperial politics . . . and creates a living panorama of the Mediterranean world." E. P. Richardson

+ Commonweal 42:461 Ag 24 '45 250w

Kirkus 13:274 Jl 1 '45 220w

Reviewed by L. M. Kinloch

Library J 70:635 Jl '45 50w

"Mr. Crozier's method is the right one. He has absorbed and digested his sources and does not need to be always leaning on them. He has a picture of the age, but does not lecture upon it. His out-of-date senators, his aristocratic ladies, his horrible little boy spoilt according to the newest and worst educational methods, above all the gentle and scholarly household of the Senator Publius and his learned Greek slave, are all natural and convincing. . . The picture is true, but it is never obtruded, and never allowed to interfere with the movement of a story which is on its own merits fascinating and at times almost frightening." Gilbert Murray

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 16 '45 800w

Reviewed by Kenneth Fearing

N Y Times p6 Jl 22 '45 550w

"A lively, extremely informal, yet learned novel."

+ New Yorker 21:66 Ag 4 '45 130w

"The reviewer could not compile the canons which govern the composition of historical novels. But at any rate the characters ought to be more than 'chessmen and chesswomen' moved from square to square on a surface of variegated antique marble. It seems to me that Mr. Crozier was really more interested in the board than in the pieces, in the period rather than the persons of his story. And it is accordingly not surprising that the little figures labelled hero, heroine, villain, tyrant, great lady, literary but incompetent father, etc., as the case may be, should not carry their full quota of conviction to the mind." Leonard Bacon

Sat R of Lit 28:28 Ag 25 '45 450w

"Admirably written novel. . . The Fates Are Laughing has a biographical postscript written by the author's daughter. Perverse readers will certainly turn to this first of all. They will be rewarded by finding the reason for the extraordinarily convincing quality of the historical background. To the writing of this one novel Crozier brought the historical researches of a lifetime." V. C. Clinton-Baddeley

+ Spec 174:484 My 25 '45 650w

Reviewed by H. W. Marr

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 8 '45 400w

"A work of high quality. It is not merely that its author gave to it a life-time's enthusiasm for the ancient scene; it has not only scholarship but an inner vitality. . . It is a leisurely book written with great finish and care; a book not to be hurried in the reading for all its quickenings of tempo and its dramatic ascents."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p269 Je 9 '45 550w

"This is a historical novel that has not so much brought the past to us, as moved us, the way we are, into a past in which life moved much as it did on the verge of the second great war. It may be a discouraging thought to people who pride themselves on progress, but some two thousand years ago a great many twentieth-century Europeans would have found themselves at home in Rome." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Jl 22 '45 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 41:112 N '45

CUMBERLAND, MARTEN. Steps in the dark. 251p $2 Doubleday [8s 6d Hurst]

[45-3109]

Detective story.

"Best of the week."

+ Boston Globe p18 Ap 18 '45 30w

"Adventure, intrigue, and Dax' nasty habit of being right combined for average entertainment."

Kirkus 13:44 F 1 '45 40w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p14 Ap 1 '45 100w

"Good Parisian background and a sound if too intricate plot."
+ — New Yorker 21:99 Mr 24 '45 80w

"Entertaining."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:36 Mr 31 '45 40w

CUMMINS, KUNDRY (K. K. DE KARROFF, pseud). Stiggles; drawn by Margery Colman; told by K. K. de Karroff. [32p] $1 Coward-McCann [4s 6d Faber]
45-8602

Nonsense picture-story book about two English children who try to make life more pleasant for their pet donkey Stiggles. Stiggles wants his sister Mabel to live in equal comfort and this necessitates a search throuout London for Rag-and-Bottle Joe who owns Mabel.

Kirkus 13:435 O 1 '45 110w

Reviewed by Marian Webb
+ Library J 70:1094 N 15 '45 70w

"Not recommended." Ruth Bostwick
— Library J 70:1094 N 15 '45 50w

"This is one of those hard-to-find story books for 4's and almost-4's who like books with big, clear pictures and a brief story expressed in simple words. Children 5 and 6 will also like 'Stiggles,' to read to themselves." L. M. Palmer
+ N Y Times p23 N 18 '45 100w

"These are some of the breeziest pictures of the season. They have the dash of cartoons but more charm, and the color combination of scarlet and sepia is fine for bold designs that bring today's traffic, just as it is, into the happy realm of imagination."
+ Weekly Book Review p32 N 11 '45 300w

CUNNINGHAM, ALBERT BENJAMIN. Death visits the apple hole. 220p $2 Dutton 45-2939

Detective story.

Kirkus 13:115 Mr 15 '45 40w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p22 Ap 8 '45 110w

"Very good."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:28 Ap 7 '45 40w

"A top notch whodunit in every respect and an excellent character study of those people of whom the hill-billy bands tell only one unimportant side." B. I.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 8 '45 200w

"You could have knocked this department over with a meat-ax when the killer stood revealed. Mountaineer background, outlandish people and a liberal education in how to deduce." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p19 Ap 8 '45 110w

CUNNINGHAM, ALBERT BENJAMIN. Murder before midnight. 221p $2 Dutton 45-7213

Detective story.

"Somewhat sordid characters and slow pace—but this series seems to have established a following."
Kirkus 13:325 Ag 1 '45 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p26 S 9 '45 130w

"Good grade Roden."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:38 N 24 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p18 S 9 '45 180w

CUNNINGHAM, VIRGINIA. ABC play book; il. by Stephen Stratton. [26p] $1 Fischer, L.B.

"This is an advanced alphabet book for the child who has gone beyond the A-is-for-Apple and B-is-for-Ball stage. Each page pictures a collection of articles whose names begin with a particular letter. It should prove fun for two children or a child and an adult to race to see who recognizes the most articles." N Y Times

"The verses by Virginia Cunningham add just the desired touch to make learning the alphabet and enlarging the vocabulary an enjoyable experience rather than a static lesson."
+ Book Week p21 N 11 '45 110w

Kirkus 13:433 O 1 '45 60w

"Colorful illustrations by Stephen Stratton and rhythmic verses by Virginia Cunningham offer a freshness for an often-used theme. Useful for children learning the alphabet." Olive Brain
+ Library J 70:981 O 15 '45 50w

+ N Y Times p10 N 11 '45 80w

CURINGA, NICOLA V. An Italian tragedy; the story of a humble people. 310p $2.50 Liveright 45-5193

Grim story of a poverty-stricken Italian village. Giacomo, a Calabrian farmer, returns to his native village after a few years in America, and tries to lead his friends and family into better ways of living. The result is tragedy, but the book ends on a note of hope.

"If the author has defeated his purpose, it is partly because he is closer to the realist's singleness of vision than to the humanism of Silone (to whom the publishers over-enthusiastically compare him). Here is Erskine Caldwell's merciless insight into the brute core of humanity, without his sense of dramatic integration and underlying tone of protest. Mr. Curinga's characters are curiously uningratiating. . . 'Tragedy,' without a vestige of heroism, is at best a synthetic thing." N. B.
— + N Y Times p24 Ap 29 '45 230w

Reviewed by R. S. Scott
Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 19 '45 230w

"Clumsily told but rich in detail."
+ — Time 45:104 Mr 26 '45 30w

"In its absence of artifice, its halting but touching pathos, and its peasant rhythm of story-telling, 'An Italian Tragedy' comes close to what must be the reality of life among the poor of Calabria."
Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 29 '45 230w

CURTIS, ALICE BERTHA. Winter on the prairie; il. by Grace Paull. 164p $2 Crowell

Another story about Gwen and Lynnie Julien, who first appeared in Children of the Prairie (Book Review Digest, 1938). The whole of the little Julien family struggled thru winter blizzards and many small disasters in their efforts to get enough money to build an addition to their house, so that grandfather and Cousin Gilbert would have a place to stay when they arrived from Cornwall. For grades four to seven.

"There is a wonderful, old-fashioned charm about this story and a sense of reality that draws you right into the lives of the children you are reading about. . . There is no one who draws better farm pictures than Grace Paull, and her illustrations for this are among her best."
+ Book Week p18 Je 3 '45 150w

Booklist 41:273 My 15 '45

Horn Bk 21:193 My '45 80w

"Recommended." G. E. Joline
+ Library J 70:491 My 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p15 Je 3 '45 150w

"A wholesome, happy story of a democratic, united family, one that, because it is turned in upon itself for resources, develops ingenuity and a talent for enjoyment." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 22 '45 270w

CURTIS, CHARLES PELHAM, and GREENSLET, FERRIS, eds. The practical cogitator; or, The thinker's anthology. 577p $3 Houghton

808.8 Literature—Collections 45-9030

An anthology, consisting of excerpts from the thoughtful writings of the ages, "primarily for the extrovert thinker." Selections are arranged under headings: Man in search of himself; He solicits his past; He turns to nature; And scrutinizes her; And himself; He lives with his fellows; They better their condition; They must have peace, security, and liberty; And justice; He seeks solace and beauty. Index.

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson
Book Week p4 O 21 '45 360w

Booklist 42:92 N 15 '45

"This is something more rugged than a sentimental journey through the world's great literature. Of course brief selections torn from their original contexts do not form even an introduction to the authors' systems of thought, if they had systems, but that is not the purpose. Rather, they are stimuli, sometimes irritants, to set in motion the reader's own thinking process. Such a volume would be a good companion on a long trip."
+ Christian Century 62:1321 N 28 '45 250w

"Obviously, the choice is highly personal—the arrangement challenges the imagination and curiosity. A useful book for pickup reading, for dipping into now and again. I liked it."
+ Kirkus 13:353 Ag 15 '45 130w

Nation 161:504 N 10 '45 490w

Reviewed by H. M. Jones
+ N Y Times p6 D 2 '45 500w

Reviewed by Hamilton Basso
New Yorker 21:110 O 20 '45 240w

"Fortunately the vast majority of what man has said, thought, and written is tripe. What remains, what is provocative and helpful, sublime and inspired, is scattered through thousands of volumes, millions of letters, and a few hundred formulae and theorems. The job of rounding it up, judging it, and arranging it for practical use, is what the editors of 'The Practical Cogitator' set for themselves. Their success is amazing and heart-warming." Thomas Sugrue
+ Sat R of Lit 28:15 N 10 '45 550w

"It is a very fine collection. It is one to dip into or to read at length, and to reread. The readableness of many of the articles in translation has been enhanced by new translation, the work of Mr Curtis, who has been a lecturer in government and sociology at Harvard. His fellow compiler and editor is the author of biographies of Pater, Lowell and Aldrich and an autobiography, 'Under the Bridge.' He is Houghton, Mifflin company's literary adviser."
+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 14 '45 420w

"The book provides a rare and a valuable experience. It seems to have been designed originally to give soldiers matter for cogitation while serving in places where books are rare. It will serve civilians just as well in places where clear and hard thinking are rare. It is a book of vast urbanity which will add to the civilization of whoever reads it, and it achieves an esthetic quality in the suavity with which it seduces a reader into cerebration." Bernard De Voto
+ Weekly Book Review p5 O 21 '45 850w

CURTIS, FRANK W. High-frequency induction heating. 235p il $2.75 McGraw

621.397 Induction heating 45-1809

"A practical book on the application techniques of high-frequency induction heating, intended for the user of induction heating equipment. Coils and fixtures, methods of heating, and applications are treated in detail. Information is given concerning the best design of parts to be heated by induction." N Y New Tech Bks

"The practical aspects of the induction heating process have been kept in the foreground, with the result that a potential user of the process can learn the best application methods as well as how to avoid difficulties. The book covers application techniques, principally in a qualitative way, with little quantitative treatment of the electrical problems associated with induction heating. The fund of experience represented by the many examples of successful heating jobs will be helpful to the technical man who must decide on the application technique to be used in a particular case. The book is excellently illustrated with photographs and line drawings." R. R. Benedict
+ Chem & Eng N 23:1122 Je 25 '45 270w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '45

Library J 69:814 O 1 '44 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:60 O '44

CURTIS, LIONEL. World war: its cause and cure. 274p $3.25 (7s 6d) Oxford

321.022 War. International law and relations [45-6371]

"The cause of war, Mr. Curtis declares, is simply the anarchy of sovereign states; and there will be no final release from the scourge until the nations have consented to so much surrender of sovereignty as is required to equip an international authority with power to set up a compulsory court to settle disputes between states, an executive to enforce its judgments and a legislature to keep international law abreast of the developing needs of society. Mr. Curtis's new volume restates the argument in the special form it has taken in his war-time pamphlets, which have been mainly devoted to ascertaining what is the minimum transfer of powers that would make the international state workable; and to urging upon the communities of the British Commonwealth that theirs is the opportunity to give the world a lead in the required direction." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 D 9 '45 120w

"Lionel Curtis's World War: Its Cause and Cure makes thoughtful reading. For those who think the answer was found at San Francisco, it may awaken wholesome skepticism. For those who feel that the 50 nations assembled achieved no more than failure, it sets forth an alternative. For those who view the United Nations Charter, not as the answer, but as a first step and the best now possible, it suggests a direction for further progress." E. B. O.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 29 '45 550w

"Mr. Curtis will always be heard with respect, for he is at once an indefatigable student and a man with a large and direct experience of affairs. . . As a book [this work] is hampered by the circumstances under which it has been written; it is discursive, there are a good many repetitions, but it is full of important points."
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 27 '45 300w

"This book argues repeatedly what is too generally accepted to need argument. Apart from the song of the cuckoo, I have never attended to so iterative a strain; the same themes, the same illustrations, the same quotations are used over and over till the reader is dizzy; the work would be more effective if it was shorter by two-thirds." Freda White
New Statesman & Nation 29:358 Je 2 '45 800w

"Argued as it is with the lucidity and engaging enthusiasm that Mr. Curtis always commands, the thesis is, in the domain of ideals, logically unanswerable. . . It is possible, however, to grant Mr. Curtis this proposition and yet dissent, as he acknowledges that nearly all practical politicians do dissent, from his opinion that the first direct steps towards the world state must be, or indeed can be, taken at once."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p183 Ap 21 '45 800w

"Mr. Curtis has had more than forty years of experience as administrator and publicist in different parts of the British Commonwealth, particularly in South Africa; and many of his observations on the mutual relations between Great Britain and the Dominions are penetrating and suggestive. He is, moreover, a man of wide learning and deep religious conviction; and he writes gracefully and sometimes with eloquence. But his whole approach to the problem of world union seems curiously parochial." H. B. Parkes

+ — Weekly Book Review p19 O 7 '45 300w

CUSHING, HELEN GRANT, ed. See Nineteenth century Readers' guide to periodical literature

CUSHMAN, ELLA MARY. Management in homes. 285p il $3.75 Macmillan
643 Home economics 45-6064

A textbook intended for college students of home economics. "This book deals with actual homes in which real people live. It contains stories of ambitions, of obstacles, of struggles, and of achievements in the making and the improvement of these homes. It is a record of the varied ways in which families have managed, that is, have used what they had towards getting the kinds of homes they wanted." (Pref)

Booklist 42:52 O 15 '45

"The book is an excellent foundation for a college course in home management. It is also a book which all home economists—teacher or student, in high school or college—will want to own and to give to friends. The book will undoubtedly be a home economics best seller." Josephine Kremer
+ J Home Econ 37:522 O '45 240w
School & Society 62:31 Jl 14 '45 30w

CUTHBERT, CLIFTON. The robbed heart. 219p $2.50 Fischer, L.B.
45-10155

The hero is a young white jazz critic, who in searching Harlem for new talent, meets and falls in love with a light-skinned middle class Negro girl. Their happiness is short lived, for their families discover their secret.

"On the level which Cuthbert approaches his story he is fairly successful. Perhaps it was his own good sense that kept him from attempting more; certainly it is hard enough to write a searching novel of Negro-white relationships without further complicating things by trying to take in the equally difficult field of hot music. There have been so few successful novels about either that to merge them seems pure folly. Thus, though 'The Robbed Heart' may not go very deep, it runs along smoothly on the surface which seems enough for the time being." Bucklin Moon
+ — Book Week p22 N 18 '45 500w
Kirkus 13:379 S 1 '45 170w

"Sensitively written problem-stating novel. . . Strongly reminiscent of but thin and diffuse in comparison with Young Man With a Horn, and therefore not essential to most libraries." R. E. Kingery
Library J 70:1026 N 1 '45 70w

"Clifton Cuthbert is a very clever white man, an experienced writer, with a smooth, cool competence in dealing with character and language. . . The story is less pretentious than 'Strange Fruit' and is brought quietly and firmly to an 'inevitable' and somewhat ironic conclusion. It flatters the reader to be made to move so intimately in circles so strange and intriguing. But one is not sure in the end that one has learned anything more significant about Negroes than that they have the same faculties and passions as the whites." J. W. Beach
+ — N Y Times p7 D 2 '45 450w

"Along with all the 'tea,' gin, and jam sessions, this sorry and often embarrassing little exercise deals exhaustively with the frustration and impotence so manifest in the more frantic jazz circles. It would all, however, sound more authentic if the author's ear were as sharp as he appears to think it is."
New Yorker 21:102 N 10 '45 110w

"Even as a clinical notebook record this would be pretty cold. As the stuff of a novel it is absolutely lifeless." N. L. Rothman
— Sat R of Lit 28:15 D 29 '45 360w

"Mr Cuthbert has written an imperfect novel, but a good one. He has approached a serious problem with sympathy and understanding and dealt with it honestly and with some capability." J. S. K.
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d D 16 '45 360w

"Miscegenation, theme of Mr. Cuthbert's fifth novel, is still a worthy one, but the author has failed to give it worthy treatment. The characters in the story are hollow, its drama is weak, there is no humor in it, and it lacks authenticity." Henry Steig
— Weekly Book Review p10 N 18 '45 750w

CUTHBERT, MARGARET ROSS, ed. Adventure in radio; with radio scripts by Edna St Vincent Millay, and others. 288p il $2.50 Howell, Soskin
791.4 Radio entertainments 45-8878

A collection of radio scripts of various types, selected and designed for reading by young people partly as entertainment, partly as examples of "how to do it." Among the scripts are news reports or comments by Edward R. Murrow and George Fielding Eliot, entertainment scripts by Edgar Bergen, Ellery Queen, and the veterans of "Information Please," a number of pieces listed as "Listen and learn" by Mayor La Guardia, Archibald MacLeish, Stephen Vincent Benet, and Edna St Vincent Millay.

Book Week p23 N 11 '45 130w

"For public libraries and school libraries."
+ Kirkus 13:402 S 1 '45 110w

"Recommended." Isabel McLaughlin
+ Library J 70:1028 N 1 '45 70w

"It's a characteristic set of scripts, all right, but it seems unfortunate that none of Norman Corwin's work was included. A final chapter, 'Going on the Air,' has suggestions for those interested in a career in radio." C. P.
N Y Times p24 N 11 '45 180w
Sat R of Lit 28:82 N 10 '45 30w

"This does not show children how to write scripts: its purpose is wider. In a country where, roughly speaking, everybody listens to everything, the continuous, indiscriminate listener can find in this eminently readable book that there are standards of judgment in radio as in any other art. Any reader may recover something lost and find it as he heard it; the young will be especially taken by what amounts to a glimpse behind the scenes. It all works toward the formation of better habits of listening."
+ Weekly Book Review p26 N 11 '45 400w

CUTHRELL, MRS FAITH (BALDWIN). See Baldwin, F.

D

D., H. See Doolittle, H.

DALLIN, DAVID JULIEVICH. The big three; the United States, Britain, Russia. 292p $2.75 Yale univ. press
909.82 U.S.—Foreign relations. Great Britain—Foreign relations. Russia—Foreign relations. World politics A45-4174

"Any thoughtful consideration of the United Nations Charter drives home the fact that the immediate future of civilization depends upon the policy-makers of the United Kingdom, the Soviet Union, and the United States. . . It is especially important for all of us to become well informed concerning the resources, national aspirations, and recent political history of these three 'super powers.' For such a purpose Mr. Dallin's factual presentation is without a peer. It relates the international diplomacy of each to the internal policies from which the foreign policy of any nation inevitably stems. It appraises each country with regard to its war-making potentialities and its requirements for national security. Many recent events in the history of both Great Britain and the Soviet Union, that have aroused suspicion in America, are placed in true perspective." (Scientific Bk Club R) Index.

DALLIN, D. J.—Continued

"The layman can read this book with profit. The expert may find more enticement in the title than satisfaction in the text." R. C. Snyder
+ — Am Pol Sci R 39:1214 D '45 470w

Reviewed by A. O. Sarkissian
Ann Am Acad 242:164 N '45 270w

Reviewed by J. H. Powers
Atlantic 176:147 O '45 400w

Reviewed by Harvey O'Connor
Book Week p10 Ag 19 '45 400w

Booklist 42:4 S '45

Bookmark 6:4 N '45

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 162:87 O '45 550w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson
Christian Century 62:1126 O 3 '45 1050w

"We cannot accept Mr. Dallin's doubt and distrust as reliable guides. But they may easily prove more trustworthy than the sentimental optimism which believes a Big Three Utopia can be raised on the old foundations of absolute sovereignty and before the ruins of nationalistic hate and greed are cleared from human thinking." D. M. R.
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 10 '45 600w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 9:322 O '45 1000w

Kirkus 13:266 Je 15 '45 130w

"Will be of stimulating interest to all who can examine the postwar world unsentimentally and with courageous realism in the light of the Big Three's historical background. . . Recommended for purchase by medium-sized and large libraries." H. S. Taylor
+ Library J 70:683 Ag '45 110w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard
Nation 161:184 Ag 25 '45 420w

Reviewed by Herbert Lyons
New Repub 113:322 S 10 '45 300w

"Because of the nature and scope of his investigation, a large part of the book consists of a recital of facts and figures, with the author's comment reduced to an indispensable minimum. At times one cannot help wishing for an elaboration of his line of argument and for somewhat less condensation in the presentation of facts. But even as it is, Mr. Dallin's new volume is a highly welcome addition to the literature on present-day international problems. Whether or not one agrees with all his conclusions, one will find in his book a lucid and well-organized summary of the interests and policies of the Big Three in the different parts of the world." Michael Karpovich
+ — N Y Times p1 Ag 12 '45 1750w

"Several more bushels of books about the international question have come from the presses. I haven't read all of them, and I would consider myself slightly crazy if I tried to, but, of what I have read, 'The Big Three' seems the best of the lot. . . I doubt that anyone who has given international affairs serious attention will find Mr. Dallin's book startling, but this hasn't exactly been a year for startling books. Maybe it's the war, maybe it's the paper shortage, or maybe it's sunspots." Hamilton Basso
New Yorker 21:69 Ag 11 '45 200w

Reviewed by Arnold Wolfers
Pol Sci Q 60:586 D '45 1000w

" 'The Big Three' is lucid and objective. It anatomizes the global situation so that the essentials stand out for both expert and layman. It simplifies without oversimplifying. It grinds no axes and plays no favorites. Whether we like it or not, a street demonstration in Isfahan or a change of government in London concerns the business man in New York, the industrial worker in Detroit, and the farmer in Podunk Center. The sooner we all realize this the better." H. C. Wolfe
+ Sat R of Lit 28:7 Ag 11 '45 1350w

"Few, if any, American writers are as well qualified as Mr. Dallin to handle the potentially explosive material with which this book deals. He is a political scientist of mature judgment and unbiased mind. His previous writings, notably those dealing with Russia, have gained him an enviable reputation, and in this latest book he has made a real contribution to the spread of international goodwill and the welfare of the world."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 Ag '45 420w

Time 46:108 N 12 '45 350w

"Dallin is an historian of some skill, not an irresponsible alarmist. If one accepts his premises and employs the evidence he supplies, the conclusions he reaches are not illogical. The 'if' is an important one, however; Dallin is not a disinterested observer—if there is such a one where Russia is concerned—and his point of view predisposes him to see the Soviet Union in a generally unfavorable light."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:35 D '45 260w

"The cold, hard realistic manner of his analysis is not muddied by the emotionalism with which the nightmare is usually discussed. . . [A] profoundly defeatist realism stamps the entire book. Nations are treated here as single-minded power aggregates without the slightest conflict of interest within themselves or hesitation in their expansive drives. The vast upheaval in human thinking of the last two generations and in the economic relations of men within nearly every great nation is never mentioned. There is an assumption of Russian omnipotence and all-conquering guile which is far more European than American and which is likely to make many Americans laugh. Mr. Dallin's gloomy realism is a useful antidote against fuzzy thinking about the future. But his own analysis of the nightmare which haunts us is likely to make many readers sigh with relief that even this degree of corrosive pessimism leaves both the Bolshevik bogey and the third world war still pretty ghostlike phantoms." Joseph Barnes
Weekly Book Review p4 Ag 12 '45 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 41:98 O '45

"Mr. Dallin has written several interesting and controversial books on recent and future developments in the Soviet Union, which were received with due attention. . . His present book falls into two unequal parts. The smaller, and by far the more valuable, part is again based on original Russian sources which are inaccessible to most American readers. From them Mr. Dallin discusses Russia's naval aspirations and corrects the superficial picture drawn by some American historians and journalists of Russian-American relations in the past. It would have been highly desirable if Mr. Dallin had expanded this part of his book. Less novel is the picture which Mr. Dallin draws of the Big Three and their aspirations and patterns of behavior." Hans Kohn
+ — Yale R n s 35:184 autumn '45 900w

DALLIN, DAVID JULIEVICH. The real Soviet Russia; tr. by Joseph Shaplen. 260p $3.50 Yale univ. press

947.084 Russia—History—Revolution, 1917-. Communism—Russia A44-5572

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"A query presents itself to this reviewer's mind: Is the information that is available today to the social scientist in the West ample and sufficient to warrant conclusions on the social processes in the course of development and, particularly, on the future of the Soviet Union, or is it only of a definitely and admittedly tentative nature? Within these limitations, Mr. Dallin has contributed a very original, although highly subjective, analysis and has offered a well thought out prognosis." D. F. White

+ — Am Hist R 50:534 Ap '45 700w

"Without more adequate information on Soviet Russia than is now available, it would be folly to pass final judgment on this work. A few comments seem warranted, however. The book is ably written and, in its conceptual apparatus, certainly distinguished. But the student can only regret that the author has not been both consistent and precise in his documentation; that he has so completely ignored the pre-revolutionary history of Russia; and that he has relegated such matters as social security provisions in Russia to a footnote, while not even mentioning the progress made in education, culture, and racial relations. The things Dallin says about Soviet Russia may be 'real,' but the person who would even begin to understand that country should balance his view by turning also to an author like Sir Bernard Pares." H. P. Whidden

Am Pol Sci R 39:372 Ap '45 650w

"Dr. Dallin is a prolific, clever, and able writer, and whatever he wishes to produce he forges on his anvil with extreme skill. The result is a thesis which, to use the eternal and simple wisdom of Lincoln, is a nice dog if you prefer that kind of a dog. Small wonder that a certain syndicated column recommends the book heartily as the kind that should not only be made a present to oneself, but be given 'to your friend, your son or daughter in school, your pastor.' It may be given to all of them; but in my opinion, in all fairness, it should be accompanied with an explanation as to 'what kind of a dog it is.' It is Dr. Dallin's Russia, but not 'Real Soviet Russia.' " A. G. Mazour

Ann Am Acad 238:208 Mr '45 500w

"For Americans seriously interested in contemporary Russia, this is the book. A clear summary of the Soviet Union's economic, political, religious history, it adds new authority to the name of the author already widely and favorably known through his Soviet Russia's Foreign Policy and his Russia and Postwar Europe. Cool, detached, objective, this former Deputy of the Soviet analyzes in forthright logical style various puzzles created by Russia's shifty domestic and foreign policies; and he thus provides what many of us have been, almost hopelessly, awaiting—a thread through the labyrinth, a story that makes sense." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 161:181 My '45 700w

"With two earlier books, Soviet Russia's Foreign Policy, 1939-1942, and Russia and Postwar Europe, Dr. Dallin established himself as an informed and dispassionate commentator on the domestic and foreign policies of the Soviet Union. Now, not quite so imperturbable as in his previous volumes, he adds to that reputation. For this latest book, packed as it is with factual material and again drawing on an impressive range of Soviet publications to support its conclusions, is nevertheless polemic." Paul Hutchinson

Christian Century 62:301 Mr 7 '45 1150w

Foreign Affairs 23:697 Jl '45 80w

"This, the third of Mr. Dallin's critical estimates of the Soviet Union, is particularly related to the last to appear, 'Russia and Postwar Europe.' Together with an earlier work on Soviet foreign policy and one yet to come, on Russian attitudes in the Far East, they form one of the most powerful, sustained and embittered attacks on the Soviet ever to have appeared. . . It is, in a way, an impressive performance and one which has even its moments of brilliance. But its brilliance is not merely seen in certain passages of insight. The rhetorician and the experienced debater will see in 'The Real Soviet Russia' one of the most extraordinary polemical exhibitions that have ever posed as objective analysis, as full of devices and special techniques as an election campaign." Ralph Bates

New Repub 112:233 F 12 '45 1550w

"Among the many books which seek the reality behind the riddle, the study by Mr. Dallin stands out as a dispassionate indictment not of the Russian people but of the Russian regime. He refuses to name names. He never asks himself how much the regime corresponds to the people, how much it is the product of traditional attitudes and historical developments. The book strikes the reader as scholarly and competent, though a closer documentation would be desirable. . . Has Mr. Dallin found and explained the real Soviet Russia? One doubts that he has accomplished the impossible. Necessarily he will have misunderstood and misjudged many of the elusive phenomena of a highly complex reality. Probably his picture is as one-sided as all presentations of Soviet Russia tend to be. But it is one that no serious student of Russia, whatever his point of view may be, should overlook." Hans Kohn

+ — N Y Times p3 Mr 18 '45 1000w

"This is a vastly informative and, with some reservations, a very useful book." M. T. Florinsky

+ Pol Sci Q 60:139 Mr '45 800w

"Occasionally, I am slightly disturbed by the categorical way in which Mr. Dallin states his conclusions, even when by necessity they are of a hypothetical nature, being based on circumstantial rather than direct evidence. 'Such is the inarticulate, half-conscious program of the Soviet intelligentsia' (p. 139)—is perhaps a fair example. This, however, may be due to a flaw in expression rather than a substantial defect as all, or nearly all, of Mr. Dallin's surmises are arrived at by means of a keen analysis and have a high degree of probability. Incidentally, the chapters on the new Soviet intelligentsia as well as on the other classes of Soviet society are the best in the book." Michael Karpovich

+ — Yale R n s 34:761 summer '45 600w

DALY, ELIZABETH. Any shape or form. 186p $2 Farrar

45-4232

Detective story.

Book Week p11 Je 24 '45 180w

Bookmark 6:16 My '45

"Not one of her better jobs, this is on the lean side."

— Kirkus 13:117 Mr 15 '45 70w

"A terrific letdown from the A-1 work Miss Daly had been giving us lately." E. H.

— New Repub 112:798 Je 4 '45 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 Je 3 '45 110w

"A well-plotted mystery, designed for readers who like their detectives urbane, not to say precious."

+ New Yorker 21:84 My 26 '45 80w

"Pretty good puzzle most of way with tendency to wobble at end. Mr. Gamadge does well enough—but not his best."

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:42 Je 23 '45 40w

"Henry Gamadge performs with his accustomed brilliancy in this polite and always entertaining tale, one of the best of Miss Daly's excellent mysteries, always civilized, sensibly and well contrived in every department of puzzling." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p8 My 27 '45 180w

DALZELL, JAMES RALPH. Building trades blueprint reading. 2v il ea $2 Am. tech. soc.

744.532 Architectural drawing. Blueprints

45-5718

"Volume I of this set deals with the fundamentals of architectural blueprint reading. Each type of view is described, such as elevations, floor plans, and structural details, with explanations of the symbols and conventions used in each case. There is a review of simple arithmetic and a chapter on scaling and dimensions. Volume II contains full-size blueprints of a typical residence and two two-apartment buildings. The two volumes are in loose-leaf form and intended for classroom study. Question sheets and problems are given at the end of each section." N Y New Tech Bks

DALZELL, J. R.—Continued

Eng N 135:128 S 6 '45 80w
Library J 70:686 Ag '45 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:20 Ap '45

DAMER, ANNE, and SCOTT, JACK DENTON. Too lively to live. 189p $2 Doubleday 46-405

Detective story.

"Poor."
— Kirkus 13:407 S 15 '45 60w

"The story is not well told. The dialogue is often so confusing that it is difficult to know who is speaking or what he or she is trying to say. Worst of all, the final summing up of the evidence is vague and inconclusive." Isaac Anderson
— N Y Times p12 D 23 '45 150w

"First class."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:56 N 17 '45 40w

"Written in polite English, excepting for an occasional lapse into American pulp." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p29 N 25 '45 100w

DAMPIER, SIR WILLIAM CECIL DAMPIER. A shorter history of science. 189p il $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Cambridge]
509 Science—History. Philosophy 44-7402
For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"A Shorter History of Science is very inclusive. No important item is left out of account, and although always brief, it is always authentic. The Shorter History should prove of value to the student as a good introduction, and to the more mature scholar as a ready reference work. The work has an excellent index. It would gain much by a better bibliography." Iago Galdston + Am J Pub Health 35:165 F '45 500w
Bookmark 6:7 My '45
N Y New Tech Bks 29:64 O '44

"It is no mean achievement to range over all the sciences from astronomy to chemistry, from alchemy to physics, from medicine to psychology through the centuries. This book testifies to an enormous erudition. The wonder is that Sir William has managed to pack so much into 189 pages and to do it in so readable a fashion." Waldemar Kaempffert
+ Sat R of Lit 28:19 Mr 3 '45 750w

DANE, CLEMENCE, pseud. (WINIFRED ASHTON). He brings great news. 227p $2.50 Random house [8s 6d Heinemann]
45-8221

A historical novel which relates how a certain British naval officer, Lieutenant John Richards Lapenotiere, brought the news of Trafalgar and Nelson's death, to England.

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers
Book Week p17 S 23 '45 90w
Booklist 42:76 N 1 '45
Bookmark 6:15 N '45

"Miss Dane is mistress of wise and witty dialogue, rich in allusion, in shades and shadows of meaning that convey the sense of time and place and reveal, without seeming to describe, the relation between the past of her characters and the existing situation." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 10 '45 550w
Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '45

"A true story, embroidered with a scholar's contribution in running down the intimate details that bring it to life. But not of vital importance."
+ — Kirkus 13:302 Jl 15 '45 210w

"Although a true story embroidered with a romance and scholarly details of English life in Napoleon's day, this book will not appeal to many readers." M. H. McElfresh
Library J 70:749 S 1 '45 70w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 161:347 O 6 '45 100w
New Repub 114:102 Ja 21 '46 80w

"In this reviewer's opinion, the material would have been much more effective had it been presented as a novella. Yet its best moments are well-worth wading through the tepid pages between." James MacBride
+ — N Y Times p4 S 9 '45 900w

"A beautifully told, exciting narrative pulsing with the breath of life—a quality we have almost ceased to look for in current historical romances."
+ New Yorker 21:84 S 15 '45 100w

"Miss Dane's book may not reach the audience commanded by some of the recent mammoth historical novels, but it sheds more light and more charm per page." N. L. Rothman
+ Sat R of Lit 28:38 S 29 '45 340w

"A book that is not only informative and educational but is an extremely wellwritten adventure tale of the sea and ships, during the time of Napoleon, and of the battle which gave England supremacy of the seas." H. L. Mitchell
+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 2 '45 420w
Time 46:100 O 1 '45 440w

"It is a stirring tale told by a writer who is equally at home as playwright and novelist. The playwright reveals herself in the sprightly dialogue, the effortless handling of dramatic scenes; the novelist succeeds in giving breadth and scope to her story without detracting from its intensity." Jennings Rice
+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 9 '45 650w

DANENBERG, ELSIE (NICHOLAS) (MRS LEIGH DANENBERG). Blood, sweat, and lipstick. 302p il $2.50 Greenberg
331.4 Woman—Employment. Women in Great Britain. World war, 1939-1945—Women's work

"The 'lipstick' in the title of Elsie Danenberg's moving book about the women of England in wartime is misleading. For the full weight of its contents falls on the 'blood' and the 'sweat.' . . The British-born author, who came to America to spend twenty-three years here in newspaper feature work, returned to her native land last year to live and to labor among women workers. She drove in ambulances with the 'Riders of the Night,' rescuers of victims of the blitzes. She worked the locks on the Grand Union Canal between London and Birmingham. She spudded (weeded) endless thistles in long fields with the Land Army." N Y Times

Reviewed by Lucy Greenbaum
+ N Y Times p4 Ja 6 '46 450w

"In spite of a rather trifling title, the book is worth attention. The material so industriously gathered by the author is treated in conventional journalistic fashion, but it remains stark and impressive, and its preservation in book form is justified." T. M. Purdy
+ — Sat R of Lit 29:40 Ja 19 '46 230w

"Elsie Danenberg has been called this war's 'female Ernie Pyle.' And if a very human account of the sufferings and labors of Britain's women all the way from Bermondsey to the Clyde entitles her to that caption she deserves it. For hers, like Ernie Pyle's, is no bystander's book, done in leisure at comfortable remove from danger." Frances Witherspoon
+ Weekly Book Review p8 D 23 '45 700w

DANIELS, JOSEPHUS. Wilson era, years of peace, 1910-1917. 615p il $4 Univ. of N.C. press [24s Oxford]
B or 92 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. Wilson, Woodrow. U.S. Navy 44-40206
For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Josephus Daniels was a zestful man, in love with life and living, who brought to every contact a warmly human interest. That is why his book has in it none of the self-centeredness that marks the usual adventure in autobiography and why it is refreshingly free from the smugness of those diaries in which public figures are so busy painting favorable pictures of themselves that they have no time for other portraiture. Full of lusty anecdote and vivid incident, a panoramic treatment of a stirring era, Mr. Daniels' book is brilliantly alive." George Creel

+ Am Hist R 50:576 Ap '45 900w

"Here is the real inside story of the Wilson administrations, and an authentic and fascinating account of the great progressive movements that led to them, ably written by a man who was secretary of the navy under Wilson for eight years, a distinguished southern educator, a statesman and a liberal Democrat par excellence. Daniels had the most intimate relationship with Wilson for many years and especially while he was in the cabinet. He is the only living member of the Wilson cabinet. He knew every great political leader in America from 1885 to the present day, and he was in close touch with every leader in World War I. Add to this his gift of narrative, his sense of humor, his fairness in his records and appraisals of other men and we have here one of the great source books of American history." W. C. Williams

+ Christian Century 62:143 Ja 31 '45 1050w

Foreign Affairs 23:516 Ap '45 70w

"Probably the most permanently valuable section of the book is the inside story of the politics of the Wilson nomination and administration. There is not much that is new here but there is much that is interesting, and the reflections of Mr. Daniels on the eventful era 'quorum pars magna fuit' will make this a useful book for the political historian, if a little long and detailed for the general reader." D. W. Brogan

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 11 '45 390w

Reviewed by Daniel Aaron

New Repub 112:339 Mr 5 '45 420w

"The present volume treats in typical Daniels fashion—friendly, breezy, vivid, sometimes unfettered by the exact succession of events, yet forward-looking and shrewd in its appraisals—of early contacts with Woodrow Wilson and then of association with him up to our entry into the first World war." R. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 4 '45 800w

"This is an 'inside story,' but it is the inside story of an administration that has been inspected with microscopic attention. Only occasionally, and only in detail, does Mr. Daniels alter the accepted picture of the Wilson administration, but he succeeds, by candour rather than art, in painting a most attractive picture of himself."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p296 Je 23 '45 600w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:22 Mr '45 120w

"Mr. Daniels is writing about himself rather than about Wilson, and he makes no attempt at penetrating interpretation, or even at documentary accuracy. But though his recollections throw little new light on the record of historical events, they do display, with remarkable candor, the personality of a man whom Wilson especially liked and trusted. Although probably not so transparent as his memoir suggests, he was evidently one whose strength lay partly in his marked simplicity." D. M. Potter

+ Yale R n s 35:161 autumn '45 500w

DARK, ELEANOR (O'REILLY) (MRS ERIC DARK). Little company. 392p $2.75 Macmillan

45-3923

"A grave, unemphatic novel in which Australia is the background. The hero, a middle-aged Left Wing writer involved in a grotesquely unhappy marriage, falls half-heartedly in love with an odd, bloodless girl, and the deception that this affair requires brings about a crisis in his relations with his family." New Yorker

"I confess that I thought I wasn't going to like 'The Little Company' as I read the first few pages. I have an admitted prejudice against fiction about writers—or artists of any kind: and this book is about writers with a vengeance, no less than four of them! But I soon found that they were people as well as writers (as writers usually are), and highly interesting ones. As a matter of fact, their activities as writers are treated admirably. Those who write, or want to, can learn something about writing from this book. But its chief value lies in the intense and varying conflicts through which the people of the book live, the reader with them. Their experience is an honest and very discerning sampling of the troubled world of today, one with abundant meaning." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 My 13 '45 360w

Booklist 41:286 Je 1 '45

"All these projections of thought are very stimulating indeed and well expressed, but it is a pity that in the group there is not some intelligent, thinking, practical Christian to show how substantial good faith can help a groping group. Bigots like Massey's nagging wife and his hypocritical Bible-reading father would prejudice any wavering mind."

+ — Cath World 161:282 Je '45 250w

"This is a serious and well written novel and should appeal to all interested in the problems of the spiritual and constructive life in a disordered and seemingly disintegrating age." L. E. Cannon

+ Christian Century 62:1009 S 5 '45 400w

Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 23 '45 40w

"A serious, thoughtful novel of intelligent Australians of the present."

+ Kirkus 13:94 Mr 1 '45 210w

"Well written, thoughtful, but for the mature and experienced reader. Not a love story." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 70:414 My 1 '45 70w

"Above and beyond the flood of cerebration, the author gives us a sense of Australia's freedom and space; glimpses of beauty; interesting British-flavored reactions to current events. She has made an honest effort to analyze the predicament of the creative instinct trapped into immobility by circumstances. To a great extent she is successful in arousing our sympathy for her case, but not her characters; a tribute to her intelligence, rather than to her novel." Jane Martin

+ N Y Times p16 My 20 '45 550w

"Mrs. Dark draws no more startling conclusions about marriage and adultery than she does about Communist ideology, with which the book is considerably concerned, and the novel meanders, though not uninterestingly, to an unclimactic end. The ordinary, uninformed reader probably won't be able to follow much of the author's talk of Australian politics, of which she takes a gloomy view."

New Yorker 21:89 My 12 '45 120w

"The tragedy is admirably told in Miss Dark's newest book. Gilbert Massey's unhappy marriage, his flight into a shortlived hectic affair with an unbalanced young woman, his eldest daughter's death in pregnancy, and the subsequent break-down of his petty-bourgeois wife—all this is extremely well presented, interpreted, and brought to its climax. Unfortunately the author has not been content with portraying an interesting family group. Miss Dark tries her hand at such miscellaneous problems as Australian isolationism, 'One World awareness,' labor policies, communism, and the relationship of art and propaganda. . . No doubt, there is a refreshing naivete in the dialogue of the 'progressive' characters of this book. But this naivete is presented without any trace of irony; it contrasts with the psychological astuteness of most of the well-handled 'inner monologue.' On the other hand, the author lavishes what sense of humor she has on an aged Victorian aunt of the Masseys, who in 'synthetic youthfulness' unseeingly walks through the drama of her family." Robert Pick

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:20 My 12 '45 750w

DARK, ELEANOR—Continued

"This is a book for anyone who likes action served up in terms of mental anguish. Mrs Dark has tackled problems which are the concern of us all, but she has attempted more than any one book can handle. At the expense of clarity and simplicity, she has built personalities, theories, psychological analysis and world events into a complicated structure further imperiled by involved wordage. In the course of her tale the full impact of her message is lost." Margaret Cobb

+ — Springf'd Republican p4d My 6 '45 550w

"Neither the climax of the story nor the penetrating insight with which it is fitfully illumined are enough to integrate 'The Little Company' into a moving novel." Virgilia Sapieha

Weekly Book Review p6 My 13 '45 650w

DAVENPORT, JOHN, and MURPHY, CHARLES JOHN VINCENT. The lives of Winston Churchill; a close up. 88p il $1.50 Scribner

B or 92 Churchill, Winston Leonard Spencer

Brief anecdotal biography of Winston Churchill. More than half of the book is devoted to the war years, and to an estimate of Churchill's character as a man and a leader.

Booklist 42:93 N 15 '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 S 15 '45 120w

"Diamond cut diamond is this résumé of a flashing career by two staff writers well drilled in flashing journalism. My review of the close-up of a great Englishman by Messrs. Davenport and Murphy of Fortune can only be the dot to their exclamation point." E. V. R. Wyatt

Commonweal 42:504 S 7 '45 1400w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p3 Ag 5 '45 850w

"The colorful and dynamic personality and the colorful and dramatic career of Winston Churchill are most interestingly presented in 'The Lives of Winston Churchill.' The authors are members of the editorial staff of Fortune, and 'The Lives' first appeared serially in Fortune's companion magazine, Life. It has been revised and somewhat extended."

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 12 '45 300w

Reviewed by Joseph Barnes

Weekly Book Review p3 Ag 19 '45 180w

Wis Lib Bul 41:100 O '45

DAVENPORT, RUSSELL WHEELER. My country. 62p $1.50 Simon & Schuster

811 44-9156

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Mr. Davenport writes energetically, displays much verbal ingenuity, and makes a strong appeal to readers who might think that conservative, private initiative, grass-roots-and-stone-wall, good old-fashioned Americanism, if printed as verse instead of as an editorial, has a more powerful impact. Certainly it has nothing to recommend it as poetry. It is too topical, too purposeful, and too false. Oddly enough, the more genuine parts of this poem are those that are most nearly realistic, the passages in which Larry's sister and his Buddy speak. When Mr. Davenport speaks in his own voice, he usually attempts to versify prose, and usually fails. Oddly enough, again, one has a creepy distrust of all his talk about big, brave generosity to Poles, Letts, blacks, tans, and yellows. There is a feeling of rather uncomfortable inflation, then at the end of the book a sighing relief and an escaping breath. The author writes of all the right things, but mostly the wrong way." John Holmes

— + Atlantic 175:137 F '45 500w

Bookmark 6:10 Ja '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '45

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 21:279 Jl '45 40w

Reviewed by E. S. Forgotson

Poetry 66:106 My '45 480w

Wis Lib Bul 41:18 Ja '45

DAVID, HANS THEODORE, and MENDEL, ARTHUR, eds. Bach reader; a life of Johann Sebastian Bach in letters and documents. 431p il $6 Norton

B or 92 Bach, Johann Sebastian 45-9905

"This volume contains a collection of the most significant early material on Johann Sebastian Bach. The figure of Bach is here revealed in his own words, in the testimony of his contemporaries, and in the judgments of the generations immediately following his own. The material has been gathered together in one volume for the first time; much of it has never appeared in English before. The items, which in general are presented in chronological order, are coordinated by the essays 'Johann Sebastian Bach, a Portrait in Outline,' and 'The Story of His Fame.' Where explanations were necessary they have been inserted in brackets or given as footnotes. But in general it has been [the] aim to let the original sources speak for themselves." (Pref) Bibliographical notes. Index.

Reviewed by Lucien Price

Atlantic 177:161 Ja '46 360w

Reviewed by Felix Borowski

Book Week p12 N 18 '45 500w

"Musicians and musicologists will be keenly interested in this volume as a documentary record of the life and work of one whom many consider the greatest figure in the history of music."

+ Christian Century 63:19 Ja 2 '46 280w

"By way of warning only, if we may reach for a comparison, the present reviewer (no Bach specialist) must admit having been more entertained by Marcia Davenport's narrative life of Mozart. Of course, the publishers would say we're not publishing our book about music as light entertainment. Quite so. This Bach 'in Letters and Documents' (sub title) must inevitably find a place on a handy shelf in all schools that seriously teach music, in libraries where a good representation of music is wanted and in the homes of many a secret or boastful music lover." John Brubaker

+ Commonweal 43:172 N 30 '45 260w

DAVIES, JOHN. Lower deck; with an introd. by Sir James Somerville. 186p $2 Macmillan

940.545 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English. World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations 45-2585

Account of life on a British destroyer by an officer candidate serving with the crew. The ship herein called the Skye, was part of the force in the eastern Mediterranean which assisted in the defence of Malta.

Kirkus 13:15 Ja 1 '45 110w

"Well written, with quiet humor and economy of phrase, it belongs on the same shelf with the writings of Forester and Monsarrat." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 70:218 Mr 1 '45 110w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 14 '45 180w

"There is a freshness and sincerity about 'Lower Deck' which gave much pleasure to one tired reader of high-pressure war books." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 161:632 D 8 '45 130w

Reviewed by G. P. Griggs

Spec 175:546 D 7 '45 700w

"This is a strong book, as strong, and sometimes as coarse, as the enlisted men of whom the author writes. It is also a beautiful book, and an authentic record of the heroic struggles of gallant ships and no less gallant men." R. A. Brown

+ Springf'd Republican p6 N 8 '45 210w

Times [London] Lit Sup p567 D 1 '45 280w

"The book covers the doings of one gun crew on one British destroyer 'Skye' during one month in the spring of 1942 but in this microcosm an entire naval war stands revealed. The author actually served as a seaman below decks and in the gun crew for almost a year before securing his commission, a common practice in the British Navy. He is well educated and traveled, a teacher by profession, and consequently literate enough, as well as perceptive enough, to write extremely entertainingly about his experiences." P. J. Searles
+ Weekly Book Review p5 S 16 '45 650w

DAVIS, DAVID JAMES, and GOEN, CHESTER HURSTON. Aircraft mechanical drawing. 245p il $2.50 McGraw

744.43 Mechanical drawing. Airplanes—Design and construction 45-1120

"This course has been designed for the student who has had no previous instruction in mechanical drawing or whose skill and understanding of this subject have declined from disuse. Prerequisites are arithmetic and elementary algebra; in addition, geometry, trigonometry, and an acquaintance with manufacturing processes will be found helpful. The knowledge of mechanical drawing gained from this course will serve as a background, enabling the student to study detail drafting and thus qualifying him for a productive position in an aircraft engineering department." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:699 S 1 '44 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:6 Ja '45

DAVIS, DEERING, and others. Georgetown houses of the federal period, Washington, D.C, 1780-1830; foreword by Nancy McClelland. 130p il maps $5 Architectural bk.

975.3 Georgetown, D.C.—Historic houses, etc. Architecture, Domestic 45-589

"Nineteen houses are shown in photographs of exteriors and some interiors. A brief description accompanies each illustration and several chapters give historical and architectural background. A list indicates by street and number most structures built in Georgetown before 1825 and still standing today." Booklist

---

Booklist 41:194 Mr 1 '45
Weekly Book Review p3 Ja 7 '45 270w

DAVIS, EUGENE C. Amateur theater handbook; a complete guide to successful play production. 237p $3 Greenberg

792 Amateur theatricals 45-7723

Practical handbook for the amateur theater director, actor, playwright, or technician. Contents: The theater plant; The production staff; The play; The director prepares; Casting through tryouts; Making yourself up for the part; The play in rehearsal; The performance; The unit set; Stage lighting; Profitable play production. The author is instructor in dramatics at Glenville High school, Cleveland, Ohio. Glossary. Index.

Book Week p6 S 9 '45 150w
Booklist 42:91 N 15 '45
Christian Science Monitor p16 S 29 '45 30w
Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '45

"In clear and deliberately simple language he covers virtually every phase of his field, from what a model amateur theatre plant should be, to how a production can be guided and geared to turn a profit. . . At best, it is an elementary guidebook, a sort of introduction to the more penetrating discussions of the amateur theatre contained, for example, in John Gassner's 'Producing the Play.'" Lewis Funke
+ N Y Times p8 Ja 20 '46 600w

DAVIS, HAROLD EUGENE. Makers of democracy in Latin America. (Inter-American bibliographical and library association. Publications) 124p $1.90 Wilson, H.W.

920 Latin America—Biography. Statesmen, Latin American 45-3638

Brief biographical sketches of Latin American political leaders embedded in an informal history of the course of the movement of liberal reform. Some of the sketches originally appeared in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Partial contents: Simón Bolívar; José de San Martín; Bernardo O'Higgins; Domingo Faustino Sarmiento; Diego José Victor Portales; Benito Pablo Juárez; Francisco Indalecio Madero; Pedro Aguirre Cerda; Lázaro Cárdenas. Index.

Booklist 41:338 Jl 15 '45
Foreign Affairs 24:171 O '45 10w
Special Libraries 36:451 N '45

"At a time when something broader in scope is lacking, these brief journalistic sketches fill a need for biographical material on the great figures of Latin America, past and present. The brief bibliographies, largely of works in English, at the end of each chapter, add to the value of the book."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:59 S '45 120w

DAVIS, MRS HARRIET EAGER, ed. Pioneers in world order; an American appraisal of the League of nations. 272p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

341.1 League of nations. International cooperation. Reconstruction (1914-1939) A45-713

Seventeen essays summarizing the achievements of the League of Nations. Partial contents: The framework of peace, by Arthur Sweetser; Security, by J. T. Shotwell; Disarmament, by L. P. Morgan, with foreword by M. E. Woolley; The world court, by M. O. Hudson; The international labor organization, by Carter Goodrich; Dependent peoples and mandates, by Huntington Gilchrist; Standardizing world statistics, by E. D. Durand; Dangerous drugs, by H. L. May; International health work, by F. G. Boudreau; Refugees, by J. G. McDonald; Social problems, by Elsa Castendyck. Index.

Reviewed by C. A. Berdahl
Am Pol Sci R 39:363 Ap '45 1050w

Reviewed by Clyde Eagleton
Ann Am Acad 240:140 Jl '45 500w

"A book of very real importance and usefulness in all thinking and planning for world organization in the future." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 F 11 '45 90w
Booklist 41:191 Mr 1 '45
Bookmark 6:4 N '45

"This body of material is worth careful study."
+ Christian Century 62:368 Mr 21 '45 110w

Reviewed by E. M. Lynskey
Commonweal 41:522 Mr 9 '45 500w

"Since the volume reviews from various angles the history of international relations during the twentieth century, it is of inestimable value also as a source of current history. A fine index adds to the usefulness of the book as an indispensable reference work." E. E. Aubrey
+ Crozer Q 22:176 Ap '45 350w
Current Hist 8:249 Mr '45 100w
Foreign Affairs 23:511 Ap '45 20w

Reviewed by F. H. Soward
Pacific Affairs 18:193 Je '45 280w

"Each of its sixteen chapters is written by a specialist, and the total effect is really quite impressive. It is easy to forget, in our present relapse into international anarchy, the progress that was made in the second and third decades of this century, and the amount of practically useful work that was done by the League of Nations, and by various organizations connected with it. Perhaps the most interesting chapter of all in this interesting book is Professor Shotwell's on 'Security.' No one, of course, is better qualified to write on this subject than the man who, more than any other American in the field of scholarship, has labored to make effective the collaboration of nations." Dexter Perkins

DAVIS, H. E., ed.—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 28:11 Mr 10 '45 1550w

"The scope and variety of the League's work as described in this book will doubtless also astonish most American readers. The record is impressive. Chapter after chapter gives a clear, concise and usually readable account of the work done in fields as widely divergent as labor, disarmament, economics and finance, the opium traffic, public health, to mention only a few. Yet the more one reads, the more inescapable is the conclusion that all these problems are interrelated, and insoluble without international cooperation and world peace." R. B. Pease
+ Springf'd Republican p4d F 11 '45 1050w

Reviewed by H. H. Moorhead
Survey G 34:448 N '45 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p315 Jl 7 '45 360w

"This volume will assist all types of readers in securing a grasp of the problems involved in the establishment of international administrative agencies. It will also assist readers in reaching a decision as to the type of world organization to be established at the close of World War II."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:32 Mr '45 240w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon
Weekly Book Review p10 Ja 21 '45 500w

DAVIS, HASSOLDT. Half past when; an American with the Fighting French. 283p il $3 Lippincott

940.5344 World war, 1939—France. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. France—Free French movement 44-9861

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Booklist 41:183 F 15 '45

Foreign Affairs 23:515 Ap '45 30w

"A remarkable service is performed by Hassoldt Davis's latest book. Although its picaresque quality may at times disguise its pertinence, the story it tells has a direct bearing on present developments of the French attitude. Brazzaville seems far removed from the political convolutions of Paris at the moment, but in Africa were established many emotional currents now merging into the sometimes ambiguous policies of the De Gaulle government. Mr. Davis has depicted the flowering of these emotions with a vivid candor that simplifies for the American reader a complex phase of the war. His account is authentic, because it is written from the inside." John Latouche
+ Sat R of Lit 28:32 F 17 '45 600w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 6 '45 250w

DAVIS, JULIA (MRS PAUL WEST). The Shenandoah; il. by Frederic Taubes. (Rivers of America) 374p $2.50 Farrar

917.559 Shenandoah valley 45-8434

History and legend, anecdote and description are interwoven in this volume on a river and the valley it shaped, famous in the annals of America.

Booklist 42:161 Ja 15 '46

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds
Christian Science Monitor p16 N 5 '45 700w

Kirkus 13:357 Ag 15 '45 130w

"Another most entertaining addition to the worthwhile 'River series.'. . It is so delightfully written that, when the end comes, one wishes more detail had been given for the years following the Civil War. It is hoped that the author will write more for this series. Heartily recommended for all libraries." E. F. Kelly
+ Library J 70:977 O 15 '45 100w

"The book is a good introduction to the Valley. Miss Davis writes as the ladies of the Valley talk, mixing facts, anecdotes and gossip, as though they were one—which they may well be. At all events, the total effect is sound and achieves a truthfulness that formal history might easily miss." N. K. Burger
+ N Y Times p16 Ja 13 '46 650w

"If at times Miss Davis's rhetoric becomes a bit heavy, if her straining for 'poetic' language is at times a little obvious, it is a fault in which any one who has come under the fascination of the Shenandoah will willingly indulge her. This is a book for the natives of the valley, and for the hundreds of thousands who visit it by way of the Skyline Drive." Coleman Rosenberger
+ Weekly Book Review p4 N 11 '45 1100w

DAVIS, KENNETH SYDNEY. Soldier of democracy; a biography of Dwight Eisenhower. 566p $3.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Eisenhower, Dwight David 45-37893

A full-length biography which carries Dwight Eisenhower thru the years of his youth and his manhood, down to the day he returned to his home town in Kansas after the war was won. Index.

"This is a fine, honest book about a fine, honest man, and because the man himself is never dull the book is never dull. Biographers of a hundred years from now will use 'Soldier of Democracy' as a basis when they write their stories of Gen. Eisenhower, but it is doubtful that even the advantage the perspective of time will give them will result in anything better than this." Quentin Reynolds
+ Book Week p16 D 2 '45 950w

Booklist 42:163 Ja 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 8 '46 550w

Reviewed by W. P. Sears
Churchman 160:16 Ja 15 '46 240w

Kirkus 13:462 O 15 '45 170w

"Mr. Davis apparently has given some thought to his work and a bit of time. And for the first time, in the opinion of this no doubt biased observer, there emerges a picture of Dwight Eisenhower as a human being. It's something of a relief to be able to feel proud of a man and still know what you're proud of. There is plenty of evidence that Mr. Davis was close to his principal source, and his own reaction throughout the book is convincing. . . The criticism of the book, of course, will be directed against its frank one-sidedness. The author gives you a portrait of a man who never muffed a play as a diplomat, politician or soldier. But when you look at the matter dispassionately, what else was he to do? What were the errors?" R. J. Casey
+ N Y Times p7 D 9 '45 1400w

"In his search for material, the author was apparently exposed to a great many people who suffer from total recall, and he has faithfully transcribed everything he was told. In other words, a fairly prolix biography of a soldier celebrated for his brevity and conciseness."
New Yorker 21:82 D 22 '45 120w

"Kenneth Davis's 'Soldier of Democracy' is a vital and human portrait of an extraordinary leader." Henry Christman
+ Sat R of Lit 28:52 D 1 '45 1500w

Springf'd Republican p4d D 9 '45 750w

"Having worked so hard on his project, Mr. Davis might have worked a bit harder and boiled his book down. This is a good biography, but if it has one fault it is that there is excessive wordage, particularly in the early chapters where Mr. Davis attempts to read the minds of Eisenhower's long departed ancestors. Then, too, Mr. Davis—perhaps understandably—worships the general almost to the point of idolatry. . . Anyway, Eisenhower is an important American in peace as in war, and the public cannot learn too much about him. Until the war's secret diaries and memoirs are published the public is not likely to learn much more than is herein contained." Joseph Driscoll
+ — Weekly Book Review p4 D 16 '45 1400w

DAVIS, MRS LAVINIA (RIKER). Evidence unseen. 189p $2 Doubleday
45-3921

Spy story with Atlantic City for a background.

"Best of the week."
+ Boston Globe p17 My 9 '45 50w
Kirkus 13:45 F 1 '45 60w

"This is a spy story and an uncommonly good one." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p16 Ap 15 '45 110w

"Soft-boiled and agreeable enough for the most part." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p16 My 6 '45 60w

DAVIS, MRS LAVINIA (RIKER). A sea between. 266p $2 Doubleday
45-3449

Novel for older girls. It describes the character development of a nineteen-year-old, Priscilla, when her first fiancé proves unreliable. Prilly goes to stay with the aged French aunt of a recently met young officer, and finds the solution to all her problems in the New Jersey seacoast town. The time is the present.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p11 S 9 '45 230w

"A frankly written love story for older girls, holding interest for them from the first page. It is straightforward, free from sentimentality, realistic in the portrayal of a present-day girl under twenty who must make vital decisions and often experience the sorrow of separation in wartime. . . This is the strongest book Mrs Davis has written and girls will like it."
+ Horn Bk 21:196 My '45 110w

"Not up to Lavinia Davis' usual standard, this is a second rate romance."
Kirkus 13:35 Ja 15 '45 50w

"Fine, unsentimental, honest story of young people faced with the problems of long separation and adaptation to wartime living. . . Author understands young people thoroughly and has written a story that should be widely popular with girls in their late teens." Dorotha Dawson
+ Library J 70:356 Ap 15 '45 80w

"Girls will like and believe in Prilly, in her problems and experiences, which are being repeated today in millions of variations." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p26 Mr 25 '45 230w

"This is a fine novel and a beautiful love story. Had it been published as a novel, it would have been accepted for what it is—an interesting and thoroughly honest study of a problem, the emotional struggles of a girl who typifies so many young women with whose lives the war has played such havoc. However this has been classified as a book for older girls. As such, there may be some controversy over it. . . With the characters and the love story itself so important one is apt to forget another quality in the book that adds to its value—the locale so near the sea, the joy in the seashore at all seasons, and the brisk clean fragrance of the wind." R. A. Hill
+ Sat R of Lit 28:36 My 19 '45 600w

"In time of war young girls grow up rapidly, dreams become definite, and love is no longer on the horizon. Unmistakably written for young girls, the story has this sense of immediacy: if Prilly falls out of love and into it again with rapidity, it is because there is no time to lose. The tale is young, thoughtful, and touchingly sincere."
+ Weekly Book Review p6 My 20 '45 400w
Wis Lib Bul 41:86 Jl '45

DAVIS, MRS LAVINIA (RIKER). Very special pet; pictures by Kurt Weise. [25p] 50c Grosset

Story of a very gallant small boy and his beloved pet, a crow which he had rescued.

Kirkus 13:201 My 1 '45 120w

"This is a small but heart-warming story of one of those critical moments in childhood when character is made." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p23 Ag 5 '45 130w
Wis Lib Bul 41:86 Jl '45

DAVIS, MAC. Jews fight too! il. by Howard Simon; with an introd. by James M. Curley. 221p $2 Hebrew pub.
940.5404 World war, 1939-1945—Jews
45-1241

Brief stories about the part played in World war II by Jewish fighters of all types—from a brave old rabbi to a girl poet-guerrilla fighter. Contains a list of honors and awards.

Foreign Affairs 23:692 Jl '45 10w

"Some are reticent, heartfelt examples of tolerance. Some names are already world famous, some will find here their only memorial beyond the memory of comrades. The book is rounded by a sixty-four-page, small-type list of honors and awards. It should be in every library that struggles to preserve democracy."
+ Weekly Book Review p10 Je 17 '45 280w

DAVIS, MALVIN E. Industrial life insurance in the United States. 399p il $2.75 McGraw 368.4 Insurance, Industrial. Insurance, Life
44-7856

"Here is a comprehensive discussion of the various aspects of the branch of life insurance developed specifically to meet the needs of lower-income families and the part it plays in the social economy of the nation. In simple, non-technical language, the book tells how industrial life insurance functions, describes the needs it is intended to serve, and analyzes how it serves them and what it costs. It discusses the current practices of major companies, with special emphasis on recent developments, making available for the first time much specific information on practices and experiences." (Management R) Index.

Reviewed by J. B. Maclean
Am Econ R 35:462 Je '45 1500w

"Mr. Davis has given a systematic and scholarly presentation of industrial life insurance." R. C. White
+ Am Soc R 10:114 F '45 350w

Reviewed by Alfred Manes
Ann Am Acad 238:221 Mr '45 310w
Booklist 41:164 F 1 '45

"The individual buyer of insurance and the student of business or family economics will be interested in this book. In general, it is too technical for high school use except for chapters on 'The Provisions of the Policy' and 'Family Insurance Programs.' . . Written by an associate actuary of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, the book contains only a reasonable amount of defensive propaganda, particularly in view of the fact that to some extent it constitutes a reply to contemporary criticism." L. M. Easson
J Home Econ 37:235 Ap '45 220w
Management R 33:469 D '44 100w

"A much-needed, non-technical study of industrial life insurance, which business librarians have long wanted, as an aid to reference work and a textbook for employees and students."
+ Special Libraries 35:462 N '44

DAVIS, MAXINE (MRS J. M. MCHUGH). Woman's medical problems. (Whittlesey house publication) 220p $2 McGraw 613 Woman—Health and hygiene. Woman—Diseases
SG45-7

Clearcut information on the symptoms, treatment and cure of typically feminine diseases. Partial contents: Pregnancy; Abortion; Childbirth; Caesarian births; Convalescence from pregnancy; Contraception; Sterility; Syphilis; Gonorrhea; Cancer; Menopause. Index.

DAVIS, MAXINE—Continued
Reviewed by R. L. Dickinson
Am J Pub Health 35:1330 D '45 250w

"This book comes like a clean, fresh breeze to sweep away the old wives' tales and fear that lurk in the minds of women. And like a spring breeze, it brings new hope. 'Female troubles,' they were once called and the phrase was synonymous with a nameless terror. Maxine Davis, in clear and understandable language but with complete authority, nevertheless, lets in the clear light of scientific knowledge and banishes that terror." Ruth Crowley
+ Book Week p10 Ap 8 '45 270w
Booklist 41:249 My 1 '45

"For the non-scientific layman, a generalized book about gynecological and obstetrical matters, which does not presume too much, and is sound in information and advice, disposing of many prevalent fictions."
+ Kirkus 13:99 Mr 1 '45 90w

"Any given doctor could probably find individual statements in the book with which he disagreed, but few will quarrel with Miss Davis's purpose—the presentation in simple, familiar language of the latest information on subjects that, until comparatively recently, were mentioned only in whispers and too often, veiled in mystery, superstition and picturesque but inaccurate folklore." W. H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 30 '45 400w

DAVIS, ROBERT. Gid Granger; il. by Charles Banks Wilson. 179p $2 Holiday 45-10644

Gid Granger, a Vermont farm boy, takes over the working of his mother's farm when his older brother has to go to war. Gid is so successful that when the brother returns with other ideas for his own future, Gid's dream is realized. He takes over the farm for good. For older boys.

Booklist 42:169 Ja 15 '46
Kirkus 13:437 O 1 '45 90w

"Current in plot and thought, a strong American story, and certainly this Gid seems to be a descendant of the Gid Granger of W. O. Stoddard." K. H. McAlarney
+ Library J 70:1191 D 15 '45 80w

"Mr. Davis' story is well knit, his characters real. He clearly pictures rural Vermont and a self-reliant boy." A. T. E.
+ N Y Times p13 D 16 '45 50w

DAVISON, MRS MARGUERITE (PORTER). Handweaver's pattern book. 128p il $6.50 The author, Swarthmore looms, box 299, Swarthmore, Pa.
745.52 Weaving. Textile design 44-13950

"Over 200 patterns are arranged by type, such as twill, basket, huck-a-back, and Swedish lace, and are illustrated with photographs of actual weaving and with diagrammatic sketches. The book itself is limited to four-harness patterns to be woven on a 16-inch warp, on table or floor model looms, but the patterns may also be adapted to larger looms. Many of the patterns are original, others are gathered from widespread sources. Bibliography: p. 7-9." Booklist

Booklist 41:120 D 15 '44

"This book has many features that make it considerably better than the average pattern book. It is completely accurate, a triumph where so many patterns and directions are given. It shows a great variety of patterns, many of them new. In addition to standard old patterns, there are interesting original patterns by the author and favorite patterns of other leading presentday weavers. Mrs. Davison has also taken the trouble to revive unusual old patterns not generally reproduced in pattern books. . . We are glad to recommend this book to individual weavers and to all schools where weaving is taught." Marian Heard and Mary Charlton
+ J Home Econ 37:592 N '45 250w

DAVISON, SIR RONALD CONWAY. Remobilisation for peace. (Target for tomorrow) 55p il $1.50 Transatlantic [4s 6d Pilot]
940.53144 Reconstruction (1939-)—Great Britain A44-4611

"To accomplish the transition from war to peace is a short-term problem in the broad perspective of reconstruction, but it may well take as long and prove as stressful a process as full mobilisation for war. . . Here Sir Ronald Davison discusses the most vital aspect of the transition problem: how best to readapt half our population to the economy of peace. He gives a clear account of the tasks involved, the mistakes to be avoided, and the provision already made, examines the relevance of wartime controls, and makes some useful suggestions of his own. The book is decorated with first-rate documentary photographs." Manchester Guardian

Booklist 41:239 Ap 15 '45
Foreign Affairs 23:699 Jl '45 30w
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 21 '44 180w

"Sir Ronald's book is a very useful contribution to popular understanding of the shape of things to come in the near future."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p362 Jl 29 '44 420w

DAY, ROBERT. All out for the sack race! $2.50 Random house 741.5 Caricatures and cartoons. Humor, Pictorial 45-8545

Collection of cartoons selected from Mr. Day's New Yorker contributions.

Kirkus 13:417 S 15 '45 50w

"In Day's 'All Out for the Sack Race!,' he has created his world without resorting to any eccentricities of drawing. There is no affectation of crudeness or ineptness. You get the impression that Mr. Day is drawing as well as he can. He is the leading authority on the rounded chin, sloping shoulders, and the receding hair line. He can make a sack suit look sackier than anyone else, and even his coat lapels are eloquently absurd. His limp and unpressed people behave always with as much flair as they can muster." Ray Duncan
+ Sat R of Lit 28:26 O 20 '45 500w
Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p5 D 2 '45 180w

DAY-LEWIS, CECIL (NICHOLAS BLAKE, pseud). Short is the time; poems 1936-1943. 98p $2.25 Oxford 821 45-5632

This volume contains the poems previously published in England in two volumes: Overtures to Death (1938) and World over All (1943).

Booklist 42:10 S '45

"A narrative, 'The Nabara,' gets rather out of hand and would be better restricted to fewer details. The shorter lyrics are examples of excellent workmanship, combined with genuine fervor." Pearl Strachan
+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 11 '45 250w

"There are many good things in this volume, which is marred only by a certain fuzziness of metaphor. This fault, however, is merely occasional, however much it may militate against many of these poems being long remembered."
+ — Commonweal 42:414 Ag 10 '45 280w

"The poems are skillful, intellectual, disillusioned. There is a gift for words and the tradition is the highly trained and literate one of the English universities. But the content is somehow thin, and does not arouse that indignation which the poet intends."
+ — Kirkus 13:150 Ap 1 '45 90w

"The poetry in 'Short Is the Time' seems to acknowledge that since it cannot be great it has to be good. Much of it is exceedingly well written, and even though the effectiveness of the poems is more in the part than in the whole, they testify to an observant and cultivated mind." F. W. Dupee

+ Nation 161:380 O 13 '45 500w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
New Repub 113:167 Ag 6 '45 700w

"When Lewis can stay away from the rhetorical flourish, keep to the proper materials of which he has no lack, submit to the discipline of his form, and let the hot metal of enthusiasm be poured into firm molds instead of splashing all over the shop, he can write first-rate poetry." R. B. Heilman
+ — N Y Times p5 Ag 5 '45 1400w

"Day-Lewis, a comrade-in-arms of Auden and Spender in the crusading days of his youth, quickly fell back into the upholstered ease of old-fashioned rhetoric and has been lost to the van for some time. He is still, however, capable of a lovely song, and some of the simpler and more realistic pieces of verse in this new book are very moving."
New Yorker 21:71 Jl 28 '45 90w

Reviewed by Howard Moss
Poetry 67:96 N '45 1200w

Reviewed by W. R. Benét
Sat R of Lit 28:27 Ag 25 '45 900w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 5 '45 270w

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner
Weekly Book Review p6 S 23 '45 900w

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer
Yale R n s 35:335 winter '46 350w

DE ALARCON, PEDRO ANTONIO. See Alarcon, P. A. de

DEAN, AMBER. Chanticleer's muffled crow. 187p $2 Doubleday 45-8182

Detective story.

Kirkus 13:304 Jl 15 '45 60w

"The book is an entertaining combination of small-town friendliness and complicated plot." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p20 S 2 '45 130w

"Entertaining."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:30 S 8 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p9 S 2 '45 180w

DEAN, GRAHAM M. Wings over the desert; il. by Wesley Dennis. 224p $2 Viking 45-35211

"The story of a young reporter in Nevada who, after Pearl Harbor, joined the Civil Air Patrol. There is exciting action against Japanese saboteurs and a detailed account of his training as a flyer." Sat R of Lit

---

Booklist 42:78 N 1 '45

"Besides being a compelling story, Wings Over the Desert has the value of providing authentic information about the important, but little known, rescue service freely given by volunteers in the West. The drawings ably support the text." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:459 N '45 90w

Kirkus 13:424 S 15 '45 80w

"More than an adventure story, this is a thrilling review of the heroic air operations of the CAP. Several good chapters on learning how to fly combined with some very interesting newspaper action. For older boys and girls." H. M. Brogan
+ Library J 70:1093 N 15 '45 70w

N Y Times p8 D 30 '45 90w

Sat R of Lit 28:74 N 10 '45 40w

DEAN, JOHN PEEBLES. Home ownership: is it sound? foreword by Robert S. Lynd. 215p $2.50 Harper

331.833 Housing 45-2849

An attempt to answer the question: Is home ownership always the best thing for the American family? Author examines the publicity and advertising that have made the American public anxious to buy or build their own homes, shows how often the drives have originated in selfish interests and how many families were worse off because they succumbed to the "Own your own home" appeal.

"Perhaps a major lack of the book is too little attention to the other side of the picture—the alternative to home ownership, namely, rental housing. Why is it so unpopular that families in such large numbers express a desire to escape from it? . . Until some of these questions are answered satisfactorily, warnings about the pitfalls of home ownership are a voice in the wilderness. But if such analyses as those of Dr. Dean can stimulate some constructive thought and action on these problems, the voice will not have been raised in vain." H. C. Monchow
+ — Am Econ R 35:733 S '45 1100w

"A book like this has long been needed and it could be widely used. . . The only element that militates against the widespread usefulness of Mr. Dean's book is that he has not been able to make up his mind whether he is writing a scholarly thesis for the urban sociologist or a book to put in the hand of Joe Doakes or GI Joe to weigh against the 'How to Buy a Home' literature." C. S. Ascher
+ — Ann Am Acad 240:182 Jl '45 450w

"This is a refreshing and engaging book in which the author, a professor of sociology at Queens College, New York, undertakes to debunk the sentimental propaganda in favor of home ownership issued by the multifarious interests which profit from it." Robert Lasch
+ Book Week p7 Ap 1 '45 230w

Booklist 41:232 Ap 15 '45

'This is an easy-to-understand presentation of extensive and painstaking research on home ownership done by a man who teaches sociology at Queens College, New York. . . Valuable explanatory charts and references are included." V. H. Weaver
+ J Home Econ 37:362 Je '45 250w

"There are some revealing statements in this book, which unfortunately is written in a way to discourage the possibility of general reading on the part of those who might need the warning. Its probable market is those who are interested in housing trends."
Kirkus 13:26 Ja 15 '45 210w

Library J 70:490 My 15 '45 30w

"Dr. Dean's study of home ownership arrives as a timely, fresh and important contribution in a field in which most of the literature consists of the exhortations of special-interest groups. It is essential reading for every citizen, since home ownership is one of America's most deeply vested emotions. . . The author's recommendations are sound enough, as far as they go. What seems to be needed first is a good clean congressional investigation of the whole sordid business, and there are enough facts in this little book to warrant it." Charles Abrams
+ — New Repub 112:563 Ap 23 '45 1150w

"There is much in this analysis of the home-ownership problem to give mortgage men and builders pause or excite them to debate. There is much also which they might study profitably for planning and marketing the homes of tomorrow." Lee Cooper
N Y Times p22 Je 17 '45 600w

" 'Home Ownership, Is It Sound?' is full of facts, authoritative opinions and quotations. It requires close reading, but for prospective home owners its perusal may be money saved and heartache averted. It may also be enlightening to others in the real estate and finance fields. It does not solve all the thorny problems of the ill-housed, but it does assemble a great deal of pertinent information.' Julius Meltzer
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d Je 17 '45 300w

"A little more caution in home buying as here advocated may be step number one to prevent a duplication of the flood of foreclosures that followed the building boom of the Twenties, to say nothing of the unnecessary heartaches that befell thousands of families. Dr. Dean has rendered a real public service in putting this whole question of home ownership under the microscope." L. D. Lasker

DEAN, J. P.—Continued

+ Survey 81:198 Jl '45 500w

Wis Lib Bul 41:65 Je '45

DEAN, LEON W. I become a ranger. 240p $2 Farrar

45-1954

Novel of the French and Indian war for high school age. The hero is David Merrick who joined Roger's Rangers in revenge when he came from England to join his family and found only a burned cabin and two graves. In the course of his adventures David was captured twice, rescued his sister, and discovered that his parents had been taken to Montreal.

Reviewed by F. N. Litten
Book Week p14 Je 3 '45 200w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:277 Jl '45 80w

Kirkus 13:66 F 1 '45 150w

"Recommended." H. M. Brogan
+ Library J 70:534 Je 1 '45 80w

"Not recommended unless there is need for historical stories of this period." Marian Herr
— Library J 70:534 Je 1 '45 70w

"A rugged story of violent times, of men who earned their glory by unyielding courage. The pseudo-archaic style is somewhat irritating but even that doesn't hold up the action and boys will be pleased that there isn't a smidgen of romance to blur it." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Ap 8 '45 180w

"This ferment, this change seething through the period of the French and Indian War keep the story going rather than the plot, which is light; the narrative hurls a young reader into the forest and leaves him with a vivid idea of what went on there. What did go on had an influence on our history that entitles it to place in fiction for young folks." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 1 '45 330w

DE CHAIR, SOMERSET STRUBEN. The golden carpet. 252p $3.50 Harcourt [15s Faber]

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—East (Near East). World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English 45-9011

An account of the British expedition to Baghdad in 1941, and the campaign in Syria which followed it. The book originally appeared in England as two separate titles: The Golden Carpet, and The Silver Crescent, in small limited editions. Index.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 172:127 S '43 200w

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson
Book Week p5 O 21 '45 400w

Booklist 42:73 N 1 '45

"The story is well told, but it is no Revolt in the Desert. Without being in any way comparable with that literary tour de force, it records a military achievement of importance out of proportion to the numbers engaged, and it is full of the magic flavor of the Arab East."
+ Christian Century 62:1233 N 7 '45 130w

Reviewed by Lawrence Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p12 O 22 '45 550w

"In spite of the historic background and the strategical importance of Brigadier Kingstone's smart action, 'The Golden Carpet' is not a book of high caliber. The descriptions of landscape and people are like that of an unimaginative travel book, they make any reference to Lawrence an impudent blasphemy. . . It is the author's own fault if we do him injustice by measuring his mediocre personality against a man of Lawrence's caliber. Taken as an average war report his book is not without interesting information and merit." Max Fischer
— + Commonweal 43:215 D 7 '45 550w

"Much of it is extraordinarily fascinating reading; but it differs so from the brilliant highlighting of American reportage that as one reads, it seems often to drag. The record ends with the narrator's own wounding at the unsuccessful onslaught on Palmyra. There's one section—devoted to the ticklish period of skeleton occupation of Baghdad, that throws some needed light on the troubled areas of the Near East—areas where civil strife is still close to the surface. But in the main, this is a record of an isolated campaign—one that in the future may well be bracketed with Lawrence's Revolt in the Desert, to which sections of this book bear unmistakable resemblances."
+ Kirkus 13:332 Ag 1 '45 300w

"De Chair's narrative of this heroic march is not a complete history, but is a thrilling account of English forces working against great odds. It is told in the T. E. Lawrence tradition. The Golden Carpet easily may become a minor Revolt in the Desert and is recommended for all libraries." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 70:889 O 1 '45 100w

Reviewed by B. I. Evans
Manchester Guardian p3 D 13 '44 550w

"Exciting as it sometimes is, 'The Golden Carpet' contains no trace of the deep thrill of the 'Seven Pillars.' There is vigor in the telling, though the intrusion of meaningless detail is oftentimes an annoyance. The desert, which almost always compels the true artist to evolve a special style, has had no such effect on De Chair. And, indeed, the desert is strangely missing from this book, the style of which is racy and practical, though frequently marred by patches of really bad writing. There is little of that portrayal of character which is so fascinating in Lawrence." Ralph Bates
+ — Nation 161:666 D 15 '45 360w

"It has no claim to stand by the side of Arabia Deserta, and it hardly stands up to the Seven Pillars. It is a lively and very interesting book about an interesting episode in the present war. It is first-class 'reportage,' which is a modern and slightly bogus term for what our innocent fathers called journalism. . . The portraits which he draws of his fellow-officers are amusing and, for the victims, sometimes uncomfortably frank. After the fall of Bagdad he went north with the column and was severely wounded in the action against the French at Palmyra. Some of the best pages in his book describe the sufferings of the wounded in the muddle and confusion which were a distressing feature of that part of the campaign." Leonard Woolf
+ New Statesman & Nation 28:425 D 23 '44 420w

"The author is bold, enterprising, active, resourceful and eager. But his Boswellian curiosity, native conceit and complete self-revelation (which often make delightful reading) are not matched by Boswell's ability to get outside himself and see others clearly." D. A. Stauffer
N Y Times p5 O 14 '45 2000w

"An exciting, well-written, fully documented work that describes one of the least known and most remarkable campaigns of the war. . . [It is] one of the few substantial contributions to literature produced by the recent war."
+ New Yorker 21:106 O 13 '45 200w

" 'The Golden Carpet' may interest military historians. Anyone else will find it tough and completely unrewarding going." Merle Miller
— + Sat R of Lit 28:28 N 3 '45 700w

"It is a fascinating and well-told story. . . Here is the whole story now made available to the general public for the first time, and it is a story in the tradition of T. E. Lawrence, and one worthy to take its place in the history of British soldiers' heroic campaigns in the Near East. It is beautifully produced, with adequate maps, and has as appendix a commentary by Glubb Pasha, the leader of the famous Desert Patrol."
+ Spec 173:536 D 22 '44 130w

"Mr. de Chair is a young man with a rosy vision. He has one eye on the war—although his claims are modest, it is clear he was an excellent Intelligence Officer—and the other on the pictorial aspects of conflict in an antique land. . . But he has written a vivacious narrative of a comparatively small but highly important side-show of the world war."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p325 Jl 10 '43 1200w

"Here is no 'Revolt in the Desert,' no disclosing the Arab mind, no unfolding of a strategic panorama. What does distinguish the book and gives it more than ephemeral worth is the completeness (I suspect not always intentionally) with which British soldiers are put on view." P. J. Searles
Weekly Book Review p2 O 14 '45 1100w

DEEPING, WARWICK. Reprieve. 274p $2.50 Dial press [9s 6d Cassell]
45-6317

A thoroly weary, henpecked Englishman is told that he has but six months to live. He settles his affairs and sets out to see a little of the world before he dies, but he finds life instead of death.

Reviewed by George Wiswell
Book Week p9 Jl 1 '45 400w
Kirkus 13:260 Je 15 '45 110w

"Mr. Deeping's prose is slightly overflowing. He sweeps his characters over difficulties which would floor ordinary people. In its design the book seems unrelated to time or space; it is a little difficult to believe even of halcyon prewar days that such people met and had 'such brave, true things' to say to each other and all the time." F. W. L.
N Y Times p12 Jl 22 '45 180w

"This is the time-honoured escape story complete with charming girl on the cross-Channel boat, and told in Mr. Warwick Deeping's most persuasive manner. 'Reprieve' runs so smoothly and readably that the fact that the ending is given away in the title doesn't really matter a bit."
Times [London] Lit Sup p305 Je 30 '45 60w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p10 Jl 22 '45 180w

DEERING, FERDIE. USDA, manager of American agriculture. 213p il $2.50 Univ. of Okla. press
630.6173 U.S. Agriculture, Department of Agr 45-370

"An appraisal of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, pointing out its shortcomings and the reasons therefor, and outlining a scheme for reorganization so that the Department may really serve the farmers of America to the fullest extent. The main reason for inefficiency is multiplicity of bureaus and offices within the Department and consequently overlapping of duties, with the result that the farmer is given the 'run-around' when he seeks advice or assistance." Library J

Booklist 42:123 D 15 '45

"Calm and sensible." L. R. Etzkorn
+ Library J 70:1086 N 15 '45 140w

"This forthright book from a Western farm outpost is valuable. It will help keep things moving. And when Ferdie Deering throws his sombrero into the world's ring and shouts that American farmers with their fresher soils and mechanized skills can farm for the world market with no crouching behind tariff walls—no crouching for them and no crouching for industry—why, then, that is the kind of free competitive spirit one can unreservedly admire." Russell Lord
+ Sat R of Lit 29:16 Ja 19 '46 800w

DEES, BOWEN CAUSEY. Fundamentals of physics and their applications in modern life. (New home lib) 486p il 69c Blakiston
530 Physics 45-3749

"This book presents the essentials of the whole field of Physics. It has been planned for those who have not taken up the subject before, and for those who are familiar with the work of physicists in such outstanding developments as power-driven machines, electric lighting, telephone, aviation, radio, and electronics but who have not studied the fundamental principles and facts and methods which explain how and why these devices and inventions work. . . The book is divided into two parts. Part One deals with the Fundamentals of Physics; Part Two is devoted to Physics in Modern Life." Pref

---

Booklist 41:271 My 15 '45
Library J 70:490 My 15 '45 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:27 Ap '45
Special Libraries 36:208 Jl '45

"While this book is intended for those who have never studied physics before, it is not a simple book, but one to be studied carefully. It is written clearly and interestingly. Many of the discussions are very incomplete; for example, the electron microscope, radar, Diesel engine and others. If the reader's interest in these topics is aroused, he can, of course, find out more about them in advanced books. . . On the whole, it is an interesting book and should serve to introduce the reader to the subject." R. W. Cobb
+ — Springf'd Republican p4 Je 18 '45 280w

DE HUSZAR, GEORGE BERNARD. See Huszar, G. B. de

DEJONG, DAVID CORNEL. Somewhat angels. 218p $2.50 Reynal
45-9495

"This story centers around Mrs. Brain, mother of three sons who are in the Army and the four women who are close to these men. Terry is the wife of Raven, the oldest; Valerie, the wife of Vincent, the second; Suzan, the wife, and Henrietta, the mistress of Paul, the youngest, whom Mrs. Brain acquired as a stepson in her second marriage. In a manner of speaking, Mrs. Brain, a woman in her late fifties, is the photographic plate upon which the images of the four younger women are cast. It is she who, with a mature mind and discerning eye, sits on the sidelines and watches the impact of the war upon her daughters-in-law and the girl who is in love with Paul." Weekly Book Review

---

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hawes
Book Week p1 N 4 '45 1250w

"Often apt and acute, this is also distasteful and quite dull."
— + Kirkus 13:279 Jl 1 '45 170w

"Skillfully written by a novelist of good reputation, but likely to be found unpalatable by some readers." H. W. Hart
Library J 70:890 O 1 '45 50w
New Repub 113:877 D 24 '45 60w

"The defeat of the novel is not obscured by the wit. In a novel of manners, the judgment of the author must somehow transcend the judgment of even the author's most favored characters. In approving so heartily of Mrs. Brain and of Terry, and in allowing their values to measure the values of the other characters, the book loses its potentialities for serious satire. This is especially true since Mrs. Brain emerges as rather smug in her vast understanding, and is in her way an even more possessive mother than the mother both she and Mr. DeJong are so happy that she is not." Ruth Page
+ — N Y Times p3 N 11 '45 400w

"The story, a 'deft satire,' according to the publishers, mixes sentimentality with a present-day species of realism (generally sexual) in a lurid but successful series of vignettes of the females involved."
New Yorker 21:104 N 3 '45 100w

"The author tracks his game with weighted boots and whacks at them with a bludgeon. Too often phrases intended to be witty lumber along with ponderous awkwardness. And the scenes probably designed to épater les bourgeois, scenes concerned with bedroom and bathroom activities, drinking parties and oddities of sex, have about as much fizz and taste as

DEJONG, D. C.—Continued
stale champagne. . . The reader will be titillated, if at all, by the unadulterated acridity of the tale, by its raw and mordant attacks on those civilians, mostly women, who cheated or lived uselessly despite 'the misfortune of all the poor stupid, dying, humbled, hurt and fighting men in Europe and Asia.'" Grace Frank
— Sat R of Lit 28:52 N 17 '45 500w

"The story that Mr. De Jong tells is warm with understanding; his characters hold the essence of individuality. The book is fun to read, but beneath the fun there is a very shrewd evaluation of the female of the species in action on the home front." Rose Feld
+ Weekly Book Review p4 N 4 '45 850w

DE JONG, DOLA (MRS JAN HOOWIJ). And the field is the world; tr. from the Dutch by A. v. A. van Duym. 215p $2.50 Scribner 45-9486

A novel based on the idea that all wars are the hardest on the children of the world. The story is of a group of refugee children, picked up in Germany, France, Poland, and Belgium, by a Dutch couple, who took them to North Africa. The book is made up of the interwoven stories of these refugees as they struggle to make a living.

Reviewed by Clip Boutell
Book Week p16 O 28 '45 350w
Booklist 42:110 D 1 '45
Kirkus 13:441 O 1 '45 130w
Reviewed by William Poster
New Repub 113:810 D 10 '45 420w

"This is a book that will not easily fade from the mind. The horrors are psychological rather than physical, and it is not all horror. There is gay comradeship in it, too, and courage, the pitiable courage of the helpless. It is a small book, a calm and dispassionate one, without a touch of ranting, yet in its quiet way it is a terrific indictment of modern war." N. B. Baker
+ N Y Times p6 N 4 '45 320w

"Warmly and on the whole well told by a competent and thoughtful writer."
+ New Yorker 21:114 O 20 '45 80w

"This is a tragic book, written with deep insight and unsparing realism. It is a remarkable picture of childhood, unsentimental and stark. These children remind the reader of the children of 'The Innocent Voyage'—they are brave and cruel and innocent and uninhibited and intensely practical. . . But the deeper significance of the book is not that these children somehow preserved themselves, but that they are the generation of this war in Europe, the children who will inherit and have to reap the devastated field of the world. It is a haunting and disturbing book, beautifully written." S. H. Hay
+ Sat R of Lit 28:32 O 27 '45 490w

"The events in this tale of rootlessness are not milestones along a planned, paved highway. This is no close-knit, integrated novel, but rather a few shreds torn from the chaotic stuff of modern life. Mr. van Duym's translation, although stiff at times, is for the most part simple and telling, and it is not because of the difficulty of rendering the book in another language that its pace seems choppy. The chief value of 'And the Field Is the World' lies in its inherent warning. For the children whom Miss de Jong portrays, though today they are only understudies for the drama of the future, will tomorrow take their place on the stage, and unless we move heaven and earth to help them they will surely enact a tragedy." Virgilia Sapieha
Weekly Book Review p8 O 14 '45 800w

DE KARROFF, K. K., pseud. See Cummins, K.

DE KRUIF, PAUL HENRY. Male hormone. 243p $2.50 Harcourt
612.6163 Testosterone 45-35087

"Tells of the discovery (in Chicago around 1929), the synthetic production (in Switzerland in 1935) and the application in the last few years of testosterone, a natural glandular product with remarkable powers." (Springf'd Republican) Bibliography.

"A bold, lucid, thorough job on a tough subject and a pleasant idea to charm away an hour or so with pipe, slippers and rocking-chair." Ellwood Douglass
+ Book Week p9 My 27 '45 230w
Booklist 41:282 Je 1 '45

"Paul de Kruif writes in very human terms of the scientists who have followed the gleam; he illustrates with actual cases. The book seems however to lack the cohesion of his earlier work; it is repetitive and at times padded; and the style is almost too jovial and smart alecky to give the material the serious significance he desires. Certainly not a book for a general public."
Kirkus 13:192 My 1 '45 250w

"Characteristic de Kruif-breezy style and nontechnical language. Some librarians may feel frank discussion and case histories recorded necessitate special shelving. Due to be widely discussed and in demand." E. P. Nichols
Library J 70:486 My 15 '45 80w

"The Male Hormone is a lusty book. It is a crusading book. It is plain talk by a man who more than once has jumped the gun in the fight against death. It is written with the courage, the knowledge and literary power of one whose books are awaited by large numbers of people. It seems, however, that de Kruif might have chosen a more convincing target for his trenchant pen. He should have started yelling for more funds and more long-term research projects aimed at the great medical problems of cancer, heart diseases, arthritis and other cripplers and killers of middle and old age. Now that he has testosterone off his chest and under his belt, we hope he goes after these with his renewed fire and zest." Bernard Jaffe
New Repub 113:26 Jl 2 '45 850w

"Mr. de Kruif's account of the effects of the testosterone is based on the scientific and clinical evidence, and should stimulate the experimental use of this hormone in the attempt to reduce the effects of aging and the revitalization of those who have prematurely aged. The book is written in Mr. de Kruif's customary breezy style." M. F. Ashley Montagu
+ N Y Times p6 My 27 '45 270w

"Paul de Kruif is a veteran in writing about medical subjects and personalities. His theme in this book is worthy and exceptionally important. . . A clear, simple, and accurate book on the aspects of aging is greatly needed. It is unfortunate that Paul de Kruif failed in attempting to write it. The failure lay not in the subject matter, but in himself. In writing about the process of aging the author reveals that he, himself, has aged, as have those scientists and administrators against whom he cavils." Earl Engle
— Sat R of Lit 28:13 My 26 '45 1100w
Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 Je '45 180w

Reviewed by H. M. Davis
Springf'd Republican p4d My 27 '45 550w

"A book notable at once for its courageous honesty, its crusading zeal and its execrably cliche-ridden, 'popular' style. One useful thing at least Mr. de Kruif accomplishes. He successfully brings out into the open the questions raised by the laboratory synthesis and the now unlimited production of testosterone, the male hormone." H. M. Parshley
+ — Weekly Book Review p10 My 27 '45 1000w

DE LA BEDOYERE, MICHAEL, count. Christianity in the market-place. 137p $2 Bruce pub. [6s Dakers]
261 Christianity. Sociology, Christian
[A43-3752]

"A plea to Christians to take the wraps off their Christianity, that it may have the influence it can and should have in our time. . . Count de la Bedoyere, whose title is an hereditary one coming from his Breton forebears, is three-quarters English, a grandson of the Anglican bishop of Winchester, a high-honors degree man in philosophy, politics and economics from Oxford, and a former lecturer in philosophy at the University of Minnesota." Springf'd Republican

"A plea for a vital everyday religion. Well meant but dull. Not recommended." H. F. McGaw
— + Library J 69:760 S 15 '44 40w

"[The author's] paper, the Catholic Herald, is one of the three most influential English Catholic weeklies. His book should be required reading for all journalists who make any pretension to being Christians. They have obligations to their convictions and to their readers which this valuable little volume will freshen in their minds." T. S. Hanrahan
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 3 '45 360w

DE LA MARE, WALTER JOHN. The burning-glass, and other poems. 124p $2.50 Viking [7s 6d Faber]
821 45-9663

A volume of short poems ending with one longer poem: The Traveller. "Mr. de la Mare has restated with the weight of longer experience the philosophy of his early poems. As in those, so in these his favorite word is dream. Sleep, fantasy, moon, night, silence, come next. Few of the present 74 poems avoid one or other of these words. Reason and efficiency are mentioned, but only to be disparaged." Christian Science Monitor

Reviewed by Robert Hillyer
Atlantic 177:157 Ja '46 360w
Booklist 42:106 D 1 '45

"In order to convey to his readers his conviction of 'something behind,' Mr. de la Mare casts a twilight veil of mystery over common things; hoping that, with reason thus at a disadvantage, imagination may grasp what is sought. In spite of this twilight element, Mr. de la Mare's poems are lively and stimulating. However much Mr. de la Mare may talk about dreaming, yet when it actually comes to exercising the craft of poetry, he is wide awake and most efficient. His thought is lucid, without being obvious." P. J. H. H.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 N 15 '45 420w

"Walter de la Mare has long had a substantial and devoted following; this latest volume is likely to add to his admirers as it does to his poetic stature."
+ Kirkus 13:393 S 1 '45 150w

Reviewed by Hugo Manning
Manchester Guardian p3 N 16 '45 300w

Reviewed by G. W. Stonier
New Statesman & Nation 30:428 D 22 '45 900w

"These poems having 'various origins in time, mood, and place' include some of the best and worst of de la Mare." W. B. C. Watkins
+ — N Y Times p28 D 2 '45 450w
New Yorker 21:68 D 29 '45 30w

"'The Traveller' leaves a decided impress on the mind. It is Man's eternal search through the world and the universe, and ends in what is very near despair, or else I misread; it is tiny man travelling the waste and bare curve of the globe that like an enormous eye regards the night. Whatever you may think of its mood, it is hard to forget. It is an extraordinarily sustained parabolic fantasy. But whether De la Mare is observing a tomtit or a dead jay, a fish in a bowl or swifts flying, he is poet to the bone, and one of the most endearing of our time." W. R. Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 28:32 N 3 '45 360w

Reviewed by A. M. Jakeman
Springf'd Republican p4d D 2 '45 550w
Times [London] Lit Sup p546 N 17 '45 2650w

"And from his elder vantage point what example does de la Mare in his new book set before the 'newest' generation of British poets? The example (one almost says 'the moral') is one of holding to the sources of an imaginative life, of giving pleasure to his readers, of learning slowly, and not without inward pain . . . the limitations of one's gifts and the vanity of fame. Despite the seeming variety of de la Mare's writings in verse and prose, his work is an example, as Samuel Johnson would say, of 'the single talent, well employed.' To us, who read his new book, 'The Burning Glass' it seems very clear indeed that his latest book is one of the few volumes of verse published this year that will be remembered beyond the present season." Horace Gregory
+ Weekly Book Review p1 D 2 '45 1800w

DE LA TORRE-BUENO, LILLIAN (MRS G. S. MCCUE). Elizabeth is missing; or, Truth triumphant: an eighteenth century mystery; being a true and complete relation of her mysterious disappearance. 266p il $3.50 Knopf 343 Canning, Elizabeth 45-4697

A new investigation into the case of Elizabeth Canning, the London servant girl, who disappeared on January 1, 1753, and reappeared on January 29 of the same year, with a tale of abduction which set all London agog. Index.

"Lillian de la Torre tells a delightful detective story made up entirely out of the evidence. She is a sound and serious scholar with a gusty 18th century wit. The maps, illustrations, title page and typography are all a delight." Sterling North
+ Book Week p2 My 20 '45 550w
Kirkus 13:121 Mr 15 '45 210w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 160:676 Je 16 '45 280w

Reviewed by Carlos Baker
N Y Times p5 My 20 '45 650w

"The author, a middle-of-the-roader, offers a fairly plausible solution of the case. A monumental piece of research, and good reading, too."
+ New Yorker 21:84 My 26 '45 130w

"Classic mystery given another thorough going over. . . For connoisseurs."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 Ag 4 '45 50w

"[This] analysis of Elizabeth Canning's probity, at least the 57th to appear in print, is the most scholarly of the lot, by far the most colorfully presented, and is probably the closest to the truth. Elizabeth's story is meticulously checked and rechecked, all possible solutions are fully considered, and aside from the sheer glamor of the great Canning mystery itself, there are old maps and prints to complete enjoyment of the minor criminal case that has become the darling of all crime connoiseurs." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 27 '45 700w
Time 45:100 My 21 '45 1300w

"It looks as if [Elizabeth's] latest annalist, by employing not only the apparatus of sound scholarship, but the technique of classic detective fiction—as formulated by John Dixon Carr to whom the monograph is dedicated—had reached the heart of the mystery in as fascinating a detective story as ever suited a scholar, for every word the characters speak is one they are on record as having spoken." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p2 Je 3 '45 1000w

DE LEEUW, ADELE LOUISE. Doctor Ellen. 210p $2 Macmillan 44-9912

Vocational story for older girls. Ellen is followed thru her last years at medical school, her externship, and at the end is Dr Paige.

Booklist 41:227 Ap 1 '45

"Some pros and cons of socialized medicine, slight but well-plotted romance, convincing men characters, prototype of good family physician in 'Dr. Seth.'" Maude Adams
+ Library J 70:268 Mr 15 '45 70w

DE LEEUW, A. L.—Continued
"This seems, to an outsider, at least, a convincing picture of the trials and rewards of a 'hen medic' in the making. It is not too full of sweetness and light—although Ellen's crusade against slum conditions is too spectacularly successful to fulfill the law of averages—and should be an excellent antidote for the romanticism with which young girls are apt to consider the profession." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p26 F 25 '45 130w

"An honest, realistic story, this might be an incentive in a period when doctors and nurses are so badly needed." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:37 Je 16 '45 160w

"The scope of Ellen's activities is wider than in most career stories; a clinic assignment to a rat-infested tenement starts her crusading with the aid of a young reporter; there is, besides, a brief experiment at communal housekeeping. But for the most part the thrills—and they are genuine—arise from being suddenly called on to put into practice, with life at stake, what is as yet theoretical knowledge. The true medical student's blend of confidence and humility on such occasions is sympathetically rendered and, while Ellen's own career is not pulled back by poverty, the tragedy this can cause is truthfully represented in the experience of another student." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ja 28 '45 270w
Wis Lib Bul 41:55 My '45

DE LEEUW, ADELE LOUISE. With a high heart. 207p $2 Macmillan
45-9171

Vocational story for older girls. Anne McLane was sent to a county library for her summer of practice work, between two sessions of her library school training. Furious at first because she had counted on an easier job, Anne came to love her work on the bookmobile, and made a definite success of her summer.

"The book has its shortcomings but is the best to date on the subject; it makes the work seem not merely rewarding but actually vital and attractive to young people."
Booklist 42:96 N 15 '45

"Well-described characters in situations that are not overdrawn, help to give point to this realistic vocational book, but, naturally, do not tell the whole story of library work." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:460 N '45 120w

"A spirited career book which makes library work really sound fulfilling and exciting."
+ Kirkus 13:400 S 1 '45 90w

"Good career story for older girls. . . Recommended." A. M. Wetherell
+ Library J 70:1138 D 1 '45 70w
Sat R of Lit 28:68 N 10 '45 50w

"A lively, realistic career story which older girls will enjoy whether or not they wish to become librarians." W. E. J.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d N 18 '45 110w
Wis Lib Bul 41:129 D '45

DE MENT, JACK ANDREW, and DAKE, HENRY CARL. Uranium and atomic power. 2d ed 353p il $4 Chemical pub. co.
546.79 Uranium. Radioactivity. Atomic power 45-10568

"Second edition of a popular book on uranium is a reprint with two short appendices, one of which, 'The Atomic Bomb,' summarizes the work done in the war years which made the practical application of atomic power a reality. The other is 'Special Note on the Uranyl Radical.'" (Library J) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1942.

"Accurate and scholarly." Rufus Oldenburger
+ Book Week p10 N 4 '45 180w

"This book is probably no better or worse than most of the more recent hastily written pamphlets which have been rushed into print in order to capitalize on the wide public interest in this subject. It would be of very little use to workers in this field and is not recommended for serious scientific study." F. H. Spedding
Chem & Eng N 24:100 Ja 10 '46 300w
Library J 70:1090 N 15 '45 50w

"There are well-rounded chapters on the uranium minerals and methods of prospecting for them, on the physics and chemistry of uranium, and on specific methods in uranometry. Here one may find many data concerning the known distribution of uranium deposits as well as descriptions of various methods of utilizing and appraising a multitude of uranium-bearing compounds."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:2 D '45 240w

DENGEL, MRS VERONICA. Hold your man! drawings by Alajálov. 223p $2.50 Coward-McCann 646.7 Beauty, Personal. Personality
45-5465

"This is a modest little book full of sensible and relatively simple suggestions for making yourself into such an attractive and efficient wife that you won't need to 'hold your man'—he'll be your devoted slave! . . Mrs. Dengel divides her campaign into three sections: the physical, the mental and the emotional approach to allure. 'Allure,' as used here, means a pleasing personality." Book Week

Reviewed by Annabelle Scoon
+ Book Week p14 Je 10 '45 270w

"Advice on allure and the stabilization of affection which is reliable and reasonable."
+ Kirkus 13:152 Ap 1 '45 110w

"These suggestions arise from the experience of a consultant to whom thousands of women are said to have repaired. Taken a few at a time, they are in the main sound, sensible and well balanced. Taken altogether, they evoke a vision of all those thousands devoting, every day and in every way, the last ounce of their energies to holding their men; that is, to say the least, somewhat depressing."
Weekly Book Review p26 Jl 29 '45 230w

DENNEN, LEON. Trouble zone; brewing point of World war III? 173p $1.50 Ziff-Davis 949.6 Balkan states. Levant 45-9121

The trouble zone of this book is the Near East and the Balkans. The author went to Turkey in 1944 to represent a relief agency engaged in helping anti-Nazi refugees. His book is based partly on personal observation and partly on conversations with liberal and socialist leaders. His main thesis is that the small Balkan nations have been victimized by the Great powers, and may be the beginning point of the next war. Index.

Kirkus 13:456 O 1 '45 130w
N Y Times p18 O 14 '45 400w
Reviewed by H. B. Parkes
Weekly Book Review p27 N 25 '45 450w

DENNEY, DIANA (DIANA ROSS, pseud). The little red engine gets a name; pictures by Lewitt-Him. [32p] $1.75 Transatlantic 45-6094

"English story of a humble branch-line engine which earned the right to carry on its side the proud legend 'By Special Appointment to His Majesty the King.'" New Yorker

Booklist 42:151 Ja 1 '46

"The rhythmic pattern makes it fun to read aloud, and the pictures go along with the story so that four and five year olds can share it with the still younger members of the family."
+ Kirkus 13:517 N 15 '45 90w
Reviewed by M. C. Skinner
+ Library J 70:979 O 15 '45 30w
Reviewed by E. W. Turpin
Library J 70:1191 D 15 '45 70w

"Exceptionally fine color wash drawings."
+ New Yorker 21:124 D 8 '45 30w

"It will be good news to many libraries that this famous picture-book, by two Polish artists who work as one, is now actually published in the United States. A few copies were imported by larger libraries before the war; seventy others admired it in the traveling collections of Books Across the Sea. Its color-printing is remarkable, its design attractive and its story in English has railway sound effects so easy to reproduce that any adult can make a hit with a very small boy by reading it aloud." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 N 25 '45 100w

DENNIS, MORGAN. Burlap; il. by [the author]. [42p] $1 Viking

Dogs—Legends and stories 45-4229

Picture-story book about a small boy and a hound dog who could not earn his keep in the country, but won the heart of the boy and went back to the city to live with a small adoring master.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p11 Je 24 '45 230w

Booklist 41:305 Je 15 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '45

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:273 Jl '45 60w

Kirkus 13:180 Ap 15 '45 150w

Reviewed by M. F. Cox
Library J 70:639 Jl '45 70w

Reviewed by M. C. Skinner
Library J 70:951 O 15 '45 70w

"In the many lively drawings Burlap has the lovable absurdity and irrepressible activity indicated in the text. For children from 5 to 8." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 Je 24 '45 180w

"The drawings are printed in sepia, the type is large and clear. It is a book that will make small boys and girls who like dogs proud of Dick and Burlap, happy to own the volume that records their adventures." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:33 Jl 14 '45 270w

"The story is chiefly told in large pictures, with just enough words to satisfy a listening five-year-old (or older if he wants a dog). Burlap is true to life: I've known other bassets just like him, even without the bear." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Je 3 '45 270w

Wis Lib Bul 41:102 O '45

DE PALENCIA, ISABEL. See Palencia, I. de

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. And you, Thoreau! [woodcuts by Frank Utpatel]. [32p] $1; pa 50c New directions

811 45-1482

"The poems fall into two groups. The four in the first group, Homage to Thoreau, inspired by Thoreau's essays, deal with Mr. Derleth's response to nature; the remaining three poems, which compose El Amor, deal with frustrated love." Poetry

"In Homage to Thoreau Derleth, writing of the American scene and especially of Wisconsin, is at his best. His accurate eye is unfailing in choosing detail that creates a whole landscape, and his music is simple and unaffected. But these unusual gifts lose their power even in his best work because Derleth does not yet have control of his material. . . In El Amor Derleth is still less happy." R. L. Lowe

+ — Poetry 65:340 Mr '45 360w

Weekly Book Review p8 Ag 5 '45 250w

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. In re: Sherlock Holmes: the adventures of Solar Pons; with an introd. by Vincent Starrett. (Mycroft & Moran bk) 238p $2.50 Arkham house

45-11429

When he was nineteen years old Mr Derleth became concerned over the fact that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was no longer producing stories about Sherlock Holmes and he determined to supply some himself. During the years that followed he wrote a number of stories, imitating his master's style but calling his detective Solar Pons. This volume contains a selection of these tales.

Kirkus 13:479 N 1 '45 50w

"The resulting book inevitably lacks variety, although some of the individual selections are not without a certain charm and an engaging fidelity in form and spirit to the originals they imitate. A few, like 'The Adventure of the Norcross Riddle' (previously anthologized) and 'The Adventure of the Late Mr. Faversham' (Starrett's favorite) are good enough detective stories in their own right; most of the other episodes are over-long and, it must be confessed, a little tedious, even to the confirmed Sherlockian, when read in close sequence." Howard Haycraft

+ — N Y Times p32 D 2 '45 400w

Sat R of Lit 28:38 N 24 '45 40w

Springf'd Republican p4d D 23 '45 360w

"Readers who do not genuflect before No. 7 will note that Detective Pons shares his prototype's shortcomings along with his virtues: his puzzles aren't always puzzling and his Dr. Watson is more ponderously thick-headed than is absolutely necessary. Verdict: good."

+ — Time 46:108 N 19 '45 80w

Wis Lib Bul 41:126 D '45

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. No future for Luana. 204p $2 Scribner

45-3111

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p6 Ap 15 '45 90w

"Capably plotted."
Boston Globe p17 Ap 11 '45 30w

Kirkus 13:76 F 15 '45 40w

"This is one of the best and most closely knit of all the Judge Peck stories." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 1 '45 130w

Springf'd Republican p4d My 6 '45 140w

"Nothing fancy, but sensible and satisfactory. . . Mr. Derleth's picturesque Middle West natives add lift to a worthy offering." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p19 Ap 8 '45 90w

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. Selected poems. 235p $2.50 Press of James A. Decker

811

"August Derleth of Wisconsin writes, as Edgar Lee Masters notes in his introduction to this verse selection, of 'hawks, thrashers, deer, screech owls, wild apples, hills, fireflies and foxes, of yellow sunsets through trees, of village sounds and sights, of people on the village streets . . . of the Wisconsin landscape.'" Book Week

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p4 F 25 '45 270w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 14 '45 40w

"To Mr. August Derleth, at 35, his Selected Poems is already ancient history. Even as it appears, a sixth book of verse is on the stands and a seventh is announced. In addition, four more volumes, ranging from a mystery to a book on writing techniques, will in 1945 bring the tally of his published works—including fiction, biography and history—well above the number of his years. Such high-speed writing must be accompanied by an enviable sense of accomplishment. It also, judging solely by this book, has its drawbacks. . . Derleth borders always on the conventional and yet just, or almost, escapes it. The trouble is that his escape seems nearly always accidental. He is still at the mercy of the conventional usage he decides to keep." Lloyd Frankenberg

Poetry 66:223 Jl '45 1000w

DERLETH, A. W.—Continued

"August Derleth is a very prolific writer in both prose and verse. . . Much as I admire his versatility and industry, his poems, which suggest both Carl Sandburg and Edgar Lee Masters, leave me with the feeling that here is a man who is being defeated by his own fluency, who finds it so easy to write that he is always writing and never thinking about writing. It is during the hours when poets think about writing (preferably thinking about it with distaste) that the muse lays her largest and most fertile eggs." Raymond Holden

— Sat R of Lit 28:28 Mr 24 '45 90w

Wis Lib Bul 41:52 My '45

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. Shield of the valiant. 511p $3 Scribner

45-9494

Another in this author's long series of novels about life in a small middlewestern town, Sac Prairie. The principal interest in this narrative lies in the love story of Kivden Sewall, the banker's son, and Rena Janney, a girl from "across the tracks."

"There is a curious imbalance in Mr. Derleth's writing, as if the task of social dissection had stunned his aesthetic sensibilities. The unity of the novel is seriously impaired by the superfluity of minor character and incident. . . Not until the close of the book does the narrative rise to any dramatic height, and then all is abruptly terminated by the introduction of still another theme—the impact of Pearl Harbor on the town." David Rudolph

— + Atlantic 177:163 Ja '46 300w

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

Book Week p4 N 4 '45 270w

Booklist 42:165 Ja 15 '46

"The best thing in 'The Shield of the Valiant,' August Derleth's eighth novel in his 'Sac Prairie Saga,' is the portrayal of himself in the writer, Steve Grendon. Or rather, it is the extraordinary bifocal vision provided by Steve's presence, which enables the reader to see at one and the same time what the author intended to do and how he does it." Sister Mariella

Commonweal 43:242 D 14 '45 550w

Kirkus 13:441 O 1 '45 210w

Reviewed by William Kehoe

N Y Times p13 N 18 '45 400w

"A dully-gray novel, more notable for its authentic background of public libraries and high-school classrooms than the author's attempt at total recall."

New Yorker 21:94 O 27 '45 80w

"The book needs tightening and pruning; the many narrative threads, each interesting in itself, are not skilfully woven into a fabric and pattern of meaning and general interest. The episodic form of the novel lures the author into verbose byways of almost irrelevant anecdote and frequent paragraphs of tedious moralizing." R. A. Cordell

— + Sat R of Lit 28:43 N 10 '45 400w

Reviewed by E. H. Dexter

Springf'd Republican p4d D 2 '45 300w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p19 Ja 6 '46 180w

DER NERSESSIAN, SIRARPIE. Armenia and the Byzantine empire; a brief study of Armenian art and civilization; pref. by Henri Grégoire. 148p pl $3 Harvard univ. press [16s 6d Oxford]

915.66 Armenia. Art—Armenia. Byzantine empire A45-3226

"The present book by Miss Der Nersessian is the first in any language to treat Armenian art as a whole. She is an expert student of Armenian and Greek manuscript painting, who is already known for her original work in these two fields. Although ostensibly an account of the relations between Armenia and the Byzantine Empire, the book is mainly about Armenian art." N Y Times

Booklist 42:163 Ja 15 '46

Reviewed by H. R. Forbes

Library J 70:264 Mr 15 '45 70w

"[Certain] shortcomings do not detract from the solid worth of the book as a scrupulous, sober account of the history of Armenian art." Meyer Schapiro

+ N Y Times p20 Jl 29 '45 900w

"Miss Der Nersessian is particularly engrossed with Armenian art and its relationship with Byzantium and Europe. Her study, necessarily brief though well illustrated, will satisfy the amateur in architecture, sculpture and painting, and has much to offer the specialist." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p20 S 30 '45 800w

DERRICKSON, MARIONE R., and BAILEY, JOHN, eds. See Saturday Evening Post (periodical). Funny business

DE SHERBININ, BETTY. By bread alone. 250p $2.50 Morrow

45-267

Novel about Argentina, especially as it appears to a sophisticated group of luxury-loving inhabitants of Buenos Aires in 1943. Some of the leading characters are: a German diplomat and his beautiful American wife; an American who had fought in Spain and is in Argentina hunting for a way to make a living; a German business man who is trying to keep on the right side of the Nazis, altho he is officially an anti-nazi; and a young Argentinian of distinguished family.

"It will undoubtedly make a good movie. But it is a failure as a novel." Allan Chase

Book Week p4 F 18 '45 340w

Booklist 41:170 F 1 '45

"There are some fine characterizations in the novel and some significant facts. As is often the case when there is a great deal to be said, there is too much talking. There is enough good sharp writing to compensate for the spate of words but some points are lost in the flood. Peter's recovery of his faith that men shall not live 'By Bread Alone' is a moving and convincing thing."

+ Boston Globe p15 Ja 24 '45 130w

"With a concentrated plot which has both romantic and dramatic values, differentiated characters, this makes a wider play for popularity than either of its predecessors. . . Reads well."

+ Kirkus 12:487 N 1 '44 210w

"Good picture of what goes on behind the scenes on the homefront. Not a must but good adult fiction." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 70:32 Ja 1 '45 70w

"The author has tried to cover too much ground in too short a space. It is rather in her keen sense of society that her power lies. At its best the atmosphere she creates is tense, suggestive, colorful. There is something in it of Balzac's world, with its arrivistes who cling to the material at the risk of their integrity, with its somber interiors where passion, turned within itself, blots out the rest of the world." Nona Balakian

+ — N Y Times p5 Ja 28 '45 480w

"Unemphatic and a bit strained, the novel nevertheless has considerable interest, even though Miss de Sherbinin does not explore either her characters or the highly complex society of Buenos Aires in wartime very deeply."

New Yorker 20:78 Ja 13 '45 70w

"This is a half-and-half novel—half cream and half skim milk. The cream is the author's penetrating understanding and brilliant analysis of the political tragedy of Argentina. . . The setting is dramatically and psychologically ideal. But unfortunately, now we come to the skim milk. As a story, the novel moves slowly and heavily, with many false starts. After a sinister and dramatic beginning, reminiscent of an international spy story, the author suddenly drops to a snail's pace where nothing happens except endless and monotonous searchings of conscience on the part of every character. There is a plot, but it never seems to get going. The characters have reality and substance, and for the most part they make sense, but the action is far too much in their minds. It is a heavy book, full of purpose but lacking in lightness of touch, subtlety, and drama." K. S. Rosin

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:15 Ja 27 '45 500w

Reviewed by Lee Varley

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 21 '45 440w

"In 'By Bread Alone' [the author] has not only written an interesting novel, but she has lifted a torch to illuminate the features of the enemy in Argentina—Nazism itself, and Nationalism, the Argentine brand of Fascism, as it displays itself to the observant in sumptuous, self-indulgent Buenos Aires." F. H. Bullock

Weekly Book Review p4 Ja 14 '45 850w

DE TOCQUEVILLE, ALEXIS. See Tocqueville, A. C. H. M. C. de

DEUTE, ARTHUR H. 200 dishes for men to cook. 254p $2 Barrows

641.5 Cookery 44-51202

Contains recipes with more or less complete instructions for cooking, and suggestions for suitable menus.

J Home Econ 37:237 Ap '45 30w

"Mr. Deute is another world wanderer, an avid snooper in kitchens and flatterer of cooks. . . His little essays are brief and breezy, perhaps a little too casual for rank amateurs poised with a table full of ingredients." L. M. Palmer

+ N Y Times p29 Ja 14 '45 130w

DEVINE, ERIC, ed. Down the hatch [gay yachting yarns] il. by Alden McWilliams. 251p $3 Sheridan

797.14 Yachts and yachting 45-7116

"Presents 18 full-length pieces by as many well-known writers, supplemented by a potpourri of brief 'Pipe-fulls.' Yachting and boating magazines, magazines of general circulation and other publications have been diligently searched for a comprehensive output, good reading whether or not the reader is a yachting fan." Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by J. B. Metzenberg

Book Week p4 Ag 26 '45 180w

Reviewed by Fowler Hill

N Y Times p10 S 2 '45 320w

"It is a good collection by a man who knows small boats and the joys and pains of cruising the Sound and the Atlantic coast." Oliver Harrison

+ Sat R of Lit 28:39 O 6 '45 360w

Springf'd Republican p4 Ag 20 '45 200w

DEVOE, RALPH GODWIN. Calling all ducks; pictures by Nils Hogner. [32p] $1 Crowell

Illustrated story of a little decoy duck trained to call his larger wild brothers from the sky, telling what Midgie did about it when he discovered he was calling his own kind to be shot. For young readers.

"In attractive and authentic illustrations Nils Hogner has added his own knowledge of the wilds to Gen. DeVoe's interest in animals and love of fair play."

+ Book Week p18 N 11 '45 180w

Kirkus 13:492 N 1 '45 90w

Reviewed by Olive Brain

Library J 70:1137 D 1 '45 70w

"The story is a call to honorable dealings, especially with creatures weaker than you are. The pages are thronged with ducks in colors, on the wing and on the water."

+ Weekly Book Review p34 N 11 '45 270w

DEWEERD, HARVEY ARTHUR. Great soldiers of World war II. 316p il maps $3.75 Norton

923.5 World war, 1939—Biography. Generals 44-9123

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"As the author himself admits, it is a bit early to attempt any serious evaluation of the major events of the war and of the leaders responsible for their direction. On the other hand, to cite Major DeWeerd's quotation of an old saw: 'Truths can be seen wandering about the battlefield naked on the night after an encounter but by the next morning they are all in uniform.' His effort to strike a balance between those two extremes is largely successful. At least it marks a long advance over the snap judgment which characterizes the day-by-day appraisals offered the reading public by the commentators in the press." Herman Beukema

+ Am Hist R 50:508 Ap '45 1200w

"Some of the first reviews of this book criticized the author for the selection of 'great soldiers' which he has here made. Such criticisms are in no way justified. In his Foreword Major DeWeerd explains the basis of his selection. Some generals—such as Tito, Arnold, Harris, Tedder, and Marshall—had not completed their work, or even a major part of it, when this was written; their evaluations must wait. Other soldiers—many of the younger Russian generals among them—are still so little known that their backgrounds as well as their philosophies are shrouded in mystery. One military critic has objected to the inclusion of Hitler, Churchill, and Chiang Kai-shek. To make such an objection is to ignore the new concepts of total war. This book contains sketches of eleven men: tacticians, strategists, and the three civilian grand-strategists. It is an excellent selection, the best that could be made at the present time." R. A. Brown

+ Ann Am Acad 239:193 My '45 480w

Bookmark 6:16 Ja '45

Foreign Affairs 23:334 Ja '45 20w

DEWEY, JOHN, and others. Authoritarian attempt to capture education. See Conference on the scientific spirit and the democratic faith

DE WITT, EVELYN F. Old caboose; drawings by Ann Kirn. $1.50 Glade house, inc, 303 Alcazar av, Coral Gables 34, Fla.

45-9984

Picture-story book about a little red caboose, retired from active service, and the two old people who bought it, took it to California, and turned it into their home.

"Nice, accurate background with interesting geography of this country. . . Illustrations in color—red, yellow and black, by Ann Kirn have real charm."

+ Kirkus 13:470 O 15 '45 90w

"Not essential, but will appeal to small boys who like trains and are not particular about realism in illustrations." Ruth Bostwick

Library J 70:1137 D 1 '45 70w

"Fine swooping lines catch all the exhilaration of transcontinental travel in these pictures of Callie the Caboose's last odyssey. . . The narrative doesn't live up to the dramatic pitch of the drawings, but these will capture the eye and the imagination of the picture book age." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p8 N 11 '45 80w

DIARY of a public man; an intimate view of the national administration, Dec. 28, 1860 to March 15, 1861; and, A page of political correspondence, Stanton to Buchanan; prefatory notes by F. Lauriston Bullard; foreword by Carl Sandburg. 117p il $10 Abraham Lincoln bkshop, 16 N. Michigan av, Chicago 2

973.71 U.S.—Politics and government—1783-1865. Secession 45-2425

"[This 'diary'] first appeared unsigned in the North American Review in 1879. The editor of the Review, Allen Thorndike Rice, never revealed the authorship, in fact refused to reveal it. Since then more than one graduate seminar has been set the task of determining by internal evidence who might be the possible author of a diary full of almost too much inside information. Finding the author has so far proved a harder nut to crack than the authorship of the Junius letters. Mr. Bullard has given the reprint of the diary an interesting and intriguing introduction but he does not attempt to fix the authorship." Am Hist R

DIARY of a public man—Continued

Am Hist R 50:846 Jl '45 160w

Reviewed by P. M. Angle
Book Week p3 F 18 '45 450w

"In spite of the controversy that has long revolved about it, this is the first reprinting of the 'Diary' since its original publication as a magazine serial. That fact alone should assure the book a welcome from Civil War enthusiasts and larger libraries. A distinguished job of bookmaking—rare enough in war days of poor paper and narrow margins to call for comment—gives it added interest." P. M. Angle

+ Weekly Book Review p36 D 2 '45 350w

DICK, MRS ISABEL. Wild orchard; a story of early Tasmania. 282p $2.50 Crowell 45-1425

A story of early pioneering days in Tasmania in 1840. The heroine is the gently-reared daughter of an English canon. The hero is Jan Halifax, son of a large landowner in Tasmania, who, while he is in England on a visit, sees the lovely "Harry," woos and marries her, and carries her back with him to help build a home in the wild bush.

"'Wild Orchard' is a first novel and in several ways a very good novel. To the virtue of an exotic setting may be added an indubitable veracity and a simple, straightforward telling. . . It is quiet reading for the most part, but the quietness is forgivable not only for its reality but for its very relief from our usual literary fare these days." Edith Roberts

+ Book Week p6 Mr 18 '45 360w

"The earlier chapters, telling of life in Canon Bracken's family, have a pleasing sound of Jane Austen; later chapters seem romanticized and profuse, but the background is unhackneyed and provocative to the global interest that many readers are acquiring." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 24 '45 550w

"I have to confess that, although written with the greatest sincerity and with a hero and heroine with far higher standards than the Whiteoaks, 'Wild Orchard' is not so readable a story. Mrs. Dick has yet to acquire that quick perceptiveness of Mazo de la Roche in appraising the value of detail. She often takes pages to frame some picture which more vivid writing might have accomplished in as many paragraphs. She also has the disadvantage of viewing her subject matter in such a mist of enthusiasm that it obscures her perspective. In the end it is really the description of Tasmania which holds the interest rather than the characters." E. V. R. Wyatt

+ — Commonweal 41:549 Mr 16 '45 600w

"Considerable charm in a story of Tasmania in the 1840's—a book that may well share something of the popularity of Green Dolphin Street."

+ Kirkus 12:552 D 15 '44 150w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis
Library J 70:164 F 15 '45 70w

"Authentic in detail, the story blithely bypasses the many social problems it turns up (extermination of natives, transportation of convicts), preferring to pursue its superficial way as a nineteenth-century tale of polite pioneering." Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p24 F 18 '45 150w

"As a picture of life in Tasmania, amid bush rangers, ex-convicts and other dubious neighbors, the book is of exceptional interest, and as a story of a valiant marriage, it has genuine appeal." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p18 Ap 8 '45 130w

Wis Lib Bul 41:38 Mr '45

DICK, R. A. pseud. See Leslie, J. A. C.

DICKEY, DALLAS C. Seargent S. Prentiss, Whig orator of the old South. (Southern biography ser) 422p il $4 La. state univ. press

B or 92 Prentiss, Seargent Smith 45-9928

Biography of a New Englander who moved to Natchez, Mississippi in 1827, and became an influential member of the Whig party in the South, particularly during the stormy political days of the 1840s. The author is assistant professor of speech at Louisiana State university, but this biography also reflects his interest in American history.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 O 14 '45 40w

"For a Yankee to make a reputation as an orator in the South, he must be a real one. There is ample evidence that Prentiss was. . . Mr. Dickey's carefully documented biography throws light on the Old South from a new angle."

Christian Century 62:1259 N 14 '45 110w

Current Hist 9:460 N '45 60w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
Nation 161:559 N 24 '45 120w

"Mr. Dickey has diligently set down the ascertainable facts about a slender career in an undistinguished biography. Since there were already two lives of Prentiss, and no important new material has transpired, this book may be, to use a Prentiss-style word, a work of supererogation. But it contains an intelligent essay on Prentiss the orator." W. B. Hamilton

N Y Times p14 Ja 13 '46 320w

"As one reads Mr. Dickey's narrative he wishes for a fuller view of Prentiss the man, for he was undoubtedly a person of unusual attractiveness and sparkle. But meagerness of personal letters and other intimate papers circumscribed the author's efforts to develop the human and informal side of his subject. The biography is objective and well documented. Given the material available it is a thoroughly creditable work." B. I. Wiley

+ Weekly Book Review p40 N 11 '45 1100w

DICKINSON, EMILY. Bolts of melody, new poems; ed. by Mabel Loomis Todd and Millicent Todd Bingham. 352p $3 Harper

811 45-35045

In 1929 the original editor of Emily Dickinson's poems asked her daughter to open a locked box where manuscript poems of the Amherst recluse had lain untouched for many years. From these masses of papers the present editor has selected over six hundred new poems and "arranged the finished poems in Part I in twelve sections, each section dealing with the development of a mood or the progress of a season or the unfolding of an idea, and each within itself arranged with a definite climax. Mrs. Bingham believes that the ideal order would be chronological, but even with the most expert knowledge of the different periods of handwriting such an order would be impossible of fulfillment." (N Y Times) Index to first lines.

Reviewed by H. W. Wells
Atlantic 176:129 Jl '45 420w

"The new poems are, of course, patently genuine: many of them are among the finest Emily Dickinson wrote. And the account of hates and jealousies and family feuding which was responsible for their suppression, written by the daughter of Dickinson's first editor, is as extraordinary a piece of personal background history as any I have read." Leo Kennedy

+ Book Week p8 Ap 15 '45 450w

Booklist 41:250 My 1 '45

Bookmark 6:9 My '45

Reviewed by E. A. Laycock

Boston Globe p19 Ap 18 '45 160w

"This is not the place, for want of room, to attempt any appreciative criticism of this corpus of fresh material; and, as a matter of fact, the soundest and most reliable remarks that have been made on Emily's other verse apply to these poems and fragments. The range of subject, mood, and manner remains the same. There are the tiny images of creatures and other natural objects; there is the sense of isolation; there is the perpetual brooding upon the mystery of life. There are also the off-rhymes and assonances which are so characteristic and which, while delighting some ears, grate harshly upon others. And there is the astonishing limitation in melody which makes the consecutive reading of hundreds upon hundreds of little pieces a by no means unmixed pleasure." S. C. C.

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 16 '45 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '45

"As for the new poems, it is perhaps enough to say here that they are the authentic Emily. But I confess that to me her work has always given delight and exasperation, in about equal proportions. I cannot agree with Mr. Mark Van Doren's opinion in his foreword that Emily Dickinson was 'one of the great poets of the world'; that strikes me as part of the usual gush about Emily, which now it appears has its grim counterpart in the spite and jealousy of the Dickinson women. From these feminine feuds only Emily herself emerges entirely unscathed." Theodore Maynard

Commonweal 42:76 My 4 '45 210w

Current Hist 9:128 Ag '45 20w

"With the publication of this volume, the way seems at last clear for undertaking a complete, orderly, and definitive edition of the poems of Emily Dickinson The inaccuracy and confusion of the current collected edition (1931) is plain evidence of the need for such a work. Bolts of Melody, with over six hundred and sixty new poems, at once complicates the task and clarifies the issues. In no previous collection have the major problems of editing Emily Dickinson's poems been more clearly recognized, and Mrs. Bingham has made excellent progress toward their solution." R. B. Sewall

+ New Eng Q 18:409 S '45 950w

Reviewed by Conrad Aiken

New Repub 113:25 Jl 2 '45 300w

"'Bolts of Melody' (this and all the titles and subtitles in the two volumes are phrases from Emily Dickinson) ranks as the best of the collections because it is composed largely of the poet's mature work, and also because for the first time the editor has not felt called upon to touch up the original text. . . It is work well done. . . No praise can be too high for Mrs. Bingham's editing. . . The editor's preface is written with masterly skill and gives the key to her method." Robert Hillyer

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 15 '45 2800w

"As we read the new collection, we feel that there may not be much more of the more transcendent poetry to be discovered; only a little, in fact, appears in this volume. But we realize that Mrs. Bingham is working toward a complete Dickinson with sympathetic understanding. The clear-sighted scholars of the future will certainly follow her lead." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 21:84 Ap 21 '45 300w

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch

Poetry 66:274 Ag '45 900w

Reviewed by R. N. Linscott

Sat R of Lit 28:10 Ap 21 '45 500w

"The poems, together with the explanatory preface, will prove sufficient for the general Dickinson reader. Here is Emily as she has always been, through all the intermittent volumes of her poems to appear since the first slim book in 1890, four years after her death. The whimsical, almost omniscient, glimpses of life, love, death, nature, and all the 'far theatricals of day' are here again, a whole delightful torrent of them, fresh and sparkling." A. M. Jakeman

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 8 '45 700w

"Emily Dickinson died almost 60 years ago, but last week more than 650 of her poems were published for the first time. They are wonderful: some of them are as good as her best."

+ Time 45:100 Ap 16 '45 380w

"For those interested in American poetry, or, for that matter, in poetry of any origin, this new collection is of great importance."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:12 S '45 200w

"We can be reasonably confident that in 'Bolts of Melody' we have for the first time a whole book of Emily Dickinson's poems in which no word has been miscopied and no word added except within brackets. But Mrs. Bingham exhibits a curious reluctance to expose what she considers the secrets of the poet's workshop, as though Emily Dickinson's craftsmanship were not honest enough to stand the most exacting scrutiny. She has also overlooked the possibility that many of the unfinished poems were dropped half made because they deserved to be. By making what otherwise might be regarded as illuminating failures assume the guise of triumphs she has not really done a service to Emily Dickinson's reputation. Too many poems in 'Bolts of Melody' represent only mediocre work. A few are downright bad, mere snarls of unintelligible verbiage. The genuine and fine lyrics, of which this gathering has its share, are weighted down by much that is of dubious value and which it is not certain that Emily Dickinson intended to save." G. F. Whicher

Weekly Book Review p1 Ap 8 '45 1700w

Wis Lib Bul 41:66 Je '45

DICKINSON, JONATHAN. Journal; or, God's protective providence; being the narrative of a journey from Port Royal in Jamaica to Philadelphia between Aug. 23, 1696 and Apr. 1, 1697; ed. by Evangeline Walker Andrews and Charles McLean Andrews. 252p il maps $3 Yale univ. press

917.59 Florida. Shipwrecks. Indians of North America—Florida A45-4821

"Dickinson's journal is one of the fine old documents which are source material both for American colonial history and for Quaker history in that period. Dickinson's father had a big plantation in Jamaica. . . The journal tells of an adventurous voyage, shipwreck on the coast of Florida, capture by unfriendly Indians, and so many hardships and narrow escapes that it became popular as a tract demonstrating 'God's protecting providence.' That was the title of the first edition. There were about twenty reprintings between 1700 and 1868, but no previous editing." Christian Century

+ Christian Century 62:1289 N 21 '45 130w

Current Hist 9:461 N '45 90w

"Mr. and Mrs. Andrews, whose Florida home was near the scene of the wreck on Jupiter Island, evidently made their editing of the old book a labor of love. For Mrs. Andrews, whose husband did not live to see his work in print, it is also a commemorative volume. Their task was well done." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p32 O 14 '45 280w

"The Journal is of particular interest to students of American history, since Dickinson's observations of the Indians of the Florida coast constitute the source material for most that is known of the tribal life of these obscure and early peoples. The introduction, appendices and illustrations set the Journal in its proper historical background." F. T. Howe

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 13 '46 330w

DICKINSON, THOMAS ALBERT. Aeronautical dictionary; drawings by James D. Powell. 484p $3.50 Crowell

629.1303 Aeronautics—Dictionaries 45-1678

"6,000 simple definitions of aviation terms with 300 illustrations. Charts, tables and other data." Library J

DICKINSON, T. A.—Continued

"It is a handy reference volume that should prove helpful alike to the aviation industry's newcomers and old-timers. . . Stenographers and others having a casual contact with aviation will find the book a convenient guide to spelling and abbreviation of aircraft terms. Aviation experts may feel the definitions are a little too brief but they should note that the author presents the book as a dictionary, not an encyclopedia." G. A. Scheuer

+ Book Week p8 Ja 21 '45 270w

Booklist 41:220 Ap 1 '45

Kirkus 12:227 My 15 '44 90w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 69:699 S 1 '44 20w

"Not a children's book in the truest sense of the word but will be a most useful addition to the reference shelves of any children's room. Junior and senior high school libraries should give it a hearty welcome. All terminology of aviation simply defined and illustrated with clear-cut drawings, diagrams and photographs." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 70:165 F 15 '45 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:22 Ap '45

"This volume should be useful for all in the aviation industry needing concise but clear definitions of its many specialized terms. It should be equally useful in any library for use with young aviation enthusiasts as well as with adults. It is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 16:34 Jl '45 470w

Wis Lib Bul 41:51 My '45

DICKS, RUSSELL LESLIE. Pastoral work and personal counseling. 230p $2 Macmillan

250 Pastoral work 44-51358

A new work by the co-author with the late Richard Cabot of the book, The Art of Ministering to the Sick (Book Review Digest, 1936). Mr Dicks describes the pastor's work dealing with the sick, the troubled, and the bereaved, both under normal conditions and in wartime.

"The author's experience as a hospital chaplain has been very extensive, while his pastoral experience in a church has been much more limited. However, in the latter capacity as well as the former, he has been a keen and critical observer as well as an effective worker, and in this distillation of his experience he makes an important contribution to the improvement of the service which the clergyman may render as pastor and personal counselor." C. T. Holman

+ Christian Century 62:434 Ap 4 '45 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '45

"The volume is a manual sound in its theory, practical in its approach, and sensible in its treatment. It should find a wide field of usefulness." J. W. Thomas

+ Crozer Q 22:186 Ap '45 250w

DICKSON, CARTER. See Carr, J. D.

DICKSON, MRS MARGUERITE (STOCKMAN). Bramble bush; il. by Ruth King. 270p $2 Nelson

45-7089

There are two heroines in this book for older girls. Mary Elizabeth was bitter because her family could not afford to send her to college; Ruth was equally bitter because she was young—and blind. In her efforts to help Ruth adjust herself to life, Mary Elizabeth found her own happiness. The scene is a small town in New Hampshire.

"There is good counsel in this story for any girl, though the lessons it brings home are never made unpleasantly obtrusive."

+ Book Week p22 N 11 '45 130w

"Improbable, perhaps, and certainly not fine writing, but an acceptable modern story written with good insight into teen-age problems."

Booklist 42:79 N 1 '45

Kirkus 13:399 S 1 '45 110w

"Recommended." Eleanor Kidder

+ Library J 70:1028 N 1 '45 70w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p37 S 16 '45 130w

Wis Lib Bul 41:129 D '45

DICKSON, MAXCY ROBSON. The food front in World war I; introd. by Claude Wickard. 194p $3.25 Am. council on public affairs

338.1 European war, 1914-1918—Food question 44-7038

"This book is the result of a study of the materials collected in the National Archives on the food program of the last war as conducted by Mr. Hoover's Food Administration. It begins with a reporting of President Wilson's four-month struggle with Congress before the bill creating the Food Administration became a law on August 10, 1917, and carries through to the period after the Armistice when Mr. Hoover was also Director General of the American Relief Administration, and to the termination of the Food Administration late in 1918, and final plaudits for a job well done. . . Most of the book is taken up with the propaganda directed toward the conservation of food and the need for it." Am Econ R

"The emphasis in the study is much greater on the consumption of food than on its production. This is what one would expect in a study based on the Food Administration records only, since the task of getting the food produced was assigned to the U. S. Department of Agriculture and its affiliated branches in the states and counties. Nevertheless, a book purporting to deal with 'the food front' in the last war should cover the activities of all agencies in proportion to their importance. Apparently the Archives are not very complete on the work of the agencies concerned with food production in 1917-19." J. D. Black

Am Econ R 35:210 Mr '45 1200w

"Certainly it is a splendid thing to have this concise statement of the problems and policies a quarter-century ago for contrast and comparison with the present scene. Dickson has done an excellent job of getting both perspective and essence out of many sources." R. S. Vaile

+ Ann Am Acad 237:211 Ja '45 700w

Foreign Affairs 23:338 Ja '45 20w

DIEHL, HAROLD SHEELY. Textbook of healthful living. 3d ed 707p il maps $2.50 McGraw

613 Hygiene SG45-17

"In this revision, figures, charts, and statistics have been brought up to date; new scientific developments have been incorporated; the chapter on mental hygiene has been expanded; new sections on heredity, narcotics, drug addiction, and the care of the skin have been added; a glossary of technical terms, and the new summary of preventive and control measures for communicable disease, as approved by the American Public Health Association in October, 1944, have been incorporated." (Pref) Index. For earlier editions with the title Healthful Living, see Book Review Digest, 1935, 1941.

"A textbook for use in college courses in hygiene should be comprehensive, scientific, and readable. All these criteria are met by Diehl's Textbook of Healthful Living. . . This text is highly recommended to instructors of college hygiene courses." C. C. Wilson

+ Am J Pub Health 35:1089 O '45 350w

Booklist 41:342 Jl 15 '45

DIETZ, DAVID. Atomic energy in the coming era. 184p il $2 Dodd

541.2 Atomic power 45-9153

"Author, a trained science editor and noted journalist, tells in an interesting, vivid style the dramatic story of the atomic bomb. . . The modus operandi of the bomb is withheld. Mr. Dietz traces the background of atomic energy and relates the researches of brilliant scientists and grouped industrialists who developed the nuclear bomb under the auspices of our government, advancing science 50 years. He cites military potentialities and possibilities of future employment of atomic energy for human needs. Appendix contains President Truman's report." (Library J) No index.

Booklist 42:91 N 15 '45

"Because the book was written hurriedly to meet a popular demand, it contains errors and repetitions and in places does not read too smoothly. However, on the whole, it is accurate and does not suffer from oversimplification. Nonscientific readers will need help in several places but they will be rewarded for their effort in trying to understand what is given in the book." W. C. Fernelius
+ — Chem & Eng N 24:102 Ja 10 '46 310w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '45

"Recommended." L. A. Eales
+ Library J 70:889 O 1 '45 110w

Reviewed by Benjamin Harrow
Nation 161:465 N 3 '45 40w

Reviewed by Waldemar Kaempffert
N Y Times p18 D 9 '45 240w

"Measured by any criteria that might be applied, it is the most stupendous achievement in all the annals of research and technology. It represents the ultimate in planning for organized cooperation, in practical application of abstract theory, and in the use of scientific methods of observation and experiment. Answers have been found to many technical questions that would have perplexed the experts in nuclear physics for several decades, were it not for the stimulus of war. But questions of a social and political nature have been raised that are almost overwhelming in their import and that must be answered in the near future by the people of America through their representatives. It is therefore imperative that the information contained in such a book as this be widely disseminated throughout our body politic." A. H. Compton & others
+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:1 O '45 800w

"Mr. Dietz's book is a potpourri made up from good popular science and journalism. Journalism, with its erratic emphasis on sensation rather than importance, is not a good medium for the exposition of scientific ideas. Nevertheless, it is a great pleasure to report that the science, with a few exceptions, is accurate and that the popularization is good, and sometimes excellent." A. K. Solomon
+ Weekly Book Review p5 N 25 '45 500w

DILLIARD, MAUD ESTHER. Old Dutch houses of Brooklyn. [119p] il maps $3.50 Smith, Richard R.

974.723 Brooklyn—Historic houses, etc.
45-6223

"Photographs of 40 old homes which still stand in Brooklyn, remnants of the Dutch architecture of the colonists. The text gives some history of the houses, and of the families who built and lived in them." Booklist

Booklist 42:12 S '45

"The volume bears evidence of much patient research and is quite evidently a labor of love." I. A.
N Y Times p23 Jl 22 '45 60w

DIMITROFF, GEORGE ZAKHARIEFF, and BAKER, JAMES GILBERT. Telescopes and accessories. (Harvard bks. on astronomy) 309p il $2.50 Blakiston

522.2 Telescope. Astronomical instruments
45-1492

"This is the tenth volume in [a] series edited by Dr. Harlow Shapley and Dr. Bart J. Bok. Like its predecessors, it is written by experts, who explain the construction and use of astronomical instruments. The opening chapter considers light as a tool for understanding the universe; subsequent chapters describe visual and photographic telescopes and how to build them, the development of the photographic process, spectroscopy, the measurement of light, and instruments for solar research. Many excellent photographs and line drawings add to the clarity of the text." Scientific Bk Club R

Booklist 41:205 Mr 15 '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 18 '45 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '45

Library J 70:118 F 1 '45 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:30 Ap '45

Scientific Bk Club R 16:4 Mr '45 90w

"Though a book which will surely be found in every astronomical library, its treatment is clear and simple enough to be understood by the layman, who will learn how our vision has been extended to reveal more and more of the universe in which we live." James Stokley
+ Weekly Book Review p2 My 6 '45 180w

DIMOCK, MARSHALL EDWARD. Executive in action. 276p $3 Harper

658 Executives 45-9886

"From a wealth of executive experience and, lately, in establishing the manning organization of the Merchant Marine in World War II, the author contends that management in business and government is almost identical. He relates day-by-day work of a top executive and combines philosophy and technique in discussing common problems found in business, government and all institutional operations." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 42:159 Ja 15 '46

Kirkus 13:356 Ag 15 '45 210w

Library J 70:1090 N 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by Harry Daum
Springf'd Republican p4d N 25 '45 550w

DISNEY, DORIS MILES. Murder on a tangent. 208p $2 Doubleday 45-4610

Detective story.

"Best of the week."
+ Boston Globe My 31 '45 60w

"Good."
+ Kirkus 13:97 Mr 1 '45 60w

"The story is a bit confused in the early chapters by the introduction of too many unimportant characters. But it gains in strength and momentum as the narrative proceeds to its climax." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p17 Ap 29 '45 130w

"Slow, but with a good background."
+ New Yorker 21:84 Ap 28 '45 80w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 12 '45 240w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p12 My 13 '45 150w

DISNEY, DOROTHY CAMERON (MRS MILTON MACKAYE). The 17th letter. 248p $2 Random house 45-1393

A combination murder mystery and spy story, the scene of which is Canada, particularly Halifax.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p8 F 25 '45 180w

Booklist 41:185 F 15 '45

"Best of the week."
+ Boston Globe p15 Ja 31 '45 80w

"The yarn has pace, suspense, and logical development. The characters are normal human beings who behave credibly, and their exploits are recorded in viable English."
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 F 17 '45 280w

DISNEY, D. C.—Continued

"A holding tale, but it allows for too many close shaves, too haphazard a dependence on luck and coincidence to carry much conviction. Good entertainment."
+ — Kirkus 12:540 D 1 '44 100w

"Not bad fun, but does anyone agree with me that the average spy novel will never take the place of a nice, simple murder?"
New Repub 112:238 F 12 '45 90w

"This mistress of the well-groomed whodunit has now moved into the realm of the unbridled thriller, where action speaks louder than words. She proves that even a 'Perils of Pauline' routine can be handled with humor, restraint and the touch casual, if there is a skillful writer at the controls." I. M.
+ N Y Times p22 F 11 '45 200w

"The hoary formula is, luckily for the reader, handled by a capable writer."
New Yorker 20:84 F 3 '45 60w

"Super-thriller."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:37 F 17 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p13 F 4 '45 320w

DIXON, JACK. Count the puppies. [21p] il $1 Crowell

Photographs of puppies with just a line of text for each one, designed to teach small children to count from one to ten.

"This is a honey of a picture book with a really useful purpose." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p11 S 9 '45 130w

Kirkus 13:313 Jl 15 '45 60w

"Excellent photographs are by Mr. Dixon, an expert photographer." M. F. Cox
+ Library J 70:752 S 1 '45 40w

DIXON, WILLIAM MACNEILE. Apology for the arts. 215p $2.75 Longmans [7s 6d Arnold, E. & co]

821.04 English poetry—History and criticism. Literature—History and criticism [45-6753]

"Ten papers old and new on the arts, and especially on poetry. . . The oldest of them we believe to be the Quarterly Review essay on 'English and Scottish Ballads' of 1898, and the next oldest the Leslie Stephen lecture on 'Poetry and National Character,' which on its publication in 1915 was thought worthy of the leading place in a number of this Supplement as a subject for examination (by no means all assent). There are some particular studies of writers: of Chatterton, the born medievalist; of Scott, the romantic and hero-worshipper; Campbell, who wrote simple things greatly; and Tolstoy, 'the artist who was lost in the prophet,' the man who came 'to be afraid of music and poetry, to be afraid of the love of the sexes, to be afraid of beauty.' Best of all is a close and cautious study of the growth of Wordsworth's mind and poetry. These particular studies all spring from the same mind, and (we must add) from the same heart as the more general papers, on 'Civilization and the Arts,' and 'The Romantic Revival,' all filling their place in that 'Apology for the Arts' that gives the book its title." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"Mr. Macneile Dixon's studies stand for all that is richest in the humanistic tradition of our culture, informed at once by an ancient Greek and a modern liberal hatred of tyranny, whether politically that of Nazism or intellectually the domination of science. But to say of Tolstoy that 'we must not overlook as he overlooked that there is happiness as well as misery in the world,' is to forget that in the description of Natasha at the wolf-hunt he was the author of what is probably the happiest scene in literature."
+ — Spec 174:114 F 2 '45 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p34 Ja 20 '45 850w

DOBBIE, SIR WILLIAM GEORGE SHEDDEN. A very present help. 94p $1.50 Zondervan [5s Marshall, Morgan & Scott]

940.542 World war, 1939—Malta. World war, 1939—Religious aspects 45-4640

"The heroic defender of Malta gives an account of the holding of that beleaguered island in 1940 against concentrated German attacks, and a tribute to the power of prayer, with chapters in justification of a Christian's participation in war and in criticism of the pacifist position." Christian Century

---

Christian Century 62:305 Mr 7 '45 40w

"The author is in the line of great soldiers of our race who have combined outstanding military success with a most childlike trust in day-to-day inspiration from a higher Power. In reading the book one's mind goes back to Gordon and many others before him. Not all are privileged to share such experiences. But whether we are able to follow him here or not, this book cannot fail to move those who read it."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p153 Mr 31 '45 300w

DOBIE, JAMES FRANK. A Texan in England. 285p $2.50 Little

914.2 England—Description and travel. National characteristics, English 45-4000

The second man to hold the chair of American history at Cambridge university was Professor J. Frank Dobie of the University of Texas. When he was appointed in 1943 he protested that history, even American history, was not his line. But his open friendliness, his love for England, his interest in people, and his ability to interpret America, all combined to make his year at Cambridge one of profit for all. His book describes the manners and customs of the English, and how he and they reacted to each other.

"The result is a light and pleasing chronicle that can, and should, be read at a sitting, and that leaves the reader with much more than a nodding acquaintanceship with the British as they are today. Indeed, there is much more in Mr. Dobie's book than its light and whimsical style suggests. Get it, laugh over it, and ponder it." Graham Hutton
+ Atlantic 176:130 Jl '45 300w

"There are charming, moving, eloquent chapters on the countryside, the birds, the land, but in the midst of this poetry is perhaps not a new Frank Dobie but a Frank Dobie become politically alive, acutely sensitive to human rights and wrongs and making a hard-muscled stand for the right. Dobie was good for Cambridge but he is going to be doubly good for Texas and the Southwest, where his old range-riding friends and the modern barons may not like what he has to say." J. A. Brandt
+ Book Week p5 My 13 '45 650w

Booklist 41:285 Je 1 '45

Reviewed by Mary Lasswell
— Boston Globe p17 My 9 '45 550w

"I am sure that the Britishers Mr. Dobie talked with have a much better understanding of America, and that British readers of the book will share that understanding. Incidentally, its American readers will perhaps learn something to their advantage about both countries." L. A. Sloper
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 My 5 '45 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '45

"Pleasant and entertaining."
+ Kirkus 13:103 Mr 1 '45 150w

"The Office of War Information could have chosen no one more refreshing than Mr. Dobie to interpret America to England. For Americans he brings back intelligent and unwavering admiration for farms and fens and birds—as well as people. One more delightful book to read aloud and to add to hospital libraries." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 70:414 My 1 '45 100w

Reviewed by Willard Thorp
New Repub 113:109 Jl 23 '45 350w

"This is indeed a 'lovely' book, and I use the adjective advisedly and not in the usual careless and blanket fashion. It is also a curious book, for it is not always even in its writing, and I take exception to some of Mr. Dobie's conclusions. But over and over again there are paragraphs, or chapters, so lucid, so beautiful, and so stirring, especially to those who have known England, that it is as if a transubstantiation had taken place. At times, Frank Dobie can write carelessly and hastily, and in an odd and not too pleasing staccato fashion, although, as has been said, he can never write uninterestingly; but over and over again his prose rises into something so translucent and starkly noble that it becomes Elizabethan." Struthers Burt

+ — N Y Times p5 My 6 '45 1450w

Reviewed by W. H. Hindle
Sat R of Lit 28:12 My 5 '45 650w

"Everyone who picks up this book will enjoy it because it is good reading. Many will wonder whether the author caught the nature of England in just measure. 'A Texan in England' is fundamentally the story of a generous, sentimental romantic who found abroad much that was akin to his own nature and warming to the cockles of his heart." G. L. Joughin

Springf'd Republican p4d My 6 '45 1050w

Time 45:99 My 7 '45 800w

"This is an intensely personal book, strung on the thin thread of a brief and fortuitous experience. Mr. Dobie's was a sentimental journey. Sometimes the sentiment seems faintly literary, but for the most part it is healthy and sound. And how could an American familiar with England's past, with her history and her literature, feel anything but sentimental about an England whose present is so full of gallantry and courage." H. S. Commager

+ Weekly Book Review p3 My 6 '45 1500w

Wis Lib Bul 41:68 Je '45

DODD, MARTHA ECCLES (MRS ALFRED KAUFMAN STERN). Sowing the wind. 311p $2.50 Harcourt

45-7845

Novel of Nazi Germany during the years 1934 to 1942, by the daughter of a former United States ambassador to Germany. It pictures the deterioration of a German World war I ace flyer of high principles into a Nazi war lord.

Reviewed by Marion Strobel
Book Week p4 S 2 '45 410w

Booklist 42:56 O 15 '45

Christian Century 62:1065 S 19 '45 340w

"A host of grotesquely disconnected, two-dimensional abstractions parade through the book. Those people could never have sown the wind. The faintest breeze would have blown them away. Including the Adolf Hitler, Hermann Göring, and Joseph Göbbels, as portrayed by Miss Dodd." E. S. P.

— Christian Science Monitor p14 S 1 '45 350w

Reviewed by W. H. Melish
Churchman 159:17 O 1 '45 300w

Kirkus 13:349 Ag 15 '45 170w

"Most of her characters are lay figures, clichés abound, and the dialogue is reminiscent of the Lanny Budd stories. One wishes that she had decided to express her ideas and experiences in a less ambitious medium." H. C. Hatfield

— New Repub 113:357 S 17 '45 150w

"Miss Dodd is on solid ground when she writes from memory about the real pre-war stuff: what things were like and what things were said during the four years she spent on the other side of the fortified fence. But she bogs down when she writes from imagination. And although she manages to make Landt's metamorphosis credible and interesting, she can't pass it off as a typical case. A famous stunt-flyer is special enough to begin with, and Landt was wooed with special tenderness into the party ranks. Most of the Germans converted into Nazis must have had other reasons and other rewards, and they'll need other books for explanation." Nancy Flagg

+ — N Y Times p6 S 2 '45 750w

"Miss Dodd's familiarity with smart Berlin gives a certain interest to her picture of fashionable life under Hitler; a certain lack of imagination, however, prevents her study of the processes by which a decent young man is made into a Nazi beast from being any more original than the novel's well-worn title would suggest."

— + New Yorker 21:86 S 8 '45 80w

" 'Sowing the Wind' is starkly written, vivid in character portrayal, unsparing in realism of physical detail. The Lucullan life of the Nazi leaders, wife- and mistress-beating, the well-known American flyer who praises the Nazi air force, every last curve in the Goering silhouette—it all adds up to Miss Dodd's picture of the Nazi orgy. . . Is the picture authentic? As daughter of our Ambassador to pre-Munich Germany she had an extraordinary vantage point from which to witness the rise of Nazism and of the men who served it." A. F. Wolfe

Sat R of Lit 28:32 S 1 '45 850w

"Hitler, Goering, Frau Goebbels, even a Lindbergh-like figure, thread their way, along with some reminiscent journalists and a certain noble Soviet pilot, among the fictional figures in the book. Drinking, shooting, flying and loving are mingled in 'Sowing the Wind' with stealing, spying, beating and killing to make an outrageous melodrama. But, after all, there is nothing so outrageously melodramatic as recent German history, and to have pieced it together and presented as convincing a picture of hell-on-earth as this book is a remarkable tour de force." Virgilia Sapieha

+ Weekly Book Review p3 S 2 '45 900w

DODDS, JOHN M. Marine electricians' library. 3v il v 1 $3; v2-3 ea $4 McGraw

623.85 Electricity on ships (45-3609)

Contents: v 1, Electrical essentials in marine service; v2, Electrical power sources in marine service; v3, Electrical power uses in marine service. "[This set is] written with the purpose of relating the knowledge of the experienced electrician to the electrical requirements of marine craft." (N Y New Tech Bks)

Library J 69:1002 N 15 '44 50w (Review of v 1)

Library J 70:531 Je 1 '45 110w (Review of v2)

Library J 70:686 Ag '45 40w (Review of v3)

N Y New Tech Bks 30:7 Ja '45 (Review of v 1)

N Y New Tech Bks 30:23 Ap '45 (Review of v2-3)

DODGE, HAROLD FRENCH, and ROMIG, HARRY GUTELIUS. Sampling inspection tables; single and double sampling. 106p $1.50 Wiley

658.562 Sampling 44-8622

"A reprint of three articles which appeared originally in the Bell System technical journal. The purpose of the papers is to outline sampling inspection methods for the use of manufacturers, which will be satisfactory to both producer and consumer from the points of view of inspection costs, and the elimination of defective products. The chapter headings are: A method of sampling inspection; Single and double sampling inspection tables; Using double sampling inspection in a manufacturing plant. The sampling inspection tables are brought together at the end of the volume." N Y New Tech Bks

---

Library J 69:814 O 1 '44 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:61 O '44

Reviewed by S. S. Wilks
R of Scientific Instruments 16:93 Ap '45 1200w

DOHERTY, EDWARD JOSEPH. Corpse who wouldn't die. 256p $2 Arcadia 45-6099

Mystery story.

"The story has action aplenty, but it lacks plausibility." Isaac Anderson
— + N Y Times p16 Ag 5 '45 110w

"Plenty of action, much shooting, couple of extra deaths, and some attractive characters—but the plot tends to chase itself. Mostly noise."
Sat R of Lit 28:34 Je 30 '45 50w

DONAHEY, WILLIAM. Teenie weenie neighbors; il. by [the author]. (Whittlesey house publication) 68p $2 McGraw 45-10595

Further adventures of these tiny people, who live among the smaller animals, at peace with some of them, at war with others. They are so little that a tea kettle serves them as a laundry, an acorn shell is a full-sized bowl, and a catsup bottle top is big enough to cook candy in.

"Again William Donahey turns his paint brush and imagination to good use in creating a Teenie Weenie book. Perhaps it is because the author-artist believes so thoroughly in these little people and works out their adventures in such very real detail that they seem so believable and convincing to his many young fans." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p7 D 30 '45 180w

"The very little people have many adventures with the animals of the forest, and their genial historian pictures them delightfully with pen, ink and paint brush. This time there are five pictures in full color, and a double-sized sixth one repeated in the front and back of the book, for good measure. They are charming pictures, done by an artist of exceptional talent."
+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 9 '45 120w

DONHAM, WALLACE BRETT. Education for responsible living; the opportunity for liberal-arts colleges. 309p $3 Harvard univ. press
378 Education, Higher. Colleges and universities A44-5978

"The former dean of the Harvard graduate school of business administration states that the liberal arts college program should be pointed more specifically toward meeting the problems of everyday living and suggests concrete curriculum reforms to accomplish this. Integration of general education with life has been sacrificed to over-specialization on one hand and vagaries on the other, he asserts—a state which must be corrected if education is to be mobilized successfully in the struggle against totalitarian trends." Booklist

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Ja 14 '45 70w
Booklist 41:164 F 1 '45
Bookmark 6:4 N '45

"Not only university authorities, but those who have young people ready for college, will feel that Donham understands the needs of today and makes the case for the student, rather than for the institution. It contains much uncommon common sense, from the layman's viewpoint."
+ Current Hist 8:250 Mr '45 130w

"It is an excellent book for all libraries since it raises questions, encourages thought and outlines programs with clearness and candor. And after all, this subject is not limited in interest to professional educators." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 69:1047 D 1 '44 100w

"Professor Donham is easy to read, but his style is pedestrian, his contentions repetitive, and his humour non-existent." John Garrett
— + New Statesman & Nation 30:249 O 13 '45 180w

Reviewed by H. M. Jones
N Y Times p4 My 6 '45 650w

"The book while well argued and even scintillating in spots is on the whole rather tedious reading. Dean Donham's dig at progressive education is a bit amusing, as his general scheme is, but an application of principles therein taught for some decades and his treatment could now profit by a closer study of its doctrine on how learning takes place." W. H. Kilpatrick
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:15 Je 9 '45 1150w
Times [London] Lit Sup p394 Ag 18 '45 130w

"The volume is addressed to those who are most directly responsible for improving liberal-arts education. It may be read with profit by members of boards of trustees, students of education, and laymen."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:21 Mr '45 240w

DONNEL, C. PHILIP. Murder-go-round. 239p $2 McKay
45-6217

Combination of mystery and spy story, the scene of which is first Stockholm and then Washington.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p6 Ag 12 '45 90w
Kirkus 13:188 My 1 '45 80w

"Acceptable time-killer for a warm evening." E. H.
+ New Repub 113:54 Jl 9 '45 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p24 Jl 15 '45 90w

"If the espionage seems muddled at times, there's plenty of shooting to make up for it, as well as a nice little romance."
New Yorker 21:71 Jl 28 '45 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p11 Jl 22 '45 70w

DOOLEY, JOHN EDWARD. John Dooley, Confederate soldier; his war journal; ed. by J. T. Durkin; foreword by D. S. Freeman. 244p il $3 Georgetown univ. press, Washington, D.C.
973.782 U.S.—History—Civil war—Personal narratives, Confederate 45-5214

"This is the arresting wartime journal of a young Richmonder who enlisted as a private shortly before the Battle of Cedar Mountain in 1862 and had risen to the rank of captain by the Battle of Gettysburg less than a year later, when he was shot through both thighs in Pickett's charge. Taken prisoner by the Union Army, he spent nearly the whole remainder of the war in Fort McHenry, Baltimore, and on Johnson's Island in Lake Erie." N Y Times

Cath World 161:525 S '45 130w

Reviewed by W. F. Sands
Commonweal 42:289 Jl 6 '45 1300w

"Captain Dooley writes with realism of the ordeals and horrors of the battlefields. If he indulges from time to time in the orotund phrases of the period, and if he is sometimes unfair to the North and to its soldiers, these things are understandable." Virginius Dabney
+ N Y Times p5 Jl 22 '45 750w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
Social Studies 36:371 D '45 360w

"This diary is subject to errors. Pickett did not, as asserted, lead the charge in person, 'his long curls streaming in the fiery breath from the cannon's mouth.' Neither is Dooley always correct about the disposition of troops or the trends of conflict. Such errors are to be expected and do not detract seriously from the worth of an extremely interesting and valuable book; a book which will appeal to all who have an interest in military history, or in the history of the Civil war." R. A. Brown
+ — Springf'd Republican p6 S 19 '45 300w

"While [the author] was a prisoner of war he revised and expanded his notes and later at Georgetown he carried the revision still further, not always with the happiest results. His literary taste was far from impeccable and he inserted a good deal of folderol in the most inflated romantic style. It has been the aim of Father Durkin—who is professor of American history at Georgetown—to rescue the stark narrative from the fussy ornamentation and let the soldier, not the literary gentleman, speak. He has done an excellent job, too. The book as it stands now is the authentic report of a fighting man." G. W. Johnson

+ Weekly Book Review p14 Ag 5 '45 750w

DOOLITTLE, HILDA (H. D.) Tribute to the angels. 42p $2 (3s 6d) Oxford

811 45-10399

"This is a companion-piece to its author's 'The Walls Do Not Fall,' published last year. It is similar in form, with its succession of short unrhyming lines, broken up into sections of varying length. It is charged with a like esotericism and invokes such patrons of alchemists as Hermes and Thoth, and conceiving the war as itself an alchemist's crucible, served by an apocalyptic flame, it searches through war's smoke and ruin for the jewel of a new life." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p8 Ja 13 '46 240w

Reviewed by Wilfrid Gibson
Manchester Guardian p3 My 23 '45 50w

Reviewed by Randall Jarrell
Nation 161:741 D 29 '45 120w

" 'H. D.' retains a curious transparent glitter; I am not sure that limited though the resources, her recent poetry isn't her best. She writes now in tiny coupled lines that fall easily like drops of water; the once hard-frozen sense flows on, from couplet to couplet, poem to poem. Tribute to the Angels, a refraction of the war in secret, delights coolly." G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 29:276 Ap 28 '45 60w

New Yorker 21:68 D 29 '45 30w

"In answer to MacLeish's famous query: 'Who remembers the Imagists?,' here is another volume by H. D., the perfect Imagist, and the one most certain to survive fly-by-night changes in poetry. . . This exquisite volume, composed in two weeks during the spring of 1944, challenges any static or separate order to which men may still adhere in conventional churches." Alfred Kreymborg

+ Sat R of Lit 28:11 D 29 '45 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p176 Ap 14 '45 300w

"One of the chief difficulties with this work is the fact that it too closely resembles the flow of consciousness of a sensitive and erudite poet confronted by a motive for poetry, without shaping itself into a poem. H. D. is preoccupied with the idea of renascence as it has been presented in various religions, with the angels of the apocryphal Book of Enoch, and very largely, with curiosities of etymological scholarship. The result is provocative but unsatisfactory. The format of the little book is delightful and gives the poem an adventitious grace." Babette Deutsch

+ — Weekly Book Review p16 Ja 6 '46 300w

DORRANCE, ANNE. Green cargoes. 187p $2 Doubleday

581.9 Plants—Geographical distribution
Agr45-144

"Covers the search for, and the transportation of seeds and plants throughout the world. . . In addition to touching on the various explorations, the author devotes considerable space to the hardships and manner in which plants and seeds were discovered and transplanted from their native habitats." (N Y Times) Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 41:296 Je 15 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '45

"A history of botany should be more interesting than this is. . . Somehow, the personalities of these botanists who laid the groundwork, and their record of experiment, exploration, adventure, never come to life."

— + Kirkus 13:101 Mr 1 '45 130w

"Admittedly culled for the most part from material with which the advanced horticulturist is familiar, and somewhat loosely organized, 'Green Cargoes' will serve the amateur as a satisfactory introduction to one of the fascinating stories in the saga of civilization's progress." Lewis Funke

+ N Y Times p7 My 6 '45 450w

"The whole story of the migration of plants would extend the covers of a stout volume, but the story of their transportation by man from their original homes to the four corners of the earth, Miss Dorrance has managed to squeeze into the confines of a pocket-size book. And since she has told her tales of plant hunters in a fascinating fashion, 'Green Cargoes' is an example of good goods coming in little packages." Richardson Wright

+ Weekly Book Review p9 Je 3 '45 750w

Wis Lib Bul 41:66 Je '45

DOS PASSOS, JOHN RODERIGO. First encounter. 160p $2 Philosophical lib.

A45-5412

"Dos Passos' first book, originally called 'One Man's Initiation' and dealing with his experiences in the last war, now reissued under a new title and with a preface in which the author discusses the differences between the attitude toward war of his own generation, who had been 'raised . . . during the quiet afterglow of the nineteenth century . . . confident that industrial progress meant an improved civilization . . . a more humane and peaceful society' and to whom the war came as 'something outside of the normal order of things, like an epidemic of yellow fever in some place where yellow fever had never been heard of before,' and the attitude of the generation that grew up in the thirties, who 'from the time they first read the newspapers . . . drank in the brutalities of European politics with their breakfast coffee.' " New Yorker

---

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p3 O 14 '45 450w

"Recommended." M. M. Plumb

+ Library J 70:890 O 1 '45 80w

"It is a bad novel, fragmentary, ill-formed and awkwardly written. . . 'First Encounter' represents the notebook jottings of a schoolboy. It has merely historical interest today." Howard Moss

— + N Y Times p11 D 16 '45 450w

New Yorker 21:98 O 6 '45 140w

Reviewed by Harry Daum
Springf'd Republican p4d O 28 '45 500w

"As a narrative it has little in the way of sensibility and nothing in the way of characterization, and published twenty-five years late, is likely to strike some readers as the least of Mr. Dos Passos's works as well as the first."

Weekly Book Review p40 N 11 '45 130w

DOSTOEVSKII, FEDOR MIKHAILOVICH. Short novels; with an introd. by Thomas Mann. 811p $4 Dial press

Contents: The Gambler; Notes From Underground; Uncle's Dream; The Eternal Husband; The Double; The Friend of the Family.

Reviewed by Louis Zara
Book Week p5 D 23 '45 1000w

Reviewed by Harry Levin
New Repub 114:56 Ja 14 '46 1500w

Reviewed by Alfred Kazin
N Y Times p1 Ja 6 '46 4000w

"These stories deserve a place in any library without them—which means most libraries, since they have all been out of print for years. This volume, in other words, is one of the happiest ideas any publisher has had in a long time. . . Dr. Mann's introduction is very much worth reading."

+ New Yorker 21:82 D 22 '45 80w

Time 47:100 Ja 21 '46 1050w

DOUGHERTY, NORBERT F. Occupational planning for tomorrow. 155p $2.75 Smith, Richard R.

658.386 Employees, Training of 44-47047

"By the former president of General Motors Institute of Technology and now director of Industrial Relations, General Motors Corporation. Selection, training and promotion of executives in industry, intelligence and aptitude tests, apprentice training, analyzing man and job and selection and training of individual leaders and discovering decline of ability." Library J

Am Soc R 10:453 Je '45 50w

"The reader will probably agree that the author has directed his fire at many vulnerable points: the lack of proper vocational guidance facilities in our schools, the purely academic nature of school curricular, and the inefficient methods of executive training and planning in industry. It is doubtful, however, if the reader will agree that he has found the cure for all the evils he describes. In fact, it is at this point that this book can be most severely criticized; the introduction promises more than the book delivers." Jack Amos

Canadian Forum 25:72 Je '45 900w

Library J 70:118 F 1 '45 50w

"This book scarcely lives up to its title, since it covers but a few aspects of the subject and is slanted largely toward executive personnel. Much of the material, particularly that dealing with intelligence and aptitude tests, is either highly generalized or limited in perspective, and will prove of little practical value to personnel men."

Management R 33:38 Ja '45 70w

DOUGHTY, LEGARDE S. Music is gone. 214p $2.50 Duell

45-4455

Story of a country doctor and his struggle to bring health and some happiness to his patients, in a Southern village.

"Doughty is a considerable addition to the realistic school of Southern writers, and has an aptitude for dialogue similar to that of Erskine Caldwell. Such episodes as the horse-trading scene and the dispute over borrowing water are ingenious and convincing. The commonplace and obvious climax is a bit disturbing but the book makes not unrewarding reading." Jack Conroy

+ — Book Week p7 My 6 '45 290w

Booklist 41:286 Je 1 '45

"There's a nice quality to this, in the man, and in Lucia and Raz, along with indigenous regional portraiture."

+ Kirkus 13:167 Ap 15 '45 150w

"If your patrons like well-turned phrases that reveal a delightful sense of words, a quiet humor that makes one chuckle and characters that are living folk, then The Music Is Gone is a must book. . . Recommended." M. P. McKay

+ Library J 70:355 Ap 15 '45 70w

New Repub 112:854 Je 18 '45 120w

"Through these episodes a picture of the land emerges—a sun-bitten, lonely land, still fumbling for a living on its gutted farms, too isolated even to wonder about its place in tomorrow's cosmos. Dr. Will might have been a brilliant obstetrician in the city; instead, he buried himself deliberately in this forgotten corner, and devoted his life to improving the lot of its people, as best he could. It is no small tribute to Mr. Doughty's skill to say that he has made that long, near-hopeless struggle as absorbing as it is moving. His country doctor is a thoroughly human saint—a rare phenomenon in fiction." William Du Bois

+ N Y Times p21 My 13 '45 360w

"The quiet tale is well written and skilfully developed; details of the practice of medicine in a small community, some of them quite professional, furnish a springboard for the doctor's reflections on human fallibility. If at times these reflections seem more mellow than ripe and a little too consonant with the doctor's liking for Liszt's Liebestraum, at others they reveal the kind of sophisticated insight that derives from an encompassing experience." Grace Frank

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:29 N 24 '45 310w

"Sketchy but full of authentic characters and atmosphere."

+ Time 45:100 Ap 30 '45 30w

"The book is a little loose-jointed and slow-moving, like life in the Georgia countryside the doctor chose and loved. It also has staunchness and warmth. You come to share Dr. Will's faith in the potentialities of the people to whom he ministered and you hope that if the last country doctor has gone, someone else wise in the ways of men's minds and bodies has taken his place." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 29 '45 450w

DOUGLAS-IRVINE, HELEN. 77 Willow road. 208p $2 Doubleday

45-4556

Psychological novel which traces the story of an English family in which two sisters are the central characters. The older sister is plain, vindictive and jealous; the younger beautiful and weak. A young Cambridge student lodging in the house at 77 Willow road pieces together the story of sadism and horror which enveloped the old house.

Booklist 41:286 Je 1 '45

Reviewed by E. A. Laycock

Boston Globe p17 My 9 '45 300w

"The story of '77 Willow Road' is a good one; it holds the reader's interest and commands his sympathy, but one cannot help wondering whether it would not have been even better had the author chosen a less difficult technique. . . Rose, of course, is a beautiful character in contrast to all the weakness and deformity which surrounds her, though she herself is not without her own weakness. Why such a rose should blossom in so bleak a desert is a little difficult to understand; but it is always pleasantly moving to read about terrible things happening to a nice person, since one gets a certain satisfaction from one's feelings of compassion under such circumstances; this novel of Miss Irvine's can be recommended, therefore, to those who like occasionally to wipe away an honest tear."

Commonweal 42:194 Je 8 '45 500w

"Unusual in its pattern, told with a sure artistry, this should find discriminating readers."

+ Kirkus 13:113 Mr 15 '45 170w

"Miss Irvine weaves her story of a person's tragic disintegration in the mannered hand of a nineteenth-century novelist. This is not said in adverse criticism, but in sound respect for her ability to create a du Maurier mood for a romance in the du Maurier school of literature. That Evelyn Light seems a little slow in catching on to the identity of the woman in London is a minor fault that can be forgiven a novelist intent on sustaining a note of detachment in her narrator." Rose Feld

N Y Times p16 My 20 '45 400w

"Very good—in its class."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 My 26 '45 40w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p14 Je 3 '45 100w

DOW, JOHN. The little boy laughed. 256p $2 Arcadia

45-7200

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p9 S 9 '45 180w

"All in all, this is about as unpleasant a story as one would care to read." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p26 Ag 12 '45 100w

"Gruesome, amusing (see Josephine, the cook) and incredible by turns; may be used to kill time." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p14 Ag 12 '45 100w

DOWDEY, CLIFFORD. Where my love sleeps. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 298p $2.50 Little 45-9161

Tragic story of the last year of fighting around Petersburg and Richmond, during the Civil war. The viewpoint is that of a young Confederate captain, and the events of the war are complicated for him, after he meets a strange, mysterious girl on a plantation near the battle area.

Reviewed by Otto Eisenschiml
Book Week p5 N 25 '45 310w

Booklist 42:94 N 15 '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 D 29 '45 500w

Kirkus 13:379 S 1 '45 190w

"It is unfortunate that with such perception in the treatment of the war the author found it necessary to concoct a romance between Blount and a curious siren who lives on a decayed plantation with an old half-mad grandfather. This wholly synthetic affair, carried on under the most unlikely circumstances, detracts from the conviction and honesty of the book. . . Whatever the truth about such inscrutable heroines, Mr. Dowdey doesn't make his own version plausible. Otherwise he has done an impressive job of vivifying the days of Sixty-Four and the last campaign of the Army of Northern Virginia." F. W. Leary
+ — N Y Times p3 N 11 '45 360w

"The plan of the book is a good one, and the symbolism of Blount's love for Cathie seems sufficiently obvious, but in the writing the author has not always succeeded in fusing story and thesis. He is better when he is describing operations around Petersburg in 1864 and the sad last winter of the war than he is in the romantic episodes." T. M. Purdy
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:11 D 22 '45 400w

"It is with the soldiers in the line that Mr. Dowdey is at his best, and his portrayal of the half-starved Rebel army is an enduring picture. . . His book is full of action and understanding people of all sorts, set against a turbulent background." R. Y. Williams
Weekly Book Review p8 N 18 '45 700w

DOWNES, MRS ANNE (MILLER). Heartwood. 283p $2.50 Lippincott
45-7613

Character study of a Vermont boy, who grew up on a mountain farm, under almost impossible conditions, but developed into a man of character and charm. In the little village at the foot of the mountain Sam Crocker went to school and visited his aunt, who was the only mother he really knew. But his father, that soft-spoken but dishonored man up on the mountain, had a hand in the making of the man the little town looked up to. The book ends in 1919, with Sam's second marriage.

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
Book Week p3 S 2 '45 700w

Booklist 42:56 O 15 '45

Kirkus 13:276 Jl 1 '45 150w

"Interwoven is considerable forestry and lumbering information. Should be popular. Recommended." E. F. Kelly
+ Library J 70:685 Ag '45 70w

"The author is at her best in describing the mountain people and their primitive existence, but her plot, action-packed, is overcrowded at the end with too many events that turn on circumstance and coincidence. Yet because of the author's deep knowledge of her background and her use of homely, telling details, she manages, as in her first novel, 'So Stands the Rock,' to picture a corner of Vermont, vividly and realistically." Andrea Parke
+ — N Y Times p6 S 2 '45 450w

"Miss Downes' novel would probably not have suffered much if she had left out the plot, and she is far from being an expert writer, but she manages to get a certain delicate life into her characters and to make the conflict between the boy's love for a gently reared village girl and his feeling of responsibility toward his rough mountain people credible and moving."
+ New Yorker 21:74 S 1 '45 100w

"While 'Heartwood' may not be a great book, it makes good reading." Rhea Morgan
+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 23 '45 420w

"Miss Downes tells the story of Sam with simple, homespun grace. It is not a tale for the sophisticated palate but for those who have a feeling for the virtues that lie in the world of woods and mountains, for a person like Sam who has the quality of heartwood and for Pap Crocker who could say when he heard a hermit thrush singing, 'That's the single most beautiful sound in the world if you could have only one.'" Rose Feld
+ Weekly Book Review p7 S 2 '45 500w

DOYLE, CHARLES HUGO. Life of Pope Pius XII. 258p $3 Didier pubs.
B or 92 Pius XII (Eugenio Pacelli) pope
45-4244

A biography of the present pope written by a Canadian Catholic priest, now temporarily residing in the United States.

Reviewed by Robert Burns
Book Week p11 Jl 8 '45 400w

Foreign Affairs 23:696 Jl '45 20w

"This is a well-written, thorough and important book. Its presuppositions and conclusions may be challenged but they cannot be ignored."
+ Kirkus 13:133 Mr 15 '45 300w

"The salient facts in the life of Eugenio Pacelli are well known, and Father Doyle has no new ones to add. He gives the Pontiff a colorful background, and Catholic and non-Catholic readers alike will be grateful for the details of Vatican life and the bits of Church history which he includes. . . But if they want his real story, with the secret and intimate details of his fight for the Church, it is not here. Nor is it likely ever to be given to them. The life of a Pope does not include this purpose." Thomas Sugrue
+ — N Y Times p10 My 20 '45 600w

"A fascinating volume, which weaves together in a most pleasing manner an enormous amount of history and biography in the short scope of 247 pages." T. S. Hanrahan
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 10 '45 350w

DRAGO, HARRY SINCLAIR (WILL ERMINE, BLISS LOMAX, pseuds). Iron bronc. (Jefferson house publication) 187p $2 Morrow 44-7588

Western story.

Booklist 41:170 F 1 '45

Reviewed by Baron Ireland
Springf'd Republican p4d O 22 '44 180w

DRAGO, HARRY SINCLAIR (WILL ERMINE, BLISS LOMAX, pseuds). River of gold. 235p $2.50 Dodd 45-10362

A novel of love and adventure on the Sacramento river in the 1860s.

— Book Week p20 D 9 '45 140w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p19 Ja 6 '46 90w

DRAKE, ST CLAIR, and CAYTON, HORACE R. Black metropolis; a study of Negro life in a northern city; with an introd. by Richard Wright. 809p maps $5 Harcourt
325.26 Negroes—Chicago 45-9257

A sociological study of Negro life in Chicago. "Many years of research and the efforts of a very large number of persons have gone into

DRAKE, ST CLAIR—Continued
the formation of this book. . . The studies began as investigations of the general social conditions surrounding the problem of juvenile delinquency on Chicago's 'South Side.' . . As is evident from the book, the problem of delinquency ultimately became subordinated to the larger problem of the description and analysis of the structure and organization of the Negro community, both internally, and in relation to the metropolis of which it is a part." (Authors' acknowledgment)

Reviewed by M. T. P. Lochard
Book Week p3 O 28 '45 650w

Booklist 42:104 D 1 '45

"The book is readable, provocative both for the trained ecologists and general readers, such as students, social planners, and persons who wish to know more of the phenomenon of the growth of cities. It is predictable also that some men of good will, disquieted by what Drake and Cayton report, may go down to help." Youra Qualls
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 6 '45 650w

"Not written with quite the scientific approach of Myrdal, nor yet the light touch of Roi Ottley—but strikes a sound note."
+ Kirkus 13:461 O 15 '45 110w

"Easily the best and most up-to-date study yet published of Negro life in a northern city." L. D. Reddick
+ Library J 70:977 O 15 '45 80w

" 'Black Metropolis' is a rare combination of research and synthesis, a book to be deeply pondered. It offers no short cuts or magic solutions, but it contains the clearest picture of what it means to be a Negro in America that I have ever encountered. It is realistic and far-reaching, probing where other books have glossed over, interpreting where others have merely stated generalities. No one who reads it intelligently can ever believe again that our racial dilemma can be solved by pushing buttons, or by gradual processes which may reach four or five hundred years into the future." Bucklin Moon
+ Nation 161:525 N 17 '45 800w

"From cover to cover, this is a book of intellectual discipline and talent. It towers high above the slight, journalistic volumes that have been written in recent years by a number of white Southern newspapermen and which superficially engaged the same tragic and basic questions that are involved in any book-length statement on race relations. There is as much work in this book as in the more serious studies of the University of North Carolina sociologists, and I think it presents a more mature and penetrating view of race relations in America." Thomas Sancton
+ New Repub 113:647 N 12 '45 2750w

"The best review that is likely to be written of this book is already in print in the form of the sensitive and penetrating introduction which Richard Wright has furnished to the volume. He has pointed out not only the rich materials in Chicago, accumulated through many years of painstaking research on the part of many scholars, which made the study of Black Metropolis possible, but also has comprehended with keen insight the essential meaning of Negro isolation in our Northern cities, and indeed of our whole policy toward racial and ethnic minorities—and just what this policy can do to our civilization." Louis Wirth
+ N Y Times p5 N 4 '45 1100w

"There are many charts, graphs, and diagrams, which the high standard of the authors' writing, plus the dispassionate quality of their thinking, makes rather unnecessary. Richard Wright, somewhat less angry than usual, contributes an introduction that is one of the best things he has ever done."
+ New Yorker 21:99 O 27 '45 180w

"This book is part of the social equipment of a maturing America." H. A. Overstreet
+ Sat R of Lit 28:10 N 3 '45 1200w

School & Society 62:278 O 27 '45 30w

"To the ever-increasing literature on the Negro, written by Negroes, is added this excellent and authoritative volume on Chicago's black belt. Its authors are trained observers, with a background of long study and broad experience."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:2 N '45 550w

Time 46:108 N 5 '45 130w

Reviewed by Arna Bontemps
Weekly Book Review p4 O 28 '45 1600w

Wis Lib Bul 41:124 D '45

DRAPER, JOHN WILLIAM. Humors and Shakespeare's characters. 126p $2 Duke univ. press
822.33 Shakespeare, William—Characters 45-7103

"A scholarly addition to the vast literature of Shakespeareana. Professor Draper has delved deeply into Elizabethan medicine, science, pseudo-science and astrology. He has interpreted the characters of Shakespeare's comedies, tragedies and histories in terms of this research." (Library J) A select list of Elizabethan treatises and handbooks on the humors. Index.

"Recommended." George Freedley
+ Library J 70:488 My 15 '45 70w

Times [London] Lit Sup p464 S 29 '45 900w

DRENNAN, CARL MAC. HSC high-speed brake equipment for types A, B, and C Diesel locomotive units and cars with individual speed governor control; a practical textbook for the instruction of locomotive engineers and firemen; prepared under the supervision and with the approval of the Westinghouse air brake company. 68p pa $3 Am. tech. soc.
625.25 Air brakes 45-25

"A description of locomotive and car brake equipment for trains operating at high speeds. In addition to the diagrams incorporated in the text, the volume contains large scale diagrams of the necessary valves, wiring, and piping." N Y New Tech Bks

---

"Practical textbook for the instruction of locomotive engineers and firemen."
+ Library J 70:531 Je 1 '45 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:9 Ja '45

DRESSER, DAVIS (DON DAVIS, BRETT HALLIDAY, pseuds). Marked for murder. 210p $2 Dodd 45-9823

Detective story.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p12 D 23 '45 130w

"For those who like 'em tough."
Sat R of Lit 28:56 N 17 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p20 N 4 '45 150w

DRESSER, DAVIS (DON DAVIS, BRETT HALLIDAY, pseuds). Murder is my business. 208p $2 Dodd 45-4854

Detective story.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p22 My 27 '45 130w

"Michael Shayne's exploits make easier reading now that he has become less desperately tough and has abandoned that thin-man domestic act. This time he goes to El Paso to investigate some funny business about a soldier in trouble and a possible spy ring: gets involved with a mayoralty race, opposes numerous racketeers and generally displays his best, or soberer, side." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p15 Je 3 '45 60w

DRISCOLL, PAUL FRANCIS. My Felicia. 275p $2.50 Macmillan 45-8813

"In his first novel Paul Driscoll has chronicled the snobbery and petty antagonisms of a small New England mill town near Boston.

Felicia, a beautiful second-generation Polish girl, is caught between her loyalty to her background and her love for Mark Standler 2d, scion of an eminent banking family. The problem is complicated by Faith Brimmer, a designing Boston heiress; Steve O'Mara, an Irish lad irrepressibly in love with Felicia, and Alec Marwick, a free-thinking Harvard instructor." N Y Times

Book Week p16 O 21 '45 90w
Booklist 42:94 N 15 '45

"Here is a first novel possessing a certain freshness and distinction. Freshness because it deals with a relatively unexplored area of our life, the area of Polish immigrants and their American-born children. Distinction because it handles this material with sureness and sensitiveness. One wishes as much could be said for the rest of the book, which groans audibly at the joints. The plot is commonplace." H. L. Binsse
+ — Commonweal 43:76 N 2 '45 1200w

"An authentic portrayal of the era, of mixed people, of changing social and economic determinants, and a romance that has warmth and vitality."
+ Kirkus 13:347 Ag 15 '45 150w

"Told with considerable zest and realism but with an undertone of romance." M. H. McElfresh
Library J 70:979 O 15 '45 80w

"Mr. Driscoll has a clean-cut professional style, concise yet completely expressive; he depicts effectively the background of the hectic years immediately preceding and following the 1929 crash. While the present work lacks impact and a definite motive, it indicates a promise which may be fulfilled in the next." F. W. Leary
+ — N Y Times p30 O 21 '45 180w

Reviewed by M. M. Dickey
Springf'd Republican p4d N 25 '45 480w

"'My Felicia' is not a long novel, but it touches and illuminates many sides of life in the period it covers. Mr. Driscoll knows how to write and—what is just as important—how to stop. His narrative reflects alertness of mind—the exercise of an artistic economy that dictates the elimination of the non-essential." George Conrad
+ Weekly Book Review p12 O 21 '45 450w

DROKE, MAXWELL. Good-by to G.I.; how to be a successful civilian. 124p $1 Abingdon-Cokesbury

355.115 Veterans 45-5733

Advice for the returned soldier, giving pointers on the reentering of civilian life. Partial contents: How to get acquainted with your family and friends; The only girl—or how to awaken from a dandy dream without losing love; Meet the Chaplain in a frock coat; The school bell and the cash register; The old job —or a new opportunity?; Your handicap—face it and forget it; It's your country—from now on; You can be a successful civilian!

"Although its uplift tone makes it appear superficial rather than stimulating, its simplicity will have an appeal."
+ Booklist 42:32 O 1 '45
Christian Century 62:934 Ag 15 '45 40w

"Sermonettes and inspirational pep talks for the veteran. A little too much on the side of sweetness and light, even though the author is a 1st World War veteran. . . He misses the hard-hitting, down-to-earth talk the veteran needs."
Kirkus 13:292 Jl 1 '45 60w

DUBIN, JOSEPH W. Green star. 281p $2.50 Nat. inst. of Esperanto, 34 S. 16th st, Philadelphia 2

408.92 Esperanto 45-13028

"The author aims to show the need of a universal auxiliary language and to prove that Esperanto is practical and superior to its rivals. It was constructed by Dr. Zamenhof when he was 18, published nine years later in 1887. . . This is not a complete textbook in Esperanto, but it includes an outline of its grammar and system of word formation and word lists. It is important to note that Esperanto (like Basic English) is urged always as an auxiliary language, never as a vernacular tongue to displace any other." Christian Century

Christian Century 62:305 Mr 7 '45 240w
Foreign Affairs 23:688 Jl '45 20w

"The present volume is a well-rounded encyclopedia of the whole problem. It contains all the essential facts, including a complete Key to Esperanto." Albert Guerard
+ Nation 160:367 Mr 31 '45 500w
School & Society 61:96 F 10 '45 50w

DU BOIS, CORA ALICE. People of Alor; a social-psychological study of an East Indian island; with analyses by Abram Kardiner and Emil Oberholzer. 654p il maps $7.50 Univ. of Minn [34s Oxford]

572.9991 Ethnology—Alor (island). Society, Primitive A44-2386

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Du Bois has tackled a very difficult and a very significant problem seriously and courageously. She has tried out various techniques some of which seem more successful than others. She has scrupulously kept her data separate from her interpretation, so that the reader may form independent judgments. We are only at the beginning of research on the cultural conditioning of personality and all studies of this type are necessarily of a pioneer character. This one is particularly important because of its thoroughness and because of its exploratory nature. Students in the field of personality and culture are deeply indebted to both Dr. Du Bois and her collaborators." Hortense Powdermaker + Am Anthropol 47:155 Ja '45 3600w

"Dr. Du Bois's book is a genuine scientific contribution to the study of 'personality and culture,' a field in which there has been much more programmatic discussion and speculative inference, so far, than substantial achievement. . . Personally, I hope that this volume will be given the most careful scrutiny in psychoanalytic, psychiatric, and psychological journals. For if the principles and procedures exemplified in it can be made the basis for further investigations, mutually intelligible in their aims and methods to specialists in personality as well as in culture, the groundwork will be laid for an accumulation of data that will rapidly enrich our understanding of the relations between culture and personality." A. I. Hallowell
+ Am J Soc 50:322 Ja '45 1700w

"Du Bois and Kardiner have been successful in their interpretation of institutions in terms of personality conditioning. Yet we are not completely convinced by their interpretation of the genesis of some of the personality traits. Our skepticism stems in part from the fact that there are not sufficient data on feelings and attitudes coming from the natives themselves or by direct observations to confirm the logical deductions made by the author and her collaborator. . . The book is excellent for the large amount of ethnographical detail in regard to institutions. The author tried very hard to get the Alorese to talk about their private and inner feelings and attitudes, but without too much success, although she got more from the men than from the women in this respect." Hortense Powdermaker
+ — Am Soc R 10:115 F '45 1450w

DU BOIS, JOHN HARRY. Plastics; a simplified presentation of the important plastics materials and products with tables of their properties and the basic design information required by engineers and designers. 3d ed enl 447p il $4 Am. tech. soc.

668 Plastics 45-5716

"An established introductory textbook in which the properties and uses of plastic materials are treated from the practical viewpoint. Most of the added material in this new edition is found in Chapter XVII, Trends and developments." (N Y New Tech Bks) For earlier editions see Book Review Digest, 1942, 1943.

DU BOIS, J. H.—Continued

"This edition should add to the popularity of a book already widely accepted." A. J. Weith
+ Chem & Eng N 23:2264 D 10 '45 150w
Library J 70:751 S 1 '45 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:38 Jl '45

DUBOIS, MRS RACHEL (DAVIS). Build together Americans; adventures in intercultural education for the secondary school, with foreword by Edward C. Lindeman. 270p $2 Hinds
325.73 U.S.—Foreign population. U.S.—Race question. Education—Aims and objectives 45-35108

"Report of projects inaugurated by author and conducted in some hundred schools in different parts of the country over a period of twenty years. Basis of her proposition is as follows: individuals should have pride in their background and inheritance; this pride can be awakened by simple devices, and when released leads quickly to appreciation and understanding; all of this can be taught to children in schools and to adults wherever they congregate in small groups." Library J

Booklist 41:316 Jl 1 '45
Christian Century 62:959 Ag 22 '45 10w
Current Hist 9:459 N '45 70w
Reviewed by L. M. Kinloch
Library J 70:353 Ap 15 '45 110w
Reviewed by W. H. Kilpatrick
Sat R of Lit 28:42 S 15 '45 550w

"[Mrs] Dubois's new book is a mine of practical information for teachers, administrators, PTA officers, churchmen, public officials and community leaders generally. It applies in this new field the same principles of appreciating one another's backgrounds which in 1943 she implemented in 'Get Together Americans.'" Marshall Bragdon
+ Springf'd Republican p4 Je 2 '45 750w

DU BOIS, MRS THEODORA (MCCORMICK). Death sails in a high wind. 221p $2 Doubleday 45-8871
Detective story.

"Much sailing in high winds doesn't seem to help the pace or interest."
Kirkus 13:304 Jl 15 '45 60w
Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p10 S 30 '45 130w

"Rather haphazard plotting but lots of nautical atmosphere designed to entrance the yacht-club set."
New Yorker 21:88 S 29 '45 80w

"The boating background is interesting and the development of the story exciting in spite of the fact that the seasoned mystery fan will probably know the murderer long before the final chapter." M. L. H.
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d O 7 '45 180w
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p22 S 23 '45 180w

DU BOIS, MRS THEODORA (MCCORMICK). Heroes in plenty. 220p $2 Doubleday 45-8222

An adventure story about an 11 year old English boy who was shipwrecked when returning to his home from America in 1943. Tony finally reached home but only after many experiences—some of them with the Nazis—all over Europe.

Book Week p22 N 11 '45 300w
Booklist 42:61 O 15 '45
Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:459 N '45 90w

"The whole still maintains such an air of soundness and sanity, that not only seventh and eighth graders will like reading the adventure story, but their parents, too, will find themselves interested, and the early teens won't find it too young."
+ Kirkus 13:338 Ag 1 '45 210w
Reviewed by V. W. Schott
Library J 70:982 O 15 '45 70w

"In the shadow of the Gestapo he [Tony] realized the value of freedom. Thus what would otherwise be just a rattling good adventure story, not very distinguished in style or characterization, takes on significance. One of the most exciting war stories for children of 8 to 12." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p18 S 2 '45 180w

DU BOIS, WILLIAM EDWARD BURGHARDT. Color and democracy: colonies and peace. 143p $2 Harcourt
323.1 Colonies. Race problems 45-35105

The author, an American Negro scholar and publicist, surveys the situation of colonial and colored peoples thruout the world and presents arguments against imperialism and for the freedom of dependent nations.

"All in all, this little book must be regarded as primarily a tract for the times." R. G. Woolbert
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1054 O '45 370w

"This is a tract for the times, and as such it has considerable value; but it is not a scientific analysis of the large and difficult problem with which it deals." Amry Vandenbosch
+ — Ann Am Acad 242:174 N '45 600w
Reviewed by H. R. Cayton
Book Week p10 Jl 1 '45 850w
Booklist 41:294 Je 15 '45

"One may agree or disagree in whole or in part. The essential fact remains that what men like Dr du Bois say and feel, the colored peoples of the world are coming to believe with a rapidity which has no parallel in the dustier pages of history. And, if more moderate leaders such as he do not gain a proper hearing, and a reasonable amount of action, radical leaders will be thrust forward into their place." S. R. D.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 4 '45 600w
Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '45
Reviewed by George Streator
Commonweal 42:292 Jl 6 '45 900w

"His survey of the whole question of dependent peoples, among whom he includes almost every country except the Great Powers, is so brief and episodic that his book constitutes little more than an anti-imperialist—especially an anti-British—tract."
Foreign Affairs 24:159 O '45 90w

"Supported by primary evidence, this is a calmly, incisively stated argument and appeal for equality."
+ Kirkus 13:241 Je 1 '45 150w

"Sound, challenging, thought-provoking." D. R. Homer
+ Library J 70:486 My 15 '45 140w

"Timely and important in that it draws attention to a problem which has received far too little attention from liberals and which, one feels, was given scant attention at San Francisco and preceding United Nations conferences." Ralph Bates
+ Nation 161:186 Ag 25 '45 240w
Reviewed by M. J. Herskovits
New Repub 113:84 Jl 16 '45 850w

"In reading Mr. DuBois' book, and Americans should read it, they ought to keep one thing in mind: Colonial problems are a reflection of world problems, a microcosm revealing the jumble and tangle of world affairs; a reflection, too, of the clashes and conflicts between nations over a variety of issues. Thus while the provision of wider political and economic horizons for dependent peoples is a goal which Americans ought actively to seek, the solution of colonial problems cannot be achieved independently of the efforts to solve world problems on a world-wide scale." W. E. Diez
+ N Y Times p4 Je 10 '45 1550w

"This book by Dr. DuBois is a small volume of 143 pages; but it contains enough dynamite to blow up the whole vicious system whereby we have comforted our white souls and lined the pockets of generations of freebooting capitalists. Its chief value lies in what it reveals to us of conditions that hitherto we have merely taken for granted. Dr. DuBois knows the colonial situation. He has travelled widely among colonial peoples; and he has looked at their problems through his own eyes rather than through the eyes of the ruling caste. What he has to report is not pretty reading; it is not calculated to make us feel proud of ourselves—although we Americans have a little to our credit in the more recent handling of our own possessions. But it is reading that is utterly essential if we want to understand the fullness of the world job that is ahead of us." H. A. Overstreet

+ Sat R of Lit 28:17 Je 23 '45 1150w

"Out of the legion of contemporary books about the postwar world, this slender volume ought to be among the half-dozen judged indispensable. Clearsightedly it connects the political and economic structure of the modern world and Western civilization with its historic roots of capitalism and colonialism, and sees in the double dilemma of political and economic imperialism the crux of the world crisis." Alain Locke

+ Survey G 34:415 O '45 550w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:32 S '45 280w

Reviewed by P. S. Buck

Weekly Book Review p1 My 27 '45 1550w

Wis Lib Bul 41:82 Jl '45

DU BOIS, WILLIAM EDWARD BURGHARDT, and JOHNSON, GUY BENTON, eds. Encyclopedia of the Negro; preparatory volume with reference lists and reports, by [the editors] prepared with the cooperation of E. Irene Diggs [and others] introd. by Anson Phelps Stokes [pub. for] the Phelps-Stokes fund, inc. 207p $2.75 Wilson, H.W.

326 Negroes—Encyclopedias and dictionaries. Negroes—Bibliography 45-3862

"A four-volume Encyclopedia of the Negro, under the supervision of an editorial board including distinguished representatives of the white and Negro races, has been in the stage of planning and preparation since 1931. It will be comparable to the Catholic and Jewish encyclopedias, though somewhat less extensive than either. The present volume, prepared for use in the interval before publication of the complete work, is an important book in its own right. It contains an alphabetical list of the topics to be treated in the encyclopedia, with bibliographical references under each head. It is, therefore, a student's guide both to source materials and to secondary authorities concerning all aspects of Negro life and interest." Christian Century

Booklist 42:6 S '45

Christian Century 62:522 Ap 25 '45 140w

"The Preparatory Volume of Dr. DuBois's projected encyclopedia of the Negro should be in the library of every school, college, and serious study group. It will banish forever the cheapness of the material that the average man in public life has reached for to make a speech on the Negro question—provided of course, that his 'ghosters' take time to study the matter." George Streator

+ Commonweal 42:147 My 25 '45 190w

"There are a great many entries with only one source given, dozens of entries with only a reference to the Dictionary of American Biography, and numerous entries giving no source of information whatsoever. . . Moreover, a certain carelessness or inconsistency in dealing with materials is apparent throughout. It is difficult, for instance, to discover any principles guiding the selection of names and subjects for inclusion in this list. . . On the other hand, there are very useful reference lists for subjects covering as wide a range. . . Obviously . . . will best serve those libraries that have files of Negro journals, the usual biographical and general encyclopedias, such books as Work's Bibliography of the Negro in Africa and America, and a fairly good collection of general works on the Negro. However, most libraries need some sort of guide to materials in this field, and we know of no other list which brings together in such convenient form so much information on so many topics relating to the Negro. Therefore, in spite of a certain seeming capriciousness in the selection of subjects, and because we have no other list quite like it, this preparatory volume is recommended."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 16:38 Jl '45 600w

Reviewed by Alain Locke

Survey 81:215 Ag '45 70w

DUBOS, RENE JULES. The bacterial cell in its relation to problems of virulence, immunity and chemotherapy; with an addendum by C. F. Robinow. 460p il $5 Harvard univ. press

616.01 Pathology, Cellular. Chemotherapy A45-3345

"A thoroughgoing treatise on the relation of the bacterial cell to problems of virulence, immunity and chemotherapy. It integrates the considerable body of information, gained by the indirect methods of biochemistry and biological activity, with the data obtained by the classical techniques of cytology, and interprets some of the phenomena of the infectious processes in terms of the bio-chemical architecture of the bacteria. Its author is professor of comparative pathology and of tropical medicine in Harvard as well as a member of the Rockefeller Institute. It includes an addendum on the nuclear apparatus and cell structure of rod-shaped bacteria by C. F. Robinow of Cambridge, England." Scientific Bk Club R

"The greatest contribution of Dr. Dubos to the rapidly expanding field of bacteriology is the attitude in which the book is written. The approach is dynamic and analytic throughout; this is particularly valuable in view of the long-term transition from primarily descriptive research in bacteriology." T. N. Harris

+ Am J Pub Health 35:1325 D '45 450w

Scientific Bk Club R 16:4 Ag '45 150w

"Medical research workers in microbiology and students of the cell will gain stimulation from the kaleidoscopic problems discussed in this book. Even the general reader can find valuable orientation in an expanding modern science from this outgrowth of the author's lectures and research philosophy."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:57 D '45 320w

DUCASSE, CURT JOHN. Art, the critics, and you. 170p $2 Piest

701.1 Art—Philosophy. Esthetics 45-877

"The author's point of view is relativistic. The artist works to relieve and objectify his feelings. Communication of his feelings is merely incidental, and always imperfect. Every bearer or beholder simply makes out of the work of art what he can. And such appreciations are individual and infinitely various. Empirically what we call beauty is usually, though not necessarily, among the aims of the artist, and a chief resource for the art lover. But there is no objective or provable beauty. . . The rich scope the author gives to the arts is shown in a chapter on the sartorial and cosmetic arts, which after all are adjacent to the generally admitted arts of pantomime and the dance." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by Katharine Kuh

— Book Week p10 Mr 25 '45 270w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '45

"A master of lucid exposition, an adept at illustration, and an exemplar of independence, Ducasse here achieves a work of democratic art: in intent, in form, in compass, and in clarity. I do not know of a book which would be better to commend to students to recommend to their fathers and mothers, and especially to their mothers." T. V. S.

+ Ethics 55:320 Jl '45 200w

Reviewed by E. A. Shearer

J Philos 42:668 N 22 '45 1100w

DUCASSE, C. J.—Continued

"The oversimplification that limits the author's thinking is his treating the subject as confined to the psychology of the artist and the art lover, and in neglecting the collective aspect and his unreal tradition of taste. In such studies we never arrive at absolutes, but we do escape from a complete relativity into a realm of sufficient going authority, into a realm of working norms. It is the failure to take into account these collective and social aspects of his problem that leaves a sense of oversimplification after reading Professor Ducasse's vigorous pages. Having made a considerable demolition of traditional nonsense, he has not built much of anything on the ruins." F. J. Mather

Sat R of Lit 28:30 Ja 27 '45 400w

DUFFUS, ROBERT LUTHER. The valley and its people; a portrait of TVA; il. by the Graphics department of the Tennessee valley authority; Charles Krutch, chief. 167p $2.75 Knopf

627.1 Tennessee Valley authority 44-9211

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Bookmark 6:7 Ja '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '45

"This is the history of that program, in eight brief chapters which can be read easily in a couple of hours. The singing prose and the superb photographs not only tell the story but in their overtones convey the whole philosophy of T.V.A." H. M. Harris

+ Library Q 15:153 Ap '45 390w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:14 Ja '45

"For over a decade, Charles Krutch, chief photographer for TVA, has pictured farms, fields, eroded hillsides, floodlighted valleys in which dams were building, the stark beauty of spillways, penstocks, generators—and the people of the Valley. It is hard to say whether this generous sampling of fine work by him and his staff illustrates the text well or whether Mr. Duffus has written a fitting commentary on the pictures. The happy collaboration has produced a satisfying book." C. S. Ascher

+ Survey G 34:71 F '45 300w

"If one could fly over the valley, then land and traverse it, visiting farmsteads, factories, dams, lakes, and villages, and talking to the people of the valley, this book would be superfluous. But for those who cannot, it looks like the next best thing."

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:41 Mr '45 240w

Wis Lib Bul 41:17 Ja '45

DUMKE, GLENN S. Boom of the eighties in southern California. 313p il $3.75 Huntington lib.

333.33 Real property. California—Economic conditions 44-8007

"A substantial summary account of the promotional aspects of the land boom [in Southern California] of the later eighties. Eight chapters provide a modest background, point out the general factors which affected the boom as a whole—economic resources, railroad competition, advertising, irrigation, and educational improvements—and describe the methods of a number of the chief promoters. The remaining ten chapters are devoted to an examination of the developments in particular localities." Am Hist R

"Dr. Dumke's book is a highly significant, though in some respects disappointing, contribution to this aspect of our national development. That his research has been careful and thorough, within the limits he set for himself, no one can doubt. He has canvassed an extensive body of printed literature, including the more important newspaper files and all available secondary accounts. Favorably situated to exploit the resources of the Huntington Library, he has utilized the invaluable accumulation of manuscript collections bearing upon the history of the region which have been assembled there. These materials he has supplemented by an inspection of census data and unpublished county and municipal records. . . In spite of its rehearsal of business deals, the author's portrayal of the boom, considered as a local phenomenon, is graphic and colorful. The promotional stereotypes stand out clearly, and the quotations selected from contemporary sources are well chosen and highly readable. The detail is rich and the statistical data include valuable information on land values and prices, and the volume of business. Enough local history is brought in to show the significance of the boom in the development of individual communities." C. M. Gates

+ — Am Hist R 50:571 Ap '45 650w

"Any one curious to know how southern California got that way—and it is evident that a great many people are—will find the answer in Mr. Dumke's book. It is quite a story. With admirable thoroughness the author has recalled and documented one of the most completely zany chapters in the history of a region never noted for hide-bound conservatism. . . Mr. Dumke, a trained historian and a good one, tries hard to maintain a decorous tone throughout his work. It is a well-nigh hopeless task. His material is too fantastic to fit comfortably into the rigid mould of historical writing. As well try to use the scholarly approach to the story of the latest Hollywood scandal." Oscar Lewis

+ Weekly Book Review p6 O 15 '44 1200w

DUNCAN, ETHEL M. Democracy's children; introd. by Rachel Davis DuBois; il. by Margaret I. Thomas. 189p $2 Hinds

372.8 Intercultural education 45-37878

In semi-fictionized form this book contains accounts of a variety of projects carried on with elementary school classes which were aimed to bring out American diversity of cultural backgrounds. One project features a class in Spanish and a Mexican Christmas; a candy making party brings out George Washington Carver and his work as a scientist; St Patrick's day leads into a study of Irish backgrounds, etc.

"The book might have been more helpful if more of the hows and whys were given. As handled, the subject is approached in a rather feeble, fictional manner which detracts from the book's readability. But the ideas are here along with a good deal of information concerning our holidays and the history of the many peoples who make up America." P. A. Whitney

+ — Book Week p11 O 14 '45 140w

Booklist 42:142 Ja 1 '46

Cath World 162:189 N '45 140w

Christian Century 62:1259 N 14 '45 20w

School & Society 62:296 N 3 '45 20w

"There is nothing startlingly new here to the modern, progressive teacher, but the material is sound, well organized and pleasantly presented." C. M. Sauer

+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 24 '45 190w

DUNHAM, CLARENCE WHITING. Theory and practice of reinforced concrete. 2d ed 558p il $4.50 McGraw

693.5 Concrete, Reinforced. Concrete construction 44-9935

"The first part of this book is elementary and intended for introductory engineering courses. The remainder of it is written for advanced students and practicing engineers. Among the topics that have been treated more fully than in the first edition [Book Review Digest, 1939] are methods for the design of beams, and bond stresses and reinforcement. A beam-and-girder warehouse floor has been worked out as an illustrative problem of how to plan and picture span lengths and the arrangement of the reinforcement; design data are given for column footings with direct loads and bending; and the material on columns, two-way slabs, and flat slabs has been rewritten to agree with the 1940 report of the Joint Committee." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 69:814 O 1 '44 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:58 O '44

DUNHAM, CLARENCE WHITING, and THALBERG, MILTON D. Planning your home for better living. (Whittlesey house publication) 278p $4 il McGraw

728.6 Architecture, Domestic—Designs and plans. Building 45-35181

"Practical book for the prospective home owner with information on selection of land, planning the house, proportioning of rooms, construction, painting and decorating, landscaping and legal matters and financing. [Contains also] 100 photographs, drawings, and floor plans. Glossary of terms." Library J

"More conservative in its outlook than 'Tomorrow's House,' but replete with valuable information on plumbing, heating, furnishing, landscaping, construction, financing, etc., this book should be the right answer for the home planner who may not be ready to 'go modern' all out, but who still wants the utmost in comfort, beauty, convenience and up-to-date equipment which his budget will allow."

+ Book Week p8 D 23 '45 130w

Booklist 42:53 O 15 '45

Bookmark 6:6 N '45

Library J 70:686 Ag '45 50w

DUNN, ESTHER CLOUDMAN. Pursuit of understanding; autobiography of an education. 229p $2.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Education 45-9896

A personal account of the author's own education, from the days when she lined up her dolls in a row and lectured to them, thru her college and university days at Cornell and the University of London. At present she holds the chair of Mary Augusta Jordan professor of English at Smith college.

"It seems to me that the book is tremendously important to all thinking people." Olive Carruthers

+ Book Week p14 N 18 '45 270w

"In Pursuit of Understanding we have the portrait of a schoolmistress, in the finest sense of that quaint and genuine word. . . It is an illuminating book." E. W. Bates

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 19 '45 550w

"This unusual book, by a distinguished Professor of English in Smith College, is the story of an education rather than a conventional autobiography. Intensely personal, it is yet of general interest because it records an experience widely shared and highly valued in American society. Consequently we follow Miss Dunn's vivid and sensitive portrayal of her experience with sympathy. . . Miss Dunn's experiences fit fairly definitely into the ivory tower category and may be criticised as such. Paradoxically in this legitimate criticism, lies, apart from its literary value, the book's current worth. Appearing as it does in the midst of the present examination of conscience in American education, amid conflicting and complementary plans for imparting our cultural heritage more adequately to all sorts of students, Miss Dunn's book serves as a reminder of the vital connection between the scholarly pattern of life and all serious intellectual achievement—as a reminder of the debt of the marketplace to the ivory tower in the pursuit of understanding." F. S. Childs

+ Commonweal 43:388 Ja 25 '46 480w

"What Miss Dunn tries to convey,—the color, thrill, adventure and deep meaning of a real intellectual life, she somehow fails to impart. She may enjoy her life, but those who read these pages will feel that it seems only pedantic and circumscribed. It is sincere. It may interest teachers, but I doubt if it provides stimulus or provocation to many."

— + Kirkus 13:392 S 1 '45 130w

Reviewed by L. B. Salomon

Nation 162:52 Ja 12 '46 320w

"The texture of this book is of a fine and careful grain, its substance solid, it has weight and dignity as the 'autobiography of an education,' and it should appeal to many conservative humanists as being the heart of the problem: Why scholarship in a troubled world? Miss Dunn has recorded her memories with an almost Proustian fidelity." H. M. Jones

+ N Y Times p4 D 30 '45 750w

School & Society 62:328 N 17 '45 20w

"A book for every thoughtful teacher, from an instructor in the primary grades to a college professor. The author takes the teaching profession with deep seriousness and is constantly searching in the profession new channels to get closer to the student, to inspire him to think for himself." M. M. Dickey

+ Springf'd Republican p4d N 18 '45 300w

"It is disappointing to report that, after following a clearly able mind on [its] voyage of discovery for more than two hundred pages, one comes away with only a superficial acquaintance with what makes it 'itself.' One knows where, when and under what conditions it has studied. But one knows little or nothing of its dreams, aspirations. defeats and fulfillments, except for those directly related to study and teaching. Perhaps the 'civilized restraint' that Miss Dunn extols several times in the book is responsible for this situation. But it seems more likely that it is the limitation of the scholar's, as contrasted with the artist's approach. It is as a human document that 'Pursuit of Understanding' suffers under this limitation." Hiram Hadyn

Weekly Book Review p16 D 9 '45 360w

DUNNE, PETER MASTEN. A padre views South America. (Science and culture ser) 290p il $2.50 Bruce pub.

918 South America—Description and travel 45-3953

The author of this book of travels is chairman of the Department of history of the University of San Francisco. In 1943 in the company of another Catholic priest he visited most of the principal cities of South America and herein records his observations on what he saw of cultural, historical and religious interest.

"This excellent, informal travelogue concerns itself for the most part with artistic and historical lore. It makes the richness of South America's Catholic background quite apparent. On present-day matters Father Dunne is all too brief, but his point of view is admirable."

+ Commonweal 42:174 Je 1 '45 130w

Foreign Affairs 23:702 Jl '45 30w

"An understanding and discerning padre is Father Dunne, and he has given in this volume an interesting travelog based on a recent visit to the several South American republics."

+ Kirkus 13:129 Mr 15 '45 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p268 Je 9 '45 1150w

DUNNE, PETER MASTEN. Pioneer Jesuits in northern Mexico [ed. by Herbert E. Bolton]. 227p il $3 Univ. of Calif.

377.35 Jesuits in North America. Jesuits—Education. Education—Mexico A44-4833

"Father Dunne's book is a continuation of his earlier volume on Pioneer Black Robes on the West Coast [Book Review Digest, 1941]. In that book he was concerned with the Jesuit advance up the Pacific Coast; in this one he tells the story of their activities a little farther east, in the mountains and on plateaus of the present Mexican states of Durango and Coahuila. The period covered is roughly the half century between 1590 and 1640. . . Nearly half of the space in the book is devoted to the great uprising of 1616 among the Tepehuanes, its suppression, and the subsequent reconciliation and reconstruction." Am Hist R

"Father Dunne writes as one having authority in his field: he knows the country about which he writes; he knows his sources. The book is based largely on contemporary records, particularly the anuas or annual reports of the missionaries. The narrative is factual but not overburdened with details. The style is clear, and the format of the book attractive. There is a useful map on which are shown many, but not all, of the places mentioned in the text." C. B. Goodykoontz

DUNNE, P. M.—Continued
+ Am Hist R 50:544 Ap '45 480w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 D 10 '44 40w

"Based upon original documents, put together with scholarly care and presented in a readable style, supplemented with an essay on sources, carefully chosen bibliography and a good map, the book is one to satisfy the requirements both of the student and the general reader."
+ Cath World 162:94 O '45 230w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:22 Mr '45 240w

DUPEE, FREDERICK WILCOX, ed. Question of Henry James; a collection of critical essays. 302p $3.75 Holt
813 James, Henry 45-10290

Collection of critical essays about Henry James, written during the last half century. Partial contents: Mr Henry James's later work, by W. D. Howells; The mote in the middle distance, by Max Beerbohm; The historian of fine consciences, by Joseph Conrad; The old man, by F. M. Ford; The mind of an artist, by Percy Lubbock; The aesthetic idealism of Henry James, by S. P. Sherman; Henry James and Stephen Crane, by Thomas Beer; On Henry James, by T. S. Eliot; The American, by Constance Rourke; The poetics of Henry James, by M. D. Zabel; At the grave of Henry James, by W. H. Auden; Henry James, by André Gide; Henry James, melodramatist, by Jacques Barzun. Bibliography. Index of James' characters and titles.

Reviewed by Bergen Evans
Book Week p4 N 25 '45 500w
Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman
Book Week p28 D 2 '45 650w
Booklist 42:160 Ja 15 '46
Reviewed by Cuthbert Wright
Commonweal 43:147 N 23 '45 550w
Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt
Commonweal 43:362 Ja 18 '46 850w
Kirkus 13:358 Ag 15 '45 150w

"Recommended as the most useful single book on a major American writer whose work is now being republished and reappraised." H. W. Hart
+ Library J 70:1086 N 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by James Grossman
Nation 161:525 N 17 '45 900w

"Mr. Dupee's collection is particularly good as a guidebook, for it reprints many valuable essays, some of them fairly inaccessible until now." Alfred Kazin
+ N Y Times p4 D 2 '45 2250w

"There was about Henry James, and still is about his work, a quality that excites a conditioned reflex in literary critics; just mention his name and they are in there whining and growling and worrying the subject like a terrier left alone with a Paisley shawl. This excellent anthology is a case in point, and whether you care if the Henry James school keeps or not, you can't help admitting that, on this subject at least, good literary criticism is far from the dead duck it's supposed to be."
+ New Yorker 21:122 N 17 '45 140w
Springf'd Republican p4d N 25 '45 650w
Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
Weekly Book Review p5 Ja 6 '46 1100w

DUPLAIX, LILY. The white bunny and his magic nose; pictures by Masha. [28p] $1 Simon & Schuster 45-4231

"The story is of a rabbit who had wishing powers: when his nose touched the kitten he turned her pink, then blue, then white. There she is fur and all, to prove it, and the same with a puppy, a cock and a goose. It was fun to put the barnyard through the rainbow, and the bunny kept at it till the charm began to work backward and he turned all colors too. So everybody washed white again and you leave them dancing." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p14 Je 10 '45 180w

"Another book to make small boys and girls chuckle."
+ Kirkus 13:200 My 1 '45 150w

"Very satisfactory explanation for the pink inside a bunny's ears. Recommended for children with clean hands because of the delicate shades of fur!" Elizabeth Johnson
+ Library J 70:492 My 15 '45 70w

"This 'trick' book has more story than most of its kind, a gay, funny one, and Masha's pictures make the embarrassed animals seem very much alive."
+ N Y Times p18 My 20 '45 100w
Springf'd Republican p4d My 13 '45 80w

"The first books to give little children animals with 'real fur' to stroke, functioned almost entirely on that fact. . . That time has passed: the novelty has worn away: the fur-bearing animal now must blend into the rest of the picture and his actions must be in some manner made reasonable. This is done for the first time with full success in this tale for the amusement of very little children—even babies, though it will last through four year-olds."
Weekly Book Review p18 My 20 '45 300w

DU RELS, ADOLFO COSTA. See Costa du Rels, A.

DURKIN, JOSEPH THOMAS, ed. John Dooley, Confederate Soldier. See Dooley, J. E.

DUVOISIN, ROGER ANTOINE. The Christmas whale; il. by [the author]. [45p] $1 Knopf 45-9095

Picture story book about Santa's dilemma the year all his reindeer had the flu just at Christmas time. For ages five to seven.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p62 D 2 '45 130w
Booklist 42:112 D 1 '45
Kirkus 13:295 Jl 1 '45 110w
Reviewed by M. L. Goodwin
Library J 70:1137 D 1 '45 50w

"Strikes the authentic note of childlike fun. . . This friendly little book is a happy addition to the Christmas stories for the younger children." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p42 D 2 '45 90w
New Yorker 21:136 D 8 '45 40w

"There have been so many silly pointless stories and pictures about Santa Claus and his reindeer that we approached this one with misgivings. By the third or fourth page we found ourself laughing out loud. This is a really amusing picture book. It gets funnier and funnier as it goes on." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:40 D 8 '45 380w

"The bright, gay colors and decisive, absurd designs are in the Santa Claus line so truly that children won't notice how modern they are."
+ Weekly Book Review p10 N 11 '45 310w

DWIGGINS, WILLIAM ADDISON. Millennium 1 [a melodrama; designed by the author]. 100p $2 Knopf 812 45-3187

A fantastic drama. Many years hence the machines created by man, acquire such immense powers that they take over the control of the earth and reduce men to the status of grubs living in caves and emerging only at night. The drama tells how men finally came to rebel and how thru the skill and daring of their leader they put machines back into their place.

Kirkus 13:52 F 1 '45 130w
Reviewed by George Freedley
Library J 70:489 My 15 '45 30w

"Obviously, there are supposed to be implications in 'Millennium 1' for our technological-minded age. And, to be sure, there are. But the implications have been stated before, and stated with greater skill than Mr. Dwiggins commands. As it is, his melodrama is superficial and uninspired." Lewis Funke
— N Y Times p20 Ap 29 '45 500w

Reviewed by C. P. Rollins
Sat R of Lit 28:29 Jl 14 '45 650w

"The best scene in the play, which is highly readable if a potential headache to backstage crews, is in the 'conscious center' when a captured homogrub is brought in to be questioned by the prime coordinator. . . Those who share this reader's distrust of anything automatic are advised that a homogrub secret weapon takes care of things very nicely." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 29 '45 300w

"It is a curious and fascinating play to read, and might be fascinating on the stage if some manager, co-operating with Mr. Dwiggins in designing the great machines, could afford the expense that would be involved. But that seems unlikely." W. P. Eaton
+ Weekly Book Review p12 Ag 12 '45 180w

DWIGHT, HERBERT BRISTOL. Electrical coils and conductors; their electrical characteristics and theory. 351p $5 McGraw

537.51 Electric coils 45-5459

"A knowledge of the practical operating principles of electrical coils and conductors, is essential to a use of this volume which emphasizes the theoretical aspects of the design and operation of such apparatus. Among the topics discussed are: reactance of concentric core-type transformers; Eddy-current loss in transformer windings, armature coils, and round wire; resistance to ground; reactance of round tubes and square tubular bus bars; skin effect in concentric tubular conductors; mutual inductance of fine wire coils; repulsion between strap conductors. Several chapters deal with cylindrical coils without iron cores, and the related formulas needed in practical cases." N Y New Tech Bks

---

Library J 70:531 Je 1 '45 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:22 Ap '45

E

EAGLETON, CLYDE. Forces that shape our future. 200p $3.25 N.Y. univ. press [18s 6d Oxford]

341.1 U.S.—Politics and government. U.S.—Economic policy. International cooperation 45-4216

In these lectures it is the author's purpose "to present, in as systematic form as possible, the forces that are at work in the world today and the direction in which they push us, and to suggest some steps that we might take in adjustment to the situation. In the first three lectures [the author has] attempted to outline three of these forces; in the next two, to suggest some steps that we could take; and in the last lecture to point out some of our human characteristics that will make the going difficult for us." (Pref) Contents: From rugged individualism to government; The unbearable pressure of modern war; The plight of the individual; The dangers we face; International organization; Americans are human. Index.

"The professor of international law at New York University delivered six lectures under the Stokes Foundation of that university during November and December, 1943. While many of the situations to which the lectures were intended to apply have already been realized, the principles dealt with by Dr. Eagleton provide a splendid background for the intelligent layman's understanding of such situations. Moreover, the lectures may well be perused by Dr. Eagleton's professional colleagues. The author has a commendable faith in the ability of the average citizen, once given the facts, to think things through, and to act in the right direction." C. E. Martin
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1040 O '45 550w

Foreign Affairs 24:159 O '45 20w

Kirkus 13:118 Mr 15 '45 250w

"The 1943 James Stokes lectures on politics give a thoughtful and lucid picture of international problems as they touch the individual and the individual's responsibility for their solution. The author combines wide knowledge of current trends and comment with a gift for clear presentation of conflicting issues well within the understanding of the average reader whose concern with international problems is still acute." M. C. Manley
+ Library J 70:305 Ap 1 '45 90w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:33 S '45 240w

EARHART, MARY. Frances Willard; from prayers to politics. 417p il $3.75 Univ. of Chicago press

B or 92 Willard, Frances Elizabeth A44-5460

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"In this biography we have a very readable and informing book about a woman who, for reasons developed extensively in the book, has never been correctly estimated or understood by the American public. Though the reader may not agree in all respects with the author's estimate, he cannot fail to be impressed with the truthful effect of her conscientious and exhaustive recording." Katharine Anthony
+ Am Hist R 50:573 Ap '45 600w

"The volume is attractive in design, format, and illustrative material. In some half-dozen spots the composition slips into error. A time or two this reader felt that the author had, in spite of her real critical ability, adopted unconsciously some of the eulogistic phrasing of Miss Willard's disciples. . . The Index does not seem altogether adequate for the material drawn on, but this may be due to the exigencies of wartime. These defects are very slight by comparison with the great merits of the book, and the amount of firsthand documentation that has been used, in spite of the destruction earlier spoken of, bespeaks much hard work on the part of the author and no little imagination as to possible sources." Gladys Bryson
+ — Am J Soc 51:158 S '45 1000w

"Mary Earhart's biography represents an earnest and competent effort to rescue an extraordinary woman from her idolaters. . . Miss Earhart ably portrays the vast talent Frances Willard possessed for practical politics. Her basic skill was an astute use of the means nearest at hand. She understood the galling discontent and sense of frustration working like a ferment among the members of her own sex, particularly in the Middle West, and beguiled it to her own uses. . . It is regrettable that Miss Earhart does not more convincingly portray Frances Willard's reputed charm and magnetism." L. M. Young
+ — Ann Am Acad 239:225 My '45 550w

Reviewed by Harvey O'Connor
Book Week p2 Mr 4 '45 460w

"The faults of the book are few. Occasionally, the author seems to extend herself unduly in 'debunking' a legendary 'St. Frances' and 'the leader sent by God.' She is unnecessarily surprised at pious deathbed utterances that seemingly smack of sanctimonious insincerity but actually reflect a characteristic Methodist phraseology. . . All in all, we are indebted to Miss Earhart for her reconstruction of Miss Willard. She has given us a scholarly biography that reveals the years of drudgery and ransacking of archives for material. She has written with verve and impartiality." L. H. Carlson
+ Christian Century 62:886 Ag 1 '45 850w

"Fascinating reading. . . Miss Earhart, a member of the faculty of political science at Northwestern, has done a man-sized (oops, sorry, a woman-sized) job in bringing together

EARHART, MARY—Continued
these diverse pigments for a sympathetic portrait of an awe-inspiring personality." McAlister Coleman
+ Nation 160:190 F 17 '45 420w

"Miss Earhart has been ruthless as well as sympathetic, painstakingly careful in her treatment of both the old myth and the material which refutes it, and frank and shrewd in her analysis of Frances Willard and her contemporaries. Under the author's deft touch a new portrait of the famous leader appears—both greater and less than the figure of the popular myth. Frances Willard the woman—ambitious, dynamic, loving the limelight, delighting in adulation, fully conscious of her peculiar emotional appeal to other women and capitalizing upon it—is a more interesting person than the saint of the myth, and her service in awakening the interest of many American women in every new idea and movement was more important than her contribution to the temperance cause." A. F. Tyler
+ Pol Sci Q 60:158 Mr '45 550w

"The reader who quickly passes over the title of this book because he is not interested in a little bow of white ribbon or the temperance cause for which it stands, will make a grave mistake. For this biography is as American as pioneering, as universal as human nature, as modern as social security." L. M. Phillips
+ Survey G 34:74 F '45 410w

"The book is written both interestingly and authoritatively."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:10 Mr '45 240w
Wis Lib Bul 41:52 My '45

EASTERBY, JAMES HAROLD, ed. See Allston, R. F. W. South Carolina rice plantation

EBENSTEIN, WILLIAM. The German record; a political portrait. 334p $3; text ed $2.25 Farrar

943 Germany—Politics and government. World war, 1939—Peace 45-5076

A survey of Germany's political history from earliest times to the present. The author, associate professor of political science at the University of Wisconsin, holds not only Hitler and his followers but the bulk of the German people, responsible for the wrongs Germany has committed against other countries.

Reviewed by M. W. Graham
Am Pol Sci R 39:1223 D '45. 800w

Reviewed by A. M. Lee
Am Soc R 10:810 D '45 500w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek
Ann Am Acad 241:170 S '45 360w

Reviewed by Ernest von Hartz
Book Week p4 Jl 8 '45 650w

Booklist 42:12 S '45

"This is an interesting and vital book. The democratic nations badly need to understand the German problem, and this requires familiarity with historical causes and effects. Dr. Ebenstein has traced for us the historical background, and makes us follow through the history of modern Germany the main threads that are knotted into the present problem. He thus enables us to see the picture as a whole, and unless not only our leaders but a goodly portion of our people see it thus, we shall not avoid senseless revenge or unreal and romantic idealism, indeed we shall probably be guilty of both." George Grube
+ Canadian Forum 25:192 N '45 500w

Christian Science Monitor p16 Jl 28 '45 750w

Kirkus 13:123 Mr 15 '45 170w

"Book, which culminates in some reflections of future German politics, is full of interesting insights, but author somehow lacks historic sense. Nevertheless attempt at interpreting German national character will find many willing readers these days. Recommended for larger libraries." F. E. Hirsch
+ — Library J 70:486 My 15 '45 110w

Reviewed by H. W. Ehrmann
New Repub 113:195 Ag 13 '45 300w

"Professor Ebenstein's extreme if understandable hatred for Germany has dimmed his historic vision. He can see only black, not alone in the Hitler era but in all German history." Manya Gordon
N Y Times p5 Je 24 '45 1350w

"This is a book that every responsible citizen, not least our political and military leaders, should read and reread. If we absorb its lessons, we will not be tempted to repeat the indulgent mistakes made at the end of the last war." Lewis Mumford
+ Sat R of Lit 28:30 Ag 11 '45 270w
Social Studies 36:284 O '45 20w

" 'The German Record' gives background for the better understanding of the problem of Germany, and the author makes a good case for his main proposition, which is that Germany is what she is not because of Nazis, but because of Germans. It is an important book."
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 26 '45 950w

"Let us not be satisfied with the wisdom of 1945. Bismarck, a wise man in his generation, was proved foolish within fifty years. In short, we need to take thought. Germany is no longer a nightmare; she will long remain a headache. Hence the extraordinary value of a study such as this, richly informed, closely reasoned, by a man evidently well trained in history and the law. Even when we do not agree with him, we must respect his ability and his integrity. And it is a joy, from the craftsman's point of view, to find that great rarity, a book that is self-respecting." Albert Guerard
+ — Weekly Book Review p5 Je 24 '45 1350w

EBENSTEIN, WILLIAM. Pure theory of law. 211p $2.50 Univ. of Wis. press

340.1 Law—Philosophy. Kelsen, Hans. State, The 45-37003

"This book was first published at Prague in 1938 under the title Die rechtsphilosophische schule der reinen rechtslehre, and its original manuscript was rendered into English by Charles H. Wilson. The present version, although based on the old book, represents my own extensive revision, in both form and substance, of the original translation." (Introd) "The Pure Theory of Law seeks to establish a logical foundation of legal science by analyzing its basic concepts and methods. The postulate of purity of method, which is its guiding principle, demands a sharp distinction between juristic methods and psychological as well as sociological methods, and between legal norms and ethical norms. Legal science is separated from psychology and sociology by contrasting the Is and the Ought, causal methods and normative methods. It is separated from ethics by contrasting positive law, which is the subject matter of legal science, with natural law, which belongs to the domain of ethics. The elaboration of this view involves an analysis of the structure of a legal order. The prime objective of this analysis is to determine the unifying principle by virtue of which a large variety of legal norms of different kinds . . . may be regarded as elements of the same legal order. Kelsen calls this principle 'basic norm' (Grundnorm) and interprets it as a fundamental hypothesis comparable to the most general principles of the natural sciences." (Am Pol Sci R)

"Professor Ebenstein's introduction to Hans Kelsen's theory of law should be read not only by jurists who are eager to grasp more clearly the logical foundations of legal science, but by all students of social and political philosophy in this country. It gives a competent account of one of the most interesting and most hotly debated methodological enterprises in the social sciences." Felix Kaufmann
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1008 O '45 750w

"The appearance of this volume signals the fact that legal philosophy in America has come of age. The pedestrian pragmatism of American legal science seems destined to be greatly enriched by the philosophical speculations of those trained in law and political theory as well as in the philosophical disciplines proper. From this point of view Dr. Ebenstein's work is of first importance." T. A. Cowan

+ Ann Am Acad 242:204 N '45 650w

"Professor Ebenstein's book is a skilful and carefully documented presentation of the Pure Theory. Just that. In fact, the argument is, more often than not, merely an able condensation of the arguments in the original sources. Naturally, the author follows most frequently Kelsen, but there is also some interesting material from Kelsen's principal students, such as Felix Kaufmann, Merkl, Verdross, and Frantisek Weyr. The over-all arrangement of the material and the strategy of the exposition are often original and always satisfactory. Of independent criticism there is none. But since Kelsen himself is a brilliant and incisive critic of other views, these criticisms, too, had to be reported; they make for lively reading and provide, incidentally, valuable background material. In spite of its self-imposed limitations, Ebenstein's Pure Theory of Law is a meritorious book; it caters, as one usually says, to a real need." Gustav Bergmann
+ Ethics 56:71 O '45 1550w

EBERHART, MRS MIGNON (GOOD). Wings of fear. 249p $2 Random house 45-1662

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p12 Mr 11 '45 100w
Booklist 41:210 Mr 15 '45

"Best of the week."
+ Boston Globe p6 F 21 '45 60w

"OK."
+ Kirkus 12:553 D 15 '44 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p24 F 25 '45 180w

"Just the thing to keep Eberhart fans gasping."
+ New Yorker 21:79 F 24 '45 80w

"Good thriller."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 Mr 3 '45 40w
Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 11 '45 180w

"The espionage part is as slick as most fans could desire though you may not believe every word of it. Since some of the sequences are pretty tall, this particular Eberhart is best taken as a puzzle without bothering too much about motives and so forth." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p18 F 18 '45 150w

EBERHART, RICHARD. Poems, new and selected. 30p $1; pa 50c New directions 811 45-1623

Small book of poems by an Amercian writer at present on duty as lieutenant in the naval reserve. The selection offers some recent verses, and four from his books which have already been published.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p13 Mr 11 '45 200w

Reviewed by F. W. Dupee
Nation 161:138 Ag 11 '45 180w

"Mr. Eberhart, either because his ear is defective or because he is overanxious to avoid the merely smooth, makes the not uncommon mistake of establishing violence and perversity as his norm, with the inevitable result that where everything shrieks and clashes, the uproar at last cancels itself out, and it is as if nothing had been heard at all. This is a great pity, for he has a wonderful energy of vision, together with a fine gusto in phrase and an enviably muscular capacity for compressed statement: if he could only be severe with himself, and canalize his gifts, instead of simply going hell-for-leather at his Idea, with capitals, he could be one of the very best of contemporary poets, as he is already one of the most exciting." Conrad Aiken
+ — New Repub 112:451 Ap 2 '45 700w

"Mr. Eberhart starts with an objective bang and slowly gets down to a nervous whisper. But any man who has been teaching gunnery can be excused if some of his poems sound explosive. Mr. Eberhart is argumentative and talkative, writing a sort of condensed prose or broadside poetry which appeals to some segment of the mind. . . As a poet of vision, which seems his special field, Mr. Eberhart goes less awry and is a keener and more inventive personality, with lyrical afterthought and tragic moral expulsion justifying his intellectual grasp of our world." Harry Roskolenko
N Y Times p8 Mr 4 '45 180w

"It has been difficult in the past to get at the actual quality of Mr. Eberhart's work because of a diffuseness that diluted his intensity and blurred his intentions. This lack of control is less evident in the present collection, and several poems, notably 'The Fury of Aerial Bombardment' and 'The Groundhog,' show him sometimes capable of a sort of Blakean vision."
New Yorker 21:78 F 24 '45 60w

"Mr. Eberhart is a sensitive and accomplished poet whose impressions and intuitions tend to be a little too subtle for his technique. Reading his poems one never has any doubt that here is a poet at work; but one does sometimes note a certain disparity between language and insight, as though he had not quite beaten out his words and rhythms to the fineness of his perceptions. It is not that he fails to mould the stanza to the content—his poetry is notable for flexibility of technique—but rather that he shapes his lines and stanzas too readily and superficially to the changing turns of thought so that an immediate effect is gained only at the expense of a certain lack of reverberation. The stanza as a stanza, as a rising and falling pattern of words, has no echoing enrichment to add to the words as words with each reading." David Daiches
+ — Poetry 66:92 My '45 950w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:6 Je '45 120w

EBERHART, RICHARD, and RODMAN, SELDEN., eds. War and the poet; an anthology of poetry expressing man's attitudes to war from ancient times to the present. 240p $3 Devin-Adair
808.81 War poetry

An anthology of poetry which purports to be "the first collection of the great war poems of the world." The aim has been to give a sense of the continuity of man's reactions to war thru the centuries. There are selections from the works of some hundred and twelve poets, representing many nations and languages. Index to first lines.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p8 Ja 13 '46 280w
Christian Science Monitor p16 D 11 '45 450w

"The reader will not learn much about this war, or any other war, from this anthology, but he will find out a great deal about war in general. He will be grateful to the editors for setting in long perspective the force that has called for such expense of spirit in man's history. The servitudes and the grandeurs of war are here, its sordidness and nobility. And if the editors tend to neglect the actual particular experience of war in favor of the reflective universal, if they set up a kind of closet war poetry, if their world-wide scope braves the danger of flatness which resides in most translations, and if melancholy platitudes would seem unescapable, again and again the poets themselves rescue us by their particular vision. . . There is much that is fresh and important here, and brilliant flowers of hope even in the garden of Proserpine." Donald Stauffer
+ N Y Times p6 D 16 '45 500w

" 'War and the Poet' has attempted a very large task and its uncertainties are naturally in the recent work: there bare opinion, unaided by time, is bound to quarrel most readily. In general it merits praise. It has been kept really selective. By far the greater part of its choices—including Ezra Pound—are excellent. Its translations are well made, and it very frequently shows freshness in discovery. If one may speak of it aside from its richness as poetry, its value should be noted as a record of attitudes toward war: almost steadily and always more deeply, even from ancient days, of hatred and anger and pity and bitterness." W. T. Scott

EBERHART, RICHARD—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 29:18 Ja 19 '46 800w

"One seeks in vain for any preponderance of big names and familiar works in 'War and the Poet.'. . Forgotten poems have been revived and neglected poets rediscovered, yet only half a dozen great names are listed from the whole Christian era, with Shakespeare and Kipling represented by one contribution each and such bards as Scott, Tennyson and Rupert Brooke not at all. 'In Flanders Fields' and other comparable products of World war I are not to be found, though Longfellow's 'The Arsenal at Springfield' is included. Wilfred Owen's 'Strange Meeting' is asserted to be the greatest of all war poems, and, while Owen was a participant in the war, the editors say that the writing of war poetry is not limited to war, but transcends it." D. B. B.
Springf'd Republican p4 D 4 '45 240w

EBERLE, IRMENGARDE (PHYLLIS ANN CARTER, pseud). Very good neighbors; drawings by Flora Nash DeMuth. 95p $2 Lippincott 45-5355

Story of a family of lovable Mexicans, who settled in southern Texas and attempted to establish a home. When they were in danger of losing their little home it was saved for them, because they were such "very good neighbors." For ages eight to ten.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p11 S 9 '45 220w
Booklist 41:344 Jl 15 '45
Bookmark 6:16 Ag 1 '45

"Irmengarde Eberle has told the story with sympathy and understanding and Flora De Muth's pictures add to its feeling for locality and character." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:348 S '45 90w

"Warm, friendly story. . . Of special appeal to libraries in the Southwest. Delightful color illustrations." Margaret Miller
+ Library J 70:688 Ag '45 100w

Reviewed by M. C. Skinner
Library J 70:952 O 15 '45 40w

"The author has drawn her characters vividly and affectionately, and Flora DeMuth's appealing, spirited drawings admirably illustrate their story." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p21 Jl 29 '45 130w

"There is great warmth and devotion to one another in the relationship of the Carillo family. They are so dignified, so hard-working, and they have so much charm in their own right that we do not quite understand why they want so much to become Americans. . . The large, clear type and colorful pictures make this a good book for even very little children." B. W. Shaffer
+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 Jl 14 '45 300w
School & Society 61:400 Je 16 '45 20w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 1 '45 300w
Wis Lib Bul 41:86 Jl '45

ECKSTEIN, GUSTAV. The pet shop; a play. 196p $2 Harper
812 45-9877

A parable in the form of a play. The pet shop is the world; the various powers—large and small—are played by inmates of the pet shop. Things were running fairly smoothly until a sailor brought a vicious monkey to the shop, and then the trouble began.

Reviewed by Stanley Burnshaw
Book Week p4 N 25 '45 500w
Christian Century 62:1449 D 26 '45 110w

"Eckstein can write fantasy—but when he tries to imbue it with profound significance it creaks, and groans, and fails of its purpose."
— Kirkus 13:447 O 1 '45 90w

"There is a good deal of humor in the telling, especially in the guinea pig scenes, and the canary scenes—the latter laid in an open house, of course. The meaning of the parable is never cloudy, and the action is lively. It might actually play in the theater, though it would be a tricky and costly production. One suspects any manager would think twice before risking it. The sight of an actor dressed as a guinea pig or a canary or a mouse or a dog or a cat is always a bit hard to take, except in a fairy tale. It suggests Walt Disney more than the tragedy of the last ten years. Our guess is that 'The Pet Shop' will remain between covers, where it amply rewards the reader." W. P. Eaton
+ — Weekly Book Review p12 D 16 '45 360w

ECKSTORM, MRS FANNIE (HARDY). Old John Neptune and other Maine Indian shamans. 209p il $5.50 Southworth-Anthoensen
970.3 Neptune, John. Penobscot Indians. Shamanism 45-9452

"Mrs. Eckstorm has chosen to give the history of John Neptune, for many years Lieutenant-Governor of the Penobscot Indians of Maine, who lived from 1767 to 1865. As a scholar, she discusses what is known of Shamanism among his people, and weighs the evidence which has come down of his own practice of it; she traces the possible genealogy of the Neptunes and the origin of the name; and gives the intricate and disputed story of the nineteenth-century tribal scandals and political struggles from which rose the Old Party and the New Party." Christian Science Monitor

"Mrs. Eckstorm knows the Penobscots, not only as a scholar, but as a human being, who has been familiar with them since earliest childhood. . . This is real Americana, vigorous, exact, and fully informed, and to read it is to deepen both one's feeling and one's knowledge of our heritage." Henry Beston
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 O 20 '45 600w

"It is unquestionably the best study yet presented on shamanism among the Indians of Maine. It is obviously a labor of love, and just as surely it is a classic in its field. If you have any interest at all in the subject, you must have this volume, which is as handsomely printed as the work deserves to be." Stewart Holbrook
+ Weekly Book Review p32 D 2 '45 500w

ECONOMIST (periodical). Economist, 1843-1943; a centenary volume. 178p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Oxford 330.5 45-1431

"The first issue of the London Economist bore the date of September 2, 1843, and this little volume of essays constitutes an admirable commemoration." (Ann Am Acad) Contents: The Economist, 1843-1943, by the editor; A hundred years, by the deputy editor (in collaboration with A. H. Chapman); The Economist as a source for the historian, by John Clapham; A political retrospect, by E. L. Woodward; Walter Bagehot, by F. W. Hirst; The Economist and foreign affairs, by Graham Hutton; The money market, by W. T. C. King; The stock exchange, by Hargreaves Parkinson; Records and statistics, by the Industry and trade editor; Bagehot and the trade cycle, by W. W. Rostow.

"The book is perhaps of as great interest to the historian as to the economist, especially in these days when there is such a widespread belief that the course of events is largely determined by economic forces." Walter Lichtenstein
Am Hist R 51:153 O '45 550w

Reviewed by F. C. James
+ Ann Am Acad 239:212 My '45 650w

"One of the most adequate and readable histories of periodicals I have encountered." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 Jl 15 '45 200w

Reviewed by Redvers Opie
J Pol Econ 53:364 D '45 2500w

EDDY, GEORGE SHERWOOD. I have seen God work in China. 137p $1.50 Assn. press

266 Missions—China. China—Politics and government 45-979

"Personal impressions from three decades with the Chinese." (Subtitle) Contents: I discover the Chinese; I saw China's invaders; I saw Sun Yat-sen and the founding of the New Republic; I saw Chiang Kai-shek and realized his problems; I saw the churches and the Y.M.C.A. in China; I saw China's great wall of exclusion fall down; I see a new China in the future.

Christian Century 62:402 Mr 28 '45 10w

"Those who know little or nothing about China will find this a reliable and easily read introduction to a large subject." F. P. Jones
+ J Religion 25:230 Jl '45 250w

"The cynic and the apologist here find their match in the gentle apostle of good will. Taking the long view, Dr. Eddy pictures scenes and personalities in a light that reveals a divine purpose in all that is human and frail in China." Bruno Lasker
+ Survey G 34:134 Ap '45 130w

EDDY, GEORGE SHERWOOD. Pathfinders of the world missionary crusade. 319p $2.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury

266 Missions. Missionaries 45-8469

This book, the author says, is not an attempt at a "complete biographical history of missions" but rather a collection of sketches of the lives and missionary careers of a few typical men and women—Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Lutherans and Congregationalists—most of whom belonged to the student volunteer movement.

Christian Century 62:1130 O 3 '45 130w

Reviewed by T. F. Opie
Churchman 159:15 N 15 '45 180w

"Protestant ministers and laymen interested in missions will find this volume stimulating and interesting. Good for supplementary reading in mission study classes."
+ Kirkus 13:509 N 15 '45 150w

EDDY, SHERWOOD. See Eddy, G. S.

EDELBAUM, MEYER. The way to freedom; a contribution to the struggle of the Jews for their right to live as free men and a free people. 284p $2.50 Bloch

296 Jews—Political and social conditions. Zionism 44-47885

"The author was born and rabbinically educated in Poland, has taught at a rabbinical college in London, has written much for Yiddish, Hebrew, Polish and English journals, and has been a delegate to several Zionist congresses. To his mind, the concept of 'Jewish nationhood' is essential to a way to freedom for Jews. Assimilation is rejected as 'suicide,' and Zionism is the only solution. In the light of this conviction he discusses the Zionist movement, Jewish achievements in Palestine, Arab claims (in which he finds no validity), and Jewish contributions to science and to the war." Christian Century

Christian Century 62:82 Ja 17 '45 100w

Reviewed by I. G. Matthews
Crozer Q 22:190 Ap '45 100w

EDER, JOSEF MARIA. History of photography; tr. by Edward Epstean [ed. by John A. Tennant and others]. 860p $10 Columbia univ. press

770.9 Photography—History A45-1970

"History of photography published in 1931, tracing the survey down to the end of the first quarter of the twentieth century, now translated including a biography of Eder. Development of photography in relation to the events of the time and its applications. Among the highlights of the book are chapters on Daguerre, stereoscopic photography, microphotography, film photography, three-color photography, photolithography and many other aspects." (Library J) Index.

"The book is amazingly complete and well-documented, basic and definitive—a veritable photographers' Pentateuch." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 Je 10 '45 270w

Booklist 41:336 Jl 15 '45

"A vast amount of information for reference—an indispensable book for Public Library shelves."
+ Kirkus 13:240 Je 1 '45 150w

Library J 70:637 Jl '45 80w

"It is distressing, but perhaps salutary, to find that such a work is distorted in order to reflect the image of the German superman. Here is an Austrian scholar whose devotion to the intellectual life is attested by a full span of fruitful and outstanding work in his field. Here is his book, begun when the Franco-Prussian War was still a green memory and the first World War far in the future, finished just before Hitler's foul shadow began to blot out the light of civilization. It represents German scholarship, presumably at its best, through the spans of three German wars of aggression. We find it corrupted by the same cancer that has turned a generation of Germans into swaggering sadists. The appearance of Edward Epstean as translator provides the highest sponsorship for the book, so outstanding a figure is he in the cataloguing and interpretation of photographic subjects. Both Mr. Epstean and Beaumont Newhall refer euphemistically to the 'chauvinism' of Eder's work. This chauvinism does no great harm to the history as a reference book. It is so obvious as to be childish." E. F. Hall
N Y Times p10 Jl 22 '45 500w

"The work is well authenticated, documented and indexed, an important contribution to the world's photographic and scientific literature." S. A. Ralph
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 5 '45 1300w

EDUCATIONAL POLICIES COMMISSION. Education for all American youth. 421p pa $1 Nat. educ.

370.973 Education—U.S.

"Here is a forthright answer to those less patient members of our profession who for years have criticized the Educational Policies Commission for stressing fundamental principles of education and failing to produce a practical, detailed, down-to-earth blueprint for immediate action. Now the ultimate wisdom of the Commission's total program becomes apparent to all. Having profoundly influenced school people's thinking for nearly a decade through cumulative emphasis upon basic principles and broad orientation . . . the Commission now wisely becomes specific: it presents a detailed and comprehensive plan showing how America's 30,000 high schools and junior colleges can be transformed in purpose and program so as to provide adequate educational services which will actually meet the basic needs and capitalize the varied abilities of all American youth." (Social Educ) Index.

"This book is the most important educational document that is likely to appear in our generation. America's future demands that it be read by teachers, school administrators, local board of education members, prospective teachers, and legislators in every American community large and small—and by thousands of business men and women, labor leaders, social workers, clergymen, military officials, and other non-school professional people. At least a million copies of this historic volume should be in widespread circulation within the year. If you can't buy a copy don't hesitate to beg or borrow one. This is a book that is destined to make educational history." E. G. Olsen

EDUCATIONAL POLICIES COMMISSION— Continued

+ Social Educ 9:137 Mr '45 1100w

"The authors of this readable, stimulating little volume do not present a blueprint to be copied blindly by all communities or school systems. They do present basic principles and some important assumptions which could serve as criteria by which any teacher or group of teachers, principals, supervisors, or other adults interested in American Education can appraise what they are now doing, and make adjustments in their programs if such seem desirable."

+ Social Studies .23:234 My '45 600w

EELLS, HASTINGS. Postwar world. See Postwar world

EICHNER, FRANCES, and FERRIS, HELEN JOSEPHINE (MRS A. B. TIBBETS), eds. See North Salem, New York. Central high school. When our town was young

EINSTEIN, ALBERT. Meaning of relativity. 142p il $2 Princeton univ. press

530.1 Relativity (physics) A45-3336

"The first edition of this book, published in 1922 . . . consisted of the text of Mr. Einstein's Stafford Little Lectures, delivered in May 1921 at Princeton University. For this second edition, Mr. Einstein has added an appendix discussing certain advances in the theory of relativity since 1921." Note on verso of title page.

Booklist 41:342 Jl 15 '45

Library J 70:686 Ag '45 30w

Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 Ag '45 70w

EINSTEIN, ALFRED. Mozart, his character, his work; tr. by Arthur Mendel and Nathan Broder. 492p $5 Oxford

B or 92 Mozart, Johann Chrysostom Wolfgang Amadeus 45-1487

"A picture of Mozart's character and of the personalities and events that exercised a decisive influence upon it. The works that are mentioned are not described, but characterized from the point of view of their time and—so far as possible—of our relation to them." (Pref) Catalog of works. Indexes.

Reviewed by J. N. Burk

Atlantic 175:132 My '45 420w

Booklist 41:208 Mr 15 '45

Reviewed by Cyrus Durgin

Boston Globe p15 Mr 7 '45 550w

"As the author notes, little new biographical material has come to light in recent years, and what he relates of the man will add little to the student's knowledge. But his examination of the events of Mozart's life in relation to his character, and even more, his analysis of the sources, models, and methods of the musician's creative processes are penetrating and illuminating." L. A. Sloper

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 F 24 '45 900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '45

"Mr. Einstein's volume is a notable addition to Mozart literature." J. T. Howard

+ Commonweal 41:501 Mr 2 '45 250w

"A clear view of the dominant factors of his life and works that should make this book a worthwhile addition to previous volumes on Mozart."

+ Kirkus 12:529 N 15 '44 150w

"A remarkably subtle and penetrating revelation of Mozart's character. . . Since the book assumes some knowledge of his life and works, it is not the first one to read on Mozart, but all libraries [which] need a second should have it." R. S. Angell

+ Library J 70:162 F 15 '45 100w

"[The book] is in a certain sense, like Eric Blom's brief study, the consequence of compromise. That is not to say that it is not a very superior book. It is; I have withheld this review long enough to make up my mind, and for that purpose. Dr. Einstein does not write so well as Mr. Turner, but I will hazard the view, not only that this is now the best book on Mozart available in English, but that, for all save specialists, it is more valuable than Wyzewa and Saint-Foix's great work, which in any case is now a collector's item. . . Nevertheless, I closed the book with a sense of lack that was due to its election of the method of historical survey. Such an effort must necessarily concern itself with a composer's development. . . There are many other aspects of Mozart's art necessarily unconsidered in this book which seem to me to be far more important than a knowledge of its development. Yet, keenly as I feel these lacks, I must still sum up by saying that this is a fine effort, for which one much-limited Mozartian is grateful." Ralph Bates

+ — New Repub 112:528 Ap 16 '45 1400w

"A new book by Alfred Einstein is in itself an event of first-rate importance in the world of musical scholarship; his present volume on Mozart is not only an event but a predestined one. Presumably no other living man is quite as well equipped to write such a book as one who, besides being possibly the foremost living musical scholar, has spent years of research on a monumental re-edition of the Köchel catalogue of Mozart's works, who has in that and in other connections brought to light many newly discovered manuscripts and other documents, some of them of more than passing importance in any complete picture of Mozart. Dr. Einstein is, moreover, outstanding among musical scholars as one who, by virtue of a warm and vivid love for music and a genuine and even racy human wisdom, understands the limits and the limitations, the illusions and the pitfalls of mere scholarship. This is not simply an illuminating and informative book but a lively and fascinating one." Roger Sessions

+ N Y Times p3 F 18 '45 1600w

"Intelligently examined, the life of any illustrious man is a worthy study. When the subject of a biography is a great genius, and when the author is a profound scholar whose scientific meticulousness is tempered by warm humanitarianism, the result is certain to be important. Einstein's biography of Mozart is an appraisal of the composer's life and accomplishment, with many acute observations on the musical practices and conventions of eighteenth-century Europe."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:13 Je '45 200w

"This is a truly remarkable book, one of the great 'music books' of the decade, and a work which will help many to climb the stone wall the nineteenth century erected around the inner yard of Mozart's estate. The eighteenth century, with its fondness for universality, coined a happy phrase for works that were conceived in the spirit of general appeal. It would have called Dr. Einstein's 'Mozart' a work 'for connoisseurs and amateurs.' Indeed, every one interested in music, in the purest music of all ages, whether an earnest academician or a modest layman, will derive both knowledge and enjoyment from reading it." P. H. Lang

+ Weekly Book Review p2 F 18 '45 1200w

"Factual information about music is as a rule a doubtful aid in appreciation: therefore a casual reading of the book is hardly enough. But the reader who, fired by Dr. Einstein's enthusiasm, undertakes for himself under the author's guidance a patient and detailed study of even one or two types of Mozart's music—concentrating on the music itself with the help of the printed music or phonograph recordings—will be richly rewarded." Richard Donovan

+ Yale R n s 34:743 summer '45 850w

EISENHART, LUTHER PFAHLER. The educational process. 87p $1 Princeton univ. press

370 Education—U.S. Colleges and universities—U.S. A45-1569

"Describing the writer's ideas of the purpose of the educational process and the means of accomplishing it. The major portion of the book is devoted to the college but there is a chapter on secondary education and one on the graduate school of arts and sciences." School & Society

"It is possible to challenge some of Dean Eisenhart's conclusions on the ground that they are derived from experience with a highly selected student body, and do not meet the situation confronting the great state universities. Likewise, to some he will seem overly conservative and unrealistic in his attitude toward secondary education, and unjust in his interpretation of general education, which at one point he quite unfairly defines as 'an accumulation of information on many subjects' (p. 66). Nevertheless, the book is one that certainly should be read along with various other volumes now appearing—all of which, taken together, indicate that there is a healthy ferment at work in the field of higher education." M. M. Willey

+ — Ann Am Acad 242:204 N '45 350w

"Such books are greatly needed today. I believe that much good will be done by 'The Educational Process,' with its courageous and clear thinking and the weight of unimpeachable authority behind it." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Ap 1 '45 400w

Commonweal 42:78 My 4 '45 110w

Reviewed by Granville Hicks

New Repub 112:453 Ap 2 '45 400w

School & Society 61:144 Mr 3 '45 50w

"The numerous references to relatively obscure materials will make this volume valuable to students of American cultural history, for the idea of progress is here conceived broadly, and its ramifications take the reader into practically all phases of American life during this period."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:23 Mr '45 240w

EISLER, GERHART; NORDEN, ALBERT, and SCHREINER, ALBERT. The lesson of Germany; a guide to her history. 222p $2.50 Int. pubs.

943 Germany—History. Germany—Nazi movement 46-295

"The present book is a guide, an attempt to interpret the past history of Germany, which will enable the reader better to study and understand the future course of the German people in the light of their past." Pref

"Be prepared to study this book. It is not intended for leisurely reading. In a world that now holds contempt for the German nation, this triple-authored work presents an objective analysis of how the Germans came to be as they are, and why." Ann Hunter

+ Book Week p58 D 2 '45 600w

"The authors, identified only as members of the pre-Hitler labor movement, use Marxian dialectics so consistently that one judges that they were probably members of the German Communist Party; their whitewashing of the Communist part in the Weimar debacle must, therefore, be considered more expedient than factual."

— New Yorker 21:134 D 1 '45 160w

EKIRCH, ARTHUR ALPHONSE. Idea of progress in America, 1815-1860. 305p $3.50 Columbia univ. press

973.5 U.S.—History—1815-1861. U.S.—Civilization A44-5611

"Surveys the idea of progress as expressed in the United States from the War of 1812 to the Civil War and analyzes it against the background of European philosophical and revolutionary contributions to the American faith in progress." (Special Libraries) Bibliography. Index.

"Not only do the great thinkers of the period . . . parade across the pages, but also a host of others who were pertinent in their time but since forgotten. In addition to carrying out this task in a most competent manner, the author presents a detailed social 'closeup' of the period. This is a piece of indefatigable and assiduous scholarship with an almost encyclopedic bibliography." J. O. Hertzler

+ Am J Soc 51:76 Jl '45 700w

"The book brings to light many interesting writers and ideas, some of them hitherto obscure and neglected. It is a scholarly work, showing much serious research, but it will prove readable to all earnestly interested in the subject. It is to be hoped that a companion volume on the period since 1860 is in preparation." H. E. Barnes

+ Ann Am Acad 239:206 My '45 600w

"The Idea of Progress in America is, within its imposed limitations, a very good book indeed. From the standpoint of inclusiveness it is regrettable that the emergence of the public library was neglected, and as synthesis the treatment is disappointing. But the work does demonstrate clearly the importance of its central theme as a driving force in mid-nineteenth-century American life, and it brings together in logical and well-organized form a great quantity of material that historians will unquestionably find useful." J. H. Shera

+ Library Q 15:252 Jl '45 1800w

Special Libraries 36:64 F '45

ELBIN, PAUL NOWELL. The enrichment of life; ten chapel talks. 87p $1.50 Assn. press; Revell

252 Sermons 45-8951

Ten talks to students by the president of West Liberty State college, West Virginia. Partial contents: Education for what? an address for the opening of a school year; Who is a good teacher? a talk for American education week; American youth face the future, a chapel talk for the beginning of a new year; Courage for today, a message for Good Friday; Unfinished victory, an address for "I-Am-an-American day."

Christian Century 62:1065 S 19 '45 20w

"Though the book may prove interesting reading to students of high school or college age, it is written primarily with the thought of giving aid to adults who are speaking or preparing to speak to youth groups. These little talks are pertinent and contain very good material which might easily be taken over and used by teachers, leaders or students themselves." J. Z. Nichols

+ Springf'd Republican p4 O 8 '45 220w

ELDERKIN, KATE DENNY (MCKNIGHT). From Tripoli to Marrakesh; 137 reproductions from phot. by the author. 303p $3.75 Pond-Ekberg

916.1 Africa, North—Description and travel. Africa, North—Antiquities 44-3725

"Descriptive and informational book about North Africa, with special reference to its archaeological treasures. The 137 plates which serve as illustrations are a contribution in themselves." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 40:375 Jl 1 '44

Wis Lib Bul 41:28 F '45

ELIOT, MRS ETHEL AUGUSTA (COOK). Wind boy; il. by Robert Hallock. rev ed 244p $2 Viking

45-8601

A new edition with slight revisions and new illustrations, of a fairy tale for modern children first published in 1923.

Book Week p12 N 11 '45 230w

Booklist 42:61 O 15 '45

Kirkus 13:370 Ag 15 '45 170w

ELIOT, E. A.—Continued

"Author has made some slight revisions and Robert Hallock has added some charming drawings for this modern fairy story. Imaginative children ten to twelve years old will enjoy this tale." A. H. McGinity

+ Library J 70:980 O 15 '45 40w

"One of the few genuine American fairy tales of our time, though with a Celtic heritage, has in this new, revised edition outline drawings by Robert Hallock with the pure beauty of its own Clear People."

+ Weekly Book Review p6 N 4 '45 70w

ELLSWORTH, PAUL THEODORE. Chile, an economy in transition. 183p $3 Macmillan

330.983 Chile—Economic conditions 44-40395

Analysis of the economic life of Chile, especially during the years 1929 to 1942, years which were full of "political turmoil, overturn of governments, incessant cabinet changes, [and] outbreaks of armed conflict." The author lived in Chile during 1941 and 1942. Statistical tables. Index.

"Professor Ellsworth has presented an excellent analysis of Chile's economic problems and recent evolution. He is at his best in his descriptive chapters. His discussion of policy matters, on the other hand, seems to me to denote a lack of sympathetic understanding of practical problems and possibilities and to reflect academic preconceptions rather than inductive conclusions from his concrete study of Chilean experience. But then, economists rarely agree on policies and I sincerely hope that many people will read this excellent and stimulating little study and draw their own conclusions with regard to the fascinating and provocative problems of an 'economy in transition.'" Robert Triffin

+ Am Econ R 35:689 S '45 1900w

Am Soc R 10:575 Ag '45 100w

Reviewed by Alfred Manes

Ann Am Acad 240:165 Jl '45 300w

"A keen, scholarly analysis."

+ Foreign Affairs 23:702 Jl '45 20w

"Dr. Ellsworth, a clear writer as well as a highly trained technical economist, generally subordinates his latter role to the former. In the absence of basic statistical data he comes up with an estimate of national income which involves complicated adjustments for the ratios of exports and imports, allowances for unrealized earnings and corrections for fluctuating exchange rates. Although these exercises in statistical virtuosity are generally confined to the smaller print of footnotes, the mark of the academician is found on each chapter: charts, diagrams and price indices. But rarely does specialized jargon intrude unpleasantly upon the narrative of the twists and turns of Chilean public finance." W. F. Barber

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 8 '45 440w

"Since little has been written on the subject of this book, it presents much material not readily available elsewhere."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:18 Je '45 160w

ELMER, MANUEL CONRAD. Sociology of the family. 519p $3.75 Ginn

392 Family 45-5394

"A sociological treatise of the family as a major social institution. . . The book is divided into six parts: I. The Sociological Setting of the Family (its social significance, organization, and psychic functions); II. Social Control of the Family (control methods, illustrated by family organization and social control in various cultures widely separated in time and space; marriage and family laws, religion and eugenics); III. Population and the Family (factors in population change, marriage, divorce, and intermarriage); IV. Social Change and the Family (social, economic, emotional and attitudinal changes; family mobility and migration); V. Social Adjustment of the Family (involving standards of living, crises, divorce, foster homes, illegitimacy, the aged); VI. The Socializing Process (the home's contribution to education, development of personality, socialization of the child, and cooperation of the home with other social agencies)." (Am Soc R) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

"In all, the book makes a distinct contribution to the field. It makes no effort to provide all the personal counseling which some students want, for such material is available in other books on the reference shelf, and by omitting it here the author has made room for further sociological interpretation without making his book too large. It is a good book, full of sound sociology." R. E. Baber

+ Am Soc R 10:569 Ag '45 550w

"There will be many who will be grateful for a book of this type, with its emphasis on the importance of the child, its home-spun philosophy, its good humor, and its human qualities. Moreover, it is written in a simple and readable style. It is for students and not for the faculty. There is no attempt to play up the latest scientific jargon or introduce recently discovered further subdivisions of time and space and human relationships. The teacher will be glad for the incorporation of up-to-date statistical material on various aspects of marriage and the family, and for certain types of data which are not to be found elsewhere except by an extraordinary amount of digging into varied and scattered sources." R. H. Abrams

+ Ann Am Acad 242:197 N '45 550w

Reviewed by D. S. Klaiss

Social Forces 24:250 D '45 750w

ELMORE, CARL HOPKINS. Quit you like men. 180p $2 Scribner

170 Conduct of life 44-9652

Commonsense discussions of questions of conduct under the stress and strain of life today. Intended especially for young people. The author was formerly minister of the First Presbyterian church of Englewood, New Jersey.

Christian Century 61:1321 N 15 '44 20w

"Here is that rarest of all products—a book for young people that is not sentimental nor trivial nor patronizing. It is good all the way through! This man knows how to talk to the younger generation; he meets them on their own grounds, he understands their problems and thought processes and he senses when to appeal to their emotions and when to challenge their common sense." J. H. Titus

+ Churchman 159:16 Mr 1 '45 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '45

Reviewed by G. C. Kaynor

Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 24 '45 240w

ELSIE-JEAN, pseud. See Stern, E. J.

ELST, JOSEPH VAN DER, baron. Last flowering of the middle ages. 127p il $7.50 Doubleday

759.9493 Painting, Flemish. Flanders—Social life and customs 45-879

"A thoroughly serious book, rather mystical in concept and including a good deal of social history as background, about the fifteenth-century Flemish painters, from Hieronymus Bosch and Dirk Bouts to Rogier van der Weyden. Over a hundred full-page plates, many in color." New Yorker

"Excellent book on the people and paintings of 15th-century Flanders. I would like this brief review to do full justice to the fine simplicity of Baron van der Elst's writing, to his knowledge and to his feeling for a period in art whose importance and beauty cannot be exaggerated. Van der Elst approaches his subject with humility and integrity unmarred by popular 'arty' clichés and evasive pseudotechnical terms. . . It is pleasant for once to agree with a jacket blurb which claims an 'exhilarating freshness' for 'The Last Flowering of the Middle Ages.'" Katharine Kuh

+ Book Week p4 Ja 14 '45 650w

Booklist 41:166 F 1 '45

Bookmark 6:9 Ja '45

"A sumptuous book which makes a triple appeal to the eye, the heart, and the mind. Its format is as enlightened as it is luxurious. Few art publications offer such an harmonious blending of text and illustration. Each chapter is a consonant monograph, its theme supplemented by the royally abundant illustrations in black-and-white and in color." A. M. Sholl

+ Cath World 160:477 F '45 450w

Kirkus 12:475 O 15 '44 100w

"Despite the fact that it very often hovers on the edge of banality, the book provides as good an introduction to its subject as I know of in English, and its does succeed in bodying forth some of the reality of the things it treats. In addition, it is well illustrated." Clement Greenberg

+ — Nation 161:133 Ag 11 '45 1550w

"This history of the painters of ancient Flanders is valuable both for the amateur and for the connoisseur. The author's approach to the subject, and the wealth of black and white and colored plates, make its reading not only profitable but highly enjoyable." H. L. Brugmans

+ N Y Times p5 F 4 '45 800w

+ New Yorker 20:71 Ja 27 '45 50w

"This is a very successful attempt to bring together all the essential things that should be known in order to understand Flemish painting of the fifteenth century. The author has come closer than anyone else to defining the classical Flemish style and showing its close relations to the world which produced it."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:3 Mr '45 200w

"One of the most enjoyable and instructive art books of the year. . . The book is well made; the ninety-six reproductions in black and white are admirably selected and the sixteen color plates are above the average in quality." Thomas Craven

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ja 7 '45 1050w

ELTING, MARY, and GOSSETT, MARGARET. We are the government; charts and pictures by Jeanne Bendick. 96p $2 Doubleday

353 U.S.—Politics and government—Juvenile literature

A survey of the functions of American government, written in simple language and with many small drawings in the text to make the subject appealing to young readers.

Book Week p5 N 11 '45 180w

Booklist 42:112 D 1 '45

"A crisp attractive job of popularizing the story of our federal government, its organization and function. . . Attractive format and simple approach will bring into line readers who would shy away from average civics texts."

+ Kirkus 13:518 N 15 '45 150w

"Practical, clear, helpful, readable and graphic is this new type of book about our own government. . . Recommended." Isabel McLaughlin

+ Library J 71:59 Ja 1 '46 80w

"Concise, briskly written, this outline of our Federal Government . . . amounts to a first lesson in civics considerably more interesting than children of the middle years might naturally expect. Grown-ups, too, might profitably peruse it as a refresher course. Charts and amusing marginal sketches help to fix its information comfortably in the mind."

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 20 '46 70w

"However lively its multitude of little three-colored pictures, this book serves a purpose beyond entertainment and may be used not only by children past picturebook age but by adults unprepared to answer questions on how our government works. . . For quick reference and simple statements it will have many uses in and out of school."

+ Weekly Book Review p20 N 11 '45 270w

ELWOOD, MURIEL. Heritage of the river. 310p $2.50 Scribner

Historical novel of Montreal in the late seventeenth century. The chief characters are the twins, Paul and Marguerite Boissart, and the tale concerns their adventures in love and war.

"Good story telling, but the style falls down when it comes to dialogue, which seems artificial and unreal. The audience? Those who like many-textured historical and regional and period stories, with lots of action."

+ — Kirkus 13:207 My 15 '45 150w

"Miss Elwood has here the materials of prodigal drama, but her equipment as a creative novelist is shockingly meager. From her first chunky paragraph of pure history to her last catch-as-catch-can love scene, 'Heritage of the River' is strictly amateur in its plotting, its style, its feeble characterization." C. V. Terry

— N Y Times p12 Jl 22 '45 270w

"It is drama par excellence, with bloodshed, seduction, Indian captivity with all the horrific details of torture at the hands of the savages, treachery and intrigue and corruption in Colonial policies, life in the 'court' at Quebec, and through it all the recurrent clashes with the English, that growing war which was to continue for at least another century. Miss Elwood makes this history come alive again, and her book is a rousing good story, full of color and authentic atmosphere and decidedly harrowing in its author's apparent relish for recounting the bloodcurdling details of the Indian massacres." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 28:32 Ag 25 '45 450w

"Miss Elwood has packed everything into this novel. There is warfare, there is intrigue, there is romance, there is death. Love, it should be added, triumphs over all in the end. The characters are pasteboard and are easily, if not convincingly, moved around by the author's extravagant fancy." Rose Feld

Weekly Book Review p8 Jl 22 '45 550w

Wis Lib Bul 41:101 O '45

EMBREE, JOHN FEE. Japanese nation; a social survey. 308p maps $3; text ed $2.25 Farrar

915.2 Japan—Civilization 45-6450

"This book is primarily a study of the social organization of a nation. Anthropologists have often outlined the social structure of small preliterate societies; the present author, who happens also to be an anthropologist, has attempted to apply the methods of social anthropology to a social survey of a modern nation, viewing its social structure as a functioning whole with each of its parts having meaning only in relation to all other parts. Being primarily a social survey, the book pays little attention to the material aspects of Japanese culture such as art and architecture, while it devotes considerable attention to government, religion, schools, and the network of social relations making up the national structure." Introd

---

"The author of Suye Mura, an invaluable study of village life in Japan, has, in this second work, provided a thoughtful, comprehensive, lucidly-written handbook on Japan's social order." H. S. Quigley

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1228 D '45 460w

"This volume, according to the author, is an attempt to apply the methods of social anthropology to a social survey of a modern nation. The result has been a reliable, objective description of Japanese institutions and the routine of living, with the earmarks of an anthropological treatise scarcely in evidence. To the ordinary reader the book will appear to be a condensed handbook of information on things Japanese, supplemented by two chapters on culture patterns and national attitudes." J. F. Steiner

+ Ann Am Acad 242:169 N '45 450w

"Read this quiet, authoritative and definitely unbelligerent book and discover why we are making childish mistakes in our Asiatic policy." Sterling North

+ Book Week p2 Ag 5 '45 180w

EMBREE, J. F.—Continued

Booklist 42:35 O 1 '45

Bookmark 6:12 N '45

"In simple, lucid style devoid of flowery language and happily shorn of either malice or sentimentality, Dr. Embree shows why the Japanese are as they are. Very little in Japan is simple, and the author makes no effort to dodge complications on a wide variety of subjects, including the way Japanese feel toward the United States (because of varied Japanese-American contacts, he says that 'Japanese attitudes have ranged from extreme admiration to profound dislike for the United States and her people!). The point is that Dr. Embree simplifies as much as is possible, and he gives elucidation as to why the complications exist. He makes the Japanese human." Randall Gould

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 31 '45 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '45

Current Hist 9:325 O '45 100w

"This is a very serviceable introduction to the social, cultural and political structure of Japan. The author knows the Japanese people at first hand, and his synthesis combines keen scholarship with an approach and style aimed at the layman."

+ Foreign Affairs 24:170 O '45 60w

Kirkus 13:333 Ag 1 '45 80w

"A factual and detailed handbook of Japanese society, such as 'The Japanese Nation,' has long been needed for popular use in this country. It is unfortunate, however, that many of the emphases in this study, at times incidental but more often repeated several times over, are not of a nature to further a discriminating insight into the workings of the Japanese oligarchy. . . If proper allowance is made for these dubious emphases, the reader will find much of interest and value in many chapters of the book." T. A. Bisson

+ — Nation 161:262 S 15 '45 360w

"The book presents much important material though it only skims many of the problems discussed. Yet it can serve as a brief and sympathetic introduction to the understanding of an alien people at a time when even high military officers speak publicly of the Japanese as 'rats' or 'apes.' " Hans Kohn

+ N Y Times p28 S 23 '45 360w

"All in all, perhaps the best book by an American on the subject."

+ New Yorker 21:68 Ag 4 '45 120w

Reviewed by A. J. Grajdanzev

Pacific Affairs 18:387 D '45 850w

"Here and there, on points of interpretation, one may quarrel with the author of this study of the Japanese nation, but his descriptive minutiae are unrivaled for scope, accuracy, and completeness. John Embree's previous experience, including a year's residence in the Japanese village portrayed in 'Suye Mura,' has admirably qualified him for the general sociological analysis of Japan which he now presents." T. A. Bisson

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:17 S 1 '45 900w

Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 Jl '45 480w

Social Studies 36:284 O '45 20w

Reviewed by H. M. Clark

Social Studies 37:41 Ja '46 500w

"Perhaps the sanest and best informed of all recent books on Japan is John F. Embree's 'The Japanese Nation.' " Harry Hansen

+ Survey G 34:415 O '45 220w

Reviewed by Floyd Taylor

Weekly Book Review p4 Jl 29 '45 650w

Reviewed by Gunther Stein

Yale R n s 35:342 winter '46 40w

EMRICH, RICHARD STANLEY. Earth might be fair. 112p $1.50 Harper

233 Man. Sociology, Christian 45-35006

The presiding bishop's book for Lent. In it the rector of St Gabriel's church in Marion, Massachusetts, and professor of Christian ethics at the Episcopal theological school, discusses the causes of humanity's maladjustment in the present world. His solution is the establishment of a balanced and moral relationship with God as well as with man, as a prelude to the basic ethical values.

Booklist 41:180 F 15 '45

"A concise and thoughtful study of the nature of man."

+ Christian Century 62:210 F 14 '45 60w

"For a mature person there is little stimulating food here, but the book's homilies are true if trite. Assuming that there are still thousands of people in the church whose 'religious mind' is kindergarten, Dr. Emrich's lenten volume may furnish sufficient liquid diet for babes." T. F. Opie

Churchman 159:14 Mr 15 '45 110w

"This book is written with fervor and is rich in spiritual suggestiveness. It furnishes valuable material for study, whether by individuals or groups." E. W. Lyman

+ Crozer Q 22:265 Jl '45 1200w

"This volume is the Presiding Bishop's book for Lent. While intended for and recommended to the members of the Protestant Episcopal Church primarily, it is a book which should appeal to a much wider reading public."

+ Kirkus 13:58 F 1 '45 170w

Wis Lib Bul 41:35 Mr '45

ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA. Contemporary American painting; the Encyclopaedia britannica collection; written and ed. by Grace Pagano; with an introd. by Donald Bear. 116pl $5 Duell

759.1 Paintings, American. Painters, American 45-35086

"One hundred and sixteen fine reproductions of which 42 are in color. Opposite each is a page of printed material descriptive of the painter and his work and in many instances a brief statement by the artist himself. 'The collection is experimental and is largely drawn together from painting that is representative of the trends, times, and personalities of about the last thirty years. The greatest emphasis is placed upon American painting of still living artists. . .'—Introd. Arrangement is alphabetical by name of the artist and a table of contents gives an alphabetic listing by title of pictures." Booklist

---

Reviewed by Arthur Stern

Book Week p6 Je 24 '45 550w

Booklist 41:283 Je 1 '45

Bookmark 6:9 My '45

"If Mr. Bear needs any tempering, Mr. Rich provides it with the wise detachment that a critic can preserve when he is not engulfed in the tidal flow of contemporary art. These same pictures may be examined and estimated at different points of vantage, and their relative gravity will change. We, for example, find some of the artists of only peripheral significance in modern American art, while we miss sadly among the pictures works by Marin, Hartley, and Watkins. It is more beneficial, however, to estimate this volume for what it contains. The range is broad, the choice of reproductions good. The texts on artists and the editing were efficiently done by Grace Pagano." Dorothy Adlow

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 16 '45 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '45

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 42:287 Jl 6 '45 1650w

Kirkus 13:217 My 15 '45 150w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor

Library J 70:487 My 15 '45 70w

"An excellent and catholic start has been made in the work acquired for the collection thus far. Probably no two critical writers could be found to agree on any selection of such size. If one may carp, it is pertinent to point out the word 'contemporary' in the title is made to include several artists who are no longer living, and that the inclusion of Dali as American is mystifying, to say the least. But the Britannica can congratulate itself on a start well made." Howard Devree

+ N Y Times p21 Je 17 '45 220w

ENDORE, GUY. Methinks the lady. . . 282p $2.50 Duell
45-9739

Psychological murder-mystery.

"If Guy Endore were not an expert himself, the book would be another psychological shock thriller, absurd and meaningless. In his hands, it becomes an intelligent thesis vividly dramatized, fascinating and engrossing." John Storm
+ Book Week p10 N 4 '45 400w
Kirkus 13:377 S 1 '45 150w
New Repub 113:724 N 26 '45 60w

"Sometimes you may wonder if Mr. Endore is playing his plot across the board, having a whale of a time at the pundits' expense—or merely cashing in (like a thrifty craftsman) on a personal bout of free association. Be that as it may, he is in a class by himself when it comes to creating Grade-A horripilation. You'll have no one but yourself to blame if you lose a night's sleep learning just how Dr. Gillian exorcised his wife's private Nemesis once and for all—and pinned a murder rap where it belonged. We'll lay odds that you won't regret the loss." James MacBride
+ N Y Times p6 N 4 '45 440w

"An odd and entertaining item, but one that you will probably find more interesting as a grab bag of psychological and anthropological lore than as a novel."
+ New Yorker 21:104 N 10 '45 100w

"Not for the squeamish."
Sat R of Lit 28:40 N 3 '45 50w

"This is a clever book. . . Although 'Methinks the Lady' is miles from being a painless textbook, it does come miraculously close to providing the only sort of guide to psychiatric practice which the large public is ever likely to follow. Or, one could say, it gives away light-heartedly and in an enticing manner quite a number of the tricks of the trade: and it goes deeper than might reasonably be expected into Freudian or near-Freudian mysteries." Iris Barry
+ Weekly Book Review p10 N 4 '45 500w

ENGEL-JANOSI, FRIEDRICH. Growth of German historicism. 101p pa $1.25 Johns Hopkins press
907 History—Historiography. Germany—History—Historiography A45-2726

"This little book arose out of part of a lecture course on the rise of modern historiography which Professor Engel-Janosi, formerly of Austria, delivered at Johns Hopkins University in 1940-41. As the author warns, it does not constitute 'a history of German historical writing during the nineteenth century.' He is less interested in what actual history was written, or by whom and how, than in the evolution of philosophical thought regarding the nature and process of historical happenings." Am Hist R

Reviewed by B. J. Holm
Am Hist R 51:142 O '45 280w
Social Studies 36:284 O '45 10w

ENGINEERING preview; an introduction to engineering including the necessary review of science and mathematics, by L. E. Grinter [and others]. 581p il $4.50; home study ed 619p il $6 Macmillan
620 Engineering 45-5497

"Serves to orient the reader in the fields of science and engineering with problems drawn from engineering practice and in science. Presentation of background sciences needed for ultimate study of a specialized field of engineering. Dr. Grinter presents outline in science and engineering followed by sections written by specialists in their various fields. For college freshmen and last year of secondary schools." Library J

"This text brings together in a single volume the essential background material for persons interested in professional engineering. Engineers will find this book useful as a refresher course, for basic information on recent engineering developments in such fields as synthetics, electronics and jet propulsion, and preparation for professional engineer examinations." J. A. Kestner
+ Am J Pub Health 35:1093 O '45 360w

"Other than the sections on technical drawing and the slide rule it is believed that 'Engineering Preview' would not effectively replace the more comprehensive texts available to the senior high school and college freshman science courses. The book could be studied with profit by the high school graduate prior to his admission to an engineering college. It can be recommended as a refresher for the returning serviceman who plans to resume his engineering education. The book should appeal likewise to the ambitious technician willing to broaden his contact with technology by intensive 'home study' in the basic sciences. However the casual nontechnical reader would find the text hard digging indeed." R. J. Kunz + Chem & Eng N 23:1207 Jl 10 '45 300w
Library J 70:637 Jl '45 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:23 Ap '45

ENGLAND, MARY, pseud. A knight there was. 59p $1 (3s 6d) Macmillan
B or 92 45-9032

"A little boy grows up, with a love of music; he is to be a conductor; he joins the Army, and is killed in the Libyan Dessert; his parents, mourning him are comforted by their strong belief in immortality. This is the whole of this little book." Times [London] Lit Sup

"The writing is charming, and the pride, faith and final resignation of the boy's parents so beautiful that it hurts." O. C.
+ Book Week p13 O 14 '45 50w
Christian Century 62:1322 N 28 '45 60w

"Quite simple and poignant is the tale, with a brevity kin to that of the young knight's life; yet wisdom and strength are in its pages, underlain with beauty. This is England in her purest and truest—the England we know as ally and friend. In the structure of Anglo-American understanding, 'A Knight There Was' may be a small stone, but it is a stanch one." E. Y.
+ Christian Science Monitor p21 N 10 '45 550w

"Could it be that Miss England has mistaken good manners for courage, and resignation for philosophy?" Nona Balakian
N Y Times p35 O 28 '45 200w

"This little book is written with undeniable sincerity of feeling. It is entirely a matter of personal temperament whether one likes it or not; some who are bereaved may find it comforting, while others may be made uneasy by its sentiment."
Times [London] Lit Sup p263 Je 2 '45 70w

ENGLE, PAUL. American child. 66p $2 Random house
811 45-8671

A sonnet sequence in which an American poet portrays his own small daughter.

Reviewed by Marguerite Young
Book Week p6 O 14 '45 470w
Booklist 42:72 N 1 '45
Christian Century 62:1321 N 28 '45 90w

"Sonnets which I frankly felt did not represent him at his best. In thought and language they seem abstruse, difficult. While they represent various aspects of childhood, they lack the simplicity that should be inherent in such verse. There are lovely phrases, lovely bits, and a few sonnets that I cared to go back to."

ENGLE, PAUL—Continued
— + Kirkus 13:456 O 1 '45 60w

"The book is a genuine and moving expression of father love. Yet to value it as that alone—to see it only as the tribute of a talented writer to his own child—would result in a badly sentimentalized and fragmentary appreciation. For in itself, intrinsically, quite apart from the circumstances of its origin, this is almost completely fresh, sound, authentic work." Richard Sullivan
+ N Y Times p8 O 28 '45 430w

"The tone is much too ponderous for the subject's delicacy, in spite of charming details, and when Mr. Engle leaves his Mid-western little girl and speaks of lucky American children in general, he becomes rhetorical indeed."
New Yorker 21:99 O 6 '45 50w

"Paul Engle's American Child is suffused with a feeling uncommon in the poetry of recent years, which has been angling through tangled fields of psychological and social conflict: the feeling of reverence and good will toward life, the exuberance of being able to draw a good breath of air. This book of sixty-four sonnets to the poet's young daughter breathes wonder in the rediscovery of childhood through her daily acts and the impact of her innocence upon our world. . . I believe the main criticism to be made of Paul Engle in this as in previous volumes is that facility leads him on too far and fast. But his fertile iambics have muscle, and his interested, generous, optimistic voice recalls Stephen Vincent Benét and is the strongest current in the Whitmanic tradition. This, and Engle's work as a whole, speaks out of the major vein in American thought." Ray Smith
+ — Poetry 67:215 Ja '46 950w

"Mr. Engle is at his best when he is merely trying to fathom what time, space, death, love, and reality can mean to a child as she encounters them directly. He is more conventional and less successful when he philosophizes in his own right. And he is least successful of all in the four sonnets which frame the collection and which tie the volume into the theme of his major work, the celebration of America. These sonnets undoubtedly will gain the most attention, but let me for one record a preference for those in which Mr. Engle is merely a parent at school to his child. Here is the mood of sensitivity, of humility, and of insight which makes for true poetry. The oracular mood of the laureate seems tawdry beside it." R. E. Spiller
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:72 O 13 '45 400w

"Like all of us who have small daughters, he is filled with the wonder, delight, trepidation and everything else (except exasperation) that parents feel. But most of us—aware of the very special and complex things that make up a little girl's world, of which we adults have only the dimmest comprehension—would hesitate to interpret that world for her. But Mr. Engle never hesitates: He rushes right in where even a child psychologist might fear to tread." Ruth Lechlitner
Weekly Book Review p24 O 14 '45 650w

ENGLISH, OLIVER SPURGEON, and PEARSON, GERALD HAMILTON JEFFREY. Emotional problems of living; avoiding the neurotic pattern. 438p $5 Norton

616.8 Psychology, Pathological. Personality. Neuroses SG45-189

An introductory textbook intended for medical students, teachers, social workers and others "working in the field of interpersonal relations." On a basis of psychoanalytic methods the authors follow the development of personality patterns from infancy thru childhood and adolescence, to maturity.

"For anybody seeking aid in mental hygiene on either the giving or the receiving end, such a book makes confusion worse confounded."
— New Repub 113:540 O 22 '45 700w

"In spite of serious technical errors and a banal style the book makes a valuable contribution to the art of better living." M. F. Ashley-Montagu
+ — N Y Times p14 My 13 '45 220w

ENSOR, ROBERT CHARLES KIRKWOOD. Miniature history of the war. 153p $1.50 (2s 6d) Oxford

940.53 World war, 1939- 45-3517

Brief history of the second World war, from September 1939 to the liberation of Paris in August, 1944. Chronological table of events.

Booklist 41:251 My 1 '45
Bookmark 6:10 My '45

"This is a brilliant performance in condensation and clarification." F. H. U.
+ Canadian Forum 25:146 S '45 120w

"It seems doubtful whether it is feasible at all to write the history of this or any other war without so much as mentioning the diplomatic steps that preceded and accompanied the battles, the social and economic conditions that created a situation defying any peaceful means of settlement. With these reservations in mind, Professor Ensor's 'Miniature History of the War' may be recommended to all those who feel the need for quick and impartial information about the military events of the last six years." E. S. P.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 19 '45 360w

Commonweal 41:650 Ap 13 '45 750w
Foreign Affairs 23:692 Jl '45 10w

"Useful reference book."
+ Kirkus 13:13 Ja 1 '45 210w

"Excellent for the average reader. Recommended." G. W. Hill
+ Library J 70:264 Mr 15 '45 80w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 17 '45 60w

The integration of the economic account with the military narrative is beautifully accomplished. A brief epilogue satisfactorily refers to matters of minor importance omitted in the main body of the book." Ralph Bates
+ Nation 160:522 My 5 '45 200w

"In seven chapters and only 145 short pages the English historian and economist R. C. K. Ensor has summarized the military history of World War II (down to the liberation of Paris) with admirable succinctness and clarity." J. K. H.
+ N Y Times p14 Ap 15 '45 160w

"The story has none of the blank evenness of a mere summary. It is a lively and courageous narrative, and it is well worth being reminded that the dragging out of the war on the western front—and consequently everywhere—was more than a little due to the diversion of aircraft, ships and landing-craft to the Pacific, because 'to a large fraction of the American public the war against Japan seemed more important than the war against Germany.' There are a number of sentences like this that leap out unexpectedly; and, though one may at times disagree with the emphasis, it is well that they should be put on record in a context that fails to obscure them. . . The half-page devoted to the campaign in Holland strikes the present writer as unusually unsatisfactory." Strategicus
+ — Spec 174:40 Ja 12 '45 550w

"The author is professor of political theory and institutions at Oxford university, and has served as chief editorial writer for such papers as the Manchester Guardian and the London Daily Chronicle. In this 'Miniature' he has sketched an over-all picture of the first years of the war that should interest the general reader." L. B. Kromer
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 28 '45 550w

"Mr. Ensor has brought to the task a trained historical sense and the habit of lucid and orderly exposition. In marshalling the salient facts he does not attempt to impose upon them a more close knit unity of cause and effect than as yet they can be made to bear. But his summary has sober proportion and balance without being at all colourless as history; he manages, indeed, to be acute and candid in judgment even in the throes of the severest compression."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p608 D 16 '44 650w

EPPSTEIN, JOHN, ed. Belgium. (British survey handbooks) 112p $1 Macmillan [3s Cambridge]

949.3 Belgium—History [A45-1025]

"[One of a series of] concise and well-written handbooks, put out by the British Society for International Understanding and distributed in this country by Macmillan. . . Each volume contains a historical survey of the country discussed, a detailed description of the character and customs of the people, and a brief consideration of the probable effects of the war upon both." New Yorker

Booklist 41:239 Ap 15 '45

Foreign Affairs 23:517 Ap '45 110w

+ New Yorker 20:71 Ja 27 '45 60w

EPSTEIN, BERYL (WILLIAMS). See Williams, B.

ERDMAN, LOULA GRACE. Fair is the morning; decorations by Erick Berry. 186p $2 Longmans

45-8645

Connie Thurman was a country girl, so she knew what she was doing when she asked to teach in the county's poorest school. Connie found more than she bargained for, but she had a staunch ally, and her realistic adventures in a present-day rural school make good vocational reading for grades seven to nine.

Booklist 42:79 N 1 '45

Kirkus 13:253 Je 1 '45 150w

"Good presentation of present-day rural problems of health, soil conservation and social needs. Recommended for general libraries and all high school collections." Maude Adams

+ Library J 70:1028 N 1 '45 70w

"Those who enjoyed 'Separate Star' in which Miss Erdman painted a good picture of a teacher while telling an absorbing story can look forward to this book. They will not be disappointed. Here, with a good story, is an interesting premise. It is that rural school teachers should be especially trained for their work, not merely learn their profession by progressing from country schools to schools in cities. . . The story makes very good reading." R. A. H.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:64 N 10 '45 310w

"Will interest all young people who are considering a career of teaching."

+ School & Society 62:224 O 6 '45 30w

Springf'd Republican p4d N 18 '45 60w

ERMINE, WILL, pseud. See Drago, H. S.

ERNST, MORRIS LEOPOLD. The best is yet. . . 291p $3 Harper

B or 92 Lawyers——Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 45-3722

Scenes from the life of a famous New York lawyer, who is specially known for his work on book censorship. He discusses his many friends, his recreation times in his beloved Nantucket, and things as far afield as the left-handed robin and the doctors' dictionary. Among his many friends he speaks with special fondness of Heywood Broun.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 Ap 29 '45 450w

Booklist 41:268 My 15 '45

Reviewed by R. L. Lurie
Boston Globe p17 My 16 '45 250w

" 'The Best Is Yet. . .' is certainly not a masterpiece; it is an invaluable indicator of one aspect of our contemporary society—and by no means the worst or least laudable aspect. Moreover it is characteristically American in its casualness, its kindliness, its openness and generosity. It is impossible to conceive of any European who could have lived Mr. Ernst's life and, consequently, could have written his book. This openness, this kindliness we possess and we must cherish, for it is the greatest of our national heritages."

+ Commonweal 42:124 My 18 '45 700w

"Mr. Ernst's slip-slop self-portrait, is no more complete than it is compelling. It is nevertheless extremely, if unwittingly, revealing—precisely because Mr. Ernst is so eager to put up a good face. For that eagerness to picture himself as a wonderful guy . . . has a nasty tendency to boomerang right back at him. So it is when Mr. Ernst, a cruising enthusiast, writes: 'Unlike that low and mean abuse of sailing known as racing, cruising is the antithesis of competition between man and man. . . There are no artificial rewards such as vain and ever boastful silver cups, symbols of the racer's insecurity which demands that evidence be in tangible form for constant display.' Presumably, the cruisers prefer to display their famous friends." Fred Rodell

Harvard Law R 58:1102 S '45 1750w

"Good reading, alive and animated autobiography."

+ Kirkus 13:82 F 15 '45 170w

"Not to be missed by anyone interested in contemporary history or in human interest elements—for wide purchase." M. C. Manley

+ Library J 70:354 Ap 15 '45 90w

Reviewed by McAlister Coleman
Nation 161:64 Jl 21 '45 420w

Reviewed by Bruce Bliven
New Repub 112:717 My 21 '45 450w

"Highly personal, partisan, sparkling volume . . . Mr. Ernst has . . . obviously had a lot of fun writing it. His readers—except for his victims—are likely to share his amusement even though they question some of his judgments." F. S. Adams

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 29 '45 650w

New Yorker 21:78 Je 2 '45 180w

"Morris Ernst is a provocative man with an invigorating mind. He wears his liberalism with as jaunty an air as young Joseph wore his colorful coat, and sometimes with the same effect; even when he occasionally gets marooned in a well he comes out in time to lunch with the country's big-shots and twit them about their reactionism. He writes with a good deal of gusto about the worthy causes he has defended, but the book is a hodge-podge of autobiography, philosophy, family memoirs, sidebar laudation of his friends and cracks at his enemies, and mere trivia." Hal Borland

Sat R of Lit 28:8 Ap 28 '45 1100w

Reviewed by Beulah Amidon
Survey G 34:297 Je '45 550w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:13 D '45 210w

" 'The Best Is Yet . . ' indeed is autobiography only by a conventional fiction. Actually, it is a volume of philosophy, the product of a vivid and agile intelligence grappling with modern life in its most complex synthesis, that is, life in a twentieth-century metropolis. It is not profound. Perhaps this is because Mr. Ernst is not equipped with the sort of mind that can penetrate deeply into the mystery of existence; but perhaps it is due in part to a New Yorkish distrust of apparent profundity." G. W. Johnson

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ap 29 '45 1150w

Wis Lib Bul 41:67 Je '45

ERSKINE, JOHN. The human life of Jesus. 248p $3 Morrow

232.9 Jesus Christ—Biography 45-8383

"Mr. Erskine has made a careful study of the four Gospels, extracting all the facts about Jesus's life, and has arranged them in a quiet, easy-flowing, chronological book that tells one of the great, moving stories in man's history, and one that can never grow old." (New Yorker) No index.

Reviewed by J. M. Yard
Book Week p8 O 21 '45 500w

Booklist 42:177 F 1 '46

"Mr. Erskine's logical processes are sadly astray. He writes in a curiously contradictory spirit, mingling beautiful passages with others that are most repugnant. He would seem to hold opposite points of view and his standards are entirely subjective. It is a pity that he wrote this book, as it will probably add to

ERSKINE, JOHN—Continued
rather than clarify the existing confusion about Christ. Conceivably, a history of the experimental development of the human nature of Christ might be written. But it cannot be done by ignoring, or denying, the necessary influence of the divine nature upon the human life of Jesus. We would advise Mr. Erskine to stick to his last." E. H. Peters
Cath World 162:374 Ja '46 550w

Reviewed by H. G. J. Beck
Commonweal 43:102 N 9 '45 250w

"So many have written a 'Life of Jesus' that there is no excuse for another, unless the author has fresh light to throw on the great Figure. The only claim to originality is the extent to which Erskine draws upon the early tradition of the church, especially the apocryphal gospels. But this approach is not new. . . This is a reverential approach to the life of Jesus, although it is one which is more apt to be appreciated by those who do not know too much about the subject. However, this would leave a fairly large possible clientele, even in 'Christian' America."
Kirkus 13:366 Ag 15 '45 260w

"Author, subject and publicity, which has already begun, should make this a popular book. Recommended for all public libraries." G. W. Wakefield
+ Library J 70:977 O 15 '45 100w

"He has avoided sensation. His style is simple and gracious. He accepts the divinity of Jesus, and reading his book is thus sharing an act of worship. Such sincerity disarms criticism and transcends argument." P. W. Wilson
+ N Y Times p10 N 4 '45 440w

"Done with care, discrimination, and unobtrusive reverence."
+ New Yorker 21:114 O 20 '45 80w

"'The Human Life of Jesus' is a thought-compelling book, controversial for orthodox Christians, comforting for unbelievers, and worthy for its sincerity and deep religious feeling. In it are many sermons which are more convincing than many we hear from the pulpit." M. M. Dickey
+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 21 '45 1000w

"Every Christian has his own life of Jesus, and if he is a writer he will some day set it down. That it will reflect a good deal of his own character and personality is inevitable, for Jesus is all things to all men. That it will reveal more about him than about his subject is probable, for what he believes most deeply he will impress upon the figure of his imagination. Thus every book about the Master of Galilee is a new and revealing story,. as fresh as if the author had just invented its hero. John Erskine's version is interesting and provocative for many reasons, not the least of which are reverence which is its major key, and faith, which is its major theme." Thomas Sugrue
+ Weekly Book Review p4 O 21 '45 650w
Wis Lib Bul 41:124 D '45

ESCRAGNOLLE TAUNAY, ALFREDO DE. Inocência; tr. by Henriqueta Chamberlain. 209p $2.50 Macmillan

45-823

"[This] is the story of a Romeo and Juliet of the backlands of nineteenth-century Brazil—two star-crossed lovers whose predestined love is fated to end tragically since it clashes with the harsh code of honor of the patriarchal hinterland. . . Published in 1872, the novel has gone through many translations into many tongues." Weekly Book Review

---

"It is all to the greatness of the Viscount of Taunay that one can claim that his novel, though written some 75 years ago under the influence of a literary school which has lost most of its significance to present-day readers, has remained a lovable work of literature, thoroughly enjoyable because of its freshness and deep understanding of human relations. At long last the vast treasure of Brazilian literature is being revealed to American readers in competent translations." Angel Flores
+ Book Week p5 Mr 11 '45 400w
Booklist 41:209 Mr 15 '45

Reviewed by Cecelia Gaul
Christian Century 62:605 My 16 '45 230w
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 28 '45 650w
Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '45
Kirkus 13:4 Ja 1 '45 170w

Reviewed by H. A. Carpenter
Library J 70:164 F 15 '45 70w

"After so many years of literary sophistication in technique and ideas, it is rather refreshing to read this conscientious English translation of Taunay's novel—an ingenuous story, rich with the good smell of earth, filled with the characters and the qualities that make Brazilian country folk so lovable. Some of it, of course, will seem strange to American eyes. . . In Brazil, regardless of its importance as a universal pattern, it is considered a classic. And we Brazilians—despite the passing of time, wars and literary fashions—are still in love with Inocencia." Erico Verissimo
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 4 '45 1000w

"In spite of the fact that this classic Brazilian romance was written nearly seventy-five years ago, it seems, even at this late date, very fresh and readable."
+ New Yorker 21:78 Mr 3 '45 120w

"Everything about it is trite. The pedantic German, the encyclopedist, has been the same for centuries. The cruel father is very suspicious, but painfully dumb. The pathetic flower-like daughter speaks hardly more than a dozen lines, a real puppet; the lover talks more, but not to her, only woodenly and professionally. He is a quack doctor. The descriptions of the countryside are equally unconvincing. This reviewer can well appreciate the important step that this represents in the development of the modern Brazilian novel but cannot recommend it to anyone except as a link in its history." S. M. Gross
— Springf'd Republican p6 F 27 '45 420w

"Several generations of urban Brazilians have wept over Inocencia's hard fate, and other generations will likely weep over her, too. For it is a tale well and economically told by a writer with a sense of poetry, a vivid feeling for character and scene, the skill to make his heroine seem as innocent as her name and as lovely as her lover thinks her, and to make her tragic fate seem convincing and moving. The translation by Henriqueta Chamberlain admirably preserves the overtones of poetry that envelop scene and characters and frontier code." B. D. Wolfe
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 4 '45 450w

ESKELUND, KARL. My Chinese wife; il. by Hans Bendix. 247p $2.50 Doubleday

B or 92 China—Social life and customs

45-5966

Reminiscences of a young Danish newspaper correspondent whose love for travel has carried him over most of Europe, Asia and North America. In Peking, at the age of eighteen, he met a beautiful Chinese girl, fell in love with her, and after three years of alternating absences and courtship, married her. Their adventures, grave and gay, make up the book.

Reviewed by J. N. North
Book Week p6 Jl 1 '45 450w
Booklist 41:338 Jl 15 '45

Reviewed by Francis McCullagh
Cath World 161:518 S '45 310w
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '45

"Told with such youthful exuberance that no young person can resist the author's charm. It is a good lesson in international understanding as well as a delightful account of two young people." M. C. Scoggin
+ Horn Bk 21:367 S '45 90w

"Sometimes hilarious, always entertaining autobiography."
+ Kirkus 13:174 Ap 15 '45 170w
Library J 70:587 Je 15 '45 20w

"His story interprets the customs and culture of his wife's race to the people of his race. This interpretation is presented vividly and clearly, and by example he endeavors to destroy the Kipling myth. This is almost a scientific study, but minus academic dullness. Although Mr. Eskelund is ever conscious of his objective, he has concealed that objective so that the casual reader will find it an amusing book of personal history." Jane Smith-Hutton

+ N Y Times p8 Jl 8 '45 440w

"I don't always agree with young Eskelund in his opinions, especially when his emotional indignation is involved, but that's not the point. I can disagree with him and still read his book with great pleasure. It is unfair to as fresh a piece of work as we have seen in years to close this article with a solemn, weighty observation, but the spirit moves me and I must. 'My Chinese Wife' is worth any number of political tomes for its effect on the reader. Nobody can listen to Karl Eskelund's life story without understanding our Chinese cousins a thousandfold better, and understanding in this case leads inevitably to liking and respect." Emily Hahn

+ Sat R of Lit 28:11 Jl 14 '45 2000w

"This is a very good book about the economics of the reporter. Chi-yun, who had learned to type, but better who had learned to take pot-luck and palace feasts as they came, who could wear old clothes, or dazzling silks, catch trains by herself, give interviews, handle all of Chennault's AVGS in a dignified walk or a gay dance step, is a creature any man might envy and write a book about." Ernestine Evans

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Je 24 '45 1250w

ESPEY, JOHN JENKINS. Minor heresies. 202p $2 Knopf

B or 92 China—Social life and customs. Missions—China 45-1793

Chapters of reminiscences based on the author's early years in China. He was born in that country in 1913, son of the head of a Presbyterian mission, and lived there until 1930. In the sketches he recalls life in China, the ways of missionary folk, and just plain life. Some of the articles appeared first in The New Yorker.

"The sound of a reminiscent chuckle is quite likely to be lost in the fierce brawl of current events. Nevertheless, at a time when the world is trying to adjust itself to the idea that the people of one race are as human as those of another, John Espey's stories of his childhood in China during the 1920s have a certain marginal value." R. M.

+ Book Week p6 My 27 '45 150w

Booklist 41:266 My 15 '45

Bookmark 6:14 My '45

Christian Science Monitor p13 My 4 '45 450w

Churchman 159:14 N 1 '45 120w

"There is none of the obvious appeal of One Foot in Heaven, perhaps, but this book has more subtle, scampish charms, an intelligently interpreted Chinese setting, and delicate comedy, and fully deserves personal attention and word-of-mouth recommendation. . . Don't miss it."

+ Kirkus 13:119 Mr 15 '45 210w

"The library that fails to buy this will miss one of the rare books of youth—and one of the most delightful books to read aloud. Excellent for hospital libraries." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 70:305 Ap 1 '45 110w

"John Espey's reminiscences are pleasurable reading. They are a series of informal essays, frankly narrow in scope ('simply the casual record of a few moments of American youth played out against a Chinese background'). They are projected from the intermediate perspective of just-turned-30, and written from the restful environs of a California campus, where Mr. Espey is now instructing in English. At times he gives the impression that he is working too hard at his resolve to make Presbyterianism 'gay'; but as anecdote succeeds incident, a cumulative effect is achieved. The author's minor heresies manage a minor miracle: an artful decapitation of American missionary zeal." Adrienne Koch

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 22 '45 1100w

"Mr. Espey is an English professor and, like others of his kind, may have an overfondness for the deftly turned phrase. He uses a priggish and frisky prose leavened by abrupt descents to earthy humor."

New Yorker 21:92 Ap 14 '45 120w

"John Espey is deft with word and phrase, while the timing of his humor leaves me chuckling in retrospect. I read every line of 'Minor Heresies,' and I shall read it again—probably many times again." John Goette

+ Sat R of Lit 28:12 My 12 '45 1050w

"Mr. Espey's deft pen presents in an affectionately humorous light his Shanghai household and the idiosyncracies of the Presbyterian mission as a whole. So well-remembered and frank are these lively tales, indeed, that the author reminds one of an incorrigible child who sees all and tells all. But this is where the resemblance ends, for no child, no matter how precocious, could turn a phrase as well as John Espey. There is many an enjoyable moment and hearty laugh in this volume." C. K. Bausman

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 22 '45 330w

Time 45:100 Ap 23 '45 700w

"Gospel truth or rosied over with nostalgia for childhood, these adventures of a young American living in a Presbyterian mission in China are about as blithe and diverting a chronicle of a happy childhood as you would come across in a month of Sundays. Maybe they brought me a peculiar relief. It happened that just before reading them I had been reading the story of another childhood not so happy, Edmund Gosse's 'Father and Son,' that depressing account of a boy's life with a dreadful sanctimonious, killjoy father." Frank Sullivan

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ap 22 '45 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 41:68 Je '45

ESQUIRE (periodical). First sports reader; ed. by Herbert Graffis. 292p $2.75 Barnes, A.S.

796 Sports 45-35054

"Thirty-eight articles and stories selected by Esquire's sports editor from the pages of that magazine. Virtually all sports are represented from football to stream fishing, and contributors include many well-known writers and journalists, among whom are Ernest Hemingway, Edgar Lee Masters, Will Connolly, Sherwood Anderson, Westbrook Pegler, John S. Getchell, and Paul Zimmerman." Booklist

---

"Graffis says that the book was put together to keep the Esquire staff from having to look through the files when fans want to know about some vaguely remembered story. Now he can throw the book at them. And that is not a bad idea for puzzled gift seekers with difficult he-men on their lists. They will look a long time before they find another bonanza with no more than two or three lackluster nuggets." H. F. R.

+ Book Week p2 My 6 '45 270w

Booklist 41:250 My 1 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '45

Kirkus 13:155 Ap 1 '45 130w

N Y Times p21 Jl 15 '45 200w

"Addicts who take their sports neat should like it. Except for essays by Sherwood Anderson, Ernest Hemingway, Westbrook Pegler, and a notable report on Bob Fitzsimmons by Edgar Lee Masters, the writing, however, is hardly what you would call distinguished."

New Yorker 21:91 Ap 21 '45 90w

"Light and breezy summer reading—or, for that matter, reading for any season."

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 29 '45 300w

Reviewed by Stanley Walker

Weekly Book Review p18 S 9 '45 380w

Wis Lib Bul 41:66 Je '45

EVANS, GEORGE W. B. Mexican gold trail; the journal of a forty-niner; ed. by Glenn S. Dumke, with a pref. by Robert Glass Cleland. 340p il $5 Huntington lib.

917.8 Overland journeys to the Pacific. Mexico—Description and travel. California—Description and travel. California—Gold discoveries 45-10431

"First-hand account of the gold trek of 1849. This trail, beginning at Defiance, Ohio, was the little used one across Mexico to Chihuahua and thence through southern Arizona and California to Sacramento. Daily entries give impressions of the country and dangers encountered along the way, and life in the mining communities. For western history collections." Booklist

Booklist 42:163 Ja 15 '46

"His account of the trip and his experience in the 'diggings' is a valuable contribution to the literature of the California gold rush. It is intensely interesting, especially in the latter part, after his group finally reaches California. As Robert C. Cleland points out in his preface to the book, Evans gives a better picture of the miners and mining camps than some of the best-known journals of the Forty-niners." J. W.

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 13 '46 360w

"Evans found much to interest him and all of it got into his journal, usually in detail. The result is 300 pages of intensely personal memorabilia, sometimes important, often trivial, nearly always good reading. As Mr. Dumke states in his admirable introduction, the journal is an enthusiastic, painstaking and unconsciously self-revealing chronicle of a difficult and courageous adventure, seen through the eyes of a 'pious, middle-class, Middle-Western Yankee.'" Oscar Lewis

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 13 '46 200w

EVANS, KATHERINE. Michael Angelo Mouse; il. by [the author]. [26p] $1 Wilcox & Follett

Picture story book about a mouse who wanted to be an artist, so went to live in the studio of a poor, but thoughtful artist. When the artist was in a spot Michael Angelo Mouse came to his rescue in a very practical way. For ages seven and up.

"Katherine Evans has done both pictures and story for 'Michael Angelo Mouse,' and both are delightful."

+ Book Week p18 N 11 '45 150w

"There are charm and whimsy and often a humorous turn in the beautiful colored drawings by the author which are an integral part of the story." A. H. McGinity

+ Library J 70:1190 D 15 '45 70w

"A lively and unusual book for 6 to 8 year olds."

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 13 '46 50w

EVANS, LUTHER HARRIS. The Virgin Islands from naval base to new deal. 365p $3.50 Edwards bros.

342.7297 Virgin Islands of the United States—Politics and government 45-35012

"Professor Evans, [now] Librarian of the Library of Congress, made this study while he was at Princeton, completing it in 1935, although it is now first published. He gives a brief history of the Danish West Indies, culminating in the purchase by the United States, and reviews the laws, administration system and problems. Some of the facts are at variance with information publicized by American investigators." Current Hist

"Within the limits of the purpose of the book as described by the author, he has done an exceptionally good job." J. S. G. Carson

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1020 O '45 600w

Booklist 41:316 Jl 1 '45

Current Hist 9:49 Jl '45 70w

"Mr. Evans' book is probably best suited to collateral reading for college courses in political science, but it will be of value also to the student interested in political geography." E. B. Shaw

+ Geog R 35:684 O '45 200w

"In this book Luther Evans has given a complete, accurate and frank discussion of the United States governing an insular possession." B. J. Brown

+ Pol Sci Q 60:624 D '45 1050w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:25 Je '45 320w

EVE, ARTHUR STEWART, and CREASEY, CLARENCE HAMILTON. Life and work of John Tyndall; with a chapter on Tyndall as a mountaineer, by Lord Schuster; and a pref. by Granville Proby. 403p il $6.50 (21s) Macmillan

B or 92 Tyndall, John [45-6767]

"A full-length biography of John Tyndall, the Victorian physicist, populariser of science, and mountaineer. . . He was a man of his time—a time when truth was widely valued as an end in itself; and the people of all classes flocked to hear this great experimenter who knew so well how to transmit his love of natural knowledge to others. It was this love that drew him on to study glaciers, and mingling science with sport he went on to become one of the greatest mountaineers the Alps have ever known." Manchester Guardian

"This biography contains all the necessary information for an understanding of Tyndall's lovable character and his achievements of mind and limb; but it suffers from being written in three sections. . . If the more interesting of the personal anecdotes could have been woven into a general account of his varied interests and ideas a more attractive biography would have resulted."

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Je 20 '45 360w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 30:113 Ag 18 '45 600w

"Excellent and comprehensive biography of the brilliant English physicist."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:4 O '45 240w

"With the best will in the world one cannot say that the authors have made the most of their rich material. The narrative is full of lively extracts from Tyndall's diary and writings and from contemporary publications, but they are mixed up with trivialities. There is little attempt at a synthesis, at a well composed picture, little perspective. The great glacier controversy is not particularly well set out, and, in general, Tyndall's scientific work is not discussed with that mastery that one might have expected in view of the fact that one of the authors is a distinguished physicist. . . All who are interested in the history of science will need to have the book on their shelves, but many, while grateful to the authors for what they have given, will form a fond wish that circumstances had allowed it to be put together with just a little more accomplishment, a little more craftsmanship." E. N. da C. Andrade

+ — Spec 174:576 Je 22 '45 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p294 Je 23 '45 2400w

EVENNETT, HENRY OUTRAM. Catholic schools of England and Wales. (Current problems) 141p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

377.82 Education—Great Britain. Roman Catholic church in Great Britain—Education [A45-1096]

"This contribution to the Current Problems series attempts a general survey of the Catholic schools of England and Wales such as will enable their extent, character, and significance to be rightly appreciated. It does not claim to offer an exhaustive analysis of all that is involved or implied in a Catholic education, nor to indicate in any but the broadest way the lines along which, in the author's opinion, the examination of the deeper problems raised for contemporary English society by the existence and claims of the Catholic schools can most fruitfully be approached." Pref

"Compact, well-written volume."
+ Cath World 161:446 Ag '45 200w

"Praise must be given to Mr. Evennett for his statement of the case for denominational schools; it has rarely been put with more clarity or dignity. He is less happy when describing the financial relations between the State and the Roman Catholic education authorities in respect of their public elementary schools; there is another side to this case, but Mr. Evennett will not acknowledge it."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p635 D 30 '44 270w

EVERS, HELEN, and EVERS, ALF. Cheeky Chipmunk. [41p] 50c Rand McNally

Picture story book for the very young, in which a cheeky little chipmunk is taught better manners.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p11 My 6 '45 150w
Kirkus 13:158 Ap 1 '45 70w
Reviewed by M. A. Webb
Library J 70:415 My 1 '45 50w

"Adults may carp because the small-scale drama of this story isn't as acute as in its predecessors but not the 2 to 7 year olds who listen and look again and again." E. L. Buell
N Y Times p10 Ap 8 '45 130w

"Told with the absurd, affectionate pictures that make this series popular. One by one, it is reforming all minor faults of little children—well, for the time at least." M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 8 '45 130w

EWEN, DAVID. Men and women who make music. 244p il $2.75 Reader's press 927.8 Musicians 45-35248

"This is an expansion of a book by David Ewen originally published in 1939 [Book Review Digest, 1939]. Some of the earlier material has been revised, with new data added, and some is entirely new. In all, 26 musicians are discussed—five violinists, five pianists, nine singers, two violoncellists and five conductors." Book Week

Book Week p6 N 25 '45 150w
Booklist 42:131 D 15 '45

"While none of the material is particularly new, it is not readily accessible in compact form, and is handled competently and unostentatiously. The musically sophisticated will feel that there's too much fanfare and uncritical adoration which sounds a bit like a radio announcer. Nevertheless, for the average untrained listener, it should prove good basic library and school reference material."
+ — Kirkus 13:449 O 1 '45 120w

"Recommended for all public libraries and school libraries. Will be particularly useful for school reference." H. A. Carpenter
+ Library J 70:1024 N 1 '45 100w

F

FABRICANT, NOAH DANIEL. The common cold and how to fight it. 107p $1.50 Ziff-Davis
616.2 Cold (disease) SG45-90

An American doctor's study of the common cold and how to fight it. Partial contents: How the common cold begins; It depends on the weather; They call it allergy; Safe and sane treatment; Nose drops; Vitamins and vaccines; Sulfa drugs and penicillin; When is surgery advisable; Research of the future.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p9 F 18 '45 700w
Booklist 41:220 Ap 1 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '45

"All in all, a debunking book, which upsets a good many generally accepted theories and practices, but which is essentially good sense and good information, pungently put."
+ Kirkus 12:556 D 15 '44 170w

"While Dr Fabricant's book will save us a good deal of time and money usually wasted on useless medicine, it does not leave us with any bright future in treating a cold. We suggest the reader adapt our method and in the future treat the common cold the way the Greeks did a headache—with contempt." Robert Fontaine
Springf'd Republican p4d F 18 '45 700w
Wis Lib Bul 41:45 Ap '45

FAHS, MRS SOPHIA BLANCHE (LYON). Jesus, the carpenter's son; with il. by Cyrus Le Roy Baldridge. 160p $2 Beacon press
232.9 Jesus Christ—Juvenile literature 45-6081

Story biography of Jesus of Nazareth, which begins with his boyhood and ends with the crucifixion. The background history of the period is worked into the story. For older grades and junior high school.

"I have never before seen, among the many books for children based on the life of Jesus, one which presents so courageous, yet always reverent interpretation." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p15 S 16 '45 270w

"Children are entitled to have just such a natural and attractive account of the life of Jesus, free from everything that is historically doubtful. That is not to say that they do not need something more; but, be that as it may, they should have a story like this of the human Jesus in the setting of his time and place. The illustrations by a distinguished artist, Cyrus LeRoy Baldridge, add much to the volume."
+ Christian Century 62:934 Ag 15 '45 70w

"Distinctly modern in treatment, it is yet written with imagination and vitality. . . Such a book can be wisely used by teachers and parents who want to help children visualize the kind of world in which Jesus lived, from which he drew many of his stories. It should be read in connection with the King James Bible, however, for nothing is gained by retelling and expanding a perfect parable, like that of The Prodigal Son, as it is found there."
+ Horn Bk 21:198 My '45 230w

"A most unusual presentation of the life of Jesus. . . The book is Unitarian in interpretation and teaching." D. M. MacDonald
Library J 70:753 S 1 '45 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 12 '45 360w

FAIRCHILD, HENRY PRATT, ed. Dictionary of sociology. 342p $6 Philosophical lib.
303 Sociology—Dictionaries 44-4755

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"On the whole the definitions are clear and concise; they compare favorably with those in Reuter, Panunzio, and Young. The arrangement of the volume leaves much to be desired. Listing is alphabetical, but many of the terms are phrases of two or more words. The practice has been to put the more distinctly sociological word first and the general word second. . . The complexities of arrangement will cause some inconvenience and annoyance to the user, despite the editor's efforts to assign to each particular term 'its apparently most reasonable and practical place in the entire scheme.' The cross references in the Dictionary of Sociology are often faulty. . . Some errors in alphabetizing and typographical errors were found in the volume. Its binding of impregnated cloth will not stand up under use, yet the inner margins of the pages are too narrow to permit rebinding. The content of the volume should be useful to students of sociology. For those whose interest in the content is sufficient to warrant purchase of the volume despite its defects of arrangement and make-up, the Dictionary of Sociology is recommended."
— + Subscription Bks Bul 16:4 Ja '45 600w

FALTUS, RUDOLPH, and STEINMETZ, CHARLES W. Manual of aircraft layout. 240p spir pa $3 Wiley

629.1341 Airplanes—Design and construction 45-2506

"A textbook for school or factory, with graduated exercises in making airplane parts. It aims to give an over-all picture of production while imparting concise information on blueprint reading; laying out jobs; template development, along with the necessary trigonometric processes; and the machine and hand tools used in template construction. Included in the book are all the charts and tables needed in the calculations, with explanations on their use." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 69:814 O 1 '44 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:3 Ja '45

FARGO, LUCILE FOSTER. Activity book no. 2; library projects for children and young people. 239p $2.50 A.L.A.

027.8 School libraries

"More suggestions for programs, displays, and other student cooperative projects to stimulate reading interest and library use in schools. Many of the ideas come from teachers, pupils, and librarians who have put them into practice; many are usable in public as well as school libraries." (Booklist) Index. For the first Activity Book see Book Review Digest, 1939.

Booklist 41:281 Je 1 '45

"In both her introduction and throughout the text, Miss Fargo presents a fine philosophy of school librarianship. Many available books and articles discuss what to do in the library, but Activity Book Number Two is an important book for librarians and educators because it also deals with 'why.'" Gretchen Westervelt

+ Library J 70:747 S 1 '45 450w

"It is an excellent book, worth its weight in gold." Phyllis Fenner

+ Library Q 15:360 O '45 450w

"Throughout the book are frequent bibliographies and references to other helpful related publications. This volume is a serviceable handbook for librarians and for teachers in planning library activities." R. L. Fleming

+ School R 53:624 D '45 850w

Wis Lib Bul 41:80 Jl '45

FARJEON, ELEANOR. Prayer for little things; pictures by Elizabeth Orton Jones. [15p] 85c Houghton

Prayers 45-4536

Twelve full-page pictures illustrating a prayer for children. The prayer is in verse, and is so simple that it can be understood by the very young.

Book Week p20 Je 3 '45 110w

Booklist 41:305 Je 15 '45

Bookmark 6:16 Ag 1 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '45

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 21:273 Jl '45 40w

"Children will look at the pictures with enjoyment, but the text won't hold them, and both text and pictures are distinctly inferior to Margaret Wise Brown's moving Child's Good Night Book with the unique Charlot lithographs."

Kirkus 13:220 My 15 '45 110w

"Simple and beautiful words which a small child can understand. Illustrations in full color are done in Elizabeth Orton Jones' usual appealing and lovely manner. Recommended." R. O. Bostwick

+ Library J 70:587 Je 15 '45 70w

"Children have already taken this book to their hearts; mothers will welcome its beauty and the sense of quiet security which it gives." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p20 My 27 '45 130w

Sat R of Lit 28:38 Je 16 '45 130w

Springf'd Republican p4d Je 10 '45 90w

"Little children will understand this little book, and the grown-up who reads the words as the listener follows its affectionate pictures will do well to give himself up, for the moment at least, to their frame of mind. For this is how a little child instinctively turns to God." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 My 27 '45 270w

Wis Lib Bul 41:86 Jl '45

FARLEY, WALTER. Black stallion returns; il. by Harold Eldridge. 229p $2 Random house 45-8763

A sequel to the author's earlier adventure story for boys, The Black Stallion (Book Review Digest, 1941). In this story the American boy, Alec, journeys to Arabia in search of the black horse he loves so much and has a great many stirring adventures before he finds him.

Book Week p5 N 11 '45 110w

"Straight escape stuff, and a fast moving, blood and thunder thriller which will satisfy adventure lovers from 11 and up."

+ Kirkus 13:342 Ag 1 '45 80w

"This sequel to the very popular book The Black Stallion is not remarkable in style, plot or characterization, yet it has pace and verve and holds the reader's interest throughout." Dorotha Dawson

Library J 70:1093 N 15 '45 70w

FARMER, WENDELL. Fish Hook island mystery; il. by Ninon Macknight. 239p $2 Doubleday 45-8810

Mystery story for boys and girls.

Booklist 42:79 N 1 '45

Kirkus 13:369 Ag 15 '45 150w

"Convincing and exciting tale laid on the New Jersey coast. Recommended for grades five to seven." E. A. Groves

+ Library J 70:1027 N 1 '45 70w

"This is a realistic story of fun and action, with a bang-up climax especially suited to arm-chair sailors." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p26 D 9 '45 130w

Sat R of Lit 28:60 N 10 '45 40w

FARNSWORTH, HELEN (CHERINGTON), and TIMOSHENKO, VLADIMIR PROKOPOVICH. World grain review and outlook, 1945; with a statistical appendix by Rosamond H. Peirce. (V 1) 319p $3 Food research inst.

338.1 Grain. Grain trade (A45-2807)

"This is the first of what is intended to be an annual series replacing, in part, the Institute's 'Wheat Studies.' The authors examine the world's food grain situation for 1943-44 and the outlook for the future. There is a 50-page statistical appendix." Foreign Affairs

Foreign Affairs 24:160 O '45 40w

"Excellent book."

+ Geog R 35:696 O '45 600w

"This useful book, written by well-known economists, contains more than its title suggests." A. J. G.

+ Pacific Affairs 18:303 S '45 220w

FARRELL, JAMES THOMAS. League of frightened philistines, and other papers. 210p $2.50 Vanguard

804 Literature—Addresses, essays, lectures. Books—Reviews 45-35125

"Good books are for James T. Farrell the most civilizing of agencies; and by good books he means those most charged with 'perceptions, observations, insights, revelations . . . of those mysteries of life which surround us on every side and which exist even in our own consciousness.' In a series of interpretative essays he illustrates the working of this principle in writers like Dreiser, Hemingway, Joyce and still better in the great Russians, Dostoievsky, Tolstoy, Chekhov." N Y Times

Reviewed by Maxwell Geismar
Book Week p4 Jl 29 '45 450w

Booklist 41:336 Jl 15 '45

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 42:532 S 14 '45 500w

Kirkus 13:123 Mr 15 '45 150w

"Speaking for the younger authors who attempt to realistically analyze the present scene, he presents a strong case versus the idealistic, romantic views expressed in The Literary Fallacy, On Literature Today, etc. Recommended as an excellent counter volume to these works." H. G. Kelley
+ Library J 70:486 My 15 '45 110w

Reviewed by Harry Levin
New Repub 113:105 Jl 23 '45 1300w

"The author of 'Studs Lonigan' is not the most ingratiating of literary critics. . . Yet there is something about the man that makes up for many shortcomings. He has definite ideals for books and men, and is perfectly clear-headed about them. He knows what he is fighting for and puts his whole heart into it. The sincerity of the man is a positive and refreshing virtue." J. W. Beach
+ — N Y Times p5 My 27 '45 900w

Reviewed by J. D. Adams
N Y Times p2 Jl 8 '45 1000w

"Mr. Farrell isn't any more graceful a writer as essayist than he is as novelist, but in these pieces he shows the same slow-burning intensity, the buffalolike stubbornness, and the uncompromising honesty that made 'Studs Lonigan' the book it is. Admirable as these qualities are, they don't altogether compensate for the fact that Mr. Farrell, as often as not, isn't an especially brilliant thinker and that he says, angry, many that are merely angry. Worth along with some things that are both wise and reading, nonetheless, particularly for those who would like to get a glimpse of some of the intellectual processes that lie behind Mr. Farrell's novels."
+ — New Yorker 21:72 Ag 11 '45 120w

"Many readers will find 'How Studs Lonigan Was Written' the most memorable essay in the collection. It is a report of the writer's problems, his solitude, his lifelong struggle to be sure of what he has to say and to say it surely. Altogether this book states clearly and bluntly the position of America's leading naturalistic writer in the 1940's. But, as often happens, the theory has less power than its practice. It would be a loss to trade a single chapter of 'Studs Lonigan' or 'Danny O'Neill' for these essays." Walter Havighurst
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:38 S 29 '45 700w

Theatre Arts 29:734 D '45 440w

"Mr. Farrell's critical rejoinders are largely directed against such writers as Van Wyck Brooks, Bernard DeVoto and J. Donald Adams, who have been pointing out recently that realists who specialize in exhibiting the defects of an acquisitive society and advance-guard poets who spend all their time expressing the psychic torsions of an ego compressed between social millstones are alike myopic to much that is going on in present-day America. . . Should readers be blamed if they cannot see the overwhelming importance of giving all their attention to the analysis of social misfits? May they not even be excused for resenting the constant implication of the kind of fiction now becoming a little passé that the country is populated chiefly by morons and bounders?" G. F. Whicher
— Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 22 '45 1000w

FARREN, ROBERT (ROIBEARD O'FARACHAIN). Rime, gentlemen, please. 110p $2 Sheed

821 45-8194

"Robert Farren is a young Irishman who has already had three books of poems, and a book of short stories in Gaelic. Here he has poems and a play, the latter being tragic in its reflection on the persistence in Ireland of 'old unhappy far off things and battles long ago.' His poems are not tragic. Some of them are quite belligerent." Sat R of Lit

---

"The poems have a sweep and range which are not only characteristically Irish, but peculiarly the gift of Robert Farren. His form owes nothing to any English model. Many of the verses are spiced with satire, delicate and scathing like that of the ancient bards. But the quality which links his work with MacSwiney's and sets them both apart from the pseudo-mysticism of the pseudo-Celts who represent Irish literature to the misinformed, is the note of profound and luminous religious faith which rings through all their poetry. And this, it is a pleasure to record, is once more becoming what it was in centuries past, a distinguishing mark of Irish literature." B. M. Kelly
+ Cath World 162:88 O '45 230w

"Perhaps he is a bit too anxious to sweep the older poets out of the way for the new. But then he is not a patient young man. That is one of his charms. He even has a poem excoriating 'The Common Cold,' which, as I have one at the moment, I can most heartily indorse." W. R. Benet
+ Sat R of Lit 28:41 O 20 '45 180w

FARRINGTON, EDWARD IRVING. Gardener's almanac. 5th rev ed 146p $1.50 Mass. horticultural soc, Horticultural hall, 300 Massachusetts av, Boston 15

635.9 Gardening Agr45-340

"A slight book of reminders for gardeners, telling, month by month, the attentions needed by flowers, vegetables, trees and shrubs, with separate sections for gardens in the South. Humorous small drawings. First published in 1939 and now revised." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1939.

Booklist 42:131 D 15 '45

"It makes no pretense of being more than a well ordered assemblage of practical pointers which hurried folk can snatch on the fly and without too strenuous mental effort. As such it serves its purpose. One wonders, though, whether it is really necessary to enliven perfectly sincere and serious pages with likenesses of the gnomes, gremlins or whatever one calls the deformed and repulsive little creatures which cavort through this new edition. To one reviewer, at least, each of these goblinesque illustrations seems as incongruous as a Varga girl in 'The Atlantic Monthly.'" R. S. Lemmon
+ — Weekly Book Review p22 N 25 '45 160w

FARRINGTON, SELWYN KIP. The ducks came back; the story of Ducks unlimited; il. by Lynn Bogue Hunt. 138p $5 Coward-McCann

799.24841 Ducks unlimited. Ducks Agr46-156

"How the establishment of protected breeding grounds increased the wild-duck population of Canada and this country from thirty-eight million to a hundred and forty million (one apiece for all of us) in the past eight years. A rather statistical account, illustrated with black-and-white drawings and a frontispiece in color, all by Lynn Bogue Hunt, plus sixty-four pages of photographs." (New Yorker) Index.

"Here's a book that stacks up as a 'must' for the man who has sat in a blind with the temperature below freezing and snow and rain coming in on a gale—without seeing a duck." George Applegren
+ Book Week p4 D 16 '45 180w

Kirkus 13:462 O 15 '45 90w

New Yorker 21:68 D 29 '45 50w

FAST, HOWARD MELVIN. Patrick Henry and the frigate's keel, and other stories of a young nation. 253p $2.50 Duell

45-35072

Twelve short stories relating incidents of the American revolution and of frontier life. Contents: Patrick Henry and the frigate's keel; Rachel; The pirate and the general; Neighbor

FAST, H. M.—Continued
Sam; Conyngham; The brood; The day of victory; Amos Todd's vinegar; Sun in the west; The bookman; The price of liberty; Not too hard.

"It is the substance of these stories, not the form, that should be emphasized. Fast's legerdemain brings history to life, carries the reader into the brave new world of Patrick Henry, Washington—and of the obscure Amos Todd. The boy or girl who picks up this book will not want to lay it down until on the final page Daniel Boone takes over the Injun-threatened cabin from that courageous pioneer woman, Sarah. But this is not a child's book, it has universality." F. N. Litten
+ Book Week p3 Ap 8 '45 500w
Booklist 41:269 My 15 '45
Bookmark 6:15 My '45

"Mr. Fast knows how to make a story hasten on its way, for he has brevity in his art. His skill in making a child his mouthpiece, as he frequently does, is especially notable. The title-piece may be more lesson than story. In the others, Mr. Fast has employed his technique so as to create an engrossing story, with the inspiration to be drawn from the early history of the nation subtly woven into its texture. They are, first of all, good stories, as they should be, done with distinction and force." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 My 19 '45 550w

"This book is small change beside such a work as his recent Freedom Road but the coinage is sterling silver." W. H. Melish
+ Churchman 159:16 Ap 1 '45 240w

"Good factual feel—authenticity—but no particular distinction nor originality. I think Fast needs the scope of the longer book to develop his particular quality of writing."
Kirkus 13:70 F 15 '45 120w

"The writing is in the same excellent style that the author has used so effectively before. Recommended for all libraries, especially for young people." Katharine Shorey
+ Library J 70:306 Ap 1 '45 70w

"When a writer of historical fiction is in top form he somehow can suggest that he does not merely re-create the past but rather that he lives there and is reporting on the life around him. Sometimes the author of 'Citizen Tom Paine' and 'Freedom Road' does this in 'Patrick Henry and the Frigate's keel, and Other Stories of a Young Nation'—not in the title story, which is a heavy echo of the kind of lyrical-historical tale that Stephen Vincent Benét wrote so well, but in the simple sketches that need no historical trappings at all. When he does that, Howard Fast is writing well and effectively, in a minor key, and you follow along with him and belong to the world he evokes." J. K. Hutchens
+ — N Y Times p6 Ap 8 '45 600w

"Even in his less important efforts, among which these stories of early American life must be classed, Mr. Fast is immensely readable. Some of the briefer tales have been rather sweetened for the tastes of the women's magazines (where they first appeared), but on the whole it is an interesting collection."
+ — New Yorker 21:90 Ap 7 '45 80w
Time 45:104 Ap 9 '45 20w

"Though most of the stories have appeared previously in periodicals, the magazine market has left no mark on them. They are all noteworthy for freshness, vigor and honesty of treatment. And, while the fact that most of them have 'happy' endings may indicate a certain concession to the magazine reader's taste, these endings are never forced, but represent the logical outcome of the story situation." Jennings Rice
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 8 '45 750w

FAST, JULIUS. Watchful at night. 185p $2 Farrar 45-8441
Mystery story.

"A smooth and fast-paced story; and as for gore, Sgt. Fast's knowledge of medicine and surgery (he was a noncom in charge of a medical laboratory for two years) results in some gratifying grisly data pertaining to post mortems and kindred sanguinary matters—all calculated to keep your spine in one corrugated shiver for at least an hour. Alas, the story is a reminder that the dangerous crackpots we sometimes coddle are still peddling their poison." W. T.
+ Book Week p15 O 7 '45 170w
Booklist 42:129 D 15 '45
Kirkus 13:292 Jl 1 '45 90w

"It has a swell army-camp background, but it's a pretty poor detective story, and it's further handicapped by a top-heavy load of anti-fascist propaganda. This hardened criminologist feels that crime and ideology make unsatisfactory bedfellows in detective fiction. But those who don't agree might take a trip to Camp Alden and follow Sergeant Clark's successful efforts to bring the murderers of his buddy to justice." E. H.
New Repub 113:478 O 8 '45 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p20 O 14 '45 180w

"A nicely worked-out first mystery, simply written and keeping an excellent balance between action and deduction."
+ New Yorker 21:100 O 6 '45 90w

"Well worth reading."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:39 O 20 '45 40w
Springf'd Republican p4d O 28 '45 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p26 O 14 '45 100w

FATH, EDWARD ARTHUR. Elements of astronomy; a non-mathematical textbook for use as an introduction to the subject in colleges, universities, etc, and for the general reader. 4th ed 386p il $3 McGraw
520 Astronomy 45-597

A revised edition of a textbook first published in 1926 (Book Review Digest, 1926). "In the ten years that have elapsed since the third edition was issued various changes in viewpoint and much observational material have accumulated. The part of the book referring to the galaxies has been entirely rewritten and other material has been added. It is believed that no important discovery published before the book went to press has been omitted." (Pref. to 4th ed)

Booklist 41:304 Je 15 '45
Library J 70:220 Mr 1 '45 60w

FAUGHT, MILLARD CLARK. Falmouth, Massachusetts; problems of a resort community. 190p $2.75 Columbia univ. press [18s 6d Oxford]
917.449 Falmouth, Massachusetts. Summer resorts A45-4136

A detailed examination of the economic and social problems of a small resort community, Falmouth on Cape Cod.

N Y Times p16 Ag 26 '45 130w
Springf'd Republican p4d S 2 '45 700w

FAULKNER, GEORGENE, and BECKER, JOHN. Melindy's medal; il. by Elton C. Fax. 172p $2 Messner

Melindy had only one fault—she was a girl. All the men in Melindy's family had won medals for bravery in war. Then came a day when being eight years old, colored, and a girl, did not hold Melindy back from saving the lives of all the children in her school, and she, too, won a medal.

"It is only June, but somehow I know that Melindy is my favorite heroine of the year. Having just finished reading her story I am inclined to be completely reckless and say that 'Melindy's Medal' is my favorite book of the year." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p13 Je 3 '45 310w
Booklist 41:323 Jl 1 '45
Bookmark 6:16 Ag '45

"This is a genuinely valuable contribution to the growing list of books which treat Negroes as individuals. It has no dialect, no condescension, no persecution. It has warmth, humor, and character." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:275 Jl '45 120w

"An engaging, tender [story]."
+ Kirkus 13:86 F 15 '45 170w

Reviewed by S. J. Robinson
Library J 70:639 Jl '45 60w

"An unusual story glowing with tenderness and mirth—one to enlarge the understanding of other little girls of 8 and up. Melindy and her family are blessed with the special zest of their race." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p15 Je 3 '45 180w

"A story pleasanter to read and more likely to be remembered by eight-year-olds it would be hard to find, even in this year of good stories."
+ Weekly Book Review p15 My 20 '45 250w

FAULKNER, HAROLD UNDERWOOD, and others. U.S.A. an American history for the upper grades; drawings by James Daugherty. 620p maps $2.12 Harper

973 U.S.—History 45-2310

"This textbook is written to meet the needs of the postwar junior high school. It is organized in ten comprehensive units designed to develop an understanding of our country's growth in all of its important aspects. It is interestingly illustrated, contains a good bibliography, and a thorough index." Social Studies

'One of the valuable features in this publication is the abundance of maps, graphs, and charts presented simply enough to add significantly to the pupil's understanding of the subject. . . The authors appear to have presented controversial topics fairly, without prejudice and without any attempt to indoctrinate any ideology save democracy. Teachers in social studies can be grateful for the contribution that this book makes in its realistic and liberal approach." J. E. Baker
+ El School J 46:175 N '45 700w

"Deserves a special mention." Phyllis Fenner
+ Library J 70:953 O 15 '45 30w

School & Society 61:176 Mr 17 '45 90w

"Here is a textbook unique and distinctive in a number of different ways. It recognizes several new emphases in the social studies—our neighbors in the new world, contributions of minority groups, intercultural education, and American participation in the postwar world for peace. Its other features are unitary biographies for each of the nine units in the book, and frank and complete omission of some phases of American history deemed too difficult, and which must be excluded anyway due to lack of space." L. A. Vitcha
Social Educ 9:283 O '45 850w

Social Studies 36:186 Ap '45 50w

Wis Lib Bul 41:102 O '45

FAY, FRANK. How to be poor; il. by James Montgomery Flagg. 172p $2 Prentice-Hall

817 45-9655

A book of humorous sketches dealing chiefly with how to lose money and enjoy the luxury of being poor.

Reviewed by Dale Harrison
Book Week p25 N 18 '45 230w

Christian Science Monitor p17 Ja 12 '46 30w

Kirkus 13:451 O 1 '45 80w

"The author is the ex-vaudeville actor who startled New York with his brilliant impersonation of Elwood in Mary Chase's fantastic and still-running comedy, Harvey. I wish it might be possible to say that Mr. Fay's book is as delightful as the play in which he appears. Unfortunately what has been variously described as an 'autobiography' and/or a volume of humor is neither. It is obviously intended to be the latter but it does not have Mr. Fay's stage ability to project it. In print it is elephantine with no disrespect to elephants. Not recommended." George Freedley
— Library J 70:1024 N 1 '45 90w

Springf'd Republican p6 N 29 '45 240w

"Some of these monologues have been evolved from curtain speeches, an art in which Frank Fay excels, and others you may have heard over the air. They are light and rambling in their humor, with here and there a sharp thorn of truth lurking among the buds of laughter."
Weekly Book Review p35 N 25 '45 90w

FEI, HSIAO-T'UNG, and CHANG, TSE-I. Earthbound China; study of rural economy in Yunnan; rev. English ed. prepared in collaboration with Paul Cooper and Margaret Park Redfield [pub. in cooperation with the Secretariat of the Inst. of Pacific relations]. 319p il $3.75 Univ. of Chicago press

338.1 Yunnan, China. Agriculture—Yunnan, China A45-4814

"The present book, a study of three types of rural economy in Yunnan, the southwestern province of China, is a translation of three reports of field investigation of the Yenching-Yunnan Station for Sociological Research, National Yunnan University, made during the war by my colleague, Mr. Chih-i Chang, and myself. It has been prepared for the purpose of supplying some material to social scientists who do not have access to Chinese literature on economic conditions in the interior of China. In a sense, the study represents a background to the traditional economy of China. Since in interior China modern industrial and commercial influence is just beginning to be felt, village folk are still farming with the old techniques, economically more or less self-sufficient, and are imbued with the traditional virtue of contentment. The population is dense, and resources are limited. It is old China in miniature. . . This book has been prepared for social scientists, with little consideration for the general reader." (Foreword) Index.

"I think we need not be surprised that the work these Chinese scholars and students have produced under these conditions is singularly rich, vital, clear, and of a quality which may well serve as a challenge and model to American rural sociologists. Though the book is scientific in language and pattern, it holds interest for the general reader because of the vividness of its incidental pictures of Chinese rural life and people. It is a real contribution to that 'basic knowledge of how a people lives' which is indeed necessary for the world today." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 O 7 '45 650w

Current Hist 9:550 D '45 50w

"This readable book, a Chinese rural 'Middletown,' tears away the veil of Oriental mystery and reveals the traditional Chinese social and economic structure in sordid detail." M. S. Stewart
+ Nation 161:528 N 17 '45 360w

"While the work is somewhat too detailed and technical to attract most general readers, the data on income and outgo of the various grades of citizens gives fascinating insight into the life of the rural Chinese." Russell Lord
Sat R of Lit 29:9 Ja 5 '46 600w

Reviewed by Eleanor Lattimore
Weekly Book Review p26 N 25 '45 400w

FEIKEMA, FEIKE FREDERICK. Boy almighty. (Itasca press publication) 338p $2.75 Webb

46-407

Chronicles the two years spent by one Eric Frey, a sensitive young writer, as a patient in a midwestern sanatorium for tuberculosis patients.

"This is an autobiographical novel by an honest literary craftsman who combines a substantial artistic sense with a sound feeling for essentials. . . In 'The Golden Bowl' [Book Review Digest, 1944] Feikema's mistakes were accountable mainly in terms of literary inexperience. . . In 'Boy Almighty' there are fewer evidences of this sort of literary immaturity. In this novel, the noticeable imperfections appear to be due to the overstraining of an intense artist who takes his writing seriously. He sometimes splatters an adjective, so to speak, overstates a feeling or a mood, gives the reader an extra shove that he doesn't really need in order to appreciate the intended effect. These are mistakes due to literary conscience, and basically one respects Feikema for them. For the most part, by far, he writes very well indeed." Wendell Johnson

FEIKEMA, F. F.—Continued

+ — Book Week p3 D 9 '45 600w

Booklist 42:184 F 1 '46

"This overpowering case history of 'Eric Frey's' two years in a tuberculosis sanitarium is so good that one wishes that Feikema had not transcribed it into fiction. As in the case of his first novel, The Golden Bowl, what Feikema has to tell us here about himself and his experience is reduced, not enhanced, by the novel-form."

+ — New Repub 113:877 D 24 '45 90w

"Sometimes a book that fails merits our respect more than a book that succeeds. As a piece of experimental writing, 'Boy Almighty' does not make consistently rewarding reading, but it is interesting as the work of an independent mind, expressing itself honestly, through perceptions and impressions of its own. Feike Feikema's outstanding attribute as a writer is, I think, his youthful wonder and absorbed, almost scientific, interest in human phenomena. But, in this novel, his self-indulgent curiosity has become something of an obsession, blurring the intent and design of his story." Nona Balakian

— + N Y Times p12 Ja 13 '46 500w

"This ferociously autobiographical novel . . . has almost every fault—a strained, clumsy style, dialogue so inept that it is frequently downright embarrassing, and a subject which of course will remind you every step of the way of 'The Magic Mountain.' However, the fact remains that Mr. Feikema has written a book of considerable if uncontrolled force, and one cannot help feeling that if he ever gets a grip on himself he may produce something of real merit."

— + New Yorker 21:128 D 1 '45 100w

" 'Boy Almighty' is a thoughtful novel written in a mixture of crudest realism and sensitive poetry that often lifts sentences above pedestrian prose." H. B. Kranz

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:31 D 22 '45 400w

" 'Boy Almighty' is a rich book, the product of a promising new talent. The author combines in his writing vigorous realism and delicate sensitivity. It is exciting merely to follow the ceaseless flow of his metaphors, almost all of them exactly 'right'. . . 'Boy Almighty' is such a satisfying book, indeed, that one dislikes to point out even a minor fault in it. Yet, one cannot help wondering why Eric, the college graduate, the poet, should be made to use persistently such execrable grammar." Jennings Rice

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 D 9 '45 800w

FEIS, HERBERT. Sinews of peace. 271p $2.50 Harper

382 Commercial policy. U.S.—Commercial policy. Investments, Foreign 44-9233

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"This book is for the general reader. It is to be hoped that it will have a wide reading. There is no Index, but that is not a noticeable omission, as the chapters are short and well titled and there is a somewhat surprising lack of textual references to persons, places, and events; surprising, that is, until the footnotes are inspected. They are quite to the point." Robert Rockafellow

+ Ann Am Acad 239:185 My '45 400w

Reviewed by Harvey O'Connor

Book Week p4 N 26 '44 180w

Booklist 41:219 Ap 1 '45

"Mr. Feis served for over twelve years as adviser on international economic affairs in the State Department. Against the background of this unique experience he has projected a wide panorama of the economic and financial problems that will confront us with the return to peace. Mr. Feis writes with the authority of an expert but in language comprehensible to the layman."

+ Foreign Affairs 23:332 Ja '45 70w

"The book is written in a style which does not lend excitement or drama to its subject, but its worth is enhanced by the intimate knowledge and good sense of the author." G. S.

+ New Repub 112:454 Ap 2 '45 210w

"In this timely and scholarly volume Mr. Feis portrays with both clarity and courage the basic economic issues that must be taken into account if post-war responsibilities are not to be shirked." T. H. Boggs

+ Pol Sci Q 60:115 Mr '45 1100w

"Mr. Feis, who always writes with clarity and grace, has given in 'The Sinews of Peace' a layman's guide through the maze of issues which are pressing for decisions in the field of international economic affairs. He enables readers to understand better those involved transactions in which our citizens and government carry on with other peoples and governments—financial, investment, trade, and the exchange of foodstuffs and other raw materials. His brief chapters make clearer than I have seen stated elsewhere the Bretton Woods plans for an International Monetary Fund and the proposal for an International Investment Bank." J. G. McDonald

+ Survey G 34:104 Mr '45 500w

"This book is timely, and a major contribution to the literature of United States economic foreign policy after the war. Although assuming some formal training in its subject on the part of the reader, the book should be useful to the general reader interested in the economic responsibility of the United States in the post-war world."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:18 Mr '45 240w

Wis Lib Bul 41:26 F '45

FEKETE, LASZLO BUS. See Bús Fekete, L.

FELLER, EUGENE W. F. Air compressors; their installation, operation and maintenance. 460p il $4.50 McGraw

621.51 Air compressors 44-41863

"A practical discussion of rotary, centrifugal, and axial-flow compressors, intended as a guide for operating engineers and students. Diagrams and photographs illustrate the working parts of each type." N Y New Tech Bks

"Intended for the operation engineer, this book is an excellent review of the selection, design, construction, control, accessories, and thermodynamics of air compressors. . . Over 400 well selected drawings and photographs completely illustrate the text. This book represents a very adequate coverage of this field for almost every practical, instructional, and theoretical purpose." D. F. Othmer

+ Chem & Met Eng 52:223 Mr '45 100w

"Covers all types and design of air compressors. For the production superintendent, operating engineer and student."

+ Library J 69:814 O 1 '44 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:56 O '44

FELLIG, ARTHUR (WEEGEE, pseud). Naked city. 243p $4 Essential bks

917.471 New York (city)—Social life and customs. Photographic books 45-35132

Some two hundred intimate photographs of life in New York city, by a one-time PM photographer who signs his work Weegee. Includes an introduction by the editor of PM Picture news, and some explanation of the pictures included.

"Weegee, incidentally, can write almost as well as he can take pictures. His press portrait of Alfred Stieglitz will haunt you like a nightmare. A book to cherish and re-explore, and promote among your friends. A passionate cross-section of New York." Sterling North
+ Book Week p2 Jl 29 '45 400w
Booklist 41:338 Jl 15 '45

"The shots are not of the city's beauty, but of its contrasts, juxtapositions and cleavages, which emphasize a social prejudice and conscience. There is however a balancing humor that keeps this from being merely propaganda, and a warm humanity that manages to get the most of people—as a mass or as individuals. Definitely a book for camera shelves, as well as the picture book sales, it has an added value in the captions and text which give the background of the pictures and explain Weegee's methods of camera work."
+ Kirkus 13:311 Jl 15 '45 130w
+ New Repub 113:382 S 24 '45 120w

"Excellent pictures of Manhattan scenes, along with some rather uninspiring captions and text. Of all the fields of criticism, criticism of photography is the murkiest. It seems safe enough, however, to say that no photograph, whatever its technical virtues or shortcomings, is any good unless it has, for the general observer, some degree of interest. By this criterion, all Weegee's work is good." Russell Maloney
+ — N Y Times p5 Jl 22 '45 450w

"Weegee knows what a camera is for, and how to use one to catch the life of a city, but some of his pictures, in their harsh prying into the lives of the broken, the outcast, and the poor give the impression that he gets one hell of a big kick out of slumming. William McCleery, editor of PM's Picture News, has written a foreword which isn't any worse than the confused and coy notations the author has set down to serve as a text."
New Yorker 21:60 Jl 21 '45 100w

"A sad and sudden little man with a camera, who smokes cigars incessantly and lives by choice in a tiny room across the street from Police Headquarters, may turn out to be the most affectionate, if not the most effective, historian New York City ever had. There is no doubt that Weegee loves his subject; what's more, he understands her. He has just put together a magnificent album of snapshots and love letters. It is a wise and wonderful book, full of a man's mysterious love for the ineluctable she." Aaron Sussman
+ Sat R of Lit 28:17 Jl 28 '45 900w

"It is mighty fascinating stuff, this record of a man Earl Wilson calls 'O. Henry with a camera.' " R. F. Crandell
+ Weekly Book Review p12 Ag 26 '45 310w

FENISONG, RUTH. The lost Caesar. 188p $2 Doubleday 45-7650

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p18 O 28 '45 90w
Kirkus 13:281 Jl 1 '45 90w

"A story which might have been a great deal better had the final unraveling of the tangled skein of evidence been less hurried." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p28 Ag 19 '45 90w

"The loose ends are finally tied up, and very plausibly, but you may wonder whether it was worth all the effort."
New Yorker 21:68 Ag 18 '45 90w

"Average."
Sat R of Lit 28:30 S 8 '45 40w

"Ruth Fenisong, author of 'The Lost Caesar,' in which all these tangled skeins are skilfully unsnarled, brings about a highly satisfactory solution. Although this may come as no great surprise, the author has a nice faculty in putting her three-dimensional characters through their paces, a clever way with words, a quiet sense of humor and a good ear for conversation. These are definite assets in the solving of a not-too-puzzling puzzle." R. N. F.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 9 '45 180w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p17 Ag 19 '45 100w

FENNER, PHYLLIS REID, comp. Adventure, rare and magical; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 178p $2 Knopf

Fairy tales 45-8116

Contents: The fool of the world and the flying ship, by Arthur Ransome; Hudden and Dudden and Donald O'Neary, by Joseph Jacobs; Seven at a blow, by Jacob and Wilhelm Grimm; The Calabash man, by Charles Finger; Budulinek, by Parker Fillmore; Four generals, by A. B. Chrisman; Gears and gasoline, by Caroline Emerson; The stolen turnips, The magic tablecloth, The sneezing goat, and The wooden whistle, by Arthur Ransome; The Bremen town musicians, by Jacob and Wilhelm Grimm; Rory the robber, by Seumas MacManus; The tinderbox, by H. C. Andersen; Tzarevich Ivan, The glowing bird and The gray wolf, by Post Wheeler; Antti and the wizard's prophecy, by James Bowman and Margery Bianco; The terrible stranger, by Robert Hyatt.

Booklist 42:61 O 15 '45
Kirkus 13:421 S 15 '45 70w

"Good selection. . . Not, however, a 'first purchase' necessity." J. D. Lindquist
+ Library J 70:980 O 15 '45 50w

"Some are old favorites, some less familiar, but all have the romance of action and the spice of humor, qualities admirably caught in Henry Pitz' dramatic drawings." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p35 O 7 '45 140w
Weekly Book Review p7 N 11 '45 80w

FENTON, CARROLL LANE, and FENTON, MRS MILDRED (ADAMS). Story of the great geologists. 301p il $3.50 Doubleday

550 Geology—History. Geologists 45-7137

The story of the rocks on the earth's surface as evidenced in the lives of the men who developed the science of geology. Some of those included are Aristotle, William Smith, Adam Sedgwick, Louis Agassiz. Index.

Reviewed by Leonard Dubkin
Book Week p7 S 9 '45 270w
Booklist 42:16 S '45
Bookmark 6:5 N '45
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 11 '45 700w
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '45

"A worthwhile compilation of unhackneyed material, which evades the dangers of too glossy popularization in keeping to a conservative interpretation of biographical and scientific importance of the subjects."
+ Kirkus 13:151 Ap 1 '45 170w
New Repub 113:262 Ag 27 '45 90w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:36 Jl '45

Reviewed by N. B. Baker
N Y Times p36 S 30 '45 400w

"A good book for (1) people who have always intended to find out what geology is all about and (2) young rock collectors of both sexes who would like to know about the notable men who have had the same general idea."
+ New Yorker 21:69 Jl 28 '45 110w

"The reader learns a good deal more than geology from the Fentons. They have done their work well, and their book deserves the attention of anyone who is at all interested in science and its trends." W. K.
+ Sat R of Lit 28:12 Ag 4 '45 300w

"Excellent book. . . 'The Story of the Great Geologists' is no compilation of mere biographical chit-chat. Its human interest is ballasted with geological facts." E. W. Teale
+ Weekly Book Review p2 Jl 29 '45 1050w
Wis Lib Bul 41:99 O '45

FENTON, EDWARD B. Soldiers and strangers; poems. 68p $1.75 Macmillan 811 45-4345

"War and civilian life in time of war, seen through the eyes of a poet not entirely disabused yet seldom sentimental." (New Yorker) The author is a native of New York, an Amherst graduate of 1937. Before the war he ran a bookshop, and in 1942 he enlisted in the American field service, to drive an ambulance for the British army.

Booklist 42:10 S '45

"These are in the top bracket of poetry of the present war. That may seem not very high praise, considering the dearth of good current war poetry. But it is as unreasonable to expect war to produce an outpouring of high art as to look for an authentic and durable 'spiritual awakening,' though spurious imitations of both abound."
+ Christian Century 62:934 Ag 15 '45 350w

"No one expresses the modern soldier's views better than Edward Fenton, whose poems are honest comment on the strange kind of life into which the young men are forced, who know that war is a desperate job but are determined to do that job because their basic idealism leaves them no other choice. Underneath the pithy and well-turned descriptions, this purposeful attitude is plain." Pearl Strachan
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 9 '45 550w

"Fenton's pen is light, ironic, skillful. All the poems have a somewhat bitter modern note. . . Though not important, this is a well-made collection of verses."
+ Kirkus 13:51 F 1 '45 80w

Reviewed by F. C. Flint
N Y Times p8 Ag 26 '45 230w

New Yorker 21:72 Je 23 '45 40w

Reviewed by R. L. Lowe
Poetry 67:162 D '45 420w

"'Soldiers and Strangers' should be put up alongside that comparatively small shelf of wartime poetry books that reflect an important part of the thinking of fighting men." A. M. Jakeman
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 8 '45 550w

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner
Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 12 '45 360w

FENWICK, E. P. Two names for death. 251p $2 Farrar 45-2693

Detective story.

"E. P. Fenwick has a style that is unusually contained and creates characters and situations filled with interest." R. B.
+ Book Week p8 Ap 1 '45 80w

"Best of the week."
+ Boston Globe p17 Ap 11 '45 90w

"An unassuming, fair play job."
Kirkus 13:22 Ja 15 '45 80w

"The story is told simply and with a rare restraint which is in effective contrast to the violent deeds with which it deals." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p14 Ap 1 '45 120w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p16 Ap 15 '45 70w

FERBER, EDNA. Great son. 281p $2.50 Doubleday
45-35008

Chronicle of four generations of a Seattle family, the Melendys, beginning with the arrival of the first of the family on the west coast in 1851, and ending with the great-grandson of old Madam Exact Melendy, who joined the American air corps on the day of Pearl Harbor.

"Miss Ferber is a natural storyteller, and Americans are going to put her book well up on the best-seller lists in much the same spirit that they have placed the popular song 'Don't Fence Me In' at the head of the hit parade. It seems to me that the charms of American imperialism lurk unaware in both." Dorothy Hillyer
Atlantic 175:135 Mr '45 300w

Reviewed by A. C. Spectorsky
Book Week p4 Ja 28 '45 1200w

Booklist 41:185 F 15 '45

"Smart, clever, facile, Edna Ferber has killed two birds with one stone. She has turned out a surefire best seller and a complete scenario." E. A. Laycock
Boston Globe p15 Ja 31 '45 460w

Cath World 160:569 Mr '45 250w

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 29 '45 450w

"The characters themselves are shadowy and this family saga all seems mighty hazy and far away. Notable only for a few flashes of local color of a pioneer sort."
Commonweal 41:478 F 23 '45 60w

"Sure popularity—but not a particularly distinguished addition to her reputation."
Kirkus 12:522 N 15 '44 300w

"Splendid portrayal of certain phases of our history with philosophical meanderings into why our civilization got that way. Fine craftsmanship packs a trilogy into capsule form (281 pages) allowing the reader to use his intelligence and imagination. Good reading and will be popular. Recommended." G. E. Cartmell
+ Library J 70:222 Mr 1 '45 70w

"It is a rapid, eager, ragged novel and the Melendys are people one has gladly met." Harold Brighouse
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 31 '45 200w

"Having listed the principals in Edna Ferber's new book, the reviewer can only pause and stare blankly at the names. Any Ferber fan will recognize the ingredients for one of those bang-up romances she's been putting together so neatly for a generation now. But this time the craftsman's hand has produced a croquis—and nothing more. To put it as bluntly as possible, there are too many old, old parties ruminating on the glories of yesterday—and yawning, much too contentedly, in the cocoons of their wealth." William Du Bois
— N Y Times p5 Ja 28 '45 360w

"By now there is not much more to be said about a Ferber novel. This one offers no surprises; there are the same warm-hearted, solid style, the same easily adjusted emotional complications, all unsullied by any disturbing ideas. You will like it just as well this time as before."
New Yorker 20:82 F 3 '45 90w

"Miss Ferber is a swell writer, gifted, fertile, and imaginative. And she is unfair to book reviewers. Here she has written a lively contemporary American romance, with certain inadequacies plain upon the face of it. We are prepared to speak to her in pained and loving accents. But right before us, in nice large type, is a two-page introduction in which she has ticked off these very inadequacies, neatly, clinically, and without omission. Absolutely unfair. . . A heartfelt love-letter to Seattle, written in haste. Next time, Miss Ferber please write it out in longhand. We'll wait." N. L. Rothman
Sat R of Lit 28:24 Ja 27 '45 600w

"'Great Son' will no doubt eventually reach thousands of Americans who would otherwise have little knowledge of the pioneer spirit and the frontier life which is so deep in the heart of American life, and so directly responsible for many elements of the peculiarly American character. . . In a season singularly lacking in fiction which holds the interest compellingly, we may well be grateful for 'Great Son,' with its affirmation of faith in American courage and its insistence on the importance of a genuine working democracy which must be steadily developed by men and women of good will." E. M. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 28 '45 390w

Time 45:94 F 5 '45 700w

"This is a superficial and entertaining novel, containing nothing new or striking but written with the technical competence which makes this author's work always readable."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p437 S 15 '45 250w

"In a two-page introduction to her novel 'Great Son,' Edna Ferber makes what she calls 'an inadequate excuse for a slim book on a Gargantuan subject.' No excuses, no apologies are necessary for this volume for, however lacking it may be in its creator's eyes, this story of Seattle comes alive with the spirit of its intention. The strokes are broad, but never wasteful; the story sprawls but never without radius from a central core." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ja 28 '45 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 41:38 Mr '45

FERGUSON, MARGARET. Sign of the ram. 263p $2 Blakiston [8s 6d Hale, R.]

45-2274

Story of what a beautiful but crippled woman with a strong will power and an urge to dominate, did to her family, the husband and stepchildren who apparently idolized her. The story is largely told as it appeared to an outsider, a young woman who came into the family as secretary-companion. The scene is Cornwall, the time the months just before the beginning of World war II.

Booklist 41:209 Mr 15 '45

Boston Globe p13 F 14 '45 60w

"Margaret Ferguson is an exponent of what might be termed the 'worm-in-the-apple school' of psycho thriller. She believes, apparently, that light and air and a wholesome 'normal' backdrop set off the dark processes of emotional decay better than cobwebs or haunted houses would. She achieves a sort of windblown, sun-kissed horror. Her one obtrusive stylistic quirk is an overexuberant color sense that crams Cornwall with plum-colored hills, amethyst pools and violet trees. But 'The Sign of the Ram' is a book to chill the cockles of your heart." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 22 '45 200w

"Miss Ferguson has endeavored to cram her novel with Cornish atmosphere and brooding suspense. By overdoing both the tempestuous background and the malevolent sweetness of Mrs St Aubyn she has destroyed whatever tension the story might otherwise have possessed." L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 11 '45 200w

"The conclusion of this neatly composed and fairly shuddery offering struck us as pathetic and a bit cruel to the wickedest of the personae—as the author intended, no doubt. Fine for the sweethearts, though." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p19 Ap 8 '45 90w

FERGUSSON, HARVEY. Home in the West; an inquiry into my origins. 247p $2.75 Duell

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 45-1107

In these chapters in an autobiography the author delves into his immediate past and describes his Southern father and his German grandfather, in an attempt to explain his own character. His study covers only the years of his youth and young manhood, closing with his acceptance as a member of the staff of the Washington Herald.

"Harvey Fergusson's chapters on his boyhood are as fine and as understanding of the problems of sensitive youth as one will encounter in many a day. Any parent who has a young boy who likes to collect turtles or snakes or who, tender as he is to pets, finds strange triumph when he drops a bird in flight, may find in the young Harvey's own struggles a key." J. A. Brandt

+ Book Week p4 Ja 28 '45 1050w

Booklist 41:196 Mr 1 '45

Boston Globe p15 Ja 31 '45 200w

"This is an honest if somewhat pedestrian account of a man's life. . . It is hard to see why he describes his sex experiences with such great detail as he does. They have none of the spontaneous joy of a true son of nature and can only be described as humorless."

+ — Cath World 161:284 Je '45 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '45

"Mr. Harvey Fergusson is a novelist of some reputation. He has now yielded to the inner compulsion requiring him to write an autobiography—or at least a partial autobiography, for 'Home in the West' really deals only with the formative years of his life, ending with the time of our entry into the last war. The result possesses considerable charm and interest. . . The scene of Mr. Fergusson's youth is the Southwest, where he acquired the most genuine of the characteristics he attributes to himself—a love of the American outdoors and especially of mountains. His recollections of this section of the country alone give his book a certain value as a social document. The experiment he attempts cannot be described as wholly successful, yet many an introspective reader will find it worth his attention." H. L. Binsse

+ — Commonweal 41:500 Mr 2 '45 330w

"The focus is very definitely personal, and granted the reader's share in the author's interest in the subject, this may occasion certain attention. For the most part, however, readers will find it limited in import, too lyrically self-centered."

Kirkus 13:10 Ja 1 '45 130w

Reviewed by McAlister Coleman

Nation 160:227 F 24 '45 550w

New Repub 112:398 Ja 19 '45 90w

"Fascinating yet unpretentious autobiography." R. E. Pitts

+ N Y Times p7 F 4 '45 450w

"Fergusson started his book with the rational, though not terribly pressing, motive of creating a background and family history from which a fully developed and recognizable Fergusson should emerge. It's all there, except Fergusson. There is only one thing left for the reader to say: God bless you, Fergusson, whatever manner of man you may be." Russell Maloney

New Yorker 20:66 Ja 27 '45 900w

Reviewed by R. L. North

Sat R of Lit 28:17 F 24 '45 320w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:13 Je '45 120w

"Mr. Fergusson's book is unique for many things. Others, his sister Erna among them, have written as evocatively about the American Southwest. No one I know of has written better of a boy's or man's intense feeling for weapons, or of the world introspective men seek when they go hunting. And he preserves, even when he is most anecdotal, lavish with humorous and dramatic tales of the Old West, or slightly maundering, the scrupulous course of self-inquiry. Where he stumbles into self-display, no great matter in an autobiographical book, it plainly hurts him far more than his exacting readers." Ernestine Evans

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ja 21 '45 2100w

FERN, GEORGE HENRY. What is vocational education; a series of discourses on various aspects of vocational education. 159p il $2.50 Am. tech. soc.

371.425 Vocational education 44-47526

"An outline of the objectives and philosophy of vocational education as prepared by the Director of the Michigan State Board of Control for Vocational Education. The emphasis is placed on postwar education and discusses education in agriculture, business, homemaking, trade and industry, safety, teacher training and teaching devices. The material has been drawn largely from publications of the United States Office of Education." N Y New Tech Bks

---

Booklist 41:164 F 1 '45

Library J 70:118 F 1 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:67 O '44

FERRARS, ELIZABETH. I, said the fly. 191p $2 Doubleday [8s 6d Hodder] 45-7301

Detective story.

"Nice going and neat narrating."
+ Kirkus 13:209 My 15 '45 80w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 Je 8 '45 30w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p24 Jl 15 '45 130w

"A routine story, built around some good atmosphere."
New Yorker 21:60 Jl 21 '45 80w

"Oddly effective job . . . with slightly unfair solution. London bohemian life before blitz, vividly described."
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:30 Jl 21 '45 40w

"Miss Ferrars writes with clarity and vigour, her characters and her situations are all excellent." John Hampson
+ Spec 175:600 Je 29 '45 310w

Times [London] Lit Sup p286 Je 16 '45 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p10 Jl 15 '45 100w

FERRIS, HELEN JOSEPHINE (MRS A. B. TIBBETS). Watch me, said the jeep; pictures by Tibor Gergely. [28p] $1 Garden City pub. co.
44-41886

Pictures and brief text describe the adventures of Private Gilhooley and his peppy little jeep, which bested the private cars of the colonel, the major, and the captain at every turn.

"I'm not sure that either the jeep or Pvt. Gilhooley in this picture book show proper respect for the dignity of Army rank, but a delighted young audience will be all for them." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p11 Mr 4 '45 110w

"The text pattern follows the repeat technique which makes the book a good first reader."
+ Kirkus 13:64 F 1 '45 100w

"Delightful pictures in color by Tibor Gergely. Very short-lived binding for library use. Oblong picture book size. Ages four to seven." Gertrude Andrus
Library J 70:221 Mr 1 '45 60w

"You have to see Tibor Gergely's pictures to believe it all, but they will convince you and add joy and laughter to the lives of very young readers and young onlookers." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p25 F 11 '45 110w
Wis Lib Bul 41:48 Ap '45

FEUCHTWANGER, LION. Stories from far and near. 179p $2.50 Viking 45-9985

Fifteen tales written at various times, six of them dealing with the Nazi era. "They are not short stories in the Anglo-Saxon sense, for none aims primarily at relating an anecdote, which is the chief function of the Anglo-Saxon short story, according to Henry James." (Note) Contents: The house in the shady lane; History of the brain specialist Dr. B.; Faithful Peter; Herr Hannsicke's second birth; The aunt who told lies; A wager; The steward Antonio; The death of Nero; Marianne in India; Bullfight; The armored cruiser Potemkin; Wollstein's trunk checks; The little season; Polar expedition; Venice.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p4 D 30 '45 440w
Booklist 42:149 Ja 1 '46
Christian Science Monitor p14 D 21 '45 260w
Kirkus 13:380 S 1 '45 130w

"One can find in this book much lively note-taking and commentary for projected short stories. Mr. Feuchtwanger might wisely have put off their final contrivance until he had placed himself more rigorously with relation to his special talents. . . A word should be said separately about the stories into which nazism enters either as background or as deus ex machina. Mr. Feuchtwanger has done an original thing in concerning himself with the civilian fringe of the dictatorship, with the minor colorless tragedies of the bureaucratically inconsequential: its effect upon withdrawn, unpoliticalized scholars, its exploitation by obsessed individuals frightened at the possibility of a private failure, its opportunistic manipulation of stupid officials. Toward these situations Feuchtwanger is very cool and self-controlled, regarding them with what he likes to call 'a quiet smile.' In the end he manages to diminish their import, and, while one appreciates the preclusion of any crude journalism or melodrama, one must resent such an absence of passion in a writer who has been personally involved." Isa Kapp
+ — N Y Times p4 D 9 '45 650w

"Mr. Feuchtwanger is a professional writer in the best sense of the term, and this collection is a testament to his versatility. His intimacy with centuries and continents is almost overwhelming at times. No less than six translators have had a hand in the proceedings, so readers who take their books in one sitting are likely to be disconcerted now and then by discrepancies of style."
+ — New Yorker 21:130 D 1 '45 80w

"In spite of the lack of an 'anecdotal motor' and often even of a plot at all, Mr. Feuchtwanger's stories from far and near . . .succeed in capturing the interest and firing the imagination of the reader. This effect is achieved by two outstanding literary qualities. First, Mr. Feuchtwanger proves to be a master of the art of character portrayal even with the scantiest means, and secondly he has a gift for saturating every little story with his rich knowledge of history and human life. He puts, so to speak, little windows into his stories—little windows permitting vistas into vaster worlds than those actually dealt with in the narrative. . . A review of 'Stories from Far and Near' would not be complete without a mention of Mr. Feuchtwanger's sly humor and ironic wisdom." F. C. Weiskopf
+ Sat R of Lit 28:18 D 15 '45 500w

"Here is an author with unmistakable endowment, superior knowledge of history, and wide personal experience. This is a precious combination. Yet, because the beat of the heart is missing, he does not transmute it into gold." Virgilia Sapieha
Weekly Book Review p12 D 9 '45 700w

FIELD, MARSHALL. Freedom is more than a word. 190p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press 323.44 Liberty. Liberty of the press
A45-1965

Exposition of the author's beliefs concerning democracy, the use of wealth, etc, and an account of his motives and policies in founding and backing the New York paper PM, and the Chicago Sun.

Reviewed by C. A. M. Ewing
Am Pol Sci R 39:821 Ag '45 300w

"The man has some mighty fine gray matter, integrity and honesty, great courage, and an abiding love for liberalism, democracy, and freedom. Americans can well be proud of this new type of streamlined millionaire." L. L. Snyder
+ Ann Am Acad 241:180 S '45 500w

Reviewed by Mark Ethridge
Book Week p3 Ap 15 '45 1550w
Booklist 41:248 My 1 '45
Canadian Forum 25:143 S '45 300w
Christian Century 62:521 Ap 25 '45 70w
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 25 '45 240w

"The early chapters of the book develop Mr. Field's fundamental beliefs. Not once does he refer to his Creator, but the things he wants closely parallel basic Christian social objectives. . . Marshall Field, in fact, wants for human society practically all the right things. Does he know how to go after them? The way PM has turned out (unfortunately we do not read the Chicago Sun) raises certain doubts. Even more fearsome are the reactions to his ideas about education."

+ — Commonweal 42:25 Ap 20 '45 850w

"While the nation awaits the Supreme Court decision upon Mr. Field's charge that the Associated Press is a monopolistic organization in a field that is spiritually crucial for America, Mr. Field himself stands stalwart in the knowledge that, while no victory is a final victory, no defeat can frustrate the liberal spirit. . . His English habit (he was educated at Eton and Cambridge) of understatement combines well with his American temperament (of sympathy for the underdog and of enthusiasm for action) to give sturdiness to a liberalism which otherwise appears to some as uncertain and to others even as a little slight. This small book bids fair to be much talked of; and for weal or woe it portrays the American version of confidence in a course of events around which Hayek's The Road to Serfdom beats the tom-toms of doom. It bodies forth a spirit—the spirit of freedom—whose vocation is generous and whose career is unlimited as to time and unconfined as to space." T. V. Smith

+ Ethics 55:222 Ap '45 1750w

Foreign Affairs 24:159 O '45 10w

"Easy reading and challenging, whether or not you agree."

Kirkus 13:178 Ap 15 '45 50w

"Mr. Field offers nothing new on journalism, politics and education, that is if one reads PM and the Chicago Sun. This slight primer, excellent form, shows the strong influence that Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Wallace and Mr. Max Lerner have had on Mr. Field. It is for libraries for which that fact has significance." K. T. Willis

Library J 70:354 Ap 15 '45 80w

"Mr. Field's abstract discussion of 'freedom,' with which he is largely concerned, is well enough if a little dull, and he makes important points. He finds a dogmatic insistence in America upon 'tolerance,' for example, which too often neglects understanding; and he objects to 'the infernal gentlemanliness' of our educational tradition. But the chief interest in the book is the light it throws on Mr. Field's motives and upon Mr. Field." R. L. Strout

New Repub 112:592 Ap 30 '45 700w

"A great many persons would like to know what makes Mr. Marshall Field tick the way he does, and doubtless will seek the answer in this book. It is not there, in any candid revelation, even though he does occasionally write in a personal vein, but the book is more interesting and explicit than its general title would indicate." C. McD. Puckette

N Y Times p4 Ap 29 '45 700w

Reviewed by W. S. Lynch

Sat R of Lit 28:12 Ap 28 '45 900w

Springf'd Republican p6 My 5 '45 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p302 Je 30 '45 210w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:7 S '45 280w

"His book has to an interesting degree both the strengths and the weaknesses of liberalism as a political force in 1945. Its weaknesses are that it is, for its size, a shockingly expensive book where a cheap pamphlet would be more useful, and that it is written for a well educated, and presumably sympathetic, audience instead of for those who are still unconverted to its liberal program. Its strengths are its author's open-minded belief in trial and error as a social and political principle, and a healthy optimism about the future. He is aware of the formidable problems our democracy faces, but confident that there is nothing wrong with us that more democracy won't cure." Joseph Barnes

+ — Weekly Book Review p2 Ap 15 '45 600w

FIELD, PETER, pseud. End of the trail. (Jefferson house publication) 186p $2 Morrow

45-8180

Combination of Western story and detective story.

Booklist 42:111 D 1 '45

Kirkus 13:325 Ag 1 '45 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p26 S 30 '45 100w

FIELDING, MANTLE. Dictionary of American painters, sculptors & engravers. ltd ed 433p il pl $20 P. A. Struck, 415 Lexington av, N.Y. 17

927 Artists, American 45-3826

"This is the second printing of Fielding's dictionary. A limited edition of 700 copies was privately printed by the author for subscribers in 1926. . . 'The present edition,' Mr. Struck says in his preface to the 1945 edition, 'is identical to the one published in 1926, although the publisher fully realizes that since the untimely death of Mantle Fielding, additional information has been gathered by research. Any information regarding errors and omissions in the present volume will be gratefully accepted. The revisions and additional factual material, covering the years from 1926 to 1945, will be incorporated in a supplementary volume, which is now in preparation.' The biographies are short and factual. The majority range between 50 and 100 words, detailing briefly such available information as the artist's classification as painter, sculptor, or engraver; his dates, education, awards, principal works; the museums in which his works are included; his publications, membership in professional societies, and, for each living artist, his address (1926). The dictionary actually covers many more American artists than the authoritative encyclopedias of art, Bénézit, Thieme, or Champlin; and it covers a much earlier period in American art than does the American Art Annual." Subscription Bks Bul

"Fielding's dictionary does not profess to be definitive. It has become, however, a standard ready-reference tool in the field of American art. It is suitable for the identification of the artist, rather than for a critical evaluation of his work. The present edition is extremely valuable in that it makes available again a reference work referred to repeatedly in Mallett's Index of Artists, 1935, and its Supplement, 1940. It is recommended in all comprehensive listings of reference tools in the field of art. Recommended for any library or private collection that has frequent need to identify American artists."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 16:37 Jl '45 400w

FINE, BENJAMIN. Democratic education. 251p $2.50 Crowell

378 Colleges and universities—U.S. Education, Higher

"The author, education editor for The New York Times, has gathered firsthand material from 5,000 veterans returning to college in an effort to determine their desires in the educational field. In addition, he has polled both highschool pupils and parents in order to learn their points of view on this important question." (School & Society) Index.

"Mr. Fine brings into focus the shortcomings of the classic, 'aristocratic' education of the traditional college, the need for education on a broader, more social base, with greater emphasis on social studies, economics, psychology, history, technology. Cogent arguments, forcefully presented."

+ Kirkus 13:413 S 15 '45 170w

"Readable but authoritative in style. Gives much information on the development and present programs of many colleges and universities. Useful in even the smaller libraries." Marian Manley

+ Library J 70:1134 D 1 '45 70w

"This is a solid and practical book. Benjamin Fine does not write with either the grace or the scholarly authority of some of the men against whom he offers a humane and earnest challenge. But his challenge demands an answer." Lyman Bryson

+ — N Y Times p4 D 30 '45 1450w

FINE, BENJAMIN—Continued

"In this book Mr. Fine goes beyond reporting to try his mind at thinking about basic educational issues and judging the merits of the opposing sides. As a thinker he is confused. As a judge he is partisan, even polemical. In consequence, the reporting suffers. What Mr. Fine offers us as facts do not come to us free from the coloring and distortion of a marked editorial bias." M. J. Adler
— Sat R of Lit 28:7 D 29 '45 1500w

"Mr. Fine does the whole cause of more and better higher education a good turn by explicating the present tensions. By pointing out the ambiguities of current policy and coming out for a drastic departure from traditional liberal college practice, he sharpens the argument for all to ponder. It is, however, a not unimportant point that in order to do this he has probably not done full credit to the historic contribution of the small liberal arts college at its best, and has failed to mention that in looking ahead there will undoubtedly be a special virtue in colleges which remain small not because they are 'aristocratic' or snobbish but because education goes better when not a mass operation." Ordway Tead
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:7 D 29 '45 1150w

School & Society 62:407 D 22 '45 60w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 6 '46 650w

FINE, SHERWOOD MONROE. Public spending and postwar economic policy. 177p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy. Finance—U.S. A44-2038

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Reviewed by William Fellner
Am Econ R 35:186 Mr '45 200w

"The author has written a very useful and stimulating book. It is a timely contribution to the discussion of an exceedingly important subject." Paul Studenski
+ Ann Am Acad 239:187 My '45 850w

"An opportunity is worse than lost, in the opinion of this reviewer, who is, after all, in the same line of goods, and who is favorably disposed toward the author's conclusions. The question of wise government spending is an important one for the future of America. It should, therefore, appear in public in garments which are acceptable to persons of literacy and good sense." Alzada Comstock
— Springf'd Republican p6 F 13 '45 440w

FINER, HERMAN. Road to reaction. 228p $2 Little

338.91 Hayek, Friedrich August von. Economic policy. Totalitarianism 45-9861

A detailed, lengthy criticism of The Road to Serfdom, by Friedrich Hayek, published in 1944.

Reviewed by C. E. Merriam
Book Week p50 D 2 '45 900w

Booklist 42:104 D 1 '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 N 24 '45 550w

"An exciting book—and a much-needed one,—the atomic bomb to explode the thesis of the reactionaries' Mein Kamp, Hayek's Road to Serfdom."
+ Kirkus 13:409 S 15 '45 170w

"Polemic work, lacking Hayek's elegance and occasional brilliance, but based on solid knowledge and deep understanding of the changing relationship of the individual to organized society. Should interest both readers of Hayek and other educated circles." H. H. A. Bernt
Library J 70:1086 N 15 '45 110w

" 'Road to Reaction' is a long, angry review of Hayek's 'Road to Serfdom.' It would have been a better book had it been less angry; the frequent use of the argument ad hominem is no credit to its author. It is a sad commentary on the lack of communication between social scientists of different disciplines; both Hayek and Finer write with a strong prejudice in favor of their own intellectual interests. . . Mr. Finer would have made a greater contribution to this task if he had written less hastily, with less heat, and with better editing." K. E. Boulding
— Nation 162:22 Ja 5 '46 490w

"This brilliant, persuasive volume is an answer to the 'Road to Serfdom' by Friedrich Hayek, whose thesis against planning aroused much controversy. Professor Finer dissects and examines Mr. Hayek's thesis and exposes his fallacies and errors of fact. He attacks devastatingly, with no punches pulled, and uses every weapon at his disposal: logic, psychology, history, authority, literary skill, mockery and sarcasm. Professor Finer, a world authority, is especially convincing—and trenchant—in the sections covering political science. . . No reader can afford to disregard the vital issues raised by this book, the most important one being: Are planning and liberty compatible? Finer's answer is yes, Hayek's is no. The reader should read this volume before he takes a stand." S. E. Harris
+ N Y Times p3 D 9 '45 1100w

"Dr. Finer calls Mr. Hayek on counts of economics, history, politics, terminology, procedure, mentality, and intent, and, keeping his accusations nearly always on the level of scholarship and fact, like a good formal debater, scores most of his points. It's too bad, though, that after the debate sections he had so little space left to discuss the Finer System."
+ — New Yorker 21:110 N 24 '45 120w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 6 '46 360w

"One could wish that Mr. Finer had generated less heat and more light. A more detailed blueprint of how economic plenty may be achieved through liberal social action than he provides would have been far more useful than his bitter and impassioned refutation of Hayek's thesis. From this point of view, Beveridge's 'Full Employment in a Free Society' is a far more effective answer to Mr. Hayek than Mr. Finer's work." Leo Barnes
— Weekly Book Review p17 D 16 '45 650w

FINER, HERMAN. T.V.A: lessons for international application. 289p il $2 (8s); pa $1.50 (6s) Int. labor office

627.1 Tennessee Valley authority. Regional planning

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"The volume constitutes a valuable contribution to literature in the fields of public administration, economics, and international affairs." Catheryn Seckler-Hudson
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:178 F '45 850w

Reviewed by J. E. Pate
Pol Sci Q 60:150 Mr '45 600w

"The book is well documented with substantiating facts and statistics without impeding its readability." Katherine Glover
+ Survey G 34:71 F '45 450w

FINLAY, IAN. Scotland. (World to-day) 136p il maps $1.25 (3s 6d) Oxford

914.1 Scotland A45-4207

Chapters on the geography, tradition, and economics, which go to make up Scotland of today. Illustrated with photographs and maps. Index.

Booklist 42:131 D 15 '45

Bookmark 6:12 N '45

"A study of contemporary Scotland should be interesting and important, for Scotland is interesting and important of itself and its sons and daughters have made large contributions to the culture and success of the United States, England, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and other countries. Mr. Finlay's little book with its quick survey of Scotland's cultural, economic and political problems would serve the purpose well, for in most respects it is an excellent piece of work, were it not marred for many readers by his personal prejudices." Neil Mac Neil
+ Commonweal 42:436 Ag 17 '45 320w

"A brilliant introduction to the history and culture of Scotland."

+ New Statesman & Nation 29:214 Mr 31 '45 180w

Reviewed by J. A. Smith
Spec 174:224 Mr 9 '45 650w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 17 '45 420w

"Mr. Finlay can hardly claim that Calvinism created the Scottish virtues and was yet innocent of any blame for the many literal and figurative blots on the Scottish scene, but he does suggest that the Presbyterian spirit is the most congenial to the Scottish character. He puts his case moderately and sincerely, which is more than can be said for most of the enemies of the Kirk, but the case he can make for the early seventeenth century will hardly hold water for the end of that century and for most of the eighteenth. . . Mr. Finlay is a manifestly earnest patriot, but it cannot be said that his treatment of the various national groups and parties is anything more than cursory. He deplores the division between the Highlands and the Lowlands, but he also lays heavy emphasis on the difference between the two temperaments. It may be wondered if this sharp stressing is the best method of achieving a racial fusion. Some of Mr. Finlay's incidental judgments are odd. . . The discussion of contemporary Scottish writing is scrappy and incomplete."

Times [London] Lit Sup p230 My 19 '45 550w

FINLETTER, THOMAS KNIGHT. Can representative government do the job? with a foreword by Robert F. Wagner. 184p $2 Reynal

342.73 U.S.—Politics and government. U.S. —Constitutional law 45-2867

"Mr. Finletter has long been a student of politics and foreign affairs. He was for three years a special assistant to the Secretary of State and previously he taught for a like period on the law faculty at the University of Pennsylvania. What he gives us, in effect, is a birdseye view, gained in part from a wormseye vantage point, of the difficulties which have arisen in Washington, especially as they have been dramatized in conflicts between the President and Congress, and their effect, actual and probable, on the policies to which this country has committed itself." N Y Times

"The proposed power of dissolution seems dubious. Unlike the cabinet idea, it would constitute a drastic departure from our political experience, traditions, and habits. . . Nevertheless, this fine little book makes a welcome contribution to contemporary political thought on a vital problem. And it presents a constructive challenge to those practitioners of the political art who are responsible for keeping the means and ends of American government in balance." G. B. Galloway

+ — Am Pol Sci R 39:792 Ag '45 750w

"[This] is as mature, as cogent, as direct a work on the main difficulty of American government as we have had in this generation." Walter Lippmann

+ Atlantic 175:131 My '45 550w

Reviewed by Walter Johnson
Book Week p1 Ap 1 '45 1800w

Booklist 41:316 Jl 1 '45

Bookmark 6:4 My '45

Reviewed by W. F. Sands
Commonweal 42:143 My 25 '45 2300w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 8:543 Je '45 120w

Foreign Affairs 23:694 Jl '45 70w

"A valid brief for the national good, sensible and sustained in interest."

+ Kirkus 13:14 Ja 1 '45 150w

Nation 161:344 O 6 '45 420w

Reviewed by Irving Brant
New Repub 112:531 Ap 16 '45 900w

"By this brief volume, and the study and experience it evinces, Mr. Finletter takes a first-rank place among those who question whether the ends and the means of the American governmental system can be balanced after this war without basic changes in our legislative procedure. He becomes likewise an important member of an expanding group of individuals who are willing at least to consider those changes. . . For anyone who is seriously concerned over this matter of the balance between the methods and objectives of government and who may have occasion to talk or write about it in the future this little volume is a well-nigh indispensable handbook." Turner Catledge

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 1 '45 1700w

"Mr. Finletter's book is worth reading, but it should be read with caution." Lucius Wilmerding

+ — Pol Sci Q 60:459 S '45 1050w

Reviewed by A. M. Lee
Sat R of Lit 28:12 Ap 21 '45 1150w

Reviewed by Marshall Bragdon
Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 1 '45 800w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:34 Je '45 320w

"Much as the current fashion is to belittle Congress's function, one must not lose sight of these two considerations. First, Congress today speaks for more than local interests. . . And, in the second place, Congress is our only real bulwark against the ambitions and the irresponsibility of an administrative bureaucracy. Mr. Finletter has written a thoughtful book, and many of his proposals merit serious consideration. But nothing is served by failing to give adequate weight to the historical part played by Congress in our affairs and to its great usefulness as a check on administrative oppression." L. M. Hacker

+ — Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 1 '45 1550w

Wis Lib Bul 41:50 My '45

FISCHER, BRUNO. The dead men grin. 248p $2 McKay 45-9510

Detective story.

Kirkus 13:282 Jl 1 '45 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p16 D 30 '45 160w

"Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:38 N 24 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p29 N 25 '45 50w

FISH, HELEN DEAN. Little red hen; the old nursery tale retold from the version of Nurse Befabbycash; pictures by Katharine R. Bernard. (Nursery bks) [19p] 85c Houghton 45-4531

A retelling of the old nursery tale, with bright little pictures to represent the nouns. For beginning readers.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p11 Je 24 '45 70w

Bookmark 6:16 Ag 1 '45

Churchman 159:7 N 15 '45 40w

Kirkus 13:220 My 15 '45 90w

"It may not be your version or mine, but it is as Helen Dean Fish heard it from her nurse, and a very good retelling she has made of it." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 70:587 Je 15 '45 70w

+ N Y Times p18 My 20 '45 140w

"Children will like to listen to it and will be eager to read it afterward to themselves." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:38 Je 16 '45 90w

"The nice little 'Nursery Books' in this series have added one that really helps toward reading, though the five-year-old whom it amuses will scarcely suspect that it does." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Je 24 '45 150w

Wis Lib Bul 41:114 N '45

FISHBACK, MARGARET (MRS ALBERTO G. ANTOLINI). Look who's a mother! a book about babies for parents, expectant and otherwise; il. by Roberta Macdonald. 127p $2 Simon & Schuster

817 Infants 45-10030

Gayly worded, sensible advice addressed to young mothers and mothers-to-be, by one who after several years in advertising decided to "boost the population figures" herself. The prose text is interlarded with poems on the subject.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 N 25 '45 260w

Booklist 42:160 Ja 15 '46

Kirkus 13:327 Ag 1 '45 60w

"Here, at last, is the book which treats babies not like bundles from heaven, but like a bundle from Macy's—something you've wanted in your home and which always arrives C. O. D. It is a nourishing formula for growing mothers: several parts delightful verse, several parts substantial prose, fortified with Miss Fishback's sense of humor and personal experience." Florence Crowther
+ N Y Times p16 N 25 '45 500w

"The prose sections of the book are as sprightly as the verse and while they contain nothing revolutionary on the subject of child care, they're fun to read—if you haven't previously encountered too many similar handbooks of advice. The verses, of course, are Margaret Fishback's most original contributions to the lore of parenthood, and they are very amusing." W. H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4 N 26 '45 200w

"What gives her book its lift above pediatrics is that most of it is given to brief, pointed, typically Fishbackian verses in which babies are, among other things, firmly and affectionately debunked. This is a Good Thing. Real mothers know that pretty as a baby may be, all bundled up in swansdown or in gush, the less he has on the more entrancing he will be."
+ Weekly Book Review p14 D 9 '45 200w

FISHBEIN, MORRIS, ed. Common ailments of man. 177p $1 Garden City pub. co.

616 Diseases SG45-18

Articles on the most familiar ailments for which people consult the physician. The articles originally appeared in Hygeia, and each is by an authority. Partial contents: Common colds and respiratory infections, by C. S. Keefer; Headache, by Milton MacKaye; What we know about allergy, by Louis Tuft; Arthritis or rheumatism, by Ralph Pemberton; Neuritis, by J. M. McKinney; Anemia, by William Dameshek; Heart disease, by P. D. White; High and low blood pressure, by Wingate Johnson.

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '45

"The book as a whole is tersely and simply written for easy comprehension by the layman."
+ N Y Times p20 Jl 15 '45 90w

"Each of the articles has been written by a recognized specialist in his field in a nontechnical, yet thoroughly informative, way. The excellent material to be found in this little book, if intelligently read and put into practice should prove a worth-while investment to anyone in terms of disease prevention, relief from suffering and saving of medical expense." C. B. M.
+ Springf'd Republican p4 S 8 '45 180w

FISHBEIN, MORRIS, ed. Doctors at war. 418p il $5 Dutton

940.547 World war, 1939—Medical and sanitary affairs. Medicine, Military. Surgery, Military SG45-9

"History of the medical profession during the preparations for war, and during the war itself, edited by the editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association. Each chapter written by a medical authority on that phase of activity. Medical aspects of selective service, and the organization of services to protect people in the Armed Forces, and to give wounded the best medical care from first-aid treatment through convalescence and rehabilitation. Concludes with the medical activities of the American Red Cross, and the work of the National Research Council in furthering medical research." (Library J) Index.

"The book is well written and is all meat. It should be on the desk of every public health worker." A. J. Lanza
+ Am J Pub Health 35:960 S '45 130w

Reviewed by Ellwood Douglass
Book Week p3 My 20 '45 300w

Booklist 41:267 My 15 '45

Bookmark 6:9 N '45

"'Doctors at War' deals with health problems of youth from the first draft examination to the care of veterans. It will be read with interest and profit by doctors, and is recommended for laity reading to all of those who champion health, or have had members of their family in this titanic global struggle." L. F. Johnson
+ Boston Globe My 31 '45 420w

Kirkus 13:169 Ap 15 '45 160w

"An excellent contribution to the history of the present war. Recommended." J. A. Sohon
+ Library J 70:414 My 1 '45 100w

"In bringing together the reports of the fifteen distinguished doctors who contribute to make this volume, Dr. Morris Fishbein has performed a service both for the public and the medical profession. The facts disclosed will broaden the reader's conception of the nature and extent of the obligation which he is under to the doctor. Some of the more startling of these facts will certainly convince him of the necessity of far greater cooperation with the medical profession than has existed up to the present, for the health of Americans is much worse than most of us have suspected. It has taken a war to reveal that disquieting truth." M. F. Ashley-Montagu
+ N Y Times p6 My 20 '45 1450w

"This volume is a compendium so valuable that it will long serve as a reference text to those whose duty it will be to comment on one scientific aspect of the war. And if the contributions read better than medical English usually does, the credit must go to Mr. John Tebbel." Waldemar Kaempffert
+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 Jl 28 '45 1300w

Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 Je '45 420w

"This book will be referred to for years to come. The contributors are high-grade men in their fields and their joint work is a fine contribution to the medical literature of this war. It is full of life and color as well as facts." W. A. R. Chapin
+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 13 '45 850w

Reviewed by C. L. Perry
Survey 81:336 D '45 400w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:44 S '45 160w

"'Doctors at War' is an authoritative, factual book for the layman, who should learn from it what the real cost of war is and how nobly the need has been met by the medical profession." Gerald Wendt
+ Weekly Book Review p4 My 13 '45 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 41:66 Je '45

FISHEL, RICHARD MARK, and SMITH, WALTER WELLESLEY. Terry and Bunky play football; il. by L. D. Warren. 80p $1.50 Putnam

796.33 Football—Juvenile literature 45-35240

"Terry and Bunky have an Uncle John who is on the high school football team. Uncle John takes over the neighborhood boys and teaches them to play football from scratch." Book Week

Book Week p12 N 11 '45 130w

Booklist 42:112 D 1 '45

Kirkus 13:436 O 1 '45 130w

Reviewed by Margaret Miller
Library J 70:1092 N 15 '45 70w

"The style is lifelike, the type large, the pictures funny: the authors are both fathers and footballers, and so is the artist."
+ Weekly Book Review p32 N 11 '45 180w

FISHER, MRS ANNE (BENSON). The Salinas; upside-down river; il. by Walter K. Fisher. (The Rivers of America) 316p $2.50 Farrar

917.9476 Salinas river 45-1095

Description and history of the Salinas river, which flows thru the valley between Monterey and Los Angeles. The account begins in 1769 when the first Catholic missionaries came up from Mexico, and brings the history down to 1930 with "Major Dwight D. Eisenhower reports." Bibliography. Index.

"Mrs. Fisher's book is not equal to her material. Her writing is needlessly colloquial, repetitious and often slovenly. The interminable discussion of land claims and family connections might well have been shortened to allow more space for the river itself, which is submerged in several ways during the course of the narrative. And, finally, the book's neglect of the most famous literary product of the Salinas Valley, John Steinbeck, is entirely unforgivable." J. T. Flanagan
Book Week p4 F 25 '45 550w
Booklist 41:194 Mr 1 '45

"The book is conceived and written in short staccato chapters, without the lateral ligatures which make for cohesion of part to part. It lacks momentum of interest. In both matter and style, it falls far below the average of the excellent Rivers of America series." Horace Reynolds
Christian Science Monitor p18 F 21 '45 400w
Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '45

"Good regionalism with very individual feel for this latest in the Rivers series."
+ Kirkus 12:558 D 15 '44 190w

"Good history and easy reading. Recommended." Katharine Shorey
+ Library J 70:162 F 15 '45 100w

"What Mrs. Fisher has really written is an intimate history of one of the larger California valleys. . . The California story is a colorful one. It has been told often, but not previously with this particular background. Mrs. Fisher, who has lived long in those parts and devoted herself to their lore and legend, has gathered a large part of her information from talks with members of old families; her tone is therefore intimate; in fact, it approaches gossip. . . In some respects the account is a little nostalgic, and on the whole it offers less conventional badman stuff than the usual Western volume." G. R. Stewart
+ — N Y Times p6 F 25 '45 650w

"Most of whatever 'history' the Salinas has is largely of local interest—land squabbles and the like, 'vital statistics of the old families, and neighborhood bizarre figures. In spite of this Anne B. Fisher succeeds in presenting a story which is not without its charm, particularly for those with a taste for nostalgic pictures of romantic periods that are gone. . . In spite of the charm of Miss Fisher's style, the industry with which she has attacked her subject, and the pleasant drawings of Mr. Fisher, the fact remains that this story concerns the least important, historically, of all the watercourses thus treated." P. I. Wellman
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:56 Ap 14 '45 700w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:29 S '45 200w

Reviewed by Oscar Lewis
Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 4 '45 1050w

FISHER, MRS HELEN STEVENS, comp. Riddle-de-quiz; riddles and quizzes. 175p $2 Mill

793.73 Riddles 44-47751

Collection of riddles and conundrums of various types, for home and party entertainment.

Reviewed by Fred Allen
N Y Times p7 Ja 14 '45 1000w
Wis Lib Bul 41:28 F '45

FISHER, LOIS. Cartooning for fun and profit. 96p il $1.50 Follett

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons. Drawing 45-8474

A book addressed to "the person who has wanted all his life to draw—and thinks he cannot." It contains instructions in a few fundamental principles of drawing and inspiration and ideas for lots of practice.

"Grand for convalescents." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p19 S 23 '45 380w
Booklist 42:91 N 15 '45
Kirkus 13:360 Ag 15 '45 70w

"Will have popular appeal for its informal approach and hearty encouragement. For all ages, from ten up." Maude Adams
+ Library J 70:892 O 1 '45 70w
Wis Lib Bul 41:110 N '45

FISK, ROBERT S. Public understanding of what good schools can do. 86p $1.75 Teachers college

371.2 Public schools—U.S. Publicity 45-5207

"The purpose of the book is to mold public opinion through a dynamic program of enlightenment as to what good schools have accomplished to date and what they may accomplish in the future." School & Society

Reviewed by P. T. Smith
El School J 46:172 N '45 750w
School & Society 61:351 My 26 '45 40w

FISKE, EDWARD REYNOLDS. Fiske plan for free enterprise and post-war employment. 190p $2.25 Christopher

331.87 Trade and professional associations. Economic policy. U.S.—Economic policy 44-8127

"According to Lieutenant Fiske, the small business man in consumer industries cannot compete on an individual basis with big business, well supplied as it is with capital and funds to conduct nation-wide advertising campaigns. A principal feature of Lieutenant Fiske's plan to correct this inequality is the forming of a voluntary guild of business men in each consumer industry which will test its members' products and award a seal of approval." N Y Times

Reviewed by W. W. Beachboard
N Y Times p10 F 11 '45 240w
School & Society 61:32 Ja 13 '45 20w

FITCH, FLORENCE MARY. One God; the ways we worship Him. 144p il $2 Lothrop

264 Worship—Juvenile literature 44-47761

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Horn Bk 21:33 Ja '45 120w

"Children will need to be introduced to the book, but they will find the text and photographs interesting. Of great value to school teachers, religious workers and parents and a real contribution to religious tolerance." M. M. Smith
+ Library J 70:639 Jl '45 70w

"Although this book, which is subtitled 'The Ways We Worship God,' was designed for young people it states its simple story of the three great religions in America with such clarity and understanding that it will prove rewarding to anyone interested in the various forms in which man expresses his conviction of some power greater than himself. Today, with intolerance demonstrating its destructive strength, its brutal and deforming nature, it is good to come upon a book like this, sane, kindly, and reverent towards the reverence of others." Graham Bates
+ Sat R of Lit 28:27 Ap 21 '45 400w

FITCH, F. M.—Continued

"Obviously 'One God' was planned as a book for children. As such, its value as an explanation of the unknown mysteries of a playmate's church is inestimable. Parents, teachers in both week-day and Sunday schools, in fact, all adults who wish to see children whom they influence learn respect for ways of life different from their own should see that this book is in every youngster's personal library. It is not a book to borrow and read hastily, but to own and to think about. It doesn't preach half-hearted pieties about tolerance. It just goes about its business reverently and lovingly showing that men may worship God acceptably in different ways." E. M. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 1 '45 400w

"This little book is important if for no other reason than that it has been published in this country at this time of smoldering prejudice—and addressed to children. Its simple, unbiased text, made more clear by a really distinguished selection of pictures, makes one hope that it will find a wide audience among both children and adults who may be puzzled about the way their neighbors worship here where Freedom of Religion is part of the law of the land." Helen Chamberlain

+ Survey 81:126 Ap '45 300w

Wis Lib Bul 41:31 F '45

FITZGERALD, FRANCIS SCOTT KEY. The crack-up, with other uncollected pieces, notebooks and unpublished letters . . . ed. by Edmund Wilson. 347p $3.50 New directions

818

Collection of random writings by the author who served as a mouthpiece for "the lost generation." The book is made up of autobiographical papers, some pieces written for the magazines from 1931 to 1937; his notebooks in which he jotted down thoughts for future writings; selected letters to his friends; letters to him; and some essays and poems about him.

"This book of excerpts from the work of Scott Fitzgerald and of essays and poems about him is not a definitive study, but it is, in a way, the perfect tribute to his life and work, for it is incomplete, romantic, full of verve and promise, full of love, yet somehow tragically unsatisfying." A. C. Spectorsky

+ Book Week p1 Jl 8 '45 1450w

Booklist 42:16 S '45

Reviewed by J. F. Powers

Commonweal 42:408 Ag 10 '45 1950w

"Incomplete as these must be, nevertheless one gains analytical insight into outstanding American author. Highly recommended." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 70:264 Mr 15 '45 120w

Reviewed by Lionel Trilling

Nation 161:182 Ag 25 '45 2500w

"The present omnium gatherum is in many ways disappointing. Of Fitzgerald's own work the letters are of chief importance; the notebooks are less rewarding than those notes for The Last Tycoon which have already been published, and of his unpublished pieces only the title piece and an obituary notice on his friend Ring Lardner add anything to the canon. The letters from Gertrude Stein, Edith Wharton, T. S. Eliot, John Dos Passos and Thomas Wolfe are in varying degrees contributions to the history of our literature, as are the essays of Paul Rosenfeld, Glenway Wescott and Dos Passos. It is too early to attempt to place Fitzgerald, but it is doubtful whether more than one or two other authors of his generation (possibly a greater period than we sometimes realize) could have commanded such praise from their contemporaries." George Mayberry

+ — New Repub 113:82 Jl 16 '45 1150w

"Great writers' letters (and, I suppose, their notebooks) often are interesting. They have an attraction for the busybody in all of us, and to my way of thinking a small case can be made out for their private publication. It is possible that this book may easily achieve the status of private publication, but I doubt that that was Wilson's intention, and unless it was his intention he has done Fitzgerald a disservice in throwing together this collection of odds and ends. You don't do that to a painstaking artist. Or maybe you do, if you are a critic." John O'Hara

N Y Times p3 Jl 8 '45 1300w

"The book is obviously not intended for consecutive reading, but it makes excellent reading in snatches; you can open it almost anywhere and find lively writing and painfully honest self-judgment. Moreover, it deals with a novelist whose work and character, for all their shortcomings, have a way of holding our affection, like the life and work of Stephen Crane." Malcolm Cowley

+ New Yorker 21:53 Je 30 '45 2450w

"By all odds, the most interesting book that has come to us in many many months, a book that truly gives us the feeling of a man, and an interesting man at that—what he was, thought, felt, far more than what he did (everybody knows by now what he did)—is this collection of essays by F. Scott Fitzgerald, his notes for a notebook, and letters from and to him." Charles Jackson

+ Sat R of Lit 28:9 Jl 14 '45 2100w

Time 46:90 Jl 16 '45 1200w

"The story told by these pieces is, by and large, an appealing and moving one. The critic will find the material useful, and readers interested in Fitzgerald will find in the autobiographical essays some of his best writing. To them Fitzgerald has managed to give the vividness of feeling and the psychological interest characteristic of his very best fiction. The note-books, like most note-books, are extremely uneven, but there are brilliant moments—images and random comments."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:15 S '45 160w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Weekly Book Review p1 Ag 12 '45 2000w

Reviewed by Mark Schorer

Yale R n s 35:187 autumn '45 800w

FITZGERALD, FRANCIS SCOTT KEY. Portable F. Scott Fitzgerald; selected by Dorothy Parker; introd. by John O'Hara. 835p $2 Viking

45-8464

Contents: The great Gatsby; Tender is the night; Absolution; The baby party; The rich boy; May day; The cut-glass bowl; The offshore pirate; The freshest boy; Crazy Sunday; Babylon revisited.

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 O 7 '45 550w

Booklist 42:58 O 15 '45

Kirkus 13:321 Ag 1 '45 80w

"The new (and the old) crop of Fitzgerald addicts will no doubt quarrel with the selection, but aside from the understandable absence of the unfinished The Last Tycoon, the general reader may agree that this handsome and inexpensive volume contains the essential Fitzgerald."

+ New Repub 113:382 S 24 '45 120w

"John O'Hara, in a pugnacious, bare-knuckled introduction, is intelligent and amusing, but Mrs. Parker, who has picked out eleven of the most obvious titles in Fitzgerald's work, must have done her job in something of a hurry."

— + New Yorker 21:86 S 29 '45 120w

FITZPATRICK, BERNARD H. Understanding labor. 179p $2 McGraw

331 Labor and laboring classes—U.S.

45-8733

"Never before in our labor history have we faced such an internal labor crisis and this timely, thought-provoking book will clear up misunderstanding. Author analyzes labor, explains the meaning of contradictory forces in the sphere of labor relations. He outlines the difference between 'casual' and 'tenure' labor, covers the Railway Labor and the Wagner Act and many other phases." Library J

"Thought-provoking as Mr. Fitzpatrick's book is, it sins, in my opinion, on the side of excessive legalism and over-simplification. The task of reconstructing American economic life from the ground up according to the general principles of Pius XI's proposed system is complicated in the extreme and will not be rendered any less difficult by an either or approach. If it comes, it will come only gradually and by dint of a rather pragmatic type of experimentation. The important thing is to make an honest start." G. G. Higgins

Commonweal 43:74 N 2 '45 2100w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 70:1135 D 1 '45 70w

"The description and discussion of the differences between the Railway Labor Act and the Wagner Act are particularly well done, and will help the general reader to understand some of the reasons for the present confusion in handling collective bargaining procedures under law."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:20 D '45 280w

FITZPATRICK, EDWARD AUGUSTUS. Universal military training. (Whittlesey house publication) 374p $3 McGraw

355.22 Military service, Compulsory 45-8042

"Objective analysis with discussion of the problems of the standing army, the regular navy, the militia, the National Guard and the reserve from the civilian standpoint. Both sides of the subject discussed with historical background. The policies involved are not military policies, but public policies to be determined by the whole citizenry. Author served on General Hershey's staff." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Willard Shelton

Book Week p2 O 14 '45 220w

Booklist 42:32 O 1 '45

"No matter what one's personal opinion, a book such as this gives the necessary background for intelligent approach to a question we must face."

Kirkus 13:237 Je 1 '45 210w

Library J 70:687 Ag '45 60w

"'Universal Training,' by Colonel Edward A. Fitzpatrick is a useful, in the main objective discussion of its controversial subject. The president of Mount Mary College has, with calm clarity, presented his point of view—for universal military training—undisguised by any sociological or educational sugar-coating." F. N. Trager

Nation 161:410 O 20 '45 450w

"'Universal Military Training' is written very much like an Army manual. As such it probably will have little popular appeal. But because of its documentation and marshaling of fact and argument, it should prove useful in the debates on the subject. It should be a good source book both for those who favor universal military training and for those who oppose it."

+ — N Y Times p8 S 23 '45 450w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 28:36 S 29 '45 700w

"Col Fitzpatrick has gathered much pertinent information—in places this book resembles a debater's handbook—and apparently has given a good deal of thought to the proper organization of a system of compulsory military training. His book has considerable value as a reference work on a vital question. It is not, unfortunately, written or organized in a way likely to appeal to the general reader." R. A. Brown

+ Springf'd Republican p4 S 10 '45 250w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:36 D '45 320w

"Colonel Fitzpatrick believes in the advisability of universal military training in peace time. His book is in fact, a discussion of and an argument for such training. But his discussion reaches so many aspects of the problem and his argument is so fair, so well balanced by consideration of opposing viewpoints that 'Universal Military Training' becomes a textbook on the subject." H. W. Baehr

+ Weekly Book Review p18 N 4 '45 270w

Wis Lib Bul 41:109 N '45

FLACK, AMBROSE. Family on the hill. 247p $2.50 Crowell

45-1422

Stories about a lively family of Czechs, eighteen in number, living in a tumbledown house in upper New York state. Hunger, poverty, sorrow, and good fortune, all come their way, but the Otters take everything in their stride, and from their store of common sense they supply the mental health needed by some more fortunate members of the community.

Booklist 41:269 My 15 '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 7 '45 850w

"Once again Americans in the making are made the subject of a sprawling, episodic story of a big, joyous, colorful family. There might be a temptation to sell this as another Mama's Bank Account, but—for this reader—it doesn't begin to measure up. It is entertaining enough in the incredible adventures in good living, always on the edge of financial bankruptcy, but making up for it in overflowing measure of zest for life, generosity, abounding faith that the Lord will provide. . . But somehow, at no point does he touch the emotions,—even the humor lies in the event and not the telling—and the Otters still seem to be people in the pages of a book."

+ — Kirkus 12:552 D 15 '44 170w

"First novel, just right for small libraries." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 70:266 Mr 15 '45 70w

"Poetry runs like a clear, cool stream beneath the lively surface of life with the Otters; humor picks out the salient family characteristics and makes them memorable. Altogether this is a delightful incentive to American introspection." Jane Martin

+ N Y Times p28 Mr 25 '45 400w

New Yorker 21:97 Mr 24 '45 120w

"Ambrose Flack writes with warmth and a sort of unstudied grace which exactly suits his material." George Conrad

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 8 '45 310w

Wis Lib Bul 41:47 Ap '45

FLAGG, PALUEL JOSEPH. Art of resuscitation; with a foreword by Chevalier Jackson. 453p il $5 Reinhold

614.812 Resuscitation SG45-88

"A comprehensive treatise on the technique and equipment for combating respiratory and circulatory collapse resulting from carbon monoxide poisoning, submersion, anaesthesia, electric shock, mechanical and pathological obstructions of the air passages, and gases encountered in fire fighting. Asphyxia of the newborn infant is also discussed, likewise asphyxia in dentistry, submarine accidents, deep-sea diving, and war gas poisoning. The author believes that all activities connected with the administering of gases for therapeutic use—anaesthesia, resuscitation, and inhalation therapy—should be co-ordinated, and the inclusive term pneumatologist used to designate the physician practicing in this threefold field. Dr. Flagg is Visiting Anaesthetist at Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital, and Consulting Anaesthetist at nine others. The bibliography contains about three hundred references." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 41:221 Ap 1 '45

Library J 70:34 Ja 1 '45 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:64 O '44

"Such a thoroughgoing treatise as this should prove uniquely valuable for instruction not only of trained physicians but also of rescue squads, Red Cross classes, public health officials, and many others."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:4 F '45 180w

"The book should be useful to those who may be confronted with the problem of saving a fellow-being from asphyxia; this means virtually everybody."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:46 Mr '45 200w

FLANAGAN, JOHN THEODORE, ed. America is West. 677p $3.75 Univ. of Minn.

810.8 American literature—Collections. American literature—West A45-4710

"An anthology of middlewestern life and literature. The subject of this book is the heartland of America, the region loosely called the Middle West and somewhat arbitrarily defined as the twelve states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas, and the two Dakotas. Geologically this region is ancient, but its human history and consequently its literary record are comparatively recent." (p. iii) Acknowledgments and index.

"Flanagan is candid, in his introduction, in saying that 'inevitably the reader will find omissions. The pageant of regional life for almost 400 years can never be confined within the pages of a single volume,' he declares; and, of course, he is right. But 'America Is West' gives a real reflection of that pageant, a real sense of the 400 years. By the general high level of his selections, the freshness of many of them, and most of all by the scope and vision of his book, its integration of past and present into one satisfying reading experience, Flanagan has put the whole Middle West in his debt." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p1 O 14 '45 1350w

Booklist 42:72 N 1 '45

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 5 '46 250w

Reviewed by Paul Kiniery
Commonweal 43:172 N 30 '45 240w

Kirkus 13:446 O 1 '45 260w

"Enthusiastically recommended for all libraries." M. P. McKay
+ Library J 70:977 O 15 '45 80w

Reviewed by Delmore Schwartz
Nation 161:468 N 3 '45 240w

"The consequent effect of the book, if it is read from beginning to end, is that of a carefully developed historical and sociological study. It is inevitable that any reader already interested in the Middle West will be annoyed by certain omissions and certain inclusions in Professor Flanagan's book, and his annoyance will of course be colored by his own tastes and theories. Being such a reader, this reviewer would like to register three protests: First, there is not enough humor in 'America Is West.' . . Second, the section on Indians is inadequate. . . Finally, while the book begins with a brief excerpt from Lincoln's second annual message to Congress and, later, Henry A. Wallace's tribute to Lincoln is included, there are no other samples of Middle Western political oratory or writing. . . But Professor Flanagan has probably been as fair as it is possible for a regionalist to be. After all, his bias is proof that his labors have been inspired by that most important of all qualities in a good anthologist—a genuine love for the subject in hand." W. E. Wilson
+ — N Y Times p7 O 14 '45 900w

"'America Is West' is a fresh, readable, and rich anthology. Anybody interested in either cultural or literary history will find huge chunks of it useful to his purpose; and the general reader will discover a vast amount of entertainment in its pages." H. M. Jones
+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 O 27 '45 600w

Springf'd Republican p4 D 17 '45 300w

"A reviewer's first duty is to quarrel with the anthologist. Well, some of Mr. Flanagan's choices are too conventional and sometimes he seems uninformed. Incomparably better material about the Indians than he prints is at hand, sometimes in the very books he uses. . . Nevertheless, Mr. Flanagan does well by us. Many of his selections are singularly happy. . . Not the least remarkable thing about it is that it is played straight. A generation ago no literary editor could have begun the job without condescension: no Mid-Western literary editor would have dreamed of beginning it at all." Bernard De Voto
+ — Weekly Book Review p1 O 14 '45 850w

Wis Lib Bul 41:125 D '45

FLECK, HARRY RONALD. Plastics, scientific and technological; with foreword and revision of chapter XIV by Carl F. Massopust. 325p il $6.50 Chemical pub. co [25s Temple press]

668.4 Plastics 45-2384

"A compilation of technical data regarding the chemistry, manufacture and properties of plastic materials based on a review of the literature of the subject. Written for the chemist and technician rather than the layman, the book deals with the raw materials of plastics, polymerization, synthetic elastomers, thermosetting materials, synthetic resins, fibres and textiles, plywood and impregnated wood. There is also a chapter on the chemical, physical and electrical testing of plastics. Although references are incorporated in the text there is no bibliography." N Y New Tech Bks

"The literature and facts have been condensed and correlated in an excellent manner and in a free-flowing literary style which makes the reading interesting as well as informative. . . On the whole, this edition should be equally as well received as the first." A. P. Mazzucchelli
+ Chem & Eng N 23:2028 N 10 '45 250w

"Because the author has chosen a functional plan for the book, information on any given plastic is scattered through various chapters. However, the reviewer concedes the difficulty of organizing such complex subject matter. The degree of accuracy is high, and the author has packed a great deal of matter into relatively small compass." Chaplin Tyler
+ — Chem & Met Eng 52:240 My '45 250w

Library J 70:307 Ap 1 '45 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:12 Ja '45

FLEISHER, WILFRID. What to do with Japan. 178p $2 Doubleday

940.5314452 Reconstruction (1939-)—Japan. Eastern question (Far East). World war, 1939—Japan 45-35020

In this work the author, for many years a resident of Japan, deals with such questions as: Should Hirohito be deposed? Should Japan become a republic? What about reparations? colonial posessions? heavy and light industries? etc.

Reviewed by H. W. Bradley
Am Pol Sci R 39:1034 O '45 400w

Booklist 41:207 Mr 15 '45

Bookmark 6:10 My '45

"Chatty, superficial book which contains much useful information, but ignores the deeper problems." Francis McCullagh
+ — Cath World 161:360 Je '45 300w

Reviewed by Carlyle Morgan
Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 8 '45 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '45

"'What to do with Japan' or 'What to do to Japan' is the real question. . . On the jacket of his book Sumner Welles declares that the author has 'an extraordinary understanding of Japan.' Far be it from me to belittle Welles or Fleisher, or the latter's excellent book; but the only extraordinary thing about it is that the simple facts should seem extraordinary in which one has grown up and which one has accepted as obvious to any literate person for a long lifetime. Fleisher's book is good. I wonder if he would mind the warning in the first line of this review?" W. F. Sands
+ Commonweal 42:28 Ap 20 '45 550w

"His recommendations sound extreme, but they seem practical and necessary to ensure safety and peace." Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 8:544 Je '45 100w

Reviewed by W. O. Eddy
Ethics 56:74 O '45 270w

"Mr. Fleisher knows the Japanese well and his numerous suggestions for preventive therapy are worthy of close scrutiny. One wonders, however, how thoroughly he really believes that his prescription is in the realm of the politically possible."
+ — Foreign Affairs 23:701 Jl '45 60w

"An intelligent precis of one postwar peril, by a recognized authority."
+ Kirkus 13:13 Ja 1 '45 130w

Nation 160:311 Mr 17 '45 210w

Reviewed by Helen Mears
New Repub 113:52 Jl 9 '45 850w

"Wilfrid Fleisher would seem to be one of the few who have the background necessary for a study of what to do with Japan. His book is important for that reason. . . A valuable appendix gives the full texts of official statements of recent years on the future of Asia, including the Atlantic Charter and the Cairo Declaration." Foster Hailey
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 25 '45 440w

"A knowledgeable, intelligent, and well-written book."
+ New Yorker 21:82 Mr 3 '45 150w

Reviewed by T. A. Bisson
Sat R of Lit 28:21 Mr 17 '45 650w

"The book abounds in sweeping generalities and inconsistencies. . . Part of the reason for the reviewer's impatience with this book is found in the foreword, where the author states that he felt the problem was beyond the scope of any one individual and, therefore, 'I have sought the views of many who will probably have to do with making the peace. . . .' Even this method of collecting ideas should not have barred Mr. Fleisher from presenting the material in more orderly fashion, first screening it through his own mind. Out of a wealth of experience in Japan, Mr. Fleisher should have been able to produce a valuable book. It is to be regretted that he did not do so." J. J. Mickle
— Survey G 34:134 Ap '45 550w

Reviewed by Floyd Taylor
Weekly Book Review p5 F 25 '45 950w

Reviewed by Gunther Stein
Yale R n s 35:342 winter '46 40w

FLEMING, DANIEL JOHNSON. Bringing our world together; a study in world community. 168p $2 Scribner

260 Christianity. History—Philosophy 45-35162

"Author, member of faculty of Union Theological Seminary, from 1918 until retirement in 1945, has spent ten years as teacher in India. He has written seventeen religious books. Here he traces development of world's peoples from individual thinking to group thinking. He points out progress already made toward a World Community through international conferences and has high hopes for present Peace Conference. His conviction is that Christianity is again on the upsurge and it will lead in establishing world brotherhood of all peoples—slowly but surely." Library J

Booklist 42:2 S '45

"The volume will serve as an admirable primer for the lay group which wishes to be informed on the trend to world unity and its relation to the Christian world view. The discussion is carried on at a level which will commend itself to the intelligent lay reader. Questions, problems and brief bibliographies are appended for the use of discussion groups." F. H. Littell
Christian Century 62:1008 S 5 '45 700w

"An important contribution to our thinking about the biggest issue of the age: Can we organize the world for cooperation, unity and peace?"
+ Kirkus 13:244 Je 1 '45 110w

"Well thought out, clear and concise." L. R. Etzkorn
+ Library J 70:634 Jl '45 110w

FLEMING, DENNA FRANK. The United States and the World court. 206p $2 Doubleday

341.1 Permanent court of international justice. U.S.—Foreign relations 45-1825

The author examines the history of the United States' relations with the Permanent court of international justice, showing that the attitude of the Senate in opposing the League of nations was carried over into its later attitude toward the Court.

"If this study leaves something to be desired as a definitive work of scholarship, it is thoroughly successful as a timely indictment of, the constitutional machinery for the ratification of treaties—and this, we may be confident, was the author's chief purpose in writing it." N. M. Blake
+ — Am Hist R 50:821 Jl '45 550w

Reviewed by G. L. Kirk
Am Pol Sci R 39:1043 O '45 600w

"Professor Fleming has skillfully combined the learning of the scholar with the conviction and passion of the crusader. He holds the reader to the end, and succeeds in imparting a sense of significance and urgency. One can only hope that the book will have wide circulation." O. I. Janowsky
+ Ann Am Acad 241:175 S '45 550w

Booklist 41:232 Ap 15 '45

Bookmark 6:5 My '45

"It's all very convincing. Mr. Fleming has an abundance of evidence to support his argument. And, like the good lawyer he is, he makes every word count. For one reader, his analogy between the last war and this one is somewhat on the precious side, a bit too patterned. Nineteen-eighteen is not 1945. And the Senate of today is not necessarily the Senate of three decades ago. A check on executive authority may be undesirable in one generation and eminently desirable in another." H. M.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 F 16 '45 480w

Reviewed by E. M. Lynskey
Commonweal 42:51 Ap 27 '45 300w

Current Hist 8:442 My '45 90w

Foreign Affairs 23:693 Jl '45 70w

Harvard Law R 58:755 My '45 300w

"Readable, accurate and chronological story."
+ Kirkus 12:541 D 1 '44 200w

"It is a book that deserves the close attention of all who have any concern for the part we must play in the momentous days ahead of us. And it comes at a most appropriate hour." R. M. MacIver
+ N Y Times p4 Mr 4 '45 1300w

Reviewed by P. C. Jessup
Pol Sci Q 60:291 Je '45 450w

"The present work should prove useful to anyone interested in the foreign relations of the United States and particularly the reaction of the United States to proposals for the reestablishment of a court of international justice."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:35 Je '45 200w

"Indignation springing from such heartfelt conviction as Professor Fleming's commands respect. One sympathizes, too, with his motive. . . One wishes, however, that he need not also brand with 'isolationism' those honest persons who opposed league entry because they believed its undemocratic structure made it self-defeating as an instrument of peace." Frances Witherspoon
Weekly Book Review p10 F 25 '45 550w

FLICK, ELLA MARY ELIZABETH. Beloved crusader; Lawrence F. Flick, physician. 390p il $3.50 Dorrance

B or 92 Flick, Lawrence Francis 44-7615

"Dr. Flick (1856-1938) was eminent as a crusader against tuberculosis, from which he had suffered in his early years, and as a Roman Catholic layman active in many enterprises. His daughter paints an attractive and apparently authentic picture of his personality and interests." Christian Century

Cath World 160:573 Mr '45 200w

Christian Century 61:904 Ag 2 '44 70w

FLOREZ, PABLO DE AZCARATE Y. See Azcárate y Flórez, P. de

FLOWER, ROBIN. Western island; or, The Great Blasket; with il. by Ida M. Flower. 138p $2.50 (7s 6d) Oxford

914.196 Great Blasket island 45-8105

The Great Blasket, off the Atlantic coast of Ireland is the Western island of the title. The natives call their home "the next parish to America." Since 1911 the author, who has made the catalog of Irish manuscripts in the British museum has spent his summer holidays on Blasket, and has made friends with its people. His book is an account of their life, customs, and folk tales.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 S 30 '45 110w

Booklist 42:35 O 1 '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 S 22 '45 500w

Reviewed by David Marshall
+ Commonweal 42:579 S 28 '45 600w

"A mosaic of history and description, legend and lore, folkways and blarney, which has much of the Irish vitality and lyricism—and a certain special charm."
+ Kirkus 13:153 Ap 1 '45 90w

"As Mr. Flower reminds the reader, his book is the last possible effort to record the appearance and texture of the remnant of those snows of yesteryear. The book, therefore, has a double value: for the ethnologist, and for the lover of the heroic way of life, when the getting of food, the begetting of children, and the making of songs and myths, were everyday processes. The book is sensitively illustrated by Mr. Flower's wife." Richard Church
+ New Statesman & Nation 29:178 Mr 17 '45 600w

"This is a dreamlike journey to Great Blasket Island, in the Atlantic, off the coast of Ireland's County Kerry, far from the madding crowd. We achieve, through the experience here recorded, a bountiful knowledge of peculiar persons in a peculiar place. . . What Mr. Flower has done for this solitary rerisen memory of the earth should be done for other regions, and by writers as sensitive as he. The general sea, like the great flood which is said to have covered the earth and all its islands in the time of Noah, is indeed indifferent to the peculiarity of person and place." Marguerite Young
+ N Y Times p3 Ag 26 '45 950w

"There is a tragic dignity and beauty to this last testament of a vanishing race." A. F. Wolfe
+ Sat R of Lit 28:30 O 6 '45 700w

"Occasionally one meets with a book—generally a small one—which, without dealing with world-shaking events or powerful personalities, is yet so charming and productive of so much quiet pleasure that it cannot be dismissed as insignificant or unimportant. Of such is Robin Flower's 'The Western Island,' a little book which, though written mainly in prose, possesses much of the intangible magic and atmosphere of poetry." W. H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d N 11 '45 390w

"In spite of its air of informality his book has depth and unity. It is an unsentimental elegy for old ways and friends. . . Stories, humorous or macabre, are woven into his narrative as naturally as they occurred in an evening's conversation on the island. They will delight anyone with a taste for such things, even if he knows no nostalgia for that wild coast."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p16 Ja 13 '45 360w

"In this small book Robin Flower has condensed the life of the Blaskets as Synge set down that of Aran. But he does not feel or write like Synge. Here is less drama and more dream. Mr. Flower's is a flat gray level style, somber as stone, unbroken by climax, flowing on evenly and steadily in a monotone. It's like the landscape of western Ireland, all cloud-filtered light and stone and sea, muffled, melancholy, beautiful. No dynamics of light and dark, all twilight." Horace Reynolds
Weekly Book Review p3 S 16 '45 600w

Reviewed by Padraic Colum
Yale R n s 35:349 winter '46 1050w

FLUGEL, JOHN CARL. Man, morals and society; a psycho-analytical study. 328p $4.50 Int. univs. press [21s Duckworth]

131.34 Psychoanalysis. Ethics 45-9043

"Dr. Flugel's book might be said to be a treatise on conscience. He defines his theme as 'the nature and development of the chief psychological factors in morality.' After three introductory chapters on the place of psychoanalysis in ethics, he gives a singularly complete, candid and judicious summary of all that his school has so far contributed to the understanding of human morals, tracing the development of each special doctrine from its source and indicating with exemplary fairness how far it coincides with the views of traditional psychology and where it is still undeveloped or has failed to make a consistent story." Times [London] Lit Sup

"The field is explored carefully in writing that is admirably clear and orderly. This book will have very definite interest for all readers who are genuinely interested in psychoanalysis." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 N 18 '45 90w

Kirkus 13:466 O 15 '45 80w

"On the whole Professor Flugel presents his conclusions in a manner free from dogmatism, and what he has to say is always interesting and thought provoking. Those who wish to know what psychoanalysis has to say on fundamental moral problems will here find an exposition written with great clarity and candour, based on a thorough grasp of all the relevant data and likely to stimulate further inquiry." Morris Ginsberg
+ Spec 174:576 Je 22 '45 1550w

"Dr. Flugel is to be congratulated on a masterly exposition of a complicated and elusive subject. His chapter on the theory of punishment is only one of many elegant pieces of reasoning. It is good, among other things, to find that he is conscious of one of the major objections to the psychoanalytic school of thought—namely, that it tends to assume that the lower is always more real and fundamental than the higher—or, as it might be put, what is basic is necessarily base."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p310 Je 30 '45 1150w

FOGG, JOHN MILTON. Weeds of lawn and garden; a handbook for eastern temperate North America; il. by Léonie Hagerty. 215p $2.50 Univ. of Pa. press

632.58 Weeds Agr45-149

Handbook of the weeds of eastern North America. Contains line drawings and descriptions of each plant included. Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

"This little book with its excellent drawings and descriptions and its common-sense discussion of old and new methods of eradicating weeds and preventing their spread is much the best thing of its kind I have ever seen. It will be widely useful to that great majority who find making a garden or a lawn largely a matter of fighting weeds." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 Je 17 '45 90w

Booklist 41:334 Jl 15 '45

Bookmark 6:7 My '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '45

"An excellent and useful book, which lacks only the short cut to some method of keying identification."
+ Kirkus 13:149 Ap 1 '45 250w

"There have been other weed identification handbooks, and doubtless there will be still more as gardeners continue their unending warfare against those varied interlopers whose chief ambition seems to be to take root and flourish in the very places where they are least wanted. But to this reviewer's way of thinking it will be many a long day before any author presents a clearer, better planned and more easily used guide to the subject than Mr. Fogg has here achieved." R. S. Lemmon
+ Weekly Book Review p13 Jl 8 '45 130w

FOLEY, MARTHA, ed. Best American short stories, 1945; and the Yearbook of the American short story; with decorations by Angna Enters. 397p $2.75 Houghton

Short stories—Collections

Contents: How the Devil came down Division street, by Nelson Algren; The first fish, by Warren Beck; Crime passionnel, by Louis Bromfield; My brother Osong's career in politics, by Carlos Bulosan; Harvest, by Mary Deasy; Burial in the desert, by Edward Fenton; The light of morning, by Morton Fineman; Understand what I mean? by Bill Gerry; The test, by Brendan Gill; Be heavy, by Richard Hagopian; It never happened, by Emily Hahn; The Czech dog, by W. G. Hardy; Fever flower, by Josephine Johnson; Poor everybody, by Robert McLaughlin; Don't scrub off these names, by John McNulty; The animals' fair, by Warren Miller; Papa, Mama and economics, by George Panetta; On the way to somewhere else, by J. S. Pennell; Call a solemn assembly, by Ruth Portugal; The owl that kept winking, by Theodore Pratt; The hand that fed me, by Isaac Rosenfeld; A war marriage, by Donna Rowell; The mourners, by Gladys Schmitt; Gunners' passage, by Irwin Shaw; The wedding: Beacon Hill, by Jean Stafford; Alabama sketches, by R. P. Tartt; Rain in the heart, by Peter Taylor; Cass Mastern's wedding ring, by R. P. Warren; First day finish, by Jessamyn West; This is a love story, by Leane Zugsmith; A ship to Tarshish, by William Zukerman.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p4 D 16 '45 500w

Booklist 42:128 D 15 '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 5 '46 450w

Kirkus 13:459 O 15 '45 150w

"There is just enough bad writing in this anthology to make it extremely interesting. It seems as if our bad writers are taking refuge in the mediocrity of plot and character. . . The better stories of this anthology are distinguished both by the writers' intense vision of life and by the architectural language by which that vision is conveyed. Nothing is large, loose, easy, lazy, unwritten, amorphous. Robert Penn Warren's 'Cass Mastern's Wedding Ring' is an authentic artistic creation, capacious and meditative, weaving many strands of meaning into a tapestry of lost events, a research in human character. 'Gunner's Passage,' by Irwin Shaw, is melodic, imagistic, a geographic romance of the flier, the enlargement of consciousness through experience." Marguerite Young

+ — N Y Times p3 D 16 '45 650w

"There are thirty-one selections—some excellent, some good, and a few just chaff."

+ — New Yorker 21:82 D 22 '45 60w

"The mantle that Martha Foley inherited from the late Edward J. O'Brien, who founded this hardy perennial among anthologies thirty years ago, is being worn with distinction if not dash. In editing the 1945 volume, Miss Foley has turned up thirty-one competent-to-excellent short stories, ranging from Donna Rowell's 'A War Marriage,' which is Miss Rowell's first published story, to items by such tried literary hands as Louis Bromfield, Josephine Johnson, Emily Hahn, Robert Penn Warren and Irwin Shaw." Richard Match

+ Weekly Book Review p8 D 16 '45 650w

FOLKMANN, ADOLF. The promise Hitler kept [as told to Stefan Szende]. 281p $2.75 Roy pubs. [10s 6d Gollancz]

940.5481438 World war, 1939—Poland. Jews in Poland. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, Jewish 45-5961

"This book, originally published in Sweden under the title 'The Last Jew from Poland,' is the story . . . of a man who managed, against all odds, to escape the Nazi noose. The hero, Adolf Folkmann, who told his story to [Stefan Szende] lived for twenty months under the Soviets after the partition of Poland, saw the German invasion of Lwów, survived a hundred pogroms, lived in the ghetto of Lwów until its liquidation, worked for the Germans in a slave gang, and then escaped to Sweden in the fall of 1943." New Yorker

---

Booklist 42:12 S '45

Kirkus 13:269 Je 15 '45 120w

"The Promise Hitler Kept is a valuable reinforcement to those who believe that the political and economic resettlement of Europe is not enough to guarantee sanity, let alone peace. Europe must be re-educated: and that means it must be reconverted to the Christian ethic." Maurice Edelman

+ New Statesman & Nation 30:96 Ag 11 '45 750w

Reviewed by E. B. Burgum

N Y Times p25 Jl 22 '45 500w

"There is a sameness about all the narratives of escape, and what happened in Poland when the Germans took over is now quite generally known, but this account, in that it provides a highly detailed and seemingly authentic record of this particularly hideous chapter in Nazi militarism, has considerable historical value."

+ New Yorker 21:60 Je 30 '45 180w

Reviewed by H. L. Mitchell

Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 13 '45 500w

"It is a dreadful and piteous story, a documentary fragment of the whole scarcely imaginable truth. However, in so far as it permits the reader to think of other things than the unnameable evil of this campaign of extermination and the scale of horror which was reached in the Jewish tragedy thus enacted, the narrative has an even wider documentary interest. Besides the illuminating evidence it provides of the fundamental disunity of Polish resistance both before and after 1941 (a disunity originating in the artificial composition of the State of the Polish 'colonels'), it contains a detailed and striking account of conditions in Eastern Poland during the Soviet occupation of 1939-41."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p374 Ag 11 '45 1100w

"It would be impossible, in the space of a review, to run the gamut of the Nazi iniquities which Folkmann witnessed from graft to torture, from casual murder to organized slaughter. Suffice it to say that he has created for posterity, with restraint and regard for facts, a historical document which should be read today by all men with a sense of responsibility for the postwar world." Virgilia Sapieha

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Jl 1 '45 1400w

FOLLETT, DWIGHT W. Gunner and the Dumbo; pictures by Don Nelson. [32p] $1 Follett 45-7781

Gunner is the bulldog mascot of the Busy Bee, a B-25. He accompanies the men on a successful mission to sink a Jap ship and when their plane is hurtled into the sea takes refuge with them on a life raft. All are finally rescued by a Dumbo.

Book Week p16 N 11 '45 140w

Churchman 159:7 N 15 '45 20w

"Vivid illustrations combine with a story content that has more substance than the average third to fifth grade reader material."

+ Kirkus 13:397 S 1 '45 100w

"Boys especially will enjoy this authentic story of a dangerous mission. Pictures by Don Nelson are so vivid and colorful that book could almost be classed as a picture book although text is adapted for nine- to twelve-year-olds." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 70:822 S 15 '45 80w

"The many pictures by Don Nelson portray the color and excitement of Lieut Follett's authentic account of adventure in the Pacific air war." L. R. S.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 23 '45 140w

FONTAINE, ROBERT LOUIS. Happy time; il. by Roger Duvoisin. 269p $2.50 Simon & Schuster 818 45-5346

Gay recollections of a few years in a boy's life in Ottawa some twenty years ago. The boy's mother was a Scotch Presbyterian, his father a charming French-Canadian musician, and the household was a lively and unusual one. In the other side of the two family house lived the grandfather and an assortment of uncles, each of them a character in his own right. The episodes in the boy's adolescent years, spent in the company of these delightful people, are described with quiet humor.

Reviewed by A. C. Spectorsky
Book Week p1 Jl 1 '45 1100w

Booklist 41:340 Jl 15 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '45

"Exploits of a sentimental education which provides much that is engaging and endearing." + Kirkus 13:206 My 15 '45 210w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 161:139 Ag 11 '45 100w

Reviewed by Paul Griffith
N Y Times p7 Jl 1 '45 380w

"A mildly entertaining although rather self-conscious story of the home life of a little French-Canadian boy of a couple of decades ago."
New Yorker 21:64 Jl 7 '45 90w

"Every now and then a book comes along which is warm as the sunshine, true as the nightingale's pitch, and running over with humor and humanity like a fresh plum in a hungry mouth. That is a beautiful book, however removed it may be from literature. If you are looking for such an item it exists in 'The Happy Time,' by Robert Fontaine." Thomas Sugrue
+ Sat R of Lit 28:15 Jl 28 '45 900w

"Fortunate adults carry in their hearts bright memories of the love, fun and security that made their childhood a 'happy time.' Few, however, have the gift of recreating for others that special tenderness they cherish. Robert Fontaine, now a resident of Springfield, has the lively memory, the warm understanding and the gift of tongue with which to set down his own record of not so long ago. This he does, with wit and charm, in 'The Happy Time.'" E. M. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 24 '45 650w

"A highly entertaining and charming book. . Twenty-four sketches make up the contents of this book and most of them are good. They recreate the life of a romantic and unobjectionably precocious boy between the ages of ten and fourteen. . . While he shares with all boys the zest of discovering the wonders of the world, he possesses a piquancy of character that is purely French." Rose Feld
+ Weekly Book Review p2 Jl 1 '45 950w

FOOTMAN, DAVID. Red prelude; the life of the Russian terrorist, Zhelyabov. 267p $2.75 Yale univ. press [12s 6d Cresset]
B or 92 Zheli͡abov, Andrei Ivanovich
A45-3107

Biography of a Russian revolutionary, Andrei Ivanovich Zhelyabov, who was considered by Lenin to be "the ideal revolutionary leader." Bibliographical note. Index.

Reviewed by S. R. Tompkins
Ann Am Acad 241:173 S '45 500w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Je 10 '45 180w

Booklist 42:16 S '45

Christian Century 62:887 Ag 1 '45 210w

"This able and documented book is a useful study of a germinal historical movement, and has an unstated but obvious bearing on some of the psychological factors of later Russian revolutionary development." Bromwell Stephens
+ Churchman 159:15 Ag '45 150w

Current Hist 9:129 Ag '45 50w

"Carefully, almost drily written, meticulously documented, this will appeal to careful students rather than to the general public. The facts are strange and fascinating, but Footman was apparently interested in exact events, rather than drama and color, or even narrative skill."
Kirkus 13:170 Ap 15 '45 170w

"Lively book adds interesting details to our knowledge of Russian terrorist movement which was one of the indirect predecessors of Bolshevism. . . Work will be useful even to readers abhorring any political murder since it contains many sidelights on Russian social and political life in the later nineteenth century. Recommended for larger libraries." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 70:414 My 1 '45 100w

"Mr. Footman has written a biography which, besides being of considerable value to those who wish to understand Russia, is a fine dramatic story." Norman MacKenzie
+ New Statesman & Nation 28:308 N 4 '44 1050w

Reviewed by Nathan Glick
N Y Times p5 S 2 '45 600w

"The book will be welcomed by many because it will give them, much better than most contemporary journalistic reports, a real insight into the Russian character and background, its emotional fanaticism, and its legacy of violence and lawlessness. Though it does not try to establish any direct connection with the problems and situations of today nor to draw any moral, it should be warmly recommended to readers who seek serious instruction and actual facts." H. M. Jones
+ Sat R of Lit 28:10 Je 16 '45 550w

"Mr. Footman is especially to be congratulated on the unobtrusive skill with which he makes intelligible a period which to most people is alien and unfamiliar. For the most part he allows his story to tell itself; the reward of such self-restraint is that as the narrative unfolds it assumes, for all its modesty, that deep emotional and intellectual significance which belongs to all history when it speaks with its own voice." Goronwy Rees
+ Spec 174:16 Ja 5 '45 900w

"A sound and very useful piece of work. Unfortunately, the book is not quite the sort of thing that might have been hoped for. In the first place there is still all too little material for a biography of Zhelyabov; we have only the barest outline of his personal history during much the greater part of the thirty-one years of his life. . . Mr. Footman therefore has been obliged to bring in a good deal that cannot properly be said to belong to a biographical study. More important still, he has, one cannot help feeling, brought insufficient imagination to the story. The style of the book is on the humdrum side. It lacks vividness and excitement, which a record of such strange, ironical and desperate events ought surely not to do, and it does not really succeed in suggesting to us what sort of man Zhelyabov was."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p632 D 30 '44 1050w

"The book is an account of one of the most dramatic periods in Russian history. Full-bodied, authentic, with only here and there a slip in minor and disputed evidence, it tells the story of the People's Will, the revolutionary party which followed in the wake of futile appeals to the Czar for far-reaching reforms and equally futile efforts on part of well born, high-minded, highly educated young men and women to evangelize the peasant into revolution. . . On the human side, the book tells one of the most poignant love stories in the Russian Revolutionary movement—its beginnings, its trials, its triumphs, its sublimely tragic end." Maurice Hindus
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Jl 29 '45 1100w

FOOTNER, HULBERT. Orchids to murder. 244p $2 Harper 45-2146

Detective story.

"Mappin, in this story, is on home ground for him—New York City. . . Throughout, the excitement always attendant upon Mr. Mappin's own kind of manhunt is tempered by his sincere affection for his friend. That he succeeds in his efforts is something you would, naturally, expect; how he succeeds makes for fast and suspenseful reading." Elizabeth Bullock

+ Book Week p12 Mr 11 '45 160w

Kirkus 12:554 D 15 '44 50w

N Y Times p28 F 25 '45 110w

Times [London] Lit Sup p305 Je 30 '45 30w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p18 F 25 '45 110w

FORD, CHARLES HENRI, ed. Night with Jupiter, and other fantastic stories. (View edition) 128p il $3 Vanguard

Short stories—Collections 46-307

Fifteen short stories written in the surrealist or primitive genre, with illustrations by Calder, Tchelitchew, Man Ray, and others.

Kirkus 13:404 S 15 '45 130w

Reviewed by Isaac Rosenfeld
New Repub 114:59 Ja 14 '46 950w

New Yorker 21:76 Ja 5 '46 60w

FORD, CHARLES HENRI. Poems for painters. 16il $1; ltd autog ed $2 View, inc, 1 E. 53d st, N.Y. 22

811

"The painters are Marcel Duchamp, Leonor Fini, Esteban Francis, Yves Tanguy, and Pavel Tchelitchew. Mr. Ford's poems are now strongly influenced by Paul Eluard's brand of Surrealism. Edith Sitwell has said of them, 'They give me always a shock of delight and revelation.'" New Yorker

New Yorker 21:68 Jl 7 '45 80w

"I do not mean to imply that Ford is devoid of either imagination or verbal power. He has considerable charm, too, and in some of his lines the vowel play, joined to a certain finesse of thought, is memorable. . . Yet he is unable or, more likely, unwilling to sustain either melody or power: his poems fall apart for lack of a center." F. C. Golffing

— + Poetry 66:342 S '45 300w

FORD, EDWARD. Larry Scott of the Sun; il. by John Sheppard. 251p $2 Macrae Smith co. 45-7537

Vocational story for high school age. Larry Scott's determination to be a reporter, plus his ability to write good copy, got him a job on his town paper almost before he was out of high school. From there he went to a Philadelphia paper, and later was sent to the Pacific.

"An excellent combination of adventure made credible, and sound newspaper background."

+ Kirkus 13:223 My 15 '45 170w

"Excellent picture of newspaper work from cub reporter to a position with the International Press overseas. . . Recommended as a vocational book." M. A. Webb

+ Library J 70:688 Ag '45 70w

"There is a commendable lack of swagger in Larry's rise to the role of war correspondent, and the first part of his career contains one of the most explicit informative accounts of work on a small city newspaper that a would-be reporter could find in fiction for young people." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p20 Jl 22 '45 180w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 S 16 '45 270w

FORD, EDWARD H. (SENATOR FORD, pseud). My home town. 192p il $1.50 Howell, Soskin.

817 45-9210

The author, monologist and Can You Top This? radio program star, has written a book in which appear the characters from his jokes, as they look to their friends and enemies in the old home town. Each chapter contains jokes of a certain trend, as shown by the chapter titles: old jokes at home; liquid assets; pillars of society, etc.

Reviewed by Dale Harrison
Book Week p10 O 28 '45 270w

"From the jacket, depicting country characters swapping jokes around the traditional pot-bellied stove in the country store, to the last page, the book is full of amusing incidents, pictures and humor which serve to fulfill the wish with which the senator closes the last chapter saying, 'This is Senator Ford signing off and hoping that you have enjoyed some of the old friends in new settings.' You certainly have!" E. H. Dexter

+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 16 '45 180w

FORD, LESLIE. See Brown, Z. J.

FORD, SENATOR, pseud. See Ford, E. H.

FORESTER, CECIL SCOTT. Commodore Hornblower [Eng title: Commodore]. 384p $2.50 Little [9s 6d Joseph, M]

45-3524

In this fourth book about the English sea captain, Horatio Hornblower after a short stay on land, returns to the sea with the rank of Commodore. He is intrusted with the delicate mission of swinging Sweden and Russia to the side of Britain in the Napoleonic wars. He succeeds, after battle, intrigue, and treachery in his own ranks.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 175:125 Je '45 600w

Reviewed by R. J. Bender
Book Week p3 My 20 '45 550w

Booklist 41:286 Je 1 '45

Bookmark 6:15 My '45

Reviewed by E. A. Laycock
Boston Globe p13 My 23 '45 240w

"Forester's knowledge of the sea, ships and deck jargon is comprehensive and convincing. His observation of present naval situations for both the British and American governments make him well qualified to tell this sea yarn of a period which has parallels to our own."

+ Cath World 161:364 Je '45 250w

"'The Commodore' is not merely a historical novel. It is also a comment on the events of our own day. Sheerly as a novel, however, it is extremely entertaining." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 19 '45 950w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '45

"His Majesty's servant Hornblower has been given a new rank, a new ship and new responsibilities. Personally, however, he is wearing a bit thin. The brash and blasphemous braggart is at home in matters of action, but painfully inept and incomplete on land. Perhaps the awkwardness is due to shyness: he is matter of fact with his wife Barbara and ill at ease at the Admiralty Office; but he plays the fool when he drinks too much at a regal dinner and slips into the hands of a dimly drawn adventuress. Before the mast, however, he is his former self. . . In spots exciting, it should serve at least for pleasant summer reading." J. E. Tobin

Commonweal 42:195 Je 8 '45 330w

"Even people who don't ordinarily care to read tales of the sea like these yarns about the intrepid Captain Hornblower, bluff, rugged, with tender heart behind his shabby uniform. A fourth volume in the series is welcome news."

+ Kirkus 13:112 Mr 15 '45 250w

Reviewed by H. A. Wooster
Library J 70:488 My 15 '45 50w

"Here is Hornblower on a wider stage than in the earlier stories, and he can fill that stage." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 16 '45 240w

"In its way The Commodore is especially suited for reading on a railway journey or in some other isolated situation. You have no reference books handy and cannot, therefore, worry about checking the historical facts. You arrive at your destination with a pleasant if transitory consciousness that a British naval officer talked the Czar Alexander into resisting

FORESTER, C. S.—Continued
Napoleon, personally defeated the siege of Riga and thus prevented the French from reaching St. Petersburg, taught Colonel Clausewitz the value of combined operations, and finally persuaded General Yorck to begin the Prussian defection from Napoleon's side. What could be more gratifying?" John Midgley
+ New Statesman & Nation 29:211 Mr 31 '45 550w

Reviewed by J. K. Hutchens
N Y Times p7 My 20 '45 650w

"Horatio Hornblower again slaps down his old enemies the French, brings about the war between Napoleon and Russia almost single-handedly, gets typhus, and has other adventures in the familiar Hornblower tradition. That tradition is beginning to show signs of wear and tear, and for all Mr. Forester's quiet skill at putting together an adventure story, the Commodore isn't anything like the man he used to be. Maybe the time has come for the old sea dog to be retired; he surely has his eighty-five points."
New Yorker 21:77 My 26 '45 120w

" 'Commodore Hornblower' is a crackerjack yarn—not quite up to the earlier Hornblower books perhaps, but one that will delight any reader who enjoys a good story. And anyone who does not love a good story for its own sweet sake has lost the first great joy for which books must have been invented." W. S. Lynch
+ Sat R of Lit 28:11 Je 2 '45 1100w

"To those who have read the previous stories, reading 'Commodore Hornblower' will be like meeting an old friend after a long absence. To those who are meeting Hornblower for the first time it is bound to be a new and thrilling adventure. May Commodore Hornblower never haul down his flag." G. K. Moriarty
+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 20 '45 600w

Time 45:100 My 28 '45 600w

"It is a spirited piece of work, and full of interesting detail where matters naval, military, and diplomatic in that year of decision are concerned. Plainly Mr. Forester has enjoyed his research on this occasion. The pity is that, for all his ease of imagination, he has neglected something of the inwardness of his storyteller's craft, and this to disappointing effect. . . The tangle of Baltic politics in 1812 is very nearly too much for Mr. Forester, and perhaps for that reason the naval and other occasions of the story, though they follow one another to methodical purpose, have a faintly inconsequent air about them."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p113 Mr 10 '45 1200w

"A new Hornblower book runs pretty closely to the established formula; but it is such a good formula, and all the Hornblower books furnish such excellent entertainment, that there is little left for the reviewer to say. Captain (now Commodore) Hornblower personifies the British Navy of the old days of sail, which is to say he personifies the British Empire at the heyday of its aggressive development. Little attempt is made at characterization, except in the case of the hero himself. . . Even his wife, the Lady Barbara, is barely touched on in the story; aside from the development of his character, the narrative is a tumult of action from beginning to end, a tumult of clear and logical and understandable action, which unfolds a consistent story and gives the book its substance and satisfaction. This is the formula, and it has produced as fine a series of seafaring tales as we have had for generations." Lincoln Colcord
+ Weekly Book Review p3 My 27 '45 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 41:68 Je '45

FORMAN, HARRISON. Report from red China. 250p il maps $3 Holt

951.042 China—Politics and government. Communism—China 45-2284

"The author, an American war correspondent, managed to extract a safe-conduct from Chiang Kai-shek to go into the Communist Shensi Province of northern China. Mr. Forman wanted to find out, among other things, whether certain Chungking authorities were right when they said that the territory was not really blockaded by the Central Government and that the Red armies were not fighting the Japanese. He reports that the Communists (who aren't really very orthodox ones) are capturing and killing Japs in satisfying numbers but are cut off from all outside help, including vital supplies sent by the United Nations." (New Yorker) Illustrated with photographs. Index.

"Mr. Forman tells what he has to tell straightforwardly, and what he has to say is on the whole convincing. The reporting is colorful; people come alive and walk across the pages, talking about strange and fascinating but always human and credible experiences. Mr. Forman is sometimes slapdash in his handling of ideas; but he has a wonderful feel for people and the things that happen to people. The land through which he travels is the never-never land of the deep loess, which no one who has been there ever forgets, the oldest land in China." Owen Lattimore
+ Atlantic 175:133 Ap '45 650w

" 'Report from Red China' is important for many reasons. It is the story of 90 million allies, written by an American reporter with no ax to grind. It is a significant bit of history in the making, and an invaluable handbook for understanding this morning's headlines. It is the first eyewitness report from blockaded Red China to correct the one-sided secondhand accounts of such books as Lin Yutang's 'Vigil of a Nation.' " Mark Gayn
+ Book Week p1 Mr 11 '45 1500w

Booklist 41:221 Ap 1 '45

"Harrison Forman is a reporter's reporter and has a reporter's capacity for making detail fascinating. He knows China intimately." G. C. Bartter
+ Boston Globe p21 Mr 21 '45 650w

Cath World 161:189 My '45 130w

"Mr. Forman gives straight answers to several pertinent questions often asked. He declares that the Chinese Communists fight the Japanese and do so most effectively. He himself went out and saw them do it. . . He worked hard in covering all possible points and discusses a wide variety of subjects, of course including an analysis of the whole Communist-Kuomintang position." Randall Gould
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 7 '45 650w

Reviewed by W. H. Melish
Churchman 159:19 Jl '45 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '45

Commonweal 41:594 Mr 30 '45 210w

Foreign Affairs 23:701 Jl '45 50w

"This is stimulating reading and revealing."
+ Kirkus 13:48 F 1 '45 260w

"Mr. Forman's interpretation of Communist China adds another dimension to the present blurred picture of the Chinese dilemma. This fact and its pertinence to the Pacific war warrants its purchase by libraries." E. P. Nichols
+ Library J 70:218 Mr 1 '45 110w

"A notable book that should be read by everyone interested in the dramatic developments now taking place in China." M. S. Stewart
+ Nation 160:338 Mr 24 '45 1050w

+ New Repub 112:364 Mr 12 '45 750w

"Harrison Forman's 'Report From Red China,' with its fresh, vivid and comprehensive account of the battle for life and freedom under China's partisans, is an extraordinarily timely book, and of considerable historic as well as contemporary value. The author has been an accredited foreign correspondent in China throughout most of the nation's eight-year ordeal. Writing against a long background of experience in Kuomintang China, his comparison of partisan leadership as he saw it working to mobilize the eighty to ninety million peasants liberated from Japanese control makes richly instructive reading which no intelligent American can afford to ignore." Edgar Snow
+ N Y Times p3 Mr 11 '45 2100w

"He tries to keep his reporting objective, but it isn't hard to see that he thinks there are some awful liars in the Central Government.

Illustrated with photographs taken on the spot by the author."

New Yorker 21:90 Mr 10 '45 140w

"Mr. Forman's book is the most important source work to come to us from China since Edgar Snow wrote his now-classic account of the Red Star over that tragic and tumultuous land. . . There can be no disputing the fact that 'Report from Red China' is pro-Chinese Communist. That, however, is not because it is a political tract. It is merely because it is straight and honest reporting and the facts it reports make it sympathetic to the men and women of Yenan." Richard Watts

+ Sat R of Lit 28:9 Mr 10 '45 2250w

Reviewed by Frederick Rein

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 1 '45 650w

Reviewed by Bruno Lasker

Survey G 34:132 Ap '45 400w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:26 Je '45 240w

"The strongest criticism which can be made of the book is that it has a fault quite common in writing on China. Like other authors Mr. Forman has developed such an enthusiasm for one faction in the country that he has not only told what he saw and heard but has accepted as fact, on some issues, what appears to be no more than propaganda. . . Mr. Forman's report, however, only occasionally lapses into propaganda. When the writer tells of a military expedition in which he took part himself he gives an accurate picture of what the Red troops are doing. . . On the whole his book is one of high merit." Floyd Taylor

+ — Weekly Book Review p2 Mr 18 '45 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 41:53 My '45

FORRESTER, GERTRUDE. Methods of vocational guidance; with specific helps for the teacher of business subjects. 460p il $3 Heath

371.425 Vocational guidance 44-6319

"Miss Forrester, director of vocational guidance and head of the business department of the West Bend public schools, has prepared this book for the use of teachers in high schools where no regular guidance counselor is employed. In the treatment of the subject, a bird's-eye view of the business world is first provided. Methods of directing the pupil in making a choice are next presented, followed by a section on Grooming pupils for jobs, and one on Coordinating vocational guidance and business education. A wealth of material in the way of suggested assignments, radio skits, other types of programs, displays and exhibits, personal reading lists, etc., make it a book of practical value for any worker in this field and a good reference work on the subject for a public library." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Library J 70:118 F 1 '45 70w

School & Society 60:64 Jl 22 '44 60w

"It is decidedly inadequate to think of this volume merely in terms of its possibilities for the social studies teacher. Its great value lies in its important contribution to the vocational guidance movement. As a tool for the guidance counselor it not only reviews in a fresh light many of the standard practices and procedures in vocational guidance, but it introduces new material based on the radio and motion pictures as well as fiction and poetry. This volume is decidedly worthwhile for the social studies teacher with a guidance point of view." Alexander Breinan

+ Social Educ 9:191 Ap '45 400w

Wis Lib Bul 41:16 Ja '45

FORTUNE, CHARLTON. Notes on art for Catholics, based on the coll. of the William Rothhill Nelson gallery of art, Kansas City, Missouri. 54p il $1.25; pa $1 St Anthony guild

704.9482 Art—Kansas City, Missouri. Christian art and symbolism 45-1834

"Concerned with 'only special works which illustrate certain problems confronting us today in most of our Catholic churches,' this small book presents well selected works of sculpture, painting, stained-glass, tapestry, wrought iron and altar furniture in the Nelson Gallery, with accompanying illustrations that are highly satisfactory. The booklet is admittedly written as a guide for that terrifying individual who 'doesn't know much about art, but knows what he likes.'" Cath World

Reviewed by E. B. Kron

+ Cath World 160:475 F '45 350w

"Anyone given to writing on art knows how difficult it is to do what Charlton Fortune has accomplished so successfully in this book. Few people wilfully seek to be obscure in writing, but art, like most technical subjects, has many words usual to it that are meaningless to the uninitiated. The author has succeeded in eliminating these from her text, to a large extent, and the book is notable for its information on how to view art, and not its literary clarity. It is extremely well written and this versatile artist and author is to be congratulated on doing a much needed job and in a happy manner." Barry Byrne

+ Commonweal 41:500 Mr 2 '45 330w

FOSTER, MULFORD M., and FOSTER, RACINE SARASY. Brazil. 314p il $3.50 Cattell

918.1 Brazil—Description and travel. Botany—Brazil 45-10201

"This is the narrative of two trips to Brazil undertaken for the study and collection of air plants, especially bromeliads. It is beautifully illustrated with many interesting photographs and pen-and-ink sketches. Its authors are enthusiastic botanists with a real flair for descriptive writing and it provides much up-to-date information about many localities to which the casual tourist would never go. Interspersed with the record of the journeys are many data concerning the plants with which the travelers were primarily concerned." Scientific Bk Club R

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '45

Scientific Bk Club R 16:4 O '45 320w

Reviewed by H. W. Marr

Springf'd Republican p4d D 23 '45 480w

FOSTER, ROBERT GEIB. Marriage and family relationships. 314p il $2.50 Macmillan

173.1 Marriage. Family 44-7305

"The contents of the book cover the life and development of the individual through childhood, adolescence, courtship, and marriage, with a discussion of the coming of children and the relation of the family to our democratic society. There are chapters on: Personality Factors, Sex as a Factor in Family Life, Parents and In-Law Relationships, Money, Managing the Home, and Home Relationships." Social Forces

Reviewed by J. B. Pinney

Am J Pub Health 35:652 Je '45 410w

"On the 'advice' level the book will undoubtedly meet the needs of persons whose problems are highly superficial. It still leaves untouched those problems requiring an explanation of human behavior in terms of scientific principles. It contributes little to further understanding and control of marriage and family relationships, and hardly fortifies the student with an understanding of problems of ever increasing complexity in a post-war world. If, as many students of the family believe, education for marriage should begin long before college, then this book might have a place in such an educational scheme." H. R. Mowrer

— + Social Forces 24:250 D '45 330w

FOSTER, STEPHEN COLLINS. Songs for boys and girls; selected and ed. by Ella Herbert Bartlett; specially arranged and simplified for young people by Mario Agnolucci; il. by Stephen J. Voorhies. (Whittlesey house publication) 47p $2 McGraw

784 Children's songs 45-10391

Fourteen of Stephen Foster's songs selected and simplified for young musicians. Contents: Camptown races; Fairy-Belle; Some folks; Oh! there's no such girl as mine!; Slumber my darling; What must a fairy's dream be?; Happy hours at home; Oh! Susanna; Nelly Bly; Ring, ring de banjo!; Jeanie with the light brown hair; Old folks at home; My old Kentucky home, good night; Old dog Tray.

FOSTER, S. C.—Continued

Booklist 42:151 Ja 1 '46

Kirkus 13:518 N 15 '45 100w

"Recommended for large music collections." E. M. Gordon

+ Library J 70:1190 D 15 '45 40w

"The accompaniments by Mario Agnolucci, printed in large clear notes, are easy enough for the budding pianist to play as well as sing, and the pages are enhanced further by attractive, well-drawn marginal decorations by Stephen J. Voorhies. . . Just as any picture is prettier in a frame, so will these songs, discovered in this attractive format, mean more to a child than stumbling on them casually." V. P.

+ Springf'd Republican p4 D 1 '45 180w

"The music has been carefully simplified for small hands by Mario Agnolucci, and, all in all, I don't know where you'd get more melody for the money, or in a prettier dress."

+ Weekly Book Review p36 N 11 '45 270w

FOX, WILLIAM THORNTON RICKERT. The super-powers; the United States, Britain, and the Soviet Union; their responsibility for peace. 184p $2 Harcourt

940.53144 Reconstruction (1939-). World politics. International cooperation 44-6449

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Dr. Fox's muscular prose and tight reasoning present the most convincing arguments for the Grand Design of great-power collaboration which thus far have appeared in print. . . This book should be read by whosoever seeks for ammunition to use against perfectionists who would rather have no settlement at all than one based on compromise." Robert Strausz-Hupé

+ Ann Am Acad 238:204 Mr '45 550w

Bookmark 5:11 N '44

"This book is an important one for two reasons: first, because of the type it represents and, second, because of its excellence within this type." H. J. Morgenthau

+ Ethics 55:227 Ap '45 500w

Reviewed by A. F. Whyte

Pacific Affairs 18:285 S '45 1650w

Reviewed by Quincy Wright

Yale R n s 34:553 spring '45. 1700w

FRAENKEL, ERNST. Military occupation and the rule of law; occupation government in the Rhineland, 1918-1923. 267p $3.50 Oxford

341.3 Germany—History—Allied occupation, 1918-1930. Military occupation 44-47946

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Dr. Fraenkel's useful study emphasizes governmental institutions. Within this area he has done a thorough job." R. H. Gabriel

+ Am Hist R 51:116 O '45 550w

Reviewed by Reinhard Bendix

Am J Soc 51:169 S '45 650w

"This timely and interesting discussion of certain aspects of occupational government in the Rhineland from 1918 to 1923, by the author of that valuable study of contemporary Germany, The Dual State, is organized about a central problem which is of the most intense interest today: whether the rule of law controls, or should control, a government of military occupation. . . A brilliant style, and a power of ordering and clarifying complex ideas by means of a single sparkling sentence, add to the reader's pleasure. The book as a whole is a valuable aid in sound thinking upon a subject where thought is indispensable, unless the mistakes of the past are to return like ghosts to haunt the future." M. E. Oatman

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:174 F '45 850w

Reviewed by F. R. Yoder

Am Soc R 10:810 D '45 280w

"In Dr. Fraenkel's study we have not only as philosophic and penetrating an analysis of the aspirations, plans, and failures of the occupying powers as has yet come to this reviewer's notice, but a source and reference book which will be invaluable for the problems that lie ahead of us." F. G. Munson

+ Ann Am Acad 239:192 My '45 650w

Foreign Affairs 23:339 Ja '45 20w

"Here is an outstanding contribution to the growing literature on military government. While primarily concerned with the analysis of Allied experience in the Rhineland, the treatment justifies its title because it studies this experience within the broader framework of the questions which confront military government at the present time. . . Dr. Fraenkel's contribution is a substantial one. He has given us the most searching analysis of the problems allied occupation of the Rhineland faced after the last war. He has provided us with a much deeper perspective than the Hunt Report, General Allen or anyone else ever did. He has linked this analysis to the problems we are facing as we enter upon the military occupation of Germany in this war. He has brought the skill of the trained lawyer to the task of disentangling the many involved issues in reestablishing some kind of 'government according to law' in place of the arbitrary rule of the Hitler regime. His book will, one hopes, not only be read, but used in the trying period ahead of us." C. J. Friedrich

+ Harvard Law R 58:464 F '45 2000w

"Dr. Fraenkel's aims are admirable even if some may fear that the conclusions he has drawn in this instance will be disregarded. Yet tribute must be paid to his zeal to re-establish the rule of law everywhere, at all times, in any circumstances. It is this underlying faith in the law, in justice, which makes his book attractive and important, even when there may be disagreement with his views."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p86 F 24 '45 1150w

"This is a meticulous analysis of the successes and failures of the Allied military occupation of the Rhineland during the first four years when Americans shared responsibility with British, French and Belgians. It is based on a thorough examination of all available material."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:32 Mr '45 200w

FRANCIS, DEVON EARL. Aviation: what everyone should know. 229p il $2.50 Bobbs

629.13 Aeronautics 45-9859

Outline of essential information for the general reader, by a licensed aviator who is now on the staff of Popular Science Monthly. He describes basic training from the very beginning to the most complicated maneuvers; describes the parts of the plane itself; and the principles of flying. Glossary, bibliography, index.

"Parts of the book necessarily cover pretty much the same material that can be found in any one of half a dozen other texts for beginning fliers, but its presentation of the all-over picture of aviation is outstanding." G. A. Scheuer

+ Book Week p18 N 18 '45 160w

Kirkus 13:353 Ag 15 '45 130w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:56 Ja 1 '46 70w

"Whether or not you are ambitious to' pilot a plane yourself, you will find in this volume a lot of information that you most certainly should know."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 O '45 210w

Reviewed by James Stokley

Weekly Book Review p12 Ja 6 '46 70w

FRANK, ERICH. Philosophical understanding and religious truth [tr. by Professor and Mrs Ludwig Edelstein]. 209p $2.50 Oxford

201 Philosophy and religion 45-1882

"The author is a distinguished scholar who has an international reputation as a historian and philosopher. Before 1939 he was professor of philosophy at the University of Marburg. He has written extensively on many subjects and is probably known most widely through his important book on Plato and the Pythagoreans. In the present volume Dr. Frank writes on a difficult subject. He wants to make clear the place and significance of religious truth and to do so in a manner which will be meaningful to the modern man who is accustomed to think in terms of contemporary science and philosophy. The particular topics with which he deals include such themes as 'The Existence of God,' 'Creation and Time' and 'History and Destiny.' Each is presented against a background of rich historical scholarship which enables the author to illuminate his problem with some of the most profound insight of Greek and medieval philosophy." Christian Century

---

"In one of Francis Bacon's essays we are told, 'Some books are to be tasted, others to be swallowed, and some few to be chewed and digested.' Dr. Frank's book is one of those that need to be chewed and digested. It is not an easy book to read but it is a good one and it will richly compensate anyone who is willing to give the time and thought necessary for understanding its contents." C. H. Patterson

+ Christian Century 62:551 My 2 '45 700w

"Fortified with voluminous references, these popularly written lectures given originally at Bryn Mawr should help the educated layman to understand a different approach to the distinctions between scientific and religious truth. . . Here is an attempt at enduring marriage between faith and reason." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 159:16 My 1 '45 180w

Reviewed by F. D. Bolman

J Philos 43:19 Ja 3 '46 1200w

"A book for close and careful study."

+ Kirkus 13:131 Mr 15 '45 170w

"Mr. Frank's is a substantial, scholarly and honest book, a clear statement of a position which does not always express itself clearly or without artful pathos: that of the 'existential' Christian. While reading, one has the impression of sharing in a sincere and serious interior debate." Nicola Chiaromonte

+ — New Repub 113:376 S 24 '45 1750w

"There is nothing essentially new in this work. Its value lies in its excellence as a restatement of a long and important tradition. The work contains many footnotes which give evidence of much reading and thought, and which might better have appeared in the text. As it is, the reader is offered the disjunction of footnotes separated from the text and gathered at the end of each chapter."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:9 Je '45 200w

FRANK, GEROLD, and HORAN, JAMES DAVID. U.S.S. Seawolf; submarine raider of the Pacific [as told by] J. M. Eckberg. 197p $2.75 Putnam

940.545 Seawolf (submarine). World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations—Submarine. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 45-7140

Story of the United States submarine Seawolf, sister to the ill-fated Squalus. Joseph M. Eckberg, the chief radioman of the Seawolf on her missions under Lieutenant Commander Frederick Warder, told this story to the authors. It describes a year spent in the Pacific sealanes, early in the course of the second World war, when the Seawolf caused much destruction among the Japanese ships.

"Eckberg was an excellent choice by the two newspapermen who did the actual writing of the book, for he observed happenings both inside and outside the submarine as he toiled at his job of radio operator and sound-detection officer. The reader shares to the full the nerve-strumming excitement of the chase and the kill and understands the tension of the crew as they hide out far below the surface, in grim silence, while depth charges from enemy destroyers explode around them." W. F. Morse

+ Book Week p2 Ag 19 '45 270w

Booklist 42:12 S '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '45

"Another of those plainly and simply written accounts of war that are worth reading." Saul Levitt

+ N Y Times p18 O 14 '45 600w

New Yorker 21:67 Ag 18 '45 70w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 28:26 N 24 '45 450w

"Frank and Horan turned out a readable, exciting and personal version of the adventures of the Seawolf in early days in Philippine waters. The 'Wolf,' as she was dubbed, played many improvised roles in those emergency days with the skill of the quick-change artist, and this bizarre character of undersea duty enlivens the story." G. W. Bragdon

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 14 '45 390w

"Mr. Eckberg's story, as told by the newspaper men, traces the career of the U. S. S. Seawolf from her birth in Portsmouth Navy Yard, two years before the war, through her highly successful adventures in the Pacific in the early war years. The story is told in intimate, chatty fashion, so that you almost feel that you've been aboard the ship yourself—except that you don't really get to know any of your shipmates." Marcus Duffield

+ Weekly Book Review p8 S 9 '45 600w

FRANK, JEROME. Fate and freedom; a philosophy for free Americans. 375p $3 Simon & Schuster

901 History—Philosophy. History—Historiography. Free will and determinism. U.S.—Civilization 45-4520

"Judge Frank deals here with the age-old conflict between determinism and free will and the effect of these opposing ideas on the political and social destiny of America. He concludes with the expression of a dynamic social religion, the cornerstone of which is that Americans are free to choose the future of their society. He supports his social philosophy with an interesting review and analysis of political ideals throughout the ages." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Booklist 42:12 S '45

Current Hist 9:326 O '45 70w

J Philos 42:722 D 20 '45 480w

Kirkus 13:212 My 15 '45 150w

"This book is a book to be read for both instruction and enjoyment, even if the central thesis cannot be accepted unqualifiedly." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ — Nation 161:40 Jl 14 '45 2000w

"Jerome Frank has written a grand book. When we dare to do the things which will make untrue the line, the poor you have with you always, he will have written a classic." Walton Hamilton

+ New Repub 113:137 Jl 30 '45 1450w

" 'Fate and Freedom' seems to have been written because the times call for a firm restatement of the American preference for liberty of choice. The product of a learned, cultivated and muscular intellect, it is a first-rate philosophical book for the layman, and will interest anyone who has ever pondered the problem of destiny versus freedom." Richard Hofstadter

+ N Y Times p5 Jl 8 '45 1050w

"Mr. Frank, who has a fine talent for polemics, defends his position with wit, imagination, and considerable good sense. He is not going to convince anyone who belongs to one of the determinist schools, and his book is certain to give orthodox Marxists a bad case of fits, but less opinionated readers (if they don't mind some heavy going now and then) should find it rather profitable, and encouraging, too."

+ — New Yorker 21:78 Je 9 '45 160w

"Personally I think that Judge Frank has started a good church, and he can count on me to sit in a front pew and listen to his sermons with interest and admiration. I doubt, however, if I can ever become a Bishop. I am unable to attack heresies against Judge Frank's religion with the vigor and vim which he requires. . . Another reason I must sit in the pew rather than with the vestry is that I do not like Judge Frank's economic heaven. . .

FRANK, JEROME—Continued
But these dissents are only additional evidence of the stimulating character of Judge Frank's book. A philosopher who does not make his fellow philosophers mad is only a second-rate pedant." T. W. Arnold

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:10 Je 23 '45 1000w

" 'Fate and Freedom' is an interesting book. It will be a widely read and profitable book. While this reviewer would question many of the author's theories, and while he finds no sense in the back-handed blessing given Roman Catholicism in the last chapter, he nevertheless commends it as a stimulating and valuable contribution to the understanding of our times." C. D. Kean

+ — Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 15 '45 950w

"Although skeptical of history as a means for predicting the future, the author has here traced to their historical roots the concepts which have as their fruit the current subservience to authority and tyranny of the omnipotent state. In doing this Mr. Frank ploughs through the dismal swamps of Hegelian metaphysics and Marxian dialectics, but the book as a whole is both stimulating and provocative. The range of subject matter is wide, and the composition has obviously entailed an enormous amount of reading."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:37 D '45 280w

"Mr. Frank relies on the specialists for his information, but his own comments are lively and penetrating. This is not a book of any special originality or profundity, but it is the product of a civilized mind, and non-professional readers with a similar interest in speculative thought and similar dislike for any kind of dogmatism will find it stimulating and suggestive. Mr. Frank obviously enjoyed writing it, and he communicates his enjoyment to his audience." H. B. Parkes

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Je 24 '45 1000w

FRANKEL, HERMANN FERDINAND. Ovid; a poet between two worlds. 282p $2.50 Univ. of Calif.

871.2 Ovid (Publius Ovidius Naso) A45-3905

"This book tells the story of Ovid's life and work, from the exuberance of his youth, through the mature grace of the Art of Love and the Metamorphoses, to the pathetic complaints of the exiled outcast. It traces the changes in the poet's attitude from stage to stage; it analyzes selected passages and assays their significance; it brings out the characteristics of Ovid's wonderful art; and it sketches the historical background against which the author and his verse are to be seen. The book is studded with hundreds of passages in translation. . . Many of the subjects touched on are further discussed and documented in the ample notes at the end of the volume." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Prof. Frankel's book is admirable as an aid in knowing and appreciating Ovid, whether one is an advanced student of the classics or the rankest amateur in this field of reading. Rarely have I seen so much scholarship so wisely used. There are many notes, but they are exiled to the back of the volume—and yet are made easy to find. Throughout, the discussion of Ovid's life and of the text of his works is friendly, unassuming and direct, marked by the humor and the sensitiveness appropriate for the subject." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Ag 26 '45 600w

"This is a scholar's book, carefully thought out and thoroughly documented—there are 110 pages of notes to supplement 162 pages of text—and as such it is neither intended for nor will it reach the general public. But within its self-imposed limitation it is enlightened, understanding and to a large extent convincing." T. C. Chubb

+ N Y Times p14 S 2 '45 250w

"It appears difficult for a scholar of the erudition of Professor Fränkel to bear in mind to what class of readers he directs his addresses, and in this book we have lengthy and minute discussions of textual problems as well as matter which suggests an audience with no Latin at all. . . If the author then in his turn ranges uncertainly between two worlds, he supplies much which will be useful and enlightening to them both. To the student of Ovid's text he brings, for example, conjectures and emendations; to the rest biography and criticism."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p400 Ag 25 '45 420w

"Professor Fränkel's analysis brings out well the narrative skill with which this summing up of the myths of the Greek world is done. The problem of Ovid's banishment is sensibly treated, and his last sad years in Tomis made vivid through quotation from his letters."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:5 S '45 240w

FRANKENSTEIN, ERNST. Justice for my people. 208p $2.50 Dial press [8s 6d Nicholson]

296 Jews—Political and social conditions. Zionism 45-426

"A German-Swedish refugee, a specialist in international law, now living in London, analyzes briefly and clearly the Jewish problem both in historical perspective and in its present-day tragic manifestations. The case for the Jewish claim to the Palestine homeland is ably presented, without failing to consider Arab and British interests there. Documents concerning the Palestine mandate comprise the appendix." Booklist

Reviewed by Alfred Fernbach
Am Pol Sci R 39:1238 D '45 390w

Ann Am Acad 241:174 S '45 200w

Reviewed by Carl Grabo
Book Week p4 F 18 '45 460w

Booklist 41:163 F 1 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '45

"This excellent treatise is somewhat marred by a note of pretentiousness." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ — Nation 160:701 Je 23 '45 220w

Reviewed by M. R. Konvitz
Sat R of Lit 28:17 D 29 '45 800w

"Mr. Frankenstein is a lawyer of international reputation as well as a specialist in international law. His chapter on the legal position of Palestine is, I believe, unassailable as logic but it is more than that: it is a brilliant piece of reasoning which was needed by all sincere pro-Zionists. It gives his succeeding chapters on the moral and political phases of Palestine a fresh and a solid meaning." E. C. Lindeman

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 28 '45 800w

FRANKLIN, BENJAMIN. Autobiographical writings; selected and edited by Carl Van Doren. 810p $5 Viking

B or 92 45-9128

"Here, in what we may consider a companion work to his earlier [biography of Franklin], Mr. Van Doren has collated almost everything Franklin wrote that reports on his experience, including the 'Autobiography' itself and many letters and other papers. The greater part of the material is out of print; it also includes fifty items not to be found in the collected editions of Franklin's writings and fifty more which, but for a few excerpts, have never been printed anywhere." N Y Times

Reviewed by Walter Johnson
Book Week p3 N 4 '45 550w

Booklist 42:127 D 15 '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 D 29 '45 330w

Reviewed by W. F. Sands
Commonweal 43:98 N 9 '45 550w

Kirkus 13:357 Ag 15 '45 130w

"Some of his selections are familiar; others are published for the first time. The whole makes a bulky volume which can be warmly recommended either for consecutive reading or for dipping into at odd moments." K. H.

+ Nation 162:83 Ja 19 '46 140w

"This is more than a book; it is a library. It contains perhaps a heavier dose of Franklin than the general reader will swallow in a gulp, but it is a browsing piece that he can turn to many times. From it, Mr. Van Doren rightfully claims, 'Franklin emerges as a man seen in so many flashes of reality that the total impression seems to be the full truth about him as a visible, audible human being.'" Richard Hofstadter

+ N Y Times p4 O 21 '45 1700w

"Mr. Van Doren's voluminous project again affirms the well-established fact that Franklin was one of the most versatile of men and a very engaging one as well. It's more than possible, however, that Mr. Van Doren, carried away by his ambition to provide us with a complete Franklin, has included many pieces as intrinsically dull as they are intrinsically valuable. Poor Richard addicts, though, will probably not mind."

+ — New Yorker 21:107 N 3 '45 110w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

Springf'd Republican p4d D 9 '45 180w

FRANKLIN, BENJAMIN. A Benjamin Franklin reader; ed. by Nathan G. Goodman; original drawings by Fritz Kredel; text il. by Rafael D. Palacios. 818p $3.50 Crowell

818 45-10550

Excerpts from the letters, essays, autobiography, and other papers of Benjamin Franklin. They are arranged under the following headings: Franklin's life; Religious beliefs; Editor and publisher; Promoter of the general welfare; Practical scientist: experiments and observations; Colonial agent in London; American minister to France; Essayist and humorist; The family circle. Index.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p1 D 16 '45 1650w

Booklist 42:160 Ja 15 '46

Christian Century 63:81 Ja 16 '46 420w

Christian Science Monitor p14 D 29 '45 50w

"It is a good bargain, and contains many fascinating excerpts, especially from Franklin's correspondence. It is full of nuggets easily to be mined." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 43:293 D 28 '45 30w

"While this will be useful for reference, for reading I prefer [the Van Doren—Benjamin Franklin's Autobiographical Writings]."

— + Kirkus 13:414 S 15 '45 170w

FRASER, LINDLEY MACNAGHTEN. Germany between two wars; a study of propaganda and war-guilt. 184p $2.50 (8s 6d) Oxford

943.085 Propaganda, German. Germany—History. World war, 1939—Propaganda 45-1499

"The origin of Mr. Lindley Fraser's book goes back to broadcasts delivered by him as German news commentator for the B.B.C. at the end of 1941. In a preface the author states that it is known that the broadcasts were listened to in Germany and that 'our arguments had some efficacy in shaking our listeners on the fundamental issue of war-guilt.' The book, in its final form, has naturally been much expanded and revised, but the essence remains; and it will be acknowledged as a factual answer to the elaborate myth by which German propagandists explained away the defeat in the last war and disguised the causes of this one. Mr. Fraser covers old ground in many respects, but with new force and impressive cogency. German sources are drawn on as well as allied." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Index.

Reviewed by William Ebenstein

Am Pol Sci R 39:1221 D '45 1000w

Book Week p2 F 11 '45 300w

Booklist 41:319 Jl 1 '45

"The record Prof. Fraser spreads seems to be all right, and doubtless documented to the hilt. But it is all old stuff, so far as this reader can see. It isn't news any more that the Nazis used a whole bagful of tricks and a whole hatful of lies, and got away with it. The world seems now to be organizing to prevent their getting a chance to do it again. Prof. Fraser seems to think we need to be reminded. I thought everybody knew." L. M. L.

Boston Globe p13 F 14 '45 270w

Christian Science Monitor p14 F 7 '45 450w

Foreign Affairs 23:518 Ap '45 50w

"The broadcast talks in German from which this book is expanded were no doubt good talks. As a book intended to be distributed soon in Germany, it has the defects of all reprinted talks: it is cool, easy, superficial. All it proves, at bottom, is that Germany was intent on destroying the status quo and that is not a serious crime in German eyes. Its weakness is its assumption that the Germans had to be argued into supporting Hitler. . . This is a clever book, a well-argued book, but it is entirely negative." A. J. P. T.

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 D 29 '44 200w

Reviewed by Joseph Bornstein

Nation 160:226 F 24 '45 350w

"The one problem Mr. Lindley Fraser does not face is the relation between the German spiritual crisis and that of Europe in general, and the means by which the understandable sense of humiliation in defeat may be sublimated. But as a simple, effective exposure of the political and economic legends which German propaganda created, and then exploited, with diabolical skill, the book is of great value, and comes at precisely the right moment." John Stapelton

+ — Spec 173:601 D 29 '44 500w

"Anyone who fears that this book will persuade him to sympathize with the Germans can relax. Its author is not concerned with sympathy; he is absorbed in making blunt truth so clear and obvious that it will impress itself on the benumbed and lamed German mentality. This compactly written volume represents a noble effort to combat 11 years of the cleverest and most dishonest propaganda the world has ever seen." Margaret Woodbridge

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 15 '45 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p602 D 16 '44 600w

"Mr. Fraser's careful, lucid and objective inquiry is not only timely but important." H. S. Commager

+ Weekly Book Review p3 F 11 '45 1700w

Reviewed by Sigmund Neumann

Yale R n s 34:737 summer '45 650w

FREBERG, CARL ROGER, and KEMLER, EMORY NEUDECK. Aircraft vibration and flutter. 214p $3 Wiley

629.13236 Vibration (aeronautics) 45-593

"The general field of vibration analysis has expanded so rapidly that it is not practical to treat the entire field in any single elementary textbook. This book attempts to cover only the more elementary and general phases of vibration and flutter as applied to the airplane structure and its parts. Emphasis has been placed on the solution of problems. The methods described can be applied by an engineer without the background of advanced mathematics. The theory has been given secondary consideration, and physical interpretation and application have been emphasized. . . The first part of the book is concerned with the application of general principles to simple airplane vibration problems. . . Those interested in the more advanced phases of the subject or in the theory have been referred in the text to the many excellent papers on the subject. Those wishing a better background on the elementary principles of mechanical vibrations are referred to the authors' earlier book, Elements of Mechanical Vibrations [Book Review Digest, 1943]." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 41:233 Ap 15 '45

Library J 69:1047 D 1 '44 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:4 Ja '45

FREEMAN, DON. It shouldn't happen—. [206p] $2 Harcourt

741.5 Humor, Pictorial. World war, 1939—Humor, caricatures, etc. 45-7182

Pictures and text describe Private Bedlington who lived a dog's life in training camp, and finally turned into a dog. Things happened to him on furlough, so he enlisted in the K-9 corps. And then one day the inevitable happened—he turned back into Private Bedlington.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 Jl 22 '45 260w

Christian Century 62:887 Ag 1 '45 80w

Kirkus 13:284 Jl 1 '45 110w

"'It Shouldn't Happen' is race propaganda, and not just propaganda for racial justice. It is propaganda calculated to encourage bitterness and hatred—which is another thing altogether. Indeed, the final pages of Mr. Freeman's pictorial tract seem to suggest that justice is best achieved by violence. Since both white and black are also going to continue to live side by side in the post-war era, I don't believe this is much of a solution—rather, quite the reverse." P. E.
— N Y Times p24 Ag 26 '45 150w

"Pvt. Bedlington's adventures with the lower aspects of metempsychosis, which in his case seemed to have become entangled with teleportation, are described by artist Don Freeman in a series of illustrations which tug at the heartstrings and attempt sabotage on the tear ducts. Only a happy ending, in which Albert finds himself miraculously restored to a place in the ranks of humanity, saves the book from being a dark, grim tragedy, stark as the English moors and as unrelieved as the August heat." Thomas Sugrue
Sat R of Lit 28:16 Jl 28 '45 340w

"The picture-story affords relaxation and has a charm that will make you want to scan it again whenever you come across it." Joseph English
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 15 '45 180w

Weekly Book Review p10 Ag 12 '45 130w

FREEMAN, DOUGLAS SOUTHALL. Lee's lieutenants; a study in command; v. 3, Gettysburg to Appomattox. 862p il maps $5 Scribner

973.7 U.S.—History—Civil war. Confederate states of America—Biography (42-24582)

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"The book is not a history of the Army of Northern Virginia and does not purport to be. It touches only incidentally upon the problems of supply and logistics—that would be another book, which awaits the doing—and its treatment of strategy and tactics is only such as is necessary to bring out the facts as to leadership and command. It is a book, nevertheless, which will be read by students of warfare for the insight which it gives into the workings of military command in the hands of one of history's great soldiers. But it will be read by the far larger number who are neither students of warfare in general nor of this war in particular, because of its parade of personalities. After all, it is not continuing interest in the political theories of the Grecian states nor in the battle tactics of their internecine struggles which causes men still to read Thucydides but rather his exposition of the eternal verities of human nature in time of war." R. S. Henry
+ Am Hist R 50:562 Ap '45 1600w

Bookmark 6:12 Ja '45

"In this large volume Mr. Freeman completes his famous trilogy on the epic struggle waged by Lee and his able lieutenants for the freedom of the South. It is a tale that has been told innumerable times, but in these moving pages it takes on new depth and meaning. There is no rancor in this narrative; no thesis to sustain, no particular viewpoint to defend. The dramatic story of Gettysburg is recounted with great detail, and all the old questions that have long clamored for answers are discussed with a penetrating insight that will satisfy most readers." C. C. Tansill
+ Cath World 160:471 F '45 500w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:24 Mr '45 240w

FRENCH, HERBERT ELIOT. My Yankee Paris; with il. by Anatole Kovarsky. 260p $2.50 Vanguard

940.5344 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939-1945—France—Paris. Paris—Social life and customs 45-10408

A lieutenant in the quartermaster corps of the United States army writes of his experiences in Normandy and later in Paris. He did not see combat, and on the whole his existence was comfortable. His reminiscences are filled with stories of the French civilians and his contacts with them.

Book Week p4 D 30 '45 110w

Booklist 42:161 Ja 15 '46

"A gay, light-hearted book, effortless, leisurely humor, with occasional lagging spots."
+ — Kirkus 13:360 Ag 15 '45 170w

"Mr. French is under no illusions about his personal importance as a soldier. What he tells you, with grace, humor and skill, is that he had a fairly good time of it. He was interested in people, and he fortunately had the sophistication, insight and time to acquire a more complete appreciation of the people of France than was possible for the men at the front." Saul Levitt
+ N Y Times p41 D 2 '45 270w

"According to all the rules for war reminiscences, this book should never have been written. The author was an officer. He ate well and slept in beds. He . . . never saw, or even heard, combat. Nevertheless, he has produced an entertaining, appealing work. Despite the title, a good part of the contents is devoted to Normandy and the early days of the invasion. The illustrations by Anatole Kovarsky are an accurate accounting of the gayer side of G.I. life in Paris."
+ New Yorker 21:67 D 29 '45 120w

FREUND, PHILIP. Three exotic tales. 239p $2.50 Pilgrim house

45-6155

"[This] is the second collection of short stories which Philip Freund has published within the last year. Like those in the book called 'The Young Greek and the Creole,' these later stories also draw upon far climates and strange personalities for their dramatic effect and upon the bizarre for their somewhat bloodless but smoothly contrived irony." (Weekly Book Review) Contents: Solano; The fiery lake; The demon cloud.

Reviewed by R. J. Bender
Book Week p10 Jl 22 '45 430w

"These stories suggest Somerset Maugham with a dash of Conrad. Synthetic or not, they have readability, sustained interest, convincing tropical backgrounds, excellent character studies (most of the characters are very odd indeed) and a neat irony. Likely to be a college browsing room favorite." E. F. Walbridge
+— Library J 70:635 Jl '45 80w

"Mr. Freund has a rare natural gift for fiction, a competent technique and the welcome habit of describing people warmly and directly, from the heart and senses. But with all these gifts, his stories often fail; they seem encumbered, rather than enriched, by too many big meanings and badly defined moral problems. Out of these three tales we remember best the fantastic comedy in mid-ocean: escaped lioness on shipboard. But we are so little affected by its 'meaning'—the spiritual havoc produced among the passengers—that the story remains in midocean and never lands on any real shore either of events or of poetry." Marjorie Farber
+ — N Y Times p4 Ag 12 '45 700w

"At his best, or even at his second best, Mr. Freund is a serious and penetrating writer."
+ New Yorker 21:69 Jl 28 '45 110w

"Philip Freund's talent as writer is highly selective and his appeal is to a narrowing audience, yet within the circle of his admirers he satisfies. . . These stories from Mr. Freund's pen bear no relation to trends in modern story writing, and he is apparently oblivious of the stark objectivity of the modern school, and sees a story subjectively, as an experience, an emotion, an association that reacts upon life and which must be reproduced in prose of a perfection which rivals the fine line of a gem engraver." L. S. Munn
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 12 '45 500w

Reviewed by Virgilia Sapieha
Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 15 '45 650w

FREYRE, GILBERTO. Brazil; an interpretation. 179p $2 Knopf

918.1 Brazil. Brazilian literature 45-7052

"This small volume, made up of lectures given in 1944 at Indiana University . . . constitutes an excellent synthesis of the main ideas and conceptions to the dissemination of which in Brazil the author's work has contributed so much through lectures, articles and his various books published in that country, beginning with the famous 'Casa Grande & Senzala,' of 1933, the most influential of all. Gilberto Freyre stresses the rôle of the three ethnical elements which have contributed to the formation of the Brazilian racial amalgam: the Portuguese, the Negro and the Indian. And it is precisely the ethnic element, the theory of fusionism, and particularly the emphasis placed on the Negro's contribution, which figure among the concepts most affected by Mr. Freyre's fresh ideas. The rôle of the mestizo, his struggle for social adjustment, the stressing of the value of the common people and of regional energies, the defense of regionalism, the interpretation of the old Northeastern civilization based on aristocracy, sugar plantations and slavery; these and other themes, which are central in present-day Brazilian historiography, owe to Mr. Freyre a good deal of interpretative light." (Commonweal) Index.

"Freyre's book is extremely informative and revealing, and it is fascinatingly written." Angel Flores
+ Book Week p10 Ag 26 '45 500w
Booklist 42:15 S '45
Bookmark 6:12 N '45
Christian Science Monitor p14 O 2 '45 480w
Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '45

"Although one of the most enlightened and passionate pioneers of social history in Brazil, Mr. Freyre does not, on the other hand, escape certain exaggerations in his social interpretation of Brazilian history and life. In his work one finds a tendency to reduce all historical interpretation to social terms. If the social aspect is an integral part of national reality, it is not, however, the whole, nor can one explain the life of a people from a purely social angle. It is quite licit for contemporary historians to show an interest in, as Unamuno put it, 'getting out of ministerial offices,' opening wide windows upon the life of the whole people—in the fields, the factories, the streets. But it is not licit for them to interpret the whole life of a nation through the social prism, to explain national life in social terms." Afranio Coutinho
+ — Commonweal 42:529 S 14 750w

"Can be firmly recommended as a mature discussion, from the viewpoint of a somewhat eclectic sociology, of the main cultural forces in Brazilian life." Ralph Bates
+ Nation 161:342 O 6 '45 550w

"Of all the books that have been written from and about South American countries in the last five years, this is one of the most interesting. Its analysis is brilliant; its contribution to mutual understanding holds great value for both countries. A Brazil that can send us books like this has come of age and will put us on our mettle." Mildred Adams
+ N Y Times p5 Ag 26 '45 1300w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:31 D '45 200w

"Gilberto Freyre, the most astute analyst of the Brazilian scene, gave the Patten lectures at Indiana University last year. These lectures now appear in this slight volume. But the 'slightness' is a matter of pages not of material. I question whether any volume reveals more of the genius of Brazil than this. . . Dr. Freyre, long known to readers of Portuguese for his brilliant sociological analysis in 'Casa Grande e Senzala'—happily soon to appear in English—here gives us a memorable introduction to his land and people." Hubert Herring
+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 2 '45 900w

FRIEDHEIM, ERIC, and TAYLOR, SAMUEL W. Fighters up; the story of American fighter pilots in the battle of Europe; ed. by Arthur Gordon. 275p il $2.50 Macrae Smith co. [1s 6d Nicholson]

940.544973 World war, 1939—Aerial operations 45-2375

Story of American army air force fighter pilots in the European area from November, 1943, thru D day. It describes, also, the personal characteristics of some of our top-ranking fighters. Contains a list of American aces.

"Armchair pilots who like to argue the relative merits of Thunderbolts, Lightnings, Mustang's and Spitfires will find material here and all will find instructive the chapters on the construction and advantages of the Mosquito." W. F. M.
Book Week p8 Mr 18 '45 180w
Booklist 41:235 Ap 15 '45
Cath World 161:446 Ag '45 120w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '45
Foreign Affairs 24:162 O '45 20w

"The material is new and the accounts given in terms of individual pilots have human interest. It is a different book in the field."
+ Horn Bk 21:208 My '45 130w

"Continuous flow of story—anecdotal and human interest quality—stress on fighter pilots and lone combat chief point of distinction—interest mainly for those to whom any aviation material is fraught with glamor."
+ Kirkus 13:11 Ja 1 '45 260w

"The authors, who are in the Air Force themselves, have absorbed the tactical arts of the A.A.F. and the engineering skills of plane and engine designers. Through these the reader unconsciously becomes alert to the details of aviation and to the gigantic performances of aeronautical warfare. Inspirational to the high school boy and interesting to men. Title may curtail book's popularity." N. G. Rausch
Library J 70:166 F 15 '45 110w

"A book that is at once authentic and gripping." Francis Scott
+ N Y Times p23 Ap 29 '45 320w

Reviewed by Beach Conger
Weekly Book Review p10 Jl 1 '45 450w

FRIEDLANDER, PAUL. Documents of dying paganism; textiles of late antiquity in Washington, New York and Leningrad. 66p pl $1.50 Univ. of Calif.

746.3 Tapestry A45-2086

"A discussion of the source, meaning, and influence of the scenes on three textiles." (U S Quarterly Bkl) "The 'documents' are three textile fabrics of Greco-Egyptian design, dating from the second quarter of the first Christian millennium. One of them, a polychrome tapestry in the Dumbarton Oaks collection, pictures 'Hestia of Many Blessings' grandly enthroned and distributing her rich gifts in the presence of attendants on either side: the demigoddess 'Light' and the prophetic Orpheus(?).' Friedländer interprets this textile as a woven icon, the cult object of an Orphic or of a Neo-Platonic brotherhood. The other two panels are mutually related textiles with figures worked in purple wool. These personages enact successive scenes in the crucial drama of the passion of the savior-god

FRIEDLANDER, PAUL—Continued
Attis in the presence of the mother-goddess Cybele, 'Mother of the Mountains,' and of Pan, the 'Begetter of All Things.' " (Class Philol)

"Friedländer's repertoire of monuments for comparative study is notably extensive, varied, and convincing in connection with the main points in his argument. There are, however, regrettable gaps in his evidence here and there. In connection with his attractive but precarious identification of leaves sprouting from 'All-Growing' Pan in the Metropolitan panel, there is a closer parallel than the problematic janiform busts cited from Nemi. . . Another minor criticism is that the author is sometimes unintentionally misleading in his nomenclature. In part this is due to shifts in emphasis and familiarity between different definitions of one and the same term. . . Less excusable is the author's repeated use of the term 'shield' to characterize the inscribed disks in the Dumbarton Oaks tapestry. . . Shields they are not. Roundels or medallions, round plaques or tablets—they might correctly be designated by any of these terms. Merely to make minor corrections of this sort, however, scarcely does even justice to the excellence and soundness of Paul Friedländer's study of these very important tapestries. He has original and illuminating things to tell us about the cult life of late Greco-Egyptian paganism. With well-documented precision he presents his commentary on three major monuments of high quality which deserve to be very well known." H. R. Willoughby

+ — Class Philol 40:263 O '45 800w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:1 Je '45 280w

FRIEDMAN, JOSEPH SOLOMON. History of color photography. 514p $10 Am. photographic pub.

778.6 Color photography 44-8503

History of the technical development of color photography by a research chemist. Especial stress is laid on new developments since 1925. List of periodicals and abbreviations. Index.

Booklist 41:166 F 1 '45

"Dr. Friedman is the chronicler of color photography. His new book supplements the great work of Wall, bringing it up to date by surveying the literature of the period following 1925. It was a much needed book, and from the point of view of a survey of the literature, it is well done. . . On the whole, the book is a worth-while survey of the literature of color photography. It is more readable than Wall. . . There is an overtendency to depart from a valuable documentary record by the injection of personal views and guesses—including discussions of the relative validity of patents, which is perhaps a little out of place and based on inadequate knowledge. If, however, the book is treated primarily as a source of reference to the literature, it will be extremely valuable, and will undoubtedly enjoy good popularity." Walter Clark

+ — Chem & Eng N 23:945 My 25 '45 600w

"Although this is a serious reference book for the advanced worker in color photography, it is simply written and easy to understand. It is also extremely well organized and compact."

+ Chem & Met Eng 52:241 Ja '45 120w

FRIEDRICH, CARL JOACHIM. American policy toward Palestine. 106p pa $1 Am. council on public affairs

327.73 Zionism. U.S.—Foreign relations 44-47913

"This is a valuable factual survey of American policy toward Palestine. The first half of the small volume is taken up by a continuous text, the latter half by Appendixes A-J, containing the documentary evidence, from the Balfour Declaration and the Congress resolution of 1922 to the proposed Congress resolution of 1944 and the recent Democratic and Republican platform planks. Copious footnotes in the text enable the reader to find the essential general literature in the field." Am J Soc

"While the book is only introductory to the Palestinian problem proper, it is one of the best available entrance gates for Americans." W. J. Cahnman

+ Am J Soc 50:417 Mr '45 260w

Reviewed by W. W. White
Am Pol Sci R 39:399 Ap '45 400w
Am Soc R 10:575 Ag '45 50w
Foreign Affairs 23:341 Ja '45 30w

"The book's clarity, its forthrightness, its documents, and its careful presentation of the case show to what levels the democratic discussion of public affairs may rise." Garland Downum

+ Social Studies 36:182 Ap '45 480w

FRISBIE, ROBERT DEAN. Amaru; a romance of the South Seas. 246p $2.50 Doubleday

45-5483

Adventure story of the South Seas, in which an American goes in search of a fortune in pearls, about which a seafaring uncle had told him. Allen found the island, the pearls, and a beautiful white girl besides.

" 'Amaru' is such delightful reading that I hesitate to do more than give it my hearty blessing, lest by some awkward touch of mine I mar a tale so deftly built and so exquisitely embellished." Edith Roberts

+ Book Week p6 Je 17 '45 450w
Booklist 42:19 S '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '45

"Less convincing than his own somewhat fictionized biographical yarn. . . Light weight."

Kirkus 13:142 Ap 1 '45 110w

"All this is told with the skill of a storyteller born to his trade. . . The reader could hardly find a more pleasant escape than the pages of 'Amaru' provide. Any resemblance between the Pacific islands in this book and those which are at present subject to examination and attack by our armed forces is strictly coincidental." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Times p16 Je 3 '45 200w

"A book which dares to romanticize about South Pacific islands in these days of jungle killing risks the scorn of a realistic public. But a generous reader will take Robert Dean Frisbie's novel, 'Amaru,' for what it is intended: A slightly quizzical fantasy, an adventurous tale both salty and ethereal." Margaret Cobb

Springf'd Republican p4d Je 3 '45 300w

"The plot is agreeably involved. But the chief charm of 'Amaru' is its ability to conjure up distant scenes, to convey the quality of existence in the far islets, to set down vigorously the characters it presents and to render more important the nature of these people than their successes or failures." Iris Barry

+ Weekly Book Review p6 My 27 '45 360w

FRISKEY, MRS MARGARET (RICHARDS). Adventure for beginners; il. by Katherine Evans. [28p] $1 Follett

Alphabet books 45-584

"This alluring picture-book works out as an alphabet, but the three-year-old turning its pages takes in this information without effort. For A is for Alec the big lazy dog who would not go for the cow at milking time, B for the Barn, the Cat sat waiting for the milk, and so on through a real little story that builds up like the house that Jack built, until Zinnias nod by the barn door." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p10 D 10 '44 50w
Churchman 159:7 N 15 '45 30w

"A brief story and a thoroughly pleasant introduction to the mysteries of the alphabet." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 28 '45 80w

"Each picture is large, lively and in lovely colors for a small child's pleasure." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 D 24 '44 100w
Wis Lib Bul 41:55 My '45

FRISKEY, MRS MARGARET (RICHARDS). Sandy and the Indians; il. by Milo Winter. 189p $2 Follett 45-581

This book for boys of ten to fourteen is based on authentic early Illinois history. It is the story of a thirteen-year-old boy during the Black Hawk troubles. Abraham Lincoln is one of the historical characters.

"Margaret Friskey's story is engrossing and her picture of life during the Black Hawk Wars is vividly real. . . Milo Winter, who knows no rival when it comes to drawing Indian pictures, has done the many black and white illustrations." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p18 Ap 22 '45 230w

Reviewed by E. E. Frank
Library J 70:267 Mr 15 '45 50w

Wis Lib Bul 41:103 O '45

FROST, ROBERT. Masque of reason. 23p $2 Holt
811 45-2074

A brief masque in blank verse. The scene is the desert, long after Bible times, and the main characters are Job and God, with Thyatira, Job's wife, and the Devil as lesser characters. In it Job asks God for an explanation of the troubles which fell upon him, in that dim past eons ago.

"What is most memorable about A Masque of Reason is not so much its humor or its metaphysics as the tone of voice in which these characters speak at all times except the few occasions when topicality drowns them out: the tone of ancient wisdom, which carries with it the full weight and weariness of that skepticism to which intelligence is doomed." Mark Schorer
+ Atlantic 175:133 Mr '45 480w

"Robert Frost has settled nothing; he did not even settle the poem which breaks off suddenly like a snapped stick. But he has written a delightful trifle which is full of tolerance and sly humor. Then it will send many readers back over the ground Frost covered to write it, the Book of Job. That is a very good thing too." Leo Kennedy
+ Book Week p3 Mr 25 '45 800w

Booklist 41:221 Ap 1 '45

Boston Globe p17 Mr 28 '45 60w

"It does not make very exciting or inspiring reading. Because I want to keep my admiration for Robert Frost's great gifts, I shall get out his collected poems and browse through those tales of man or beast where his sympathy and his humor and even a certain shy mysticism build up the stuff which poetry and life are made of." Katherine Brégy
Cath World 161:522 S '45 350w

"Out of the fullness of experience, confident of his position in the world of letters, Mr. Frost has amused himself with writing a jeu d'esprit. . . It is, of course, smooth and expert work; moreover, it is primed with humor which is none too usual a circumstance in free verse. But as to precisely what Mr. Frost means to convey, perhaps none of his readers will be quite sure."
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 21 '45 160w

Reviewed by T. F. Opie
Churchman 159:19 Jl '45 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '45

"This slim septuagenarian volume of verse—it lacks the essential element of surprise that would lift it to poetry—will add nothing to the reputation of the author of the fine, grim, tombstone-granite verses in 'North of Boston.' It does not seem that Mr. Frost's forte is thought, or the use of reason." Anne Fremantle
— Commonweal 41:592 Mr 30 '45 200w

"One cannot help but feel that Frost himself does it with tongue in cheek and does not intend it to be taken as a serious contribution to his works."
Kirkus 13:47 F 1 '45 90w

"Doesn't come off for this reader who reread 'The Book of Job' with increased delight. Not necessary for the small public library." F. A. Boyle
Library J 70:219 Mr 1 '45 90w

Reviewed by F. W. Dupee
Nation 160:464 Ap 21 '45 450w

Reviewed by Conrad Aiken
New Repub 112:514 Ap 16 '45 240w

"For those who are not squeamish about the mischief in the poet, 'A Masque of Reason' will prove both entertaining and stimulating. Robert Frost's familiar cunning and slyness flash constantly through varied twists of words and phrases. His wickedness may seem virtuousness to those who believe that the divine scheme requires man's growth through searching." Lawrance Thompson
+ N Y Times p3 Mr 25 '45 1550w

"This short verse play deals with the Job story in a spirit of good middle-of-the-road grass-roots conservatism; Frost speaks in the language, and with much of the point of view, of the 'dry' cracker-box philosopher." Louise Bogan
New Yorker 21:83 Ap 7 '45 550w

Reviewed by E. S. Forgotson
Poetry 64:156 Je '45 850w

"Mr. Frost's hand is as skilful and sure as ever. And there is something aromatic in the work, Sabaean odors from the shore of an Araby along which he has not always chosen to cruise. Nor is there any falling off in his power of making what we take for granted glow with unfamiliar fluorescence. This has always been a mark of fine poets. In spite of the studied colloquial style, or perhaps because of it, the poem is bound to take hold of anyone who will pay appropriate attention. . . For all its brevity and beauty this is a difficult book. And the reviewer is by no means convinced that he has read it aright or interpreted it properly. He is, however, of the opinion that men of many kinds will be charmed and excited by the wit and the grace of mind which play over the pathetic spectacle of finite logic at her Psyche task, forever trying to force the Infinite into nice, reasonable, satisfactory, digestible categories." Leonard Bacon
+ Sat R of Lit 28:24 Mr 24 '45 1000w

Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 25 '45 400w

Theatre Arts 29:607 O '45 240w

Time 45:99 My 7 '45 500w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:7 Je '45 280w

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren
Weekly Book Review p1 Mr 25 '45 1550w

Wis Lib Bul 41:52 My '45

"In 'A Masque of Reason' there is no pretense. It is the ripe product of a writer who is both philosopher and poet." G. F. Whicher
+ Yale R n s 34:549 spring '45 1150w

FRY, VARIAN. Surrender on demand. 243p $3 Random house 940.5344 World war, 1939—France. World war, 1939—Refugees. Emergency rescue committee 45-3492

"Author, formerly editor of 'Headline Books', tells interesting, exciting descriptions of his experiences in Europe from August, 1940 to September, 1941. His work with the Emergency Rescue Committee was effecting the escape of political and intellectual refugees before the Gestapo could get them. Famous names abound." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Pierre van Paassen
Book Week p6 My 6 '45 450w

Booklist 41:267 My 15 '45

Bookmark 6:11 My '45

Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 2 '45 550w

+ Kirkus 13:81 F 15 '45 170w

"Recommended." E. H. Crowell
+ Library J 70:305 Ap 1 '45 60w

FRY, VARIAN—Continued

"Mr. Fry's book is frankly a personal history, and as such touches only lightly on the general picture of American activity in behalf of political refugees at that time. Nevertheless, his story is an absorbing chronicle of fascinating adventure, unstinting effort, and a large measure of success." Sheba Strunsky

+ Nation 161:318 S 29 '45 450w

Reviewed by Walther Victor

New Repub 112:650 My 7 '45 850w

"Though it is probably not the thing for a book reviewer to say, Varian Fry is a good man. Through the people he has helped rescue—the doctors, the painters, the writers, the sculptors, the teachers—he has added to the sum total of the world's happiness, such as it is these days. And he has written an astonishingly good book about his adventures." Russell Maloney

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 22 '45 1150w

New Yorker 21:82 Ap 28 '45 180w

"There are a larger number of highly exciting and almost unbelievable stories in this deeply moving but often also highly amusing book. Friends of light adventure novels will undoubtedly like it. And friends of humanity will see much more in it than an adventure story although it deals with forging passports, with hiding and escaping from detectives, with secret messages hidden in a toothpaste tube, and with an underground railroad over a well-protected border. They will see in it a memorial to the man who made what he modestly calls 'an experiment in democratic solidarity' and also to the women and men who sent him on his dangerous mission." H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 28:15 My 26 '45 650w

"Americans can read with pride this vivid and exciting story of the experiences of a determined and courageous American in successfully carrying through an errand of mercy." N. P. Mead

+ Survey G 34:349 Ag '45 360w

"Less warmly personal than Etta Shiber's Paris Underground, but with many flashes of humor and some thrills."

+ Time 45:100 Ap 30 '45 50w

"The story is told simply and unaffectedly; through a series of character sketches of the author's helpers in the underground from France, one gets a picture of the group as a whole and how it worked."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:30 S '45 160w

"The manner in which Mr. Fry has told his story is worthy of the theme. The temptation to indulge in heroics and melodrama must have been great, but it is yielded to nowhere. In spite of undoubted, deep feeling and sympathy, Mr. Fry never becomes sentimental, and his own part is told in perfect taste and with complete candor. Perhaps the most remarkable thing is his self-control." W. A. Neilson

+ Weekly Book Review p3 My 20 '45 1150w

FRYE, RALPH BRIDGES. Uncle 'Lish. 197p $2 Knopf

818 45-9568

Collection of semi-biographical sketches about a highly individual retired New England sea captain, who was the author's uncle. Some of the articles were originally published in The New Yorker.

Booklist 42:125 D 15 '45

"Something for the 'remembrance of things past' market—and distinctly above average."

+ Kirkus 13:414 S 15 '45 130w

"There is something almost as fascinating about him for the reader today as there was for a boy in the Eighteen Eighties." Alfred Butterfield

+ N Y Times p38 D 2 '45 400w

New Yorker 21:118 N 17 '45 50w

"If your list includes a masculine convalescent with a stomach for strong language and wounds sufficiently healed to warrant laughter, Uncle 'Lish should cheer him. The book provides light refreshment of superior quality." Grace Frank

+ Sat R of Lit 28:39 N 24 '45 230w

Springf'd Republican p4d D 16 '45 360w

Reviewed by John Espey

Weekly Book Review p2 N 11 '45 500w

FULLER, JOHN FREDERICK CHARLES. Armament and history. 207p $2.50 Scribner

355.09 Armaments. Military history. History 45-8872

An attempt "to trace the influence of armament on history from the time of the Greeks and Romans down to the second World War." (New Yorker) The author is a major general of the British army, now retired. Index.

"Major General Fuller, British Army, Ret., a soldier of the Boer War, the protagonist of the motor-machine-gun in World War I, and designer of the classic tank corps attack at Cambrai, has added to his body of writings this informative, provocative, dogmatic, frankly assertive, and courageous little volume interpreting history in terms of arms and armament." R. J. Purcell

+ Commonweal 43:97 N 9 '45 1400w

Kirkus 13:467 O 15 '45 130w

"This is quite a bite for any man, but General Fuller, who is an authority on armament, manages rather well. His political opinions will probably annoy some people (he isn't very fond of Russia, for one thing), but his ultimate conclusion, which is that improved methods of destruction mean simply destruction by improved methods, could profitably be remembered by everybody."

New Yorker 21:98 O 6 '45 160w

"The whole volume consists of premises assumed as correct in order to support a conclusion already reached on grounds of personal preference; and if the conclusion is an unpalatable one, the reader may console himself with the fact that the structure beneath it is extremely weak." Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 28:26 O 6 '45 550w

Springf'd Republican p4d O 14 '45 500w

"'Armament and History' is packed with information but it is too brief and dogmatic to prove of real value in the literature of war. It is by no means worthy of the soldier who prepared the comprehensive and understanding 'Lectures on Field Service Regulations, III, Operations Between Mechanized Forces,' that earliest and still admirable manual on mobility and tank warfare." P. J. Searles

Weekly Book Review p18 O 7 '45 550w

FULOP-MILLER, RENE. Saints that moved the world; Anthony, Augustine, Francis, Ignatius, Theresa [tr. by Alexander Gode and Erika Fülöp-Miller]. 446p il $3.50 Crowell

922 Saints

Biographical sketches of St Anthony, St Augustine, St Francis of Assisi, St Ignatius, and St Theresa, by a journalist who is a non-Catholic. To each saint he gives a qualification—St Anthony stands for renunciation; St Augustine for the intellect; St Francis for love; St Ignatius for will power; and St Theresa for ecstacy. Bibliography. Index.

"This is a readable book and an inspiring book. Its central theme may still strike a bourgeois world as fantastic. But who knows where the madness lies, with a jittery bourgeois world or with the saints?" F. E. McMahon

+ — Book Week p4 D 23 '45 500w

"Fülop-Miller writes well, but his philosophy and psychology blur the outlines of the character portraits he draws. He starts with a thesis and uses the five saints to illustrate it. One wishes he might have given us the five saints and let us draw our own conclusions."

+ — Kirkus 13:510 N 15 '45 230w

"Biographies are dramatic and polemic, with generous quotations from legends and other sources and from the writings of the saints. No footnotes. Rash obiter dicta on the history of love, the renunciation theme in literature and art, etc. Virtues are those of a sincere and ardent work of popularization." H. W. Hart
Library J 70:1087 N 15 '45 110w

"'The Saints that Moved the World' rises to something like eloquence in the longest chapter, that devoted to St. Francis; for the rest, his book is rather dull and badly written. Labeling the subjects of his study with single attributes . . . Mr. Fülöp-Miller imposes on himself a simplification which it is hard to redeem in a presentation of such complex characters as these. Neither the case for St. Augustine's intellect nor that for Ignatius's claim to sanctity is made very convincing; will to power, in fact, seems more like it in the case of the latter, all that drive, all that insistence on political organization, overshadowing, in the author's presentation at least, whatever charity there may have been in the spirit of the founder of the Jesuit order." Rolfe Humphries
— + Nation 161:695 D 22 '45 180w

"The author had made a thorough study of their lives and with simple directness and spiritual appreciation gives us the result of his study. Here are real people struggling with the temptations, the problems, the disappointments, the ambitions, the doubts familiar to us all. But, because of their deep religious faith, and because they believed a special mission had been laid upon them, they struggled with an intensity and effectiveness that made them extraordinary people; in short, that made them saints." D. J. Campbell
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 13 '46 550w

"Mr. Miller does excellently by his subjects, though he neglects to draw his thesis together at the end. A closing essay, similar to that which opens the book, would help the reader. He is not a particularly polished writer, as his choice of 'that' instead of 'who' in the title indicates, but he knows his material and he loves his heroes and heroine. He is even old-fashioned in his description of their triumphs, which is something unexpected and to be welcomed, coming from a man who studied under Freud and practiced the Spiritual Exercises of Loyola, and who knows, therefore, the value of saints and saintliness." Thomas Sugrue
+ — Weekly Book Review p25 Ja 13 '46 700w

FUNK & Wagnall's new standard encyclopedia. See New standard encyclopedia of universal knowledge

FURFEY, PAUL HANLY. Mystery of iniquity. 192p $2 Bruce pub.

261 Sociology, Christian 44-51293

"The challenge to come out and be separate from the individuals and groups who would heal society by merely natural means is at the basis of this book. Faced by tremendous problems of race, hygiene, housing, employment, and nationalism, the Catholic sociologist is tempted by his non-Catholic confrères to regard social ills as the result of natural causes and their healing as curable by natural means. It is very difficult not to conform. . . Playing safe often means playing into the hands of the devil. . . Fr. Furfey shows how this evil mystery insinuates itself and tends to influence Catholic sociologists, in the matters of nationalism, racialism, the home." Commonweal

---

Reviewed by E. H. Peters
Cath World 161:184 My '45 400w

"This is a most challenging and inspiring presentment of the need for intrepid Catholic social action; of the need to make known our supernatural principles, even in quarters where the velvet word would win us commendation but would and should condemn our own consciences." Richard Flower
+ Commonweal 42:50 Ap 27 '45 330w

FURMAN, ABRAHAM LOUIS, ed. Third mystery companion. 395p $2.75 Gold label 45-10366

Contents: The calling card of Mr. Engle, by Louis Paul; The unloaded gun, by A. V. Elston; The experts, by Mindret Lord; The kiskadee bird, by E. S. Holding; Face in the dark, by Hugh Pentecost; Wet Saturday, by John Collier; One chance in a million, by Will Payne; Death had a pencil, by Richard Sale; The phantom of the subway, by Cornell Woolrich; The mark of Maat, by Sax Rohmer; The third ladder, by Philip Ketchum; Hangin' crazy Benny, by L. T. White; The old man in the window, by Margery Allingham; The long still streets of evening, by Frank Owen; Crystal evidence, by D. B. Chidsey; The simple art of murder, by Raymond Chandler; The riddle of the blueblood murders, by Stuart Palmer; Ways that are dark, by T. G. Springer; The case on Turkey Point, by Howard Bloomfield; The witness, by William Brandon; Murder at the opera, by Vincent Starrett.

Cath World 162:189 N '45 160w
Kirkus 13:406 S 15 '45 70w

"Most of the stories are good, some are better, and a few are really topnotch. Raymond Chandler's 'The Simple Art of Murder' is not a story, however, but a keenly critical article about detective fiction. He takes several well known and highly successful detective novels, tears them to pieces and points out the flaws in them. The casual reader seldom takes note of these flaws; nevertheless, they are there, and they illustrate the pitfalls that lie in wait for even the most skillful writer of mystery stories. Readers and writers alike will find this article both interesting and profitable." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p28 O 21 '45 170w

"Better than average anthology."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:40 S 29 '45 40w
Springf'd Republican p4d O 21 '45 200w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p26 O 14 '45 150w

G

GABLE, SISTER MARIELLA, ed. Our Father's house. 341p $3 Sheed

Short stories—Collections 45-9170

"Here are twenty-eight short stories which ought, for one reason or another, to be of special interest to Catholics. Some of them have long since been recognized as classics. Some are distinguished short stories by the foremost practitioners of the art at the present time. Some few, by writers less well known, deserve by their merit to stand with their peers. They are collected here for the convenience of those who would like an easy access to some of the best short stories that have dealt directly with eternal verities or with the local color of Catholic life. May no one call them Catholic short stories." (Introd) Partial contents: The little black boys, by Clara Laidlaw; Glory, Glory, Hallelujah, by Martha Foley; The confessional, by Sean O'Faolain; Reparation, by E. M. Delafield; That heathen Alonzo, by August Derleth; The bishop's beggar, by S. V. Benet; Where love is, God is, by Leo Tolstoy; The trouble, by J. F. Powers; A Christmas guest, by Selma Lagerlöf; The last Mass, by G. M. Woods; The gift of the magi, by O. Henry; Our Lady's tumbler, (Anonymous); The blue cross, by G. K. Chesterton; The penitente thief, by Angelico Chavez.

"Not the least interesting feature of the book is the recognition given to contemporary American writers whose struggle to avoid the perils of sentimental piety on the one hand and naturalism on the other has tended to restrict their popularity. . . Sister Mariella Gable is herself buzzing with ideas. Her excellent introduction minces no words on the state of magazine fiction both Catholic and non-Catholic. She is fond too of introducing her selections with comment sometimes salty . . . and sometimes conspicuously prim." F. X. Connolly

GABLE, SISTER MARIELLA, ed.—Cont.
+ Cath World 162:373 Ja '46 500w

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt
+ Commonweal 43:146 N 23 '45 650w

"It is customary to speak of anthologies as 'God's plenty.' In the present case that designation is peculiarly apt. There is no sugar in this collection, but plenty of humor, of sting, of illumination. These stories are alive with human meaning, with the radiance of the divine often showing through." J. S. Kennedy
+ N Y Times p30 Ja 13 '46 400w

"Sister Mariella Gable is head of the English department at St Benedict's college, Minnesota, and is a Phi Beta Kappa scholar with a master's degree from the University of Minnesota and a doctorate from Cornell. Her introductory essay on the nature of Catholic literature shows her breadth of culture and her keenness of insight. Her views will occasion lively discussion wherever her topic is brought before the house. Readers, of whatever religious belief, will find her latest production a volume of enduring value and of vast entertainment." T. S. Hanrahan
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 20 '46 280w

"Sister Mariella is head of the English department at St. Benedict's College in Minnesota, but she has a standard of taste far beyond what is usually demanded by the professorial mind. There are familiar stories in the book; there are also selections from small Catholic magazines, and these are among the best. . . Catholic editors and writers will do well to read this book and they should study its introduction. For the general reader there is a feast of good writing. Seldom does so much of it get into so small a space." Thomas Sugrue
+ Weekly Book Review p8 D 9 '45 450w

GAGGIN, MRS EVA (ROE). All those Buckles; il. by Mildred Cloete. 250p $2 Viking 45-4235

There were seven young Buckles, and several pets, as well as Father and Mother Buckle. This story is of their gay efforts to help with the war effort, and how their ingratiating ways won the hearts of some rather stiff families. For ages nine to twelve.

Booklist 41:305 Je 15 '45

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p2 My 24 '45 110w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:274 Jl '45 120w

Kirkus 13:34 Ja 15 '45 130w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p18 Je 17 '45 160w

"An exceedingly amusing and lively story."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:60 N 10 '45 50w

"By a series of episodes, sometimes too deliberately whimsical to impress an adult reader but always lively and laughable, the Buckles fill their War Chests and work, through these efforts, to the welfare of all the neighbors. The children themselves are entirely convincing, and ten-year-olds will find them companionable." M. L. Becker
+ — Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 8 '45 230w

GALBRAITH, ESTHER E., ed. Plays without footlights. 358p il $1.40 Harcourt

812.08 American drama—Collections. English drama—Collections 45-3101

"The examples of contemporary drama offered in this volume have been chosen for their literary worth and vitality and their appeal to readers of high-school age. It is designed to encourage individual and group reading of plays." School & Society

"Volume is dedicated to the rankest of amateurs, but its introduction provides a good approach for the student to learn how to put on a play. . . Recommended."
+ Library J 70:636 Jl '45 60w

School & Society 61:176 Mr 17 '45 50w

GALL, MRS ALICE (CREW), and CREW, FLEMING H. Splasher; pictures by Else Bostelmann. 136p $2 Oxford

Muskrats—Legends and stories 45-9773

The young muskrat, Splasher, had many friends and relations. This story of an adventure which took them far from their river bank gives details of the living habits of a number of wild creatures.

Booklist 42:132 D 15 '45

Kirkus 13:518 N 15 '45 90w

"Holds one's interest. . . Gives a great deal of information about muskrats. . . Many fine drawings by Else Bostelmann." A. H. McGinity
+ Library J 70:1190 D 15 '45 60w

"The reader explores with interest the world of frogs and herons, king-fishers, turtles and racoons. . . Else Bostelmann's drawings have both accuracy and charm." A. T. E.
+ N Y Times p10 D 23 '45 80w

GALLAGHER, MRS LOUISE (BARNES). Mary Bray, fashion designer. 210p $2 Dodd 45-5122

Continues the story of Mary Bray, heroine of Frills and Thrills (Book Review Digest, 1940). In order to keep her mind occupied because her husband is reported "missing in action," Mary goes back to her work as a fashion designer, and makes a great success of it. Contains much practical material for older girls interested in designing.

Kirkus 13:252 Je 1 '45 130w

"Mrs. Gallagher, a designer of note, puts into her story of Mary's career much of her own philosophy of craftsmanship. Her prose flutters considerably but her sartorial style is sound, and would-be stylists will find the distillation of her experiences enlightening and absorbing." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p23 Ag 5 '45 120w

"The author, an expert in the field she describes, pays almost as much attention to interior decoration as to clothes, and you could draw any room she has described and put in the color." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 19 '45 150w

GALLOWAY, PHILIPPA FENDALL (WENDELL) STEWART, countess of. Folk tales from Scotland; il. by Walter J. R. Cook. 119p $1.75 Collins

Folklore—Scotland. Tales, Scottish
[A44-2002]

Collection of traditional Scottish folk tales, including The seal woman (Orkney); The white pet (Islay); The witch lady (Kirkcudbrightshire); The goodwife and the fairy (Kirkcudbrightshire); Little fool (Orkney); The battle of the birds (Argyll).

"Poor paper but legible print. Five full-page illustrations by Walter Cook, a stained-glass window artist. Recommended for grades four to six." V. W. Schott
Library J 70:70 Ja 15 '45 60w

"Excellently chosen, these tales well represent the magic and charm of Celtic folklore. The illustrations by Walter Cook, a well-known stained glass window artist, have the same touch of strangeness and beauty." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p22 Mr 4 '45 90w

"The strong, melodiously told legends of Scottish mermaids, princesses, rightful heirs, carlins, kelpies and giants—with a lovely version of 'Thomas the Rhymer'—have haunting designs in color and woodcuts by a famous designer of stained glass." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ja 28 '45 50w

GARDNER, ALBERT TEN EYCK. Yankee stonecutters; the first American school of sculpture, 1800-1850; pub. for the Metropolitan museum of art. 80p pl $4 Columbia univ. press

735.73 Sculpture, American. Sculptors 45-8846

Study of the rise of American sculpture, showing the parts played by such men as Thomas Crawford, Hiram Powers, William Wetmore Story, Horatio Greenough, William Rimmer, among others. Includes a biographical dictionary of American sculptors born between 1800 and 1850; a bibliography, and an index.

Reviewed by J. A. Frederick
Book Week p4 D 30 '45 320w

Booklist 42:144 Ja 1 '46

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 62:1319 N 28 '45 700w

"This is a delightful volume of Americana. . . Mr. Gardner suggests some interesting social and political reasons as to why so large and pretentious a school of sculpture should have arisen when our country was so young and innocent. Following the refreshingly irreverent text are a biographical dictionary of American sculptors and a few pages of eloquent plates." Francis Steegmuller
+ New Repub 113:847 D 17 '45 240w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:1 D '45 320w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. Case of the golddigger's purse. 218p $2 Morrow 45-4046

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p10 Je 3 '45 60w

Booklist 41:302 Je 15 '45

Boston Globe Je 13 '45 50w

Kirkus 13:116 Mr 15 '45 110w

"Perry Mason has not lost his punch, and neither has Erle Stanley Gardner." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p22 My 20 '45 130w

New Yorker 21:92 My 12 '45 80w

"Mason fans will like it."
Sat R of Lit 28:34 My 26 '45 30w

"A well-paced first rater." B. I.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 13 '45 270w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p12 My 13 '45 130w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. Case of the half-wakened wife. 218p $2 Mill 45-8181

Detective story.

Booklist 42:77 N 1 '45

+ Kirkus 13:325 Ag 1 '45 80w

"The story has its interesting moments but is not quite up to the Erle Stanley Gardner standard." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p14 S 23 '45 130w

"Any deviations from the formula are probably purely accidental."
New Yorker 21:87 S 29 '45 80w

"Irritating."
— Sat R of Lit 28:38 S 22 '45 40w

Springf'd Republican p4d S 30 '45 180w

"In a word, this is right up to the author's average. Gardner fans who overlook it will be guilty of contributory negligence." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p22 S 23 '45 220w

GARNELL, HELENE. It's fun to make a hat. 114p il $2; pa $1 Liveright

646.54 Millinery 44-8359

"Instructions for making the six basic hat designs with suggestions for many variations, selection of materials, techniques, and selecting the right hat for the wearer. Patterns for two basic designs." Booklist

Booklist 41:103 D 1 '44

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '45

Reviewed by Robert Fontaine
Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 4 '45 420w

GARRARD, PHILLIS. Running away with Nebby; il. by Willy Pogány. 144p $2 McKay

Horses—Legends and stories 44-41883

When Noel and Marigold learned that their unfeeling Aunt Maria was going to sell their beloved horse, Nebby, they kidnapped him and ran away to another part of England, to join another Aunt. Their adventures on the way and on arrival will interest children of ten to fourteen.

"Phillis Garrard writes understandingly of horses and children and Willy Pogány's delightful line drawings and pictures in color are in full sympathy with the ups and downs of a runaway journey and the nature of a petted horse." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:113 Mr '45 100w

"This is a delightful story, told with warmth and humor, and illustrated by Willy Pogany with numerous line drawings and some double spreads and frontispiece in full color."
+ Kirkus 13:160 Ap 1 '45 90w

"Plot is slight with an English country-side setting, but story has some warm human feeling. Some dialect. Willy Pogany's illustrations add charm to the story. Ten to fourteen-year-old lovers of horse stories will enjoy this book." A. H. McGinity
+ Library J 70:165 F 15 '45 70w

"Not even a child reader would expect things to happen just as they did, outside of a fairy tale. Nor are the characters drawn in convincing fashion. However, the action is so rapid, the tone of the book so gay, that readers from 8 to 12 will enjoy it as a kind of frolic on paper." A. T. Eaton
+ — N Y Times p20 Ja 14 '45 230w

Wis Lib Bul 41:55 My '45

GARYANTES, HUGO F. Handbook for shipwrights. 602p il $5 McGraw

623.8 Shipbuilding 44-9513

"This compilation of practical information for the shipwright, is intended to serve as a reference manual rather than an instructional text. Among the topics included are: care and use of tools, welding, shoring and bracing, staging, laying the keel, bulkheads, hatch casings, rudders, stanchions, timber joints, and a detailed discussion of the launching technique. The book contains numerous diagrams and photographs and there are brief chapters on mathematics for shipwrights and blueprint reading. A glossary of shipbuilding terms is provided." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 41:193 Mr 1 '45

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:652 Ag '44 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:65 O '44

GASQUE, JIM. Bass fishing; technique, tactics, and tales. 203p il $4 Knopf

799.1 Bass fishing Agr45-332

Discusses the fish; tells when, how and where to fish; gives tips on tackle, lines and bait.

Booklist 42:9 S '45

Kirkus 13:287 Jl 1 '45 170w

"Treats both the large- and small-mouth varieties of bass in a full and respectful manner."
+ New Yorker 21:68 Ag 18 '45 80w

"The bass fisherman of some experience will find lots of illuminating incident and dozens of useful tips here. . . Unfortunately, the experienced angler will have to dig for his nuggets, as Mr. Gasque's book is poorly organized—almost unorganized—and his writing is rambling and diffuse. The novice will therefore find the book more confusing than helpful." J. R. De La Torre Bueno

GASQUE, JIM—Continued
+ — Weekly Book Review p42 N 11 '45 270w

GASSNER, JOHN, and NICHOLS, DUDLEY, eds. Best film plays of 1943-1944. 694p il $3 Crown

812.08 Moving picture plays 45-4730

Ten film plays, considered by the editors as the best of 1943-1944. Contents: Wilson, by Lamar Trotti; The Purple heart, by Jerome Cady; Going my way, by Frank Butler and Frank Cavett; The miracle of Morgan's creek, by Preston Sturges; Watch on the Rhine, by Dashiell Hammett; Dragon seed, by Marguerite Roberts and Jane Murfin; The more the merrier, by Robert Russel, and others; The Ox-bow incident, by Lamar Trotti; Hail the conquering hero, by Preston Sturges; Casablanca, by J. J. and P. G. Epstein and Howard Koch.

Reviewed by H. T. Murdock
Book Week p10 Je 10 '45 270w
Booklist 41:297 Je 15 '45
Kirkus 13:240 Je 1 '45 130w
Library J 70:636 Jl '45 110w

"The special student will find the book a gold mine—and a record in which Hollywood may take genuine pride." J. M.
+ N Y Times p6 Je 10 '45 300w

"His analysis of the very different functions of screen writer and screen director is especially valuable. Altogether, the existence of this book should help considerably to encourage filmgoers to cerebrate, discriminate, and generally employ a critical intelligence about motion pictures which is, of course, exactly what must seem the most desirable thing in the world to the men who struggle to make intelligent films." Iris Barry
+ Weekly Book Review p23 Ag 26 '45 550w

GATES, DORIS. North Fork. 211p $2 Viking 45-35171

Drew Saunders who will one day inherit lumber mills in the Sierra Nevadas, is sent to North Fork, to learn conditions there. Only one person knew who Drew was, so the boy had to make his own way. An Indian boy of his own age, a boy with good ideas and self respect, teaches Drew some valuable lessons. For older boys.

Book Week p3 N 11 '45 270w
Booklist 42:39 O 1 '45
Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 21:459 N '45 120w

"Ably written, the story does not always sustain dramatic interest at a high level, but it is well worth the reading."
+ — Kirkus 13:317 Jl 15 '45 150w

"Quietly exciting story whose philosophy might possibly be questioned in spots. However, the experience in democratic living is most commendable, characters are interesting and unusual, and there is a fine feeling for the out-of-doors throughout. Recommended for ages eleven to fourteen." Claire Nolte
+ Library J 70:982 O 15 '45 100w

Reviewed by Dola de Jong
Sat R of Lit 29:48 Ja 19 '46 360w

"A good story, in which the forestry service, Indians, and conservation play an important part."
+ Wis Lib Bul 41:103 O '45

GATTI, ATTILIO. South of the Sahara; il. with photographs by the author. 266p $3 McBride

916.7 Africa, Central—Description and travel 45-10073

In this book for boys the author has combined in one geographically continuous narrative, the adventures, experiences and observations of three exploratory trips made in central Africa during the years before World war II.

Book Week p8 N 4 '45 100w
Booklist 42:163 Ja 15 '46
Kirkus 13:214 My 15 '45 130w

"Recommended for public libraries, and especially for young peoples collections." J. L. Ross
+ Library J 70:641 Jl '45 50w
Springf'd Republican p4 N 5 '45 150w

GAUNT, WILLIAM, Aesthetic adventure. 269p il $3 Harcourt [10s 6d Cape, J]

709.03 Art—England. English literature—History and criticism. Art—History. Literature, Comparative 45-4776

"The story of English private and social life as reflected in the arts of painting and, but to a lesser extent, literature during the period from about 1850 to 1910—the year when Roger Fry arranged the first Post-Impressionist Exhibition in London—a period depicted by Mr. Gaunt as that in which the theory of 'Art for Art's sake' had its rise and fall. It rose with Baudelaire and fell with Oscar Wilde is the author's argument, and we may find, as is our habit, a moral in the fact that as it was born in France in the first half of the nineteenth century, so it died in England with the trial of Oscar Wilde; but, appropriately enough, was re-introduced from France at the beginning of the twentieth century and does not look like being so easily snuffed out this time." Spec

Reviewed by W. D. Clark
Book Week p8 My 20 '45 300w
Booklist 42:9 S '45
Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 62:1037 S 12 '45 750w

"His pages are crowded with entertaining anecdotes about men who are bound to hold their place in the record of English literature, and he is not tempted to pretend that they were what they were not. We shall look forward to his third volume with lively expectation." Harold Hobson
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 14 '45 420w

"Mr. Gaunt's new book, though containing an amount of highly well-organized preparation, is (substantially) an artistic and social history of the nineties, and is, in the opinion of this reviewer, the best book ever written on that curious decade." Cuthbert Wright
+ Commonweal 42:121 My 18 '45 1500w
Kirkus 13:192 My 1 '45 160w
Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
Library J 70:487 My 15 '45 90w

"Mr. Gaunt is humanly more interested in men than in art, but some of his subjects were artists more interested in art than in men. Hence one may feel that Mr. Gaunt's healthy antipathies have not given the new gospel a completely fair deal; even so, one may also feel that a completely dispassionate examination of it may reach the same conclusion as does Mr. Gaunt, but not half so entertainingly." H. B. Charlton
Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 14 '45 420w
Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 160:698 Je 23 '45 1200w
Reviewed by Paul Goodman
New Repub 112:714 My 21 '45 900w

"Mr. Gaunt in his new and entertaining book strikes me as too readily unsympathetic. This was already a flaw in his brilliant study of the pre-Raphaelites; and if I notice it more in The Aesthetic Adventure, this is no doubt because Baudelaire and Proust, yes and Wilde also, seem to me so profoundly more respectable than Millais and Holman Hunt. It must be admitted that Mr. Gaunt has a strong case." Raymond Mortimer
+ — New Statesman & Nation 29:96 F 10 '45 750w

"Mr. Gaunt is an unobtrusive and most agreeable chronicler. He is not a philosopher or a historian. The first chapter, which attempts to provide a cultural background, is most inadequate." Albert Guerard
+ — N Y Times p3 My 20 '45 1050w

Reviewed by Hamilton Basso
New Yorker 21:86 My 19 '45 1100w

"Readers with a liking for literary anecdotes and studio talk will find this book a rich haul, if they happen to approach it in a state of ignorance regarding the artistic history of England and France during the last three decades of the nineteenth century. Whereas if they come to Mr. Gaunt without the bliss of ignorance, they may enjoy the secondary pleasure of recognizing many an old familiar story; most of them undoubtedly good—good enough to have seen hard service. . . It all makes lively reading." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 28:9 My 26 '45 1100w

"This is an ingeniously planned book which is well-designed to instruct and entertain as large as possible a public. . . One of the chief merits of Mr. Gaunt's book, which incidentally is a repository of good stories and interesting facts about all the leading creative personalities of the period, is that he does continuously connect our art with our life and tries to show how closely they interact. He also weaves his fascinating biographical facts cunningly into his argument, and, while writing a continuous narrative of the artistic movements in both France and England during his chosen period, also contrives to make them illustrate the social changes, intellectual developments, and the cleavages in class and education characteristic in this country." W. J. Turner
+ Spec 174:129 F 9 '45 900w

"This [is a] witty, intelligent history. Packed with anecdotes and character sketches of 19th-Century French and British bohemians, The Aesthetic Adventure is a fine companion piece to Author Gaunt's earlier, excellent account of The Pre-Raphaelite Tragedy."
+ Time 45:98 My 14 '45 1800w

"Nearly two years ago Mr. William Gaunt brought out a book, 'The Pre-Raphaelite Tragedy' [Book Review Digest, 1942]. . . He has followed it now with a companion book about the aesthetes, the 'Art for Art's sake' people. . . Those two years seem to have wrought a change in Mr. Gaunt. He writes more quietly, without strain or display, but with no blunting of his keen edge. His mind seems to have matured and deepened. Having resolved to see a tragedy in the story of P.R.B., he must shape his subject-matter to exhibit it. An adventure, the 'Aesthetic Adventure,' commits him to nothing, and he is free to go where his subject leads him."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p78 F 17 '45 2400w

"This wise and witty account of the origins, credo, and personalities of the aesthetic and decadent movement in literature and the fine arts ('Art for Art's Sake') is a sequel to the same author's narrative of 'The Pre-Raphaelite Tragedy.' It is a less exuberant book than its predecessor, but none the worse for that." S. C. Chew
+ Weekly Book Review p16 Je 17 '45 1000w
Wis Lib Bul 41:82 Jl '45

GAVER, JACK, and STANLEY, DAVE, eds. There's laughter in the air! radio's top comedians and their best shows. 291p il $2 Greenberg

792 Radio entertainments. Radio—Biography. Humor 45-4561

Short sketches of the lives and careers of some of the best-known radio comedians, with a sample script for each. Partial contents: Fred Allen, Bob Hope, Jack Benny, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Fibber McGee and Molly, Ed Gardner, Eddie Cantor, Abbott and Costello, Ed Wynn, Burns and Allen, The Great Gildersleeve, Joan Davis.

Book Week p6 Je 10 '45 130w
Booklist 41:297 Je 15 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '45

"Recommended for all libraries as published material of this kind is hard to find."
+ Library J 70:820 S 15 '45 80w

"The snows of yesterday, last night's newspaper—these are paragons of permanence compared to the most recent effort of a radio comedian. In 'Laughter in the Air' Editors Gaver and Stanley—wittingly, I suspect—offer devastating evidence that the transitory nature of these affronts is an undisguised blessing. Far better that this rose, once blown, forever died." Richard Maney
— N Y Times p4 Jl 15 '45 800w

"Far better than any common joke-book is this; it's more of a start at an encyclopedia of American Radio Humor. I hope someone will follow this through in another five years with a continuation of the lives and artistry of radio comedians, including those new ones coming up now." Tom McEnroe
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 10 '45 420w

GAY, CHARLES MERRICK, and FAWCETT, CHARLES DE VAN. Mechanical and electrical equipment for buildings. 2d ed 453p $5 Wiley

628 Building. Electric apparatus and appliances. Electric Engineering. Sanitation, Household 45-2610

"A revised edition of a 1935 book [Book Review Digest, 1936] furnishing up-to-date information on the water supply, plumbing, heating, air conditioning, lighting, electrical equipment, elevators, escalators, and acoustics for buildings. Of value to building managers and engineers as well as students although there is not a great amount of new material." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 41:272 My 15 '45
Eng N 135:128 Jl 12 '45 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:4 Ja '45

GAY, MRS LAVERNE. The unspeakables; a tale of Lombardy. 394p $3 Scribner 45-9482

Historical novel about the Lombard rule in northern Italy and Rome in the sixth century. The heroine is Theudelinda, princess of Bavaria, who married Authari, the Lombard king. After he died of the plague she married Agilulf, Duke of Turin, who later was crowned king of all Italy.

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson
+ Book Week p4 O 14 '45 400w
Booklist 42:94 N 15 '45
Cath World 162:379 Ja '46 240w

"Sympathetic, authentic picture of the achievements of Gregory the Great, and paralleling this record of the establishment of the temporal supremacy, a moving, tender love story of a Lombard king and his queen. Good history—good biography—good reading, though slow-moving in spots."
+ Kirkus 13:376 S 1 '45 210w

Reviewed by Richard Match
N Y Times p35 O 28 '45 460w

"The tale would have been better in a style less pretentious than Mrs. Gay's determinedly literary one. Brocade is all right to a point, but four hundred pages of 'Her light laughter broke on the morning air like shards of finest porphyry' . . . gets to be rather wearing."
+ — New Yorker 21:105 O 13 '45 130w

"The author manages to bring into her tale innumerable major and minor figures of the epoch and every event of consequence vouched for by our authorities. Her knowledge of the history and archeology of the period is obviously extensive and her imagination creative, but she has failed to fit her characters into their colorful background and bring them to life. Despite her wide and sure acquaintance with her material, perhaps indeed because of it, her novel is so clotted with decorative detail, with persons and incidents of historical rather than fictional import, that its narrative seems as rigid as a Byzantine mosaic, while at the same time it lacks the selectivity and stylization that make the best specimens of Byzantine art richly vibrant and meaningful." Grace Frank
— + Sat R of Lit 28:31 O 27 '45 330w

GAY, LAVERNE—Continued

"There are so many characters in the book, so many battles and so much description of feasting and pageantry and kissing that you may be confused. The opulence of the style will not diminish your mental fog."

Weekly Book Review p12 O 21 '45 250w

GEIGER, VINCENT, and BRYARLY, WAKEMAN. Trail to California; the overland journal; ed. with an introd. by David Morris Potter. 266p $3.50 Yale univ. press

917.8 Overland journeys to the Pacific

Record in diary form of a journey from St Joseph, Missouri to Sacramento in the summer of 1849, over the route via the North Platte, South Pass, Fort Hall, and the valley of the Humboldt. Geiger wrote the first third of the diary; but finally turned it over to his fellow traveller Dr Bryarly. Index.

Booklist 42:163 Ja 15 '46

"Complete, authentic, vigorous—a real contribution to the record."

+ Kirkus 13:463 O 15 '45 430w

"The two diarists provide a detailed, sober, and straightforward account of their journey. The introduction and ample annotation, which stress the organizational problems of travel on the overland route rather than its romantic aspects, give proof of the editor's sound judgment and assiduity in research." K. H.

+ Nation 162:83 Ja 19 '46 210w

"Potter has done an unusually competent job of editing the almost century old manuscript." John Weld

+ N Y Times p26 Ja 20 '46 450w

Reviewed by Oscar Lewis

Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 13 '46 500w

GEIRINGER, KARL. Musical instruments; their history in western culture from the stone age to the present; tr. by Bernard Miall. 278p il $4 Oxford [25s Allen, G]

781.91 Musical instruments 45-10303

"This historic method of treating all the instruments of one period shows the connection of the instruments with culture and arts of the period and makes the book useful as a supplement to a general history of music. This book is simpler and shorter by half than Sachs' History of Musical Instruments [Book Review Digest, 1941] and will be suitable for students or the general reader interested in the subject. Published in England in 1943." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 42:160 Ja 15 '46

"Perhaps more for the expert than the layman, this is a worthwhile 'cultural ladder' for music classes and reference."

+ Kirkus 13:465 O 15 '45 100w

"The title poses a selection problem for librarians because it enters the market in competition with Curt Sachs' The History of Musical Instruments (Norton, 1940). Geiringer is sound yet less severely technical and historical. Almost all the difference between the books can be told in figures: Geiringer takes ⅓ of his space to get to 1500 while ⅗ of Sachs' book concerns the years to 1400. Larger libraries should probably have both; a little index-checking proves them complementary." Leonard Burkat

Library J 70:1087 N 15 '45 90w

GEISMER, BARBARA PECK, and SUTER, ANTOINETTE BROWN, comps. Very young verses; il. by Mildred Bronson. 210p $2 Houghton

808.81 Children's poetry—Collections 45-2306

Collection of short poems for young children. Partial contents: The goldfish, by Dorothy Aldis; Little snail, by Hilda Conkling; Regent's park, by Rose Fyleman; The little turtle, by Vachel Lindsay; Little black bug, by M. W. Brown; "Brown and furry," by C. G. Rossetti; Rabbits, by Dorothy Baruch; Mice, by Rose Fyleman; The pasture, by Robert Frost; If I were a little pig, by L. S. Mitchell; Little brother's secret, by Katherine Mansfield; My shadow, by R. L. Stevenson; Animal crackers, by Christopher Morley; "Softly, Drowsily," by Walter de la Mare; The ice-cream man, by Rachel Field; Moving, by Eunice Tietjens. The poems are arranged under subjects: Birds, beasts, and bugs; About me; About other people and things; About going places; About the seasons; About the weather; Just pretend; Just for fun; Prayers. No index.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p11 My 20 '45 190w

Booklist 41:241 Ap 15 '45

Bookmark 6:16 Ag '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '45

"The choice is fresh and well made." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 21:112 Mr '45 40w

"An ideal collection of verse concerning familiar things. . . The chief merit lies in the fact that it lacks the 'precious' quality that too often characterizes verse for children; there's gaiety, fun and earthiness."

+ Kirkus 13:108 Mr 1 '45 150w

"Recommended for all children's libraries." J. D. Lindquist

+ Library J 70:308 Ap 1 '45 100w

"It is a good selection; necessarily, it is not all on the same literary level, but it does include Rossetti, Farjeon, Robert Louis Stevenson, de la Mare, as well as Aldis and Bacmeister and the like." M. C. Skinner

+ Library J 70:950 O 15 '45 100w

"A varied and inviting collection that should help teachers and parents to start children early on the road to becoming real lovers of poetry. The line drawings are simple and spirited, and in its green and yellow jacket this little volume appropriately suggests the daffodils of spring." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 1 '45 160w

"We wish that the vacation months could have offered a better selection of poetry for the children. This has some plums in it, but one has to seek for them." M. G. D.

Sat R of Lit 28:34 Ag 11 '45 230w

"This reviewer fell in love with 'Very Young Verses' after her first thumbing through." E. M. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 18 '45 360w

"Whoever needs little poems that fit into a small child's personal experience, verses that will seem to him to set it to music, should examine the choice made in this pretty volume by two young teachers in a famous school already known to book lovers for its 'Play Book.' " M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 25 '45 150w

Wis Lib Bul 41:55 My '45

GENERALS and the admirals; some leaders of the United States forces in World war II; portraits by T. H. Chamberlain; biographies by the editors of Newsweek. v 1 62p $4.50 Devin-Adair

940.5373 World war, 1939—Biography. World war, 1939—Portraits. Generals. Admirals (45-2980)

Compilation of brief biographical studies of thirty of the leaders in the present war. Includes fifteen army leaders, twelve from the navy, and one from the marine corps. The men were selected on the strength of their fighting front records. A second volume is in preparation.

Booklist 41:251 My 1 '45

"It is a good introduction to the leaders of our forces at war."

+ Current Hist 8:441 My '45 50w

"More useful as reference, perhaps, than for circulation, but boys will enjoy reading about each of their heroes 'just for fun.' Especially recommended for junior high school age." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 70:309 Ap 1 '45 70w

"Mr. Chamberlain's portraits are extremely photographic in technique. This is not altogether his fault, since he obviously worked from photographs, being unable in war to sketch his subjects from life. As for the biographies, a similar complaint might be made. They are merely competent condensations of material already well known to reasonably careful newspaper readers." John Desmond
N Y Times p16 Jl 8 '45 180w

Social Studies 23:236 My '45 20w

GENOVESE, JOSEPH GEN. We flew without guns. 304p $2.50 Winston

940.544 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939—Aerial operations 45-35109

Personal narrative of the author's experiences flying first with the Ferry command of the British air force and later with the China National airlines carrying passengers and cargo over the Himalayas from India to China.

Book Week p10 Je 24 '45 110w

Booklist 41:319 Jl 1 '45

"Action—humor—this is entertaining, and thoroughly readable personal experience air adventuring in all its immediacy of experience."
+ Kirkus 13:125 Mr 15 '45 170w

"Extremely readable. Recommended." H. S. Taylor
+ Library J 70:586 Je 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by Francis Scott
N Y Times p4 Je 24 '45 390w

Reviewed by Richard Match
Weekly Book Review p8 Jl 15 '45 550w

GEORGIEV, ALEXANDER M. Electrolytic capacitor. (Murray Hill bks) 191p il $3 Farrar

537.24 Condensors (electricity) 45-6766

"This volume is concerned with the design, construction, operation, testing, and uses of dry and wet electrolytic capacitors and condensers. In general the theory underlying capacitors has been omitted, although one chapter discusses the theories relating to the dielectric film. There are a glossary of technical terms, a six-page bibliography, and a list of United States and foreign patents relating to capacitors." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 70:687 Ag '45 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:35 Jl '45

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:64 D '45 280w

GERBRANDY, PIETER SJOERDS. National and international stability; Althusius, Grotius, Van Vollenhoven. 69p pa 85c (2s 6d) Oxford

320.1 Political science. Althusius, Johannes. Grotius, Hugo. Vollenhoven, Cornelis van 45-2959

"This volume, by the Netherlands prime minister, contains a Harvard Taylorian lecture of 1944. The argument for a stable political order, both national and international, and for limitations of national sovereignty as a necessary condition of stability, is built on a scholarly exposition of the three great Dutch publicists mentioned—two of the early seventeenth century, one contemporary." Christian Century

Reviewed by F. M. Russell
Am Pol Sci R 39:612 Je '45 220w

"Small but weighty volume. . . The author speaks with unusual competence and authority, as one who is both a scholar and a statesman."
+ Christian Century 62:522 Ap 25 '45 80w

"As one long convinced that Althusius—along with many other early modern thinkers—has been misinterpreted through oversight of the religious presuppositions of his thought, I welcome and heartily recommend this little book. Although it suffers from too great brevity, it is both historically illuminating and practically helpful for our time." J. T. McNeill
+ J Religion 25:231 Jl '45 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p402 Ag 19 '44 600w

GERMAINE, INA M. Handbook of drapery patterns; drawings by Susan Gabriel. 80p $2.50 McBride

747.5 Drapery. House decoration 45-1515

Contains simple line drawings and instructions for making various types of draperies.

Booklist 41:298 Je 15 '45

Bookmark 6:8 My '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '45

"Clear, simple directions. . . Book useful for those who desire to learn the art for use in their homes and for the small decorating shop."
+ Library J 70:220 Mr 1 '45 70w

GERSHENFELD, LOUIS. Bacteriology and allied subjects. 561p il $6 Mack ptg. co, 20th & Northampton sts, Easton, Pa.

589.95 Bacteriology 45-2048

"This volume is derived from works previously published under the title 'Bacteriology and Sanitary Science' by the same author, but the name has been changed to 'Bacteriology and Allied Subjects' as being 'all-inclusive.' The reader is expected to have a working knowledge of the subjects discussed. No attempt has been made to correlate available information and to bring it together with the fundamentals of bacteriology into one text. selection of material is broad and is intended primarily for students of pharmacy." Am J Pub Health

"The arrangement is probably convenient for the author's purposes but seems to lack unity for the ordinary reader. In general, the treatment is brief but encyclopedic. References to original papers and other literature are given in the text. There are only about a dozen illustrations, and charts and diagrams are rare or absent. The table of contents is very extensive and there is a well constructed index." Martin Frobisher + — Am J Pub Health 35:759 Jl '45 450w

"There is no dearth of texts on bacteriology including a number recently published, but none pretends to be more modern or embrace the scope of material included in this volume. To complete an up-to-date book on this rapidly advancing and expanding subject is no mean achievement. In offering this volume the author has supplied a current need and endowed it with an authoritative caliber not to be accomplished without a thorough knowledge of a number of branches in the field." C. M. Brewer
+ Chem & Eng N 23:1027 Je 10 '45 650w

GESELL, ARNOLD LUCIUS. How a baby grows; a story in pictures; over 800 photographs arranged and interpreted with the assistance of Katherine Gesell Walden. 77p $2 Harper

136.7 Child study. Infants SG45-24

"The material is arranged to show the baby's muscular development and reaction to the physical world—use of eyes, hands, feet, sense of touch—and his adaptation as a social being —crying, smiling, playing. This collection is a condensed pictorial summary for parents of some of the author's extensive study of child development, and many of the photographs have appeared in his other books." Booklist

"This is a book intended to reveal interesting facts about the growth of a small baby; it has fascination for all who are interested in babies. It does not pretend to tell everything there is to know, but it does present through pictures a unique means of better understanding of children. Excellent for the reading table in the health center." Caroline Leonard
+ Am J Pub Health 35:1325 D '45 300w

Booklist 42:90 N 15 '45

Kirkus 13:466 O 15 '45 110w

Reviewed by Catherine MacKenzie
N Y Times p7 O 21 '45 1150w

GESELL, ARNOLD LUCIUS, and AMATRUDA, MRS CATHERINE (STRUNK). Embryology of behavior; the beginnings of the human mind. 289p il $5 Harper

136.735 Child study. Infants. Embryology, Human 45-435

"Well-known for his meticulous research on the behavior of infants and children, Dr. Gesell [is] founder and director of the Clinic of Child Development at the Yale University School of Medicine. Contributing immeasurably to the layman's knowledge of embryology, he brings the data forward into the months immediately following birth so that we have not only a description of 'an organic complexus of behavior built up concomitantly with the bodily development of the embryo and fetus' but also of the new-born infant as well. Indeed, Dr. Gesell holds that the task of this present volume is to demonstrate this continuity. 'Our interest is in beginnings, origins, nascencies, and sequences. We do not hope to solve the profound creative mysteries which underlie the growth process, but shall be content to indicate some of the conditions and the mechanisms which give unity and dynamic design to the cycle of behavior growth.' " (Scientific Bk Club R) Selected references. Index.

School & Society 61:14 Ja 6 '45 50w

"A distinctive volume."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 16:2 F '45 420w

GESSNER, ROBERT. Youth is the time. 269p $2.50 Scribner 45-3920

Novel of college life. The scene is Metropolitan college, situated in lower Manhattan. Christopher Nash, an instructor, is a Bostonian and a Harvard graduate, and the New York college students are a total surprise to him. Nevertheless, after his first shock, Christopher found himself falling in love with a pupil with an unpronounceable name. This love story and Christopher's clash with the college conservatives are the high points of the novel.

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson
Book Week p7 My 13 '45 400w
Booklist 41:340 Jl 15 '45

Reviewed by Leo Camp
Commonweal 42:171 Je 1 '45 350w

"In part a spoof on professional aridity and book learning this is also a realistic close-up of a metropolitan campus."
+ Kirkus 13:73 F 15 '45 150w

"A college novel might not be expected to bear upon the present crisis in world affairs. But Robert Gessner has made this brief story of a university campus a mirror for war-bred problems. He has not become hopelessly involved in academic abstractions, but has told his story through personalities. He has also managed a humor, a lightness of touch, and a sensible detachment which help to avoid the pitfalls of the typical college novel." Martha Read
+ N Y Times p7 My 20 '45 350w

"A thoroughly sincere but hardly a mature novel."
New Yorker 21:78 Je 2 '45 130w
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 8 '45 200w

"Mr. Gessner's handling of the students is good: sharp, clear and to the point. The faculty members are less well drawn. It is hard to credit their spiteful, stilted conversations. If Mr. Gessner's delineations are accurate, it is indeed high time, as he suggests, that something be done about it. The author's solution for college teaching—leave the choice of subjects up to the student—is not new. And it's far from the whole answer." B. A. Thacher
+ — Weekly Book Review p8 My 6 '45 550w

GIBBERD, KATHLEEN, comp. Greece. (British survey handbooks) 106p $1 Macmillan [3s Cambridge]

949.5 Greece, Modern—History A45-1831

"The first chapter is concerned with the geography of Greece, the next two with the country's history. Ancient and medieval times are treated in the barest outline, but the narrative becomes more detailed when the Greek War of Independence is reached and a full account is given of the events of the last thirty years. . . There follows a delightful chapter on the daily life of the people . . . and an instructive chapter on the country's economic structure." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 41:239 Ap 15 '45
Foreign Affairs 23:699 Jl '45 20w

"[The book] will serve a useful purpose in spite of its failure to paint clearly the political background behind current events." H. N. Brailsford
New Statesman & Nation 29:98 F 10 '45 110w

"A competent and attractive piece of work."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p143 Mr 24 '45 210w

GIBBINGS, ROBERT. Lovely is the Lee; with engravings by the author. 199p $3 Dutton [12s 6d Dent]

914.17 Lee river. Ireland—Description and travel 45-6576

The author of Sweet Thames Run Softly, and Coming Down the Wye (Book Review Digest 1941 and 1943) here describes the River Lee country in Ireland and the people he met there, and illustrates the record of his experiences with his own drawings. The book is a mixture of folklore and bird-lore, fishing and stories.

Reviewed by E. D. Branch
Book Week p58 D 2 '45 500w
Booklist 42:15 S '45

"There is just no use trying to describe this book—no sort of use at all. It cries out to be discovered by each reader. . . Reading 'Lovely Is the Lee,' one is convinced that he is first of all a writer; and then, looking at the engravings which he made to adorn his book, one is less certain. In any case, like one of the characters in this book, Mr. Gibbings has 'never lost an opportunity to wonder.' " Margaret Williamson
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 D 6 '45 650w

"And lovely is this book; indeed, I am tempted to blow the horn of challenge and say that this is the loveliest book of the year." David Marshall
+ Commonweal 43:208 D 7 '45 700w
Kirkus 13:352 Ag 15 '45 130w

"Here is a gem, a book to be dipped into many times, to be read aloud and shared with all nature lovers. . . Enthusiastically recommended." M. H. Zipprich
+ Library J 70:684 Ag '45 100w

Reviewed by William Poster
New Repub 113:809 D 10 '45 550w

Reviewed by Naomi Lewis
New Statesman & Nation 29:113 F 17 '45 650w

"Those who have read the author's previous volumes of river wandering, 'Sweet Thames Run Softly' and 'Coming Down the Wye,' know what to expect from this man whose wood engravings are as precise and lovely as his prose is relaxed and good-humored. But in Ireland any man will outdo himself, whether in telling tales of the little people, drinking whisky, boasting of the country's beauty or lying in his teeth, and with completely unethical intentions to any pretty girl who happens along. The genius of the Cork man is that he can perform all these magnifications as if they were the normal mode of his life. And they are." Thomas Haynes
+ N Y Times p6 D 9 '45 750w

Reviewed by A. F. Wolfe
Sat R of Lit 28:22 D 8 '45 1000w
Scientific Bk Club R 16:3 D '45 210w

"Tales out of history, tales out of fairyland, conversations in hotel and cottage—it is all here and well-savoured with good-will for everybody. One feels that if the author enjoyed his year in Ireland he in turn was enjoyed; and Lovely is the Lee is as much the gift of his generous hosts as it is of his own happy talents."

+ Spec 174:438 My 11 '45 160w

Reviewed by H. O. Austin

Springf'd Republican p4d D 16 '45 550w

"Birds are everywhere in this book. They are subjects not only for Mr. Gibbings's skilful pencil but for his pen also, and many will value this book most for the delightful descriptions of bird life on those lonely Atlantic islands where Mr. Gibbings ventured, the Arans, Bofin and Mask and Shark. Here are tales of the sea, of fish and fishermen, and of humble, strenuous lives. Place-names are another of Mr. Gibbings's interests. He takes such lovely names as Alladoon, Bunamullen, Cooltra, Mweelanbwee, and explains their simple elements and meanings."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p616 D 23 '44 650w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue

Weekly Book Review p5 N 25 '45 700w

Wis Lib Bul 41:111 N '45

GIBBS, SIR PHILIP HAMILTON. Battle within. 234p $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Hutchinson]

45-1557

A story of an English family during the war covering chronologically the months of the fighting in Tunisia and the invasion of Sicily. The leading character is an English girl who before the war had been engaged to a young German aviator.

"Sir Philip Gibbs propounds the problems; he does not solve them. Though writing quietly and sometimes with too casual an ease bred of long experience, he is quite serious about his theme. As a piece of literary composition, this is not the best that he has done; but the tone, the setting, and above all, the sincerity justify the novel. It thrusts some questions at us that, sooner or later, we shall have to try to answer." W. K. R.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p15 Mr 17 '45 500w

Kirkus 12:538 D 1 '44 130w

Reviewed by M. H. Turner

N Y Times p20 Mr 11 '45 180w

"The book is distinguished only in that Sir Philip seems to have set a record for the use of the cliché and the platitude."

— New Yorker 21:79 F 17 '45 50w

Reviewed by Katharine Simonds

Sat R of Lit 28:27 Mr 17 '45 360w

Time 45:100 F 19 '45 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p269 Je 3 '44 360w

"What with loss of sleep and overwork, ceaseless anxiety and lack of fats, even the most resolutely cheerful have their moments when they lose control. The author writes with deep sympathy of those who lose their grip as well as of those who have the qualities of endurance. One wishes that he had been a little less lavish in reporting the ideologies of Ashleigh Heath, much of the dialogue is warmed-over editorials. A sense of humor, which the novelist insists upon as the saving grace, is not one of his strong points." Lisle Bell

— + Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 4 '45 360w

GIBSON, GEORGE MILES. Story of the Christian year; il. by the author. 238p $2.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

264 Church calendar. Festivals 45-5710

"A survey of the Hebrew and Roman ceremonial calendars is introductory to a study of the history of the gradual elaboration of the Christian system of days for special religious observance and a discussion of the extent to which, and the ways in which, Protestants may properly and profitably observe the high points of the Christian year. With a view to furnishing the background needed by readers with only a sketchy knowledge of church history, the author presents a good body of historical information not directly demanded by his theme." Christian Century

Book Week p2 Jl 8 '45 200w

Booklist 42:2 S '45

"The whole work is well planned and competently executed."

+ Christian Century 62:910 Ag 8 '45 80w

"Though written by a pastor of a non-liturgical church, and aimed chiefly to convince members of such churches to the 'values of an ordered calendar', this book is as excellent a handbook as anyone could wish on the history of the Christian Year."

+ Churchman 159:16 S 15 '45 240w

"Brimful of little-known facts and apt illustrative material, this book should be on the library shelf of every progressive religious leader who values the treasure-house of the past."

+ Kirkus 13:362 Ag 15 '45 130w

GIBSON, KATHARINE. Arrow fly home; il. by Ralph Ray. 146p $2 Longmans

45-3044

As a child of four David Gibson was carried away by Indians and adopted into a Shawnee tribe. Later a white girl of ten was brought into the village and the two children became fast friends and eventually returned together to their own people. The author tells this story of her ancestors in a novel for young people.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p11 Ag 26 '45 210w

Booklist 41:257 My 1 '45

Bookmark 6:16 Ag '45

"The joy of the young child in the freedom of forest life is well contrasted with the longer memories of home held by the girl who comes to it older. Katharine Gibson writes with color and warmth and a spirit that shows Indians as real people with individual characters."

+ Horn Bk 21:196 My '45 110w

+ Kirkus 13:110 Mr 1 '45 170w

"True adventure and legend that will interest both boys and girls from twelve years up." E. M. Gordon

+ Library J 70:356 Ap 15 '45 70w

"The narrative, loosely built, seems less a story than a kind of reconstructed memoir, based on the lives of the author's great great grandparents. The reader who runs will very likely prefer a more solid plot. But the sensitive reader of 11 and up will find that it stirs the imagination and the heart." E. L. Buell

N Y Times p18 Ap 22 '45 200w

"This is not merely an Indian story, although the life with Indians of the two white children would appeal to boys and girls who like Indian and pioneer tales. That story, however, with its exciting action, has been told many times. The importance of this book lies in its integrity as a page out of our history and in the skill with which the author has brought that page to life." R. A. Hill

+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 Jl 14 '45 360w

School & Society 61:238 Ap 14 '45 40w

Social Studies 23:236 My '45 20w

Springf'd Republican p4d My 13 '45 150w

"An exceptionally fine story of Indians and white captives in the days of Cornstalk and of Logan, this stands out among others in its field not only by beauty of expression but by inner veracity of spirit setting it above the limitations of a 'true story.' . . The framework of the tale is strengthened by family tradition, but its spirit is of one who understands childhood surviving the wreckage of its world, youth developing in tumult—matters of immediate interest in the world that now is." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 15 '45 360w

Wis Lib Bul 41:86 Jl '45

GIBSON, WILFRID WILSON. Outpost. 104p $1.50 (pa 5s) Oxford

821 A46-529

"Mr. Gibson has continued his long career as poetic interpreter of the life of the ordinary man with this collection of brief poems—almost snapshots—recording incidents and feelings experienced by the soldier and by members of his family 'back home.'" N Y Times

"The cumulative effect, bringing home to us the vast variety of ways in which war may touch individual characters and destinies, is deeply impressive, though the separate poems differ much in quality. Some perfectly achieve their aim, whether of description or emotion or irony; some are competent rather than inspired; others hardly soar above bald statement. All, however, reveal the simplicity, sincerity, and sympathy that are nobler even in failure than is any artistry, lacking these primal impulses in success." G. T.

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 3 '45 120w

"Sometimes a poem in this book suggests a lyric by Hardy, and it is probable that Mr. Gibson has learned from him, but I do not think he has learned the fact that personal reminiscence and personal grief sometimes raised Hardy to lyric heights beyond any to which irony could carry him." F. C. Flint

N Y Times p8 Ag 26 '45 180w

"The faults we have remarked in Mr. Gibson's earlier collections of war-time verses are more continuously evident in this concluding volume of the series. Chief among them is the frequency of mere statement of fact. . . There are many poems of this kind in which the imaginative implication is too slight to lift the poem out of the rut of the obvious. . . But amidst much in which the pulse of poetry beats faintly there is a residue in which his characteristic sympathy for the worker and the fighter and for the mothers and wives who have to bear the losses of war is kindled sufficiently with passion to take a vital shape."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p46 Ja 27 '45 450w

GIDDINGS, ARTHUR RAYMOND BEVERLEY-. See Beverley-Giddings, A. R.

GIFFORD, FRANK DEAN. Traveling the King's highway; a book of sermons especially suitable for lay readers; foreword by Oliver James Hart. 190p $2.50 Morehouse

252 Sermons 44-14954

Brief sermons for lay readers, by the author of the similar book: Building the King's Highway. A lay reader in the Episcopal church may, when licensed by a bishop, deliver addresses or read the sermons of others, and this book is designed for that purpose.

Christian Century 61:1320 N 15 '44 50w

Reviewed by W. F. Thompson

Churchman 159:16 Mr 1 '45 100w

GILBERT, ANTHONY, pseud. See Malleson, L. B.

GILES OF ROME. Errores philosophorum; critical text with notes and introd. by Josef Koch; English tr. by John O. Riedl. 67p pa $3 Marquette univ. press

189 Philosophy

"Giles was a thirteenth century Augustinian monk who, stimulated and fortified by the Summa of St. Thomas, undertook to defend the faith against the subtle attacks of Averroism and its variants. His work consists of compilations and refutations of the alleged errors of Aristotle, Averroes, Avicenna, Algazel, Alkindi and Maimonides. The Latin text and the English translation are given on opposite pages. This edition is the work of two obviously competent scholars. The text represents a collation of twenty-seven manuscripts and, with the notes, constitutes a variorum edition." Christian Century

Christian Century 62:273 F 28 '45 90w

"In his Introduction the editor gives an ample discussion of the manuscripts, disposes of arguments against the authenticity of the work, and identifies the sources used by Giles. The text itself, as far as can be judged without recourse to the manuscripts, is well constituted, clear, and intelligible. Apart from certain departures from accuracy, as when mobile is translated by 'what moves' (p.5), the English translation is well executed, and quite readable." E. A. M.

+ — J Philos 42:306 My 24 '45 240w

GILL, HENRY VINCENT. Fact and fiction in modern science. 1st Am ed 136p $2.50 Fordham univ. press

501 Science—Philosophy 45-1143

"Father Gill was a student of physics research under J. J. Thomson, at the Cavendish Laboratory, Cambridge, and spent many years lecturing and teaching. The aim of this volume is to provide studies upon the important issues of latest science research written from the Catholic viewpoint of content and conclusion. These essays discuss the want of logic in modern science, the origin of life, the theory of evolution, determinism versus free will, the spirituality and immortality of the soul, the attitude of the Church towards natural science, the idea of God, Creator and First Cause." (Cath World) Index.

Cath World 162:94 O '45 200w

"Notwithstanding the title, this is essentially a religious book, rather than a scientific book, and as such it does a good job. Father Gill was a student of physics at the Cavendish Laboratory, Cambridge, and is a deep student of philosophy and theology. He collects fourteen nicely written essays into this small volume, and handles the intricacies of atomic structure and modern physical theory with skill." Harlow Shapley

+ Sat R of Lit 28:50 Je 9 '45 700w

GILL, NORMAN NAHUM. Municipal research bureaus; a study of the nation's leading citizen-supported agencies; foreword by L. D. Upson. 178p $3 Am. council on public affairs

352 Municipal research 44-6805

"The Nation's leading citizen-supported agencies are described as to research activities, citizen education, and types of agencies. A history of the research bureau movement is given, and sources of financing such projects revealed. The organization of the administrative and working staffs is outlined." Am Soc R

"Interesting and instructive story of an important phase of municipal development in the United States during the twentieth century." W. S. Sayre

Am Pol Sci R 39:194 F '45 450w

Am Soc R 9:717 D '44 50w

Reviewed by C. S. Ascher

Ann Am Acad 237:238 Ja '45 650w

Booklist 41:333 Jl 15 '45

"To librarians the book should have a significance beyond its intrinsic merit. The latter is good, for Dr. Gill has dissected ably a contemporary movement and prescribes with apparent wisdom for some of its ills. In addition, however, the book should be a reminder that municipal research bureaus are, of necessity, repositories of selected bibliographic materials on municipal affairs, sometimes formalized into libraries." K. A. Bosworth

+ Library Q 15:358 O '45 1150w

Special Libraries 35:462 N '44

GILLIAM, FLORENCE EDNA. France; a tribute by an American woman. 224p $2.50 Dutton

914.4 France—Civilization 45-8106

The author was an entertainer for American troops overseas in World war I, and from 1921 to 1941 she lived in Paris as correspondent and stage critic for several theatrical magazines. She remained in Paris for eight months of the Nazi occupation and returned to the United States in 1941, via Lisbon. This book is her interpretation of the history and people of France.

Reviewed by Andre Maurois
Book Week p3 O 14 '45 380w

Booklist 42:108 D 1 '45

Kirkus 13:331 Ag 1 '45 90w

"Although the mist of nostalgia that hangs over most of her pages is not unlike the haziness that settles over the Bois de Boulogne in the rain, there are also many clear-edged passages, including a description of Paris under the Nazis and an examination of the resistance movement, that make it a shrewd and deeply informed analysis of contemporary France."
+ — New Yorker 21:107 O 13 '45 90w

"This little book is crammed with interesting and stimulating observations drawn from the extraordinarily wide field of Miss Gilliam's interests and enlivened by the keenness of her enjoyment of France. Inevitably it will arouse disagreement on the part of some, who with equal devotion, approach, from a different viewpoint, esthetic and political subjects on which she touches. Parts of the book will be of more particular interest to specialists in the arts than to the general reader. But I can hardly see how either those who agree or those who don't will fail to find it challenging and delightful." Mary Ross
+ Weekly Book Review p10 O 14 '45 900w

GILLIGAN, EDMUND. Voyage of the Golden Hind. 307p $2.50 Scribner
45-2841

Sea-adventure story of Gloucester and the fishing banks, and of a brave woman, the fishing vessel she owned, the man who tried to rob her, and the man who helped her win out against a rascal.

Reviewed by E. D. Branch
Book Week p4 Mr 18 '45 250w

Booklist 41:225 Ap 1 '45

"Edmund Gilligan handles the Golden Hind with all the skill of a veteran Gloucester skipper as he sails the last of the topsail fishing schooners through a series of dramatic and tragic adventures. In this vivid story of the trials of Gloucester fishermen he has Capt John Bannon recite the entire account in the first person, a method which adds much to the smoothness of the narrative and gives authenticity to the naturalness of the Gloucester fishing fleet vernacular." D. J. O'Brien
+ Boston Globe p15 Mr 14 '45 280w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '45

"A good sea yarn, despite its archaic style."
+ — Kirkus 13:19 Ja 15 '45 150w

"This is a fine sea-story. It makes you feel the bite of the icy northern seas, and the roar of the great winds that blow down from Greenland." A. D. H. Smith
+ Sat R of Lit 28:10 Mr 31 '45 400w

Reviewed by G. K. Moriarty
Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 22 '45 220w

"Better than average adventure-romance."
+ Time 45:104 Mr 12 '45 20w

"Mr. Gilligan is too fine an artist to spin his yarn without due attention to the drama of the sea itself and the arduous life of those who exist by it, and it is in dealing with these matters that he is at his best. His characters, for all their saltiness and seamanship, sometimes have a certain literary elaborateness about them—you feel you could meet them more frequently in books than elsewhere—but a Gilligan description of a storm at sea is likely to leave the most terrestrial of readers breathless, if not a little seasick." Herbert Kupferberg
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 4 '45 600w

Wis Lib Bul 41:54 My '45

GILLIM, MARION HAMILTON. Incidence of excess profits taxation. 179p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

336.243 Excess profits tax A45-3688

"Except for a short discussion of two statistical studies in the field, this book is concerned only with theory, and is devoted to a deductive analysis of the effect of an excess profits tax on price and supply. Although wartime taxes are included in the study, primary attention is given to the excess profits tax as a peacetime measure. The work is intended for theoretical economists, and assumes an acquaintance with modern price theory, especially with the work of Professor Edward Chamberlain on the subject of monopolistic competition." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliography. Index.

"Professor Gillim is to be commended for her deductive examination and conclusions on the general subject of levying an excess profits tax, and the reviewer is in full accord with her reasoning. However, an attempt should be made to test out these theories of the incidence of excess profits taxes by inductive processes despite the complexities of the problem. The superior quality of scholarship displayed in this volume renders Professor Gillim uniquely qualified for this task." J. H. Landman
+ Ann Am Acad 242:185 N '45 500w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:21 D '45 220w

GILLMER, THOMAS CHARLES, and NIETSCH, HERMAN ERICH. Clouds, weather and flight. 161p il $3.75 Van Nostrand

551.5 Clouds. Weather. Meteorology in aeronautics 44-51379

Physical laws of the atmosphere, described non-technically for layman and aviator. Contents: Weather and the atmosphere; Clouds; Temperature variation and its effect; Atmospheric circulation: wind and flight; Air masses; Fronts and frontal clouds; Weather maps and how to read them; Forecasting for flight; Weather hazards in flight; Flight without power: gliding and soaring; Glossary of meteorological terms. Index.

Library J 70:34 Ja 1 '45 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:62 O '44

GILLMORE, MARGALO, and COLLINGE, PATRICIA. The B.O.W.S. 173p il $2.50 Harcourt

940.5477873 Soldiers—Entertainment. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American

An informal account of the wartime tour of The Barretts of Wimpole Street, led by Katharine Cornell and Brian Aherne, thru the European Theatre of operations.

"The story of the 'B.O.W.S.' has been told brilliantly and tenderly by Miss Gillmore and Patricia Collinge, the last named a vicarious member of the group who wrote the text from letters and conversation with Miss Gillmore. Their collaboration is witty, filled with innumerable anecdotes—some funny, some semi-tragic and a few of them romantic, but though its writers are actresses they do not let their theaterfolk usurp all the spotlight." H. T. Murdock
+ Book Week p19 D 9 '45 500w

Booklist 42:106 D 1 '45

Christian Century 63:19 Ja 2 '46 70w

"A bright, amusing chronicle, not just another 'I Was There' but a sidelight on the art and power of good theatre."
+ Kirkus 13:482 N 1 '45 150w

GILLMORE, MARGALO—Continued

"This book is brilliantly written and should be in every war as well as in every theater collection. Highly recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 70:1087 N 15 '45 110w

Reviewed by Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p5 D 30 '45 650w

"It's a gay and delightful story for the most part, but some of it is sad, and it is all good reading, for it has the fascination of all 'backstage' descriptions, with something added." W. H. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 30 '45 550w

"Miss Gillmore's little book will make you laugh, and it will make you proud of the players' devotion to their play; and their tenderness to the soldiers, disclosed in a hundred little incidents, and the soldiers' respect for them, has a heart-warming quality. This is perhaps a more significant and enduring book than a first glance would disclose." W. P. Eaton

+ Weekly Book Review p4 D 16 '45 450w

GILPATRICK, NAOMI. Broken pitcher. 280p $2.50 Dial press

45-35029

Character studies of four women, all of whom had loved one man, and of a second man whose coming brought to the fore old tragedies and new understanding. The narrator is a young woman, who tells the story of her love for her father, who had died; of her mother who had recently re-married; and of the two strange, frustrated women who lived in the same household.

Booklist 41:225 Ap 1 '45

"Marked by inconsistencies not uncommon in young writers, the book is at once wise and immature, incisive and prolix, clear and confused, overly introspective and at times tiresomely analytic. Nevertheless it is a highly creditable first novel, evidently the work of a gifted, intuitive mind; its author has idealism, a sense of the dignity of the human person, keen understanding of psychological dilemmas, and skill in character delineation." Gracious Galbraith

+ — Cath World 161:90 Ap '45 300w

"Miss Gilpatrick has written a wise and mature book. And she has written it with intelligence, honesty and a great deal of wisdom. Parts of it she has done beautifully, with an expert handling not merely of the English language, but of the remembered feelings of a young girl knowing the acerb ecstasy and the fond imprisonment of love. . . In fact I suspect that the much talked of Catholic American novel has been written—and that this is it." Francis Downing

+ Commonweal 41:593 Mr 30 '45 460w

"An interesting situation, handled in an original pattern, but the style is mannered, overwritten and studiedly arty. Perhaps when the young author matures she will outgrow what seems now like mannerism."

+ — Kirkus 13:39 F 1 '45 200w

"As a writing exercise, 'The Broken Pitcher' is pretty well put together. The author, who is in her mid-twenties, wrote this first novel while taking her master's degree at the University of Michigan. There it was awarded the Avery Hopwood Major Fiction Prize—presumably for its careful structure, its studied style. But in spite of technical virtues, the book falls apart. It is in love with words and impatient with meanings. Like the diary of a highflown child, it is often amusing by accident." Nancy Flagg

+ — N Y Times p27 F 25 '45 230w

"Miss Gilpatrick's style is competent always to create a dreaming, yet fastidious and precise beauty. But by its very sustained aliveness it defeats occasionally its own fine purpose. There are very few troughs to Miss Gilpatrick's waves. And occasionally, as if elated over her own capacity to express the well-nigh inexpressible, she uses words in her own highly personal fashion. 'The Broken Pitcher' has received, and well deserves, the Avery Hopwood fiction award. There will be no doubt in the mind of any one who reads this first novel of Miss Gilpatrick's that she will go on promptly to other, and perhaps surer, accomplishment in the field of the modern novel." F. H. Bullock

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 F 25 '45 650w

GLASPELL, SUSAN. Judd Rankin's daughter. 254p $2.50 Lippincott

45-8596

Character sketches of several Americans, chief among them loveable old Judd Rankin, a grass roots philosopher who eventually broke down and wrote a book; his gentle but slightly confused daughter Frances; Frances' liberal apperceptive husband; and their two modern grown children. Drawing the whole picture into focus is Cousin Adah, a sophisticate of a former generation, whose love of life flowed on, even after her death.

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock

Book Week p1 O 28 '45 1700w

Booklist 42:76 N 1 '45

"Susan Glaspell's maturity of outlook and keen perception of human character are here again manifested, while the narrative is enriched by flashes of humor and by excellent dialogue. The whole is marked by that fluidity of style, that skillful use of point and counterpoint, which are the sign of the artist. It is indeed pleasant to have a new novel over which one can become enthusiastic. Thank you, Miss Glaspell." M. W. Stoer

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 20 '45 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '45

"I liked this tremendously. I had a sense—while reading it—of living with the people and with the circumstances, of experiencing the sense of frustration at not quite knowing what some things meant, of gradually feeling that some of what seemed closed doors were, in another sense, doors opened to individual interpretation and understanding."

+ Kirkus 13:403 S 15 '45 340w

"Timely, absorbing novel." M. H. McElfresh

+ Library J 70:979 O 15 '45 70w

"There are some good moments in the story, notably the scenes between Judson and his parents and between Judson and the stay-at-home conservatives who try to corral him into their camp. There is, as well, an extremely effective use of certain lines from Wordsworth associated with the death of Judson's soldier friend. But these scenes, good as they are, only indicate what the book might have been like had the author devoted her attention to the principal conflict instead of wandering in the Iowa cornfields." F. W. Leary

— + N Y Times p37 N 4 '45 400w

"Susan Glaspell writes a story with delicacy and skill, blending the thoughts, ideas, emotions, and personalities of characters so that they intertwine, yet stand out for themselves, like the pieces in a New England rag carpet. . . There is very much of the average American in this book, and for that reason it would be a good idea for him to read it. The wild songs of the new prophets are all very well, but the normal ear can catch but a few notes of them. Here is a melody that can be heard entire." Thomas Sugrue

+ Sat R of Lit 28:33 O 27 '45 650w

Reviewed by H. L. Mitchell

Springf'd Republican p4d N 25 '45 420w

" 'Judd Rankin's Daughter' has much to say to many different kinds of Americans, out in the Corn Belt, along the rockbound coast, in cities and suburbs. Miss Glaspell does not gloss over the ineffectiveness or cussedness or downright meanness of some of the people of whom she writes; they have to be taken along with the others. But she does give a prevailingly hopeful picture of friendliness and honesty and grass-roots wisdom among ordinary, unassuming people, whom most of us will recognize as essentially American. . . Her novel has an all-too-rare combination of qualities in that it is pleasant, thoughtful and witty." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p4 O 28 '45 1050w

GLEIT, MARIA, pseud. See Gleitsmann, H.

GLEITSMANN, HERTHA (MARIA GLEIT, pseud). Katrina; il. by Nedda Walker. 239p $2.50 Scribner

45-9587

"Luxembourg under German occupation is the scene of this story. Katrina, helping the old pastor organize a forbidden pilgrimage to the shrine of Our Lady, becomes involved in the Resistance movement. One breathless adventure follows another for her." N Y Times

Book Week p23 N 11 '45 180w

Kirkus 13:438 O 1 '45 90w

Reviewed by M. M. Clark
Library J 70:1139 D 1 '45 80w

"The integrity of the sturdy Luxembourgers is the keynote of the story—an inspiring one, simply and vividly told." N. B. B.
+ N Y Times p8 N 11 '45 60w

GLENDAY, ROY GONCALVES. The future of economic society; a study in group organisation. 320p $4 (16s) Macmillan

330.942 Economics. Economic policy. Great Britain—Economic policy [44-6973]

"The author ranges over a wide field of biological, historical, philosophical and economic knowledge in order to develop his theme. In brief, that theme seems to be that societies necessarily pass through various stages of development, in each of which their size, economic organisation and resources, and also the social and political dispositions of their members, are such as to produce an equilibrium. But this equilibrium is always temporary. . . In applying this principle to contemporary conditions, Mr. Glenday arrives at extremely pessimistic conclusions. There is no remedy for the ills of present-day economic society within the framework of its present organisation." Spec

Foreign Affairs 23:513 Ap '45 30w

Reviewed by L. H. Haney
Management R 34:282 Jl '45 950w

"Mr. Glenday's thinking, though influenced by the writings of Marx, Toynbee and Schumpeter, is insufficiently global in scope. He has drawn his generalizations solely from the experience of the matured economies of Britain and the United States. Asia, Africa and Latin America will furnish ample room for new growth." B. B. Seligman
New Repub 112:338 Mr 5 '45 600w

"Throughout the book, statement too often does duty for argument, and frequently conclusions drawn from the biological sciences are applied uncritically to economics and politics. There is little coherence in the development of the main theme. It is, however, significant that these pessimistic conclusions about the future of private capitalism in general, and of the British economic system in particular, proceed from the economic adviser to the Federation of British Industries." Alan George
Spec 173:228 S 8 '44 360w

"Mr. Glenday has dealt well with an important aspect of economic society, and has also thrown interesting light on urgent problems, like agricultural depression. Whether his ideas are accepted or not, his suggestive treatment has much to offer his readers."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p326 Jl 8 '44 900w

GLENNON, GORDON. Emma. 122p $1.50 (5s) Macmillan

822 45-7547

A dramatization of Jane Austen's novel. The play has been produced in London.

Christian Science Monitor p14 S 8 '45 10w

"There is very much more in Jane than elegant dialogue in and around the theme of matchmaking, and only a small part of her miraculously shrewd character-building springs out of her actual dialogue. One only has to read twenty pages of this dramatisation and then compare their content with a single page of the original novel to be made aware of this fact. She has, in a word, substance as well as subtlety. Every dramatisation we have yet seen fails to convey this quality and can communicate little more than the stylish small-talk and the rattle of china cups which are all that the inadult or unenlightened reader can discern in Jane herself." A. D.
Manchester Guardian p3 Je 6 '45 180w

"Who, if the novel were available, would prefer the play? But the adaptation is workmanlike, and those who study it will at least learn from the dialogue, which seems almost wearisomely ironical, how much the descriptive passages of the novel do to keep the irony of the conversation fresh and pointed."
Times [London] Lit Sup p249 My 26 '45 70w

"The chief trouble with 'Emma' is that if anybody on the stage finished a sentence, that would finish the play. This ancient device to keep up suspense may do once but if repeated a dozen times it is more than a modern audience is likely to endure with patience, in spite of the charm of the Austen style and the fascinating character of Emma—fascinating in fiction, that is. In life she would be a trial." W. P. Eaton
Weekly Book Review p22 S 16 '45 90w

GLICK, CARL. Double ten; Captain O'Banion's story of the Chinese revolution. (Whittlesey house publication) 281p $2.50 McGraw

951.0399 China—History—Revolution, 1911-1912. O'Banion, Ansel 45-2434

Describes the beginnings of the Chinese revolution and the part played in it by some Americans. Captain O'Banion was one of these. Under General Homer Lee, he organized and trained in America the Chinese army which overthrew the Manchu Dynasty in 1911.

Reviewed by Clip Boutell
Book Week p4 Mr 11 '45 350w

Booklist 41:235 Ap 15 '45

Reviewed by Randall Gould
Christian Science Monitor p15 Mr 24 '45 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '45

Reviewed by W. F. Sands
Commonweal 41:569 Mr 23 '45 450w

Kirkus 12:560 D 15 '44 300w

"Recommended." E. S. Brown
+ Library J 70:162 F 15 '45 110w

"Carl Glick has set down the captain's recollections simply and effectively, without embellishment or histrionics. It makes a thrilling tale of adventure and intrigue." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 11 '45 700w

" 'Double Ten' relates in detail how our law-enforcement agencies were continuously hoodwinked; how hundreds of Chinese were secretly trained, armed and smuggled in and out of the United States. This sort of thing is all right for Oppenheim, it could make exciting fiction. In its present form it is an insult to serious nonfiction." Frederick Rein
— Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 25 '45 700w

"A rousing adventure yarn."
+ Time 45:100 Mr 5 '45 50w

"Mr. Glick's account of O'Banion's recollections is filled with anecdotes of intrigue and narrow escapes. Although in places the story is sketchy and circumstantial, it sheds a number of illuminating sidelights on events leading up to the Chinese revolution." A. T. Steele
+ Weekly Book Review p2 Mr 11 '45 350w

GLICK, CARL. Mickey, the horse that volunteered; il. by Bill Crawford. (Whittlesey house publication) 62p $1.50 McGraw

Horses—Legends and stories 45-3535

Mickey was a wild Arizona colt who volunteered as a member of United States cavalry.

GLICK, CARL—Continued
The cavalrymen liked Mickey, but he was too impetuous, and after he got the men in trouble in the Philippines they sold him to a native. That was when Mickey proved his real worth to the army. For eight to twelve year olds.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p11 My 20 '45 300w
Booklist 41:273 My 15 '45
Bookmark 6:16 Ag '45
Horn Bk 21:197 My '45 70w

"Good reading."
+ Kirkus 13:160 Ap 1 '45 170w

"This seems a natural for masculine small fry. Extra large print, dashing pictures, an overenthusiastic war horse for a hero, broad, boyish humor and easy reading qualities make up for a certain lack of bite and individuality of style. . . Good fun." G. M. Williams
+ Library J 70:415 My 1 '45 70w

Reviewed by M. C. Skinner
Library J 70:951 O 15 '45 80w

"Mickey is a horse whom 8 to 12 year olds will wholly love and admire." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Ap 8 '45 150w
Sat R of Lit 28:39 My 19 '45 300w
Springf'd Republican p4d My 6 '45 110w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 8 '45 320w

GLIDDEN, FREDERICK DILLEY (LUKE SHORT, pseud). And the wind blows free. 172p $1.75 Macmillan 45-4309

Western story.

Reviewed by J. N. North
Book Week p11 Je 10 '45 310w
Booklist 42:38 O 1 '45
Kirkus 13:116 Mr 15 '45 80w

"'And the Wind Blows Free' lacks the dramatic tension of the author's 'Ramrod,' but no lover of genuine Western novels should pass it by." James MacBride
+ N Y Times p17 My 20 '45 220w
Springf'd Republican p4d Je 17 '45 180w
Wis Lib Bul 41:85 Jl '45

GLIM, AESOP, pseud. See Miller, G. L.

GLUECK, SHELDON. War criminals, their prosecution and punishment. 250p $3 Knopf 341.3 War crimes 44-47372

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Professor Glueck's book maintains an unusually high standard of legal reasoning. The analysis of the precedents, as well as of the literature on the subject, is stimulating and in most instances persuasive. On the whole, the book should be particularly useful to journalists, political scientists, and statesmen, and will undoubtedly contribute toward clarifying the controversial issue of 'war criminals.'" Hans Aufricht
+ Am Pol Sci R 39:367 Ap '45 850w

Reviewed by C. A. Anderson
Am Soc R 10:440 Je '45 800w

Reviewed by A. M. Goff
Ann Am Acad 240:150 Jl '45 430w

"The author, professor of criminal law and criminology at Harvard University approaches this problem fully aware of its complexity and of its ramifications into the fields of politics, psychology and ethics. His treatment is scholarly and his text is documented with copious notes."
+ Foreign Affairs 23:689 Jl '45 50w

"This is a highly authoritative work, backed with massive documentation, an extensive bibliography of juridic authority and a vast number of leading cases." M. H. Myerson
+ Harvard Law R 58:616 Ap '45 1900w

Reviewed by R. N. Kelly
New Repub 112:237 F 12 '45 500w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
N Y Times p12 Mr 4 '45 650w

Reviewed by G. E. Hoover
Pol Sci Q 60:128 Mr '45 550w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:33 Mr '45 240w

GLUECK, SHELDON, and GLUECK, MRS ELEANOR (TOUROFF). After-conduct of discharged offenders. (English studies in criminal science) 114p $2.50 (8s 6d) Macmillan
364.8 Crime and criminals—U.S. 45-5039

"Much of the material of this study is the result of previous researches published under the titles, 500 Criminal Careers, One Thousand Juvenile Delinquents, Five Hundred Delinquent Women and Later Criminal Careers, brought up to date by continuous study. The present work is a follow-up study of the behavior of a group of juvenile offenders after their appearance in the Boston Juvenile Court and the behavior of a group of young adult offenders after their penal experience in the Massachusetts Reformatory." Columbia Law R

Reviewed by L. G. Brown
Am J Soc 51:353 Ja '46 750w

"There are a few secondary criticisms which this reviewer feels should be directed more against the expression than against the content of the ideas presented. . . Despite the above mentioned faults, every criminologist and all persons associated with the administration of criminal law or parole should be familiar with this study. Not everyone will agree entirely with the authors' methods or conclusions, but most will be forced to admit that here is an honest and sincere attempt to provide some scientific aid to help solve a very difficult problem; the determination of the best treatment for those who have violated the criminal law." H. C. Callaghan
+ — Columbia Law R 45:800 S '45 650w

"This invaluable book manages, by the sheer art of condensation, to present an amazing wealth of hard-won information and revealing thought. The Gluecks have garnered a rich harvest and have gone farther, by careful and scientific research, than anyone else laboring in this field. Like Portia's candle this little book will cast its beams far into the darkness." Homer Cummings
+ Harvard Law R 58:1099 S '45 1700w

Reviewed by R. A. Eastwood
Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 25 '45 120w

GODBOLD, ALBEA. The church college of the old South. 221p $3 Duke univ. press 377.8 Church schools and colleges. Education—South 44-9524

"In the following pages, an attempt is made to portray the rise and character of the church colleges in the Old South, that is, in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia. A brief history of the founding of each of the church colleges is presented, together with an analysis of the motives of the religious denominations in launching these institutions of higher learning. Then follows an appraisal of their intellectual, social, moral, and religious aspects. Chapter V discusses the relationship between these church institutions and the state universities of the Old South." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"Though the book sometimes presents a confused picture because of the mass of details included, it was well worth doing and constitutes a real contribution to the history of higher education in the South." T. H. Jack
+ Am Hist R 50:549 Ap '45 550w

"This book is like an oasis in the midst of a dreary desert, a welcome relief in the arid expanse of literature referred to euphemistically as the 'history of higher education.' Of books on the history of our colleges and universities in this country there are many, but few there are which depart from the anecdotal, episodic, and eulogistic pattern of yesteryear. . . It is pleasant to record that this pattern is being broken, for there now appears from time to time a book of real merit like the present one, which upholds a new standard of scholarship and opens up a new chapter in our cultural history. . . It is to be regretted that the author fails to explore more fully the influence which the church colleges exerted, however small or great, on the development of democratic ideals and practices in the Old South." D. G. Tewksbury

+ J Religion 25:302 O '45 400w

"The subject-matter of the book is well organized and clearly presented without sectarian or regional bias. Readers will regret, however, the absence of comparison with the denominational colleges of the West and North." Carl Bridenbaugh

+ — N Y Times p21 My 20 '45 300w

GODDEN, RUMER (MRS LAURENCE FOSTER). Take three tenses [Eng title: Fugue in time] 252p $2 Little [8s 6d Joseph, M] 45-2392

An interweaving of the lives and loves of three generations of an English family. The lease on the old house in a London square where the family had lived for ninety-nine years is about to expire. As the old general, the last inhabitant of the house, relives his own life and that of his long-dead parents, two young offshoots of the family arrive, brought to England by the war. And a new life begins as the old general dies in England, shortly after the news of the death of his beloved in Italy.

"Style is of its essence, and once you are attuned to them, Miss Godden's pages have grace, pathos, and a very deft development of character." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 176:141 O '45 350w

"A work of art is an act of faith. This book is that. It gives new value to familiar objects; life, itself, is sharpened as though an all-clear had sounded." Marion Strobel

+ Book Week p10 Mr 18 '45 500w

Booklist 41:225 Ap 1 '45

Reviewed by Eveline Dienes

Boston Globe p21 Mr 21 '45 300w

"Of competent books there are enough every season, of good ones there always are some, but it is rarely that there comes a book of which it can be said: 'This is right, I would not change it one whit.' Such a book is Rumer Godden's Take Three Tenses." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 16 '45 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '45

"Nothing more lovely has been written for a long time; nothing as pure and direct has been written for a long time."

+ Commonweal 42:24 Ap 20 '45 800w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 42:72 My 4 '45 1250w

"Rumer Godden is unique in her ability to create that sense of a fey quality and at the same time never sacrifices the vividness, the sharply etched quality of realism. . . There's romance—a tenuous thread of plot, much of it by implications, and overtones and undertones that give it greater depth."

+ Kirkus 13:38 F 1 '45 250w

"The artistry of the book throughout is tender and exact. The Victorian age is drawn with a sure sense of revealing detail, and the way in which one scene or period melts into another as imagination wanders backwards or forwards in the time-sequence is suggestive. The characters and their story and the house are truly knit together in a harmony of counterpoint." H. I'A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 18 '45 220w

"I enjoyed it as I would enjoy an unselected but pleasant movie. For Miss Godden's characters make for only a soothing encounter—at worst they meet their fates with a reassuring British tranquillity; I like stories in which a house is an important member of the cast; and even the war-time servants of 'Take Three Tenses' speak encouragingly of permanence and stability. In addition, Miss Godden not only handles her own words nicely but chooses excellent ones to quote—some of T. S. Eliot's, for instance." Diana Trilling

+ Nation 160:394 Ap 7 '45 500w

Reviewed by Henry Reed

— New Statesman & Nation 29:393 Je 16 '45 50w

"This altogether ingratiating novel of English family life will appeal to two quite different groups of readers. Those who like stories of old comfortable ways of living will find it an unusually fresh version of familiar material; and restless readers who feel they cannot face another story about retired generals with beautiful nieces will succumb both to the success with which Miss Godden has individualized her characters and her method of narration, described in the title as 'a fugue in time.' " E. B. Burgum

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 11 '45 650w

"The interest of the novel lies less in Miss Godden's theories on the nature of time than in the lucid portrayal of bitter frustration concealed in the history of an apparently happy family, and in the author's nervous power to make us sense more than she tells—a rare gift in our talky times."

+ New Yorker 21:89 Mr 10 '45 140w

"In this extraordinary novel—really an experiment in technique—she tells the story of a London family and a London house over a period of some hundred years. The technique is that of the fugue, and a sentence describing Bach's fugues, written by Lawrence Abbott, introduces the book. . . In less expert hands, such a story might seem to have too much sheer fantasy, too much artifice. That it has not is a tribute to Miss Godden's subtle and beautiful style, to her vivid characterization, to the magic quality of undertone and overtone and the emotional power which pervades the book." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 28:77 Ap 14 '45 650w

Reviewed by John Hampson

Spec 174:510 Je 1 '45 90w

"The concert pianist as well as his audience desires quiet with no interruption during his performance. Rumer Godden, the author of 'Take Three Tenses—a Fugue in Time' and the reader might well demand the same privilege in order to enjoy to the fullest extent this delightful and revealing book. It is a simple tale but it requires some concentration to keep the characters clear and to recognize their motive when it appears to fully appreciate the whole." E. Y. Mohler

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 18 '45 440w

Time 45:102 Mr 12 '45 330w

"The result, at any rate, of Miss Godden's prolonged and unvarying trick of movement backwards and forwards across the years, with the actual experience of those years reduced to the airiest sort of allusion only, is more tedious than she can have bargained for. . . Miss Godden has her virtues of feminine observation and deftness of touch, but has fallen victim here to an unoriginal and somewhat sentimental device of construction."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p245 My 26 '45 480w

" 'Take Three Tenses' is a rare book indeed. Apart from its quality, apart from the story it tells, it possesses the gift of personal experience for the reader, not through identification with its characters but through charging his own memories with life." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Mr 11 '45 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 41:47 Ap '45

GOEBEL, MRS DOROTHY (BURNE), and GOEBEL, JULIUS. Generals in the White House. 276p maps $2.75 Doubleday

923.1 Presidents (United States). Generals. U.S.—History, Military 45-1582

"In this country's history, nine military men —Washington, Jackson, William Henry Harri-

GOEBEL, DOROTHY—Continued
son, Taylor, Pierce, Grant, Hayes, Garfield, and Benjamin Harrison—have marched from the battlefield into the White House. The authors have mixed biography and history in equal proportions, tracing the careers of their subjects with skill and understanding, and, while there is nothing in this survey that will startle those who know the elementary facts of American history, the book serves to remind us that our antipathy to men on horseback is probably not as pronounced as it is presumed to be." New Yorker

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 F 25 '45 400w

Booklist 41:254 My 1 '45

"The book is a skillfully fused combination of history and biography. The authors believe that the future may perhaps make additions to the list of nine generals who have to date been rewarded by the gift of the presidency. The book is readable; the material accurately presented." P. K.
+ Commonweal 41:595 Mr 30 '45 100w

"Presidential history made good reading with a novel approach, as the Marche Militaire of the nine men who went to the White House from the Army is reviewed."
+ Kirkus 12:541 D 1 '44 150w

"Interesting and thoughtful view of the American way of politics. . . For larger young people's collections." E. A. Groves
+ Library J 70:357 Ap 15 '45 70w

New Repub 112:486 Ap 9 '45 190w

Reviewed by Charles Hurd
N Y Times p6 F 18 '45 550w

New Yorker 21:79 F 17 '45 100w

"In evaluating and comparing our soldier-Presidents the authors leave themselves open to some criticism. For instance, they greatly overrate Jackson as a general. Nevertheless, this is an interesting as well as a timely book." R. A. Brown
+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 8 '45 180w

Time 45:94 F 19 '45 1050w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:26 Je '45 280w

"When the Goebels are biographers, as they are in seven of their eleven chapters, they are artists, penetrating, poised, dramatic, good-humored, succinct, but when they attempt to generalize about the generals who have become Presidents, they descend into the professorial." Lloyd Lewis
+ — Weekly Book Review p4 Ag 5 '45 1750w

GOEBEL, JULIUS, and NAUGHTON, THOMAS RAYMOND. Law enforcement in colonial New York; a study in criminal procedure (1664-1776) [conducted under the auspices of the Legal research com. of the Commonwealth fund]. (Columbia univ. School of law. Foundation for research in legal hist. Publications) 867p $5 Commonwealth fund

343 Criminal procedure—New York (colony) 44-5295

"The author's purpose in this detailed examination of criminal cases in colonial New York is to show that American law did not have a sudden beginning at the Revolution, and that the preceding age is not to be dismissed as a mere 'oafish frontier jurisprudence.' On the contrary, proceedings were 'conducted as skillfully as at York or Bristol,' with no sharp break between colonial and post-colonial times, and with the former period taking its full share of the burden of developing our system of law. Next, the authors propose to show that no description of colonial law is even remotely adequate which confines itself to an examination of colonial statutes, the law in the books, while neglecting the cases and human factors underlying this law in the books. . . Having thus blocked out their goals, the authors comment on the presumption shown by laymen who attempt to enter this highly technical and difficult field, and the shortsightedness of those—both laymen and lawyers—who assume that there ever was a single, unified 'American colonial law.' " (Ann Am Acad) Indexes.

"The thorough, painstaking research characteristic of this study sets so high a standard that it should serve as a pattern for legal historians. One could only wish that the canvas had been somewhat larger and more colorful." Samuel Hendel
+ Am Pol Sci R 38:1218 D '44 800w

"The main contribution of the authors lies in the field of the legal history of this country, a subject still in its infancy. As such it is without a superior. From the first to the last page, there is displayed a mastery of contemporary English criminal procedure, an exhaustive study of available historical materials bearing on criminal courts and procedure of the colony of New York, and a careful and mature evaluation of the data considered. There are also frequent references to the law and practices of other colonies, particularly of Massachusetts as a source of New York law and practices. With such complete and satisfactory exposition of the history of the administration of criminal justice of colonial New York, the way would appear open for an examination of the post-revolutionary period of the state, in which the later administration of criminal justice would be related to that set forth so ably in the present work." M. E. Pirsig
+ Am Soc R 10:333 Ap '45 750w

"The arrangement of the subjects is logical, and the presentation is clear. That the thousands of cases cited are accurately quoted and are an adequate cross section of all the litigation must be taken on faith, since any checkup by a reviewer is manifestly impossible. Happily, however, these points are sufficiently guaranteed by the reputation of the authors and by the level of their past performances." E. W. Puttkammer
+ Ann Am Acad 237:230 Ja '45 360w

"Here indeed is richness, and historians of American law owe the authors a debt which they can only discharge by making an adequate use of the material compiled with such industry and presented with such fullness. It is likely that even legal historians will use the volume rather as a quarry than as a book to read for sheer gratification. This is unfortunate since its subject matter is the fascinating one of crime in a society that would be interesting in its own right even if it were not an earlier stage of our own community." Max Radin
+ Columbia Law R 45:495 My '45 2650w

GOETZ, DELIA. Burro of Barnegat road; il. by Hilda Van Stockum. 205p $2 Harcourt

45-8119

A little Mexican burro, bought by a fond grandfather for his little Washington grandchildren is the center of attraction. Chula takes up life on Grandpa's Connecticut farm, and endears herself to everyone even the farmers whose corn she devoured. For ages seven to ten.

Booklist 42:39 O 1 '45

Churchman 159:7 N 15 '45 20w

"A sense of humor, which presents real people who talk as people do, children who act like children we know, and a thoroughly convincing burro, make this a richly funny story." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 21:350 S '45 110w

"Despite occasional lapses into a slightly precious flavor, the story is really funny and has very credible and likeable people. Hilda Van Stockum is not successful in the type of illustrations she has done for this book; too bad she couldn't use her tried and true techniques. These seem dated and wooden."
+ — Kirkus 13:296 Jl 1 '45 130w

"Story will provide many chuckles for boys and girls from eight to ten years and should be welcome as new material for reading aloud. Well made book with large print." A. M. Wetherell
+ Library J 70:822 S 15 '45 70w

"This is an amiable little story but it seems wordy and overlong for the slight central idea." A. T. Eaton
+ — N Y Times p26 S 23 '45 130w

New Yorker 21:134 D 8 '45 40w

"A knowledge of the ways of burros, probably gained through experience, and a lively sense of humor distinguish this story." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 S 8 '45 310w

Springf'd Republican p4d S 23 '45 120w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 19 '45 300w

Wis Lib Bul 41:128 D '45

GOETZ, DELIA. The dragon and the eagle; America looks at China; pictures by Thomas Handforth; pub. in collaboration with the Foreign policy association. 61p $1 Vanguard 327.73 U.S.—Relations (general) with China. China—Relations (general) with U.S.

45-10430

"This fast-moving story of trade relations from earliest times to the Flying Tigers between China, called the Dragon, and the United States, spoken of as the Eagle, gives an excellent background for current topics and emphasizes the great need for co-operation and understanding between countries." Library J

Booklist 42:170 Ja 15 '46

"Interesting and unusual material."

+ Kirkus 13:422 S 15 '45 90w

Reviewed by V. W. Schott

Library J 71:58 Ja 1 '46 70w

"This little book comes near to being a miracle of distillation. . . Here is a useful and readable introduction for young and adult readers to the happier chapters in the story of East-West contacts, the Sino-American relationship, which in spite of complications at times, holds the promise of even greater mutual benefits in the future." Mai-Mai Sze

+ N Y Times p8 N 11 '45 200w

GOGARTY, OLIVER ST JOHN. Mr Petunia. 320p $2.50 Creative age

45-11436

"A low-spirited clockmaker suffering from a rather far-fetched case of paranoia, an elderly planter determined to beget an heir, a wild Irish horse trader named LaTouche Plantagenet, and several frisky young ladies are involved in this [story] . . . of life in rural Virginia in the early nineteenth century." New Yorker

" 'Mr. Petunia' is a sad book, a witty book and in many respects a profound one. The raconteur of 'As I Was Going Down Sackville Street' ought to be better known in America as a poet. There is something of both his wistful poetic cadences and his occasional obscurity of utterance in his first novel with an American setting, but like a threnody—muted at times but always there—you can hear the despairing voice of the outraged Celt." Jack Conroy

+ Book Week p1 D 23 '45 1200w

Kirkus 13:442 O 1 '45 170w

"Old and new world characters abound in this swiftly moving, lusty tale, among them that gallant old rogue 'Toucher Plant' from Mad Grandeur who delights all listeners with his 'tales of derring-do.' This will make new fans for the witty Irish doctor. Heartily recommended." M. H. Zipprich

+ Library J 70:1026 N 1 '45 70w

"Members of the Oliver St. John Gogarty Club need not be alarmed to learn that this, his newest work, is a novel laid in the United States—in the Virginia of the Eighteen Twenties. For besides the fact that Mr. Gogarty exhibits a sprightly indifference to his setting, the tale has more than an adequate sprinkling of quaint Irish characters and could have been played out on the ould sod after all. . . The reviewer hestitates to take 'Mr. Petunia' too seriously. Certainly Mr. Gogarty doesn't. . . The tale is merely confused and not as grownup as it might be." Alfred Butterfield

N Y Times p20 D 30 '45 400w

"You may find Dr. Gogarty's determinedly robust humor heavy at times, but on the whole he has turned out a rather entertaining bit of foolishness."

+ — New Yorker 21:81 D 22 '45 80w

" It is difficult to 'type' this novel. It is not a mystery story, although a terrifying crime enters into it. Nor is it exactly a study of a paranoid. One might class it as a character story, with the characters rather melodramatically drawn. And, although the scene is set in Virginia, it is overlaid with a jocular Irish wit." M. M. Dickey

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 13 '46 380w

" 'Mr. Petunia' is the outline of a novel, with some caustic marginal notes by some one who thinks little of the plot or humanity; that's all." Thomas Sugrue

— Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 20 '46 420w

GOGARTY, OLIVER ST JOHN. Perennial. (Distinguished poets ser) 48p $2; autog ed $3 Contemporary poetry, 4204 Roland av, Baltimore 10

821 44-8824

"The newest book of Dr. Gogarty's poems seems to be made up of things he has done since he came to this country only a few years ago. It consists principally of episodic, descriptive and elegiac pieces, but the lyric quality for which Dr. Gogarty is justly famous is here too." Poetry

Reviewed by Katherine Bregy

Cath World 161:276 Je '45 180w

"Witty and well-made verse."

+ New Yorker 20:84 O 7 '44 40w

"In his short lyrics there is the classic flow of Gissing, Norman Douglas and A. E. Housman. There is no trace of influence from these writers, but Gogarty has gone to the same school of Horace and Virgil and the Greek lyricists. Over and above this, he has the natural use of strong and idiomatic Irish speech before it was burdened with the overfamiliar turns of current usage." Augustine Bowe

+ Poetry 65:276 F '45 420w

"His book is worthy though often wordy, its range is slight and its emphasis only occasionally strong. 'Perennial' suggests that his stature is something less than we had supposed it, as if the hero of Joyce and the confidant of Yeats were tired and satisfied to be so." Raymond Holden

Sat R of Lit 28:26 Mr 24 '45 90w

"The reader familiar with the poetry of Oliver St. John Gogarty—though the Irish doctor is better known for his work in prose—will find in 'Perennial,' his new collection, poems continuously distinguished for their classic form, their romantic manner with a touch both delicate and modern, their lively and urbane wit. . . Gogarty may lack compass and variety, but he strikes a nice balance between enchantment and reality." Ruth Lechlitner

+ Weekly Book Review p44 N 11 '45 220w

GOGGAN, JOHN PATRICK (JOHN PATRICK, pseud). The hasty heart; a play in three acts. 152p $2 Random house

812 45-4543

A play in which five patients in a British army hospital, somewhere in the rear of the Assam-Burma front, try to cheer the last days of a wounded, unfriendly young Scotch soldier, who does not know that he is soon to die.

Booklist 41:298 Je 15 '45

Kirkus 13:198 My 1 '45 20w

" 'The Hasty Heart' belongs in that too large category of plays in which the thing at stake is believed rather than felt." C. V. Terry

N Y Times p8 My 6 '45 180w

"As theatre Mr. Patrick's play is undeniably irresistible. Although it may hit below the waistline supporting its kilt, the point is that it hits many times, and always with effect. . . In spite of its shortcomings as literature, 'The Hasty Heart' does what it sets out to do behind the footlights. It is more than sentimenal.

GOGGAN, J. P.—Continued
However it overstates them, its basic concern is those emotions which, especially among men in wartime, resist statement. This is the source of its truth no less than of its effectiveness. This is why it reaches the hearts of those who sit before it." J. M. Brown
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:26 Mr 3 '45 1550w

"There is much humor and a rough tenderness in the play which makes it fresh and pleasant."
+ Weekly Book Review p11 S 2 '45 80w

GOLDMANN, FRANZ. Public medical care, principles and problems. 226p $2.75 Columbia univ. press [18s 6d Oxford]

614 Public health. Medical economics. Medical service A45-3646

"Analysis, interpretation and appraisal of development of public medical care as a social movement from fragmentary beginnings, through haphazard and piecemeal growth, to systematic planning and administration. Relative merits of insurance and taxation as methods of financing care of the sick are presented. The author states clearly and frankly current arguments for and against socialized medicine. He shows that controversy has arisen not over the principle of public responsibility for medical care but with regard to extent of its application and most desirable form of organization of medical services." Library J

"This book is a masterful marshaling of material and is highly stimulating. It is a textbook, fair and accurate in presentation and vivid in style. It should be required reading for all medical students, internes, residents and practising physicians. It is highly recommended to public health officers, hospital administrators and their trustees, and those interested in social security legislation." Kingsley Roberts
+ Am J Pub Health 35:1329 D '45 350w

Reviewed by E. S. Johnson
Am J Soc 51:176 S '45 600w

Reviewed by Alfred Manes
Ann Am Acad 242:197 N '45 350w

"Interesting, readable and highly recommended." A. I. Bryan
+ Library J 70:487 My 15 '45 120w

"At a time when various forms of socialized medicine are being discussed as possible means of improving the medical care of the public, a book such as this, which attempts to give an account of public medical care as a social movement, is particularly welcome. Dr. Goldmann, who is Associate Professor of Public Health at the Yale School of Medicine, writes clearly and out of a thorough knowledge of his subject. His book represents an important contribution to sounder thinking and doing with regard to public medical care." M. F. Ashley-Montagu
+ N Y Times p8 Jl 1 '45 320w

"Dr. Goldman writes with clarity and grace; it is a delight to encounter a serious professional study which is also highly readable. Not all readers will agree with the analysis made in this book nor with the conclusions reached. Some will wish for more tables, graphs, statistics. Others may feel that some programs with which they are familiar should have received greater attention. . . But there will be few indeed who will not agree that this is an exceedingly informative and provocative book, well worth careful study." D. A. Clark
+ — Survey G 34:488 D '45 550w

GOLDSCHMIDT, SIEGFRIED. Legal claims against Germany; compensation for losses resulting from anti-racial measures. 213p $3 Dryden

341 Germany—Claims. Jews in Germany. Indemnity 45-2386

The book is "concerned only with the legal consequences of Nazi Germany's treatment of its Jewish citizens. Are their rights protected by any higher law or principles of justice? Does the right exist whereby compensation may be claimed on behalf of those upon whom injuries have been inflicted? In a strong affirmative argument, the author relies on several sources, including natural law, minorities treaties, and the right of intervention. Stress is laid on the thesis that natural law is a part of international law; therefore 'the violation of human rights' is an 'infringement on the rights of the international legal community,' and consequently is an 'international wrong.' " (Am Pol Sci R)

"As sympathetic as the reviewer is to this point of view, it is doubtful whether it is a correct statement of the law which prevails. The hand of positivism still lies heavily upon international law. Enforcement of a 'bill of rights' between a state and its citizens by outside nations would certainly involve a rather fundamental change. On page 16, it is said that 'the test for the application of rules of international law, including the Law of Nature, is whether or not a sufficient number of jurists, statesmen, clergymen, and representatives of public opinion are convinced that the harmony of the rules with the general legal conscience of mankind makes them binding.' This is only partly true. It is the practice of states which is determinative. But perhaps these criticisms are unimportant since the author seems most of the time to be stating what should be rather than what is. Much of the book is a cogent, informed, and well-documented analysis of responsibility for damages and rules of compensation under international law; as such, it is useful, even by itself." R. C. Snyder
+ — Am Pol Sci R 39:607 Je '45 400w

"In spite of many cases of doubtful reasoning and questionable evidence, this is an excellent performance; for the weaknesses are mainly those of international law, and not of Dr. Goldschmidt." H. A. Adler
+ — Ann Am Acad 240:142 Jl '45 300w

"It is amazing and perhaps commendable that the author of this book, himself a Jew, can be so unemotional in manner in discussing the monstrous crimes visited upon non-Aryans by the Germans and those under their influence. . . Much that he says has wisdom and utility: and because of the reputation as an international lawyer that Dr. Goldschmidt enjoyed in Europe and this country until his recent death, this book will undoubtedly be consulted by those who will impose or administer terms upon the defeated Reich. But I confess I found much of the atmosphere of the book unreal and sterile." Elmer Gertz
+ — Book Week p8 Mr 4 '45 450w

Current Hist 9:127 Ag '45 50w

Foreign Affairs 23:696 Jl '45 20w

GOLDSTEIN, SIDNEY EMANUEL. Marriage and family counseling. 457p $3.50 McGraw

392.5 Marriage. Family 45-2081

"A manual for ministers, doctors, lawyers, teachers, social workers, and others engaged in counseling service." (Subtitle) Partial contents: Part I, The pre-marital conference: Legal implications; The economic basis; Biological foundations; Psychological factors; Ethical ideals; Part II, Family counseling: The cause of distress; Social treatment; Family counseling in wartime; Part III, Counseling in practice.

"The book shows a serious and methodical attempt to tell the experiences and social ideas of the author. He belongs to the school that considers that there is no personal responsibility for poverty, crime, or distress, but that the primary fault is that of society, to be corrected by passing laws to alter the social and economic pattern. . . Few physicians, health officers, or nurses will find much inspiration in this text." Haven Emerson
— Am J Pub Health 35:1330 D '45 400w

"Although familiarity with the research literature in psychology and sociology is evident, there is no attempt to review the studies. The advice is broad and general, indicating the kind of problems which come to the counselor and the type of knowledge required to meet them. Its primary value is for general orientation, and in this respect it should be quite successful." R. E. L. Faris

+ Am J Soc 51:261 N '45 150w

Booklist 41:248 My 1 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '45

"For those who have had the opportunity of reading extensively, or fairly so, the recent literature in this field, or whose professional activities have given them considerable experience in domestic counseling, Marriage and Family Counseling has little to offer in either new information or new counseling methods. . . For those who are less well informed or who have had little experience the book should prove to be a valuable guide and aid." D. S. Klaiss

Social Forces 24:126 O '45 420w

"Dr. Goldstein has performed a valuable service in bringing together in a clear yet comprehensive form the result of his years of experience as a counselor and objectifying it with a careful reading of the all too meager literature on the subject. As the first volume to appear on the new discipline of marriage and family counseling, it is as welcome as the dawn to the worker who has been struggling in the dim half-light of the night before." E. M. DuVall

+ Survey 81:157 My '45 550w

GOLDSTONE, LAWRENCE ARTHUR (LAWRENCE TREAT, pseud). V as in victim. 216p $2.50 Duell

45-9735

Detective story.

"One feels that Treat leaned over backwards to keep from coating his story with any of the usual sugared trappings and the result is an engrossing and worthwhile tale. Highly recommended." Elizabeth Bullock

+ Book Week p24 N 18 '45 150w

Kirkus 13:460 O 15 '45 60w

"The plotting of the story is excellent and the writing is as good if not better." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p27 N 18 '45 130w

"A good, realistic treatment of New York police methods, but a trifle weak on characterization."

+ — New Yorker 21:107 N 3 '45 60w

"Good—in the semi-tough bracket."

+ Sat R of Lit 28:37 O 27 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p23 O 28 '45 150w

GOLDSZMIT, HENRYK (JANUSZ KORCZAK, pseud). Matthew, the young king; adapted by Edith and Sidney Sulkin from the Polish tale; il. by Irena Lorentowicz. 256p $2.50 Roy pubs.

45-3237

"The author, a Polish teacher and head of a Warsaw orphanage in pre-war Poland, has written here a fable of a boy who wanted to be king and rule the world, but who found that in spite of his good intentions he was misunderstood and thwarted in his benevolent plans." N Y Times

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p11 My 27 '54 270w

"Matthew, the Young King, has been adapted and translated from the Polish tale by Korczak by Edith and Sidney Sulkin. The sparkling black and white interpretive illustrations by Irena Lorentowicz and the cover jacket in bright colors lend gaiety and life to a book which I like to think is a gift to the children of the whole world from the great heart of Poland." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 21:109 Mr '45 400w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Horn Bk 21:121 Mr '45 160w

"There is lively humor, increased by the inimitable drawings, in the adventures of the young King, but the core of the story is sobering, for it shows clearly how easy it is to make mistakes, even in planning to do good to other people. Though Korczak wrote this story in Polish, some fifteen years ago, and no country is named, it seems to be a prophecy of recent history in its portrayal of the plight of any small country beset by ruthless enemies."

+ Horn Bk 21:194 My '45 130w

"Fascinating reading for young and old. . . A strange and delightful humor runs through. The illustrations by Irena Lorentowicz are in black and white and catch the quality of the story."

+ Kirkus 13:109 Mr 1 '45 150w

"Story will appeal as grand adventure, and at times approaches the beloved Dr. Doolittle tales. For children ten to twelve and for adults to read aloud." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 70:268 Mr 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p12 Ap 1 '45 150w

"The brightly colored jacket of this book suggests a rollicking Polish folktale as do the full page decorations in black and white and the spirited decorative chapter headings by Irena Lorentowicz. Is it because of these exciting but rather misleading illustrations that one cannot warm up to this story. . . In its major portions the story of Matthew is not likely to appeal to American children; but adults will turn to it for the heroic record of Dr. Korczak's work with the children of Poland." B. W. Shaffer

Sat R of Lit 28:29 Ap 21 '45 270w

"One reads on, charmed by artless diction, directness of thought, deep sympathy for dreams with which the best of us enter life, with whatever disillusions the worst of us may leave it. A child gets the meaning through his emotions: it makes a man think, and go on thinking. The pictures have the same gayety that marked the artist's drawings for 'Lullaby' last spring." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 15 '45 450w

GOLDTHWAITE, EATON KENNETH. Scarecrow. 213p $2.50 Duell

45-5489

Detective story.

"The number of people who come into Dickerson's range of investigation are all human, unusual and interesting. And Goldthwaite's handling of the various threads of detection is something to sit back and admire." Elizabeth Bullock

+ Book Week p10 Je 3 '45 130w

"Top drawer."

+ Boston Globe Je 13 '45 60w

"Complicated but fair."

Kirkus 13:229 Je 1 '45 60w

"The auspicious beginning gives way to some pretty harum-scarum antics, but the author is worth watching."

+ — New Repub 112:854 Je 18 '45 100w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 Je 3 '45 110w

Springf'd Republican p4d Je 10 '45 160w

"If the main idea strikes you as pretty gruesome for light entertainment, the author came by the idea honestly enough. He's a marine himself and the book was composed on an atoll in the South Pacific. Nice going." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p15 Je 3 '45 130w

GOLDWATER, ROBERT JOHN, and TREVES, MARCO, eds. Artists on art; from the XIV to the XX century. 497p il $4.50 Pantheon bks.

704 Art. Artists 45-11131

Excerpts from the writings of painters and sculptors covering six centuries. The excerpts begin with Cennini, a Tuscan painter, a forerunner of the Renaissance, and end with Diego Rivera, the arrangement being generally chronological. The quotations themselves give a running history of art. Bibliography. Index. Cross references in the body of the work.

GOLDWATER, R. J.—Continued

"The editors of this volume have done a job that needed doing. Although one might quarrel with certain selections and regret some omissions (as is the case with all anthologies), it will serve to introduce many readers to artists they do not know. To a painter or sculptor the words of his fellows, whether they provide inspiration or provoke dissent, will be a source of pleasure and knowledge. For the critic this book will be a rich storehouse of quotation and reference. For those not skilled in foreign languages the many sections available for the first time in English will be invaluable."

+ Book Week p4 Ja 6 '46 340w

"This is probably the best-turned-out book of the year—a model of printing and production. It is also one of those essential books which meeting, the reader wonders, why on earth did no one think of compiling such a volume before? and how did painters get along before this book? It is worth all the tomes of art criticism ever written, for, as Oscar Wilde said, 'in the best days of art there were no art critics.' " Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 43:360 Ja 18 '46 600w

"It is a scholarly compilation and an outstanding example of expert editing. Much of the material has been translated into English for the first time."

+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 23 '45 360w

GOLLOMB, JOSEPH. Up at City high. 217p $2 Harcourt

45-2837

The story of a Wisconsin boy who comes to New York to enter the vast new high school—City High. There he finds so much race prejudice of various kinds that he decides to do something about it. The story of his courageous fight and its outcome follows. The time seems to be shortly after the close of the second World war.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p18 Ap 22 '45 340w

Booklist 41:241 Ap 15 '45

Horn Bk 21:197 My '45 110w

"Well-drawn background of the city, of school life, sports, rallies, etc. . . Good—and needed."

+ Kirkus 13:135 Mr 15 '45 190w

"Good, provocative story of contemporary America which will be popular with older boys and girls." A. H. McGinity

+ Library J 70:415 My 1 '45 70w

"This is a big theme—and one which John Tunis has handled more convincingly on a smaller scale. This story holds the reader with its dramatically swift tempo; its challenge is stimulating and undeniably sincere. Yet there is a certain crudeness and sentimentality about the whole which softens its impact." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p26 Mr 25 '45 200w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 1 '45 70w

"The climax comes when Jeff and Joe fight it out, and Joe, who has brought along a first-aid kit, can't resist tending his opponent's wounds between rounds. Here the dialogue, elsewhere stiff, becomes so lively and lifelike one sees how much more effective the book would have been could its characters—especially its teachers—have been earlier induced to loosen up their conversation. But this counts for little: the story is effective because it brings before a jury of young public opinion vividly outlined reports of what is going on around them, and will go on unless met by boys who mean to be men of good will." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 8 '45 450w

GOLOB, EUGENE OWEN. The Méline tariff: French agriculture and nationalist economic policy. 266p maps $3.25 Columbia univ. press

338.1 Agriculture—Economic aspects. France—Economic policy. Tariff—France

A44-4384

"A study of French agricultural problems particularly between 1870 and 1910, and the efforts of the agrarian interests to secure protection, culminating in the adoption of the Méline Tariff." Current Hist

"Dr. Golob has performed a service in collecting a great deal of material worth rescuing from oblivion. A greater degree of independence from the actors of his drama and a more generous use of the tools of economic analysis would have made it a more significant book." Alexander Gerschenkron

+ — Am Econ R 35:460 Je '45 1400w

Am Hist R 50:607 Ap '45 80w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 7:498 D '44 20w

GOMME, ARNOLD WYCOMBE. Historical commentary on Thucydides; 3v, v. 1, Introduction and commentary on book 1. 480p maps $6 (20s) Oxford

888.2 Thucydides [A45-4190]

"Mr. Gomme has planned this commentary in three volumes. The first covers introductory matter and the first book of Thucydides's 'History'; the remaining volumes are to cover the remaining books of Thucydides. . . Mr. Gomme starts by describing what Thucydides takes for granted and his self-imposed limitations, and then discusses the value of other sources for the period covered by Thucydides's history. The commentary, as the title implies, is primarily historical and gives a wealth of ancient and modern literature on the various points in Book 1." Manchester Guardian

"The book will be of great value to the professional scholar." T. B. L. W.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 25 '45 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p270 Je 9 '45 2650w

GOODEN, ARTHUR HENRY. Valley of dry bones. 237p $2 Houghton

45-1078

Western story.

Booklist 41:238 Ap 15 '45

Wis Lib Bul 41:38 Mr '45

GOODMAN, GILBERT. Government policy toward commercial aviation; competition and the regulation of rates. (King's crown press bk) 122p pa $1.60 Columbia univ. press

387.71 Aeronautics, Commercial. Aeronautics—Laws and regulations A44-5393

"The bulk of the book discusses the air-mail policies of the Federal Government. Much of the treatment is descriptive and factual. It therefore serves as an excellent reference volume on the historical development of governmental air-mail policy. The author gives little attention to the effects of the reorganization orders of April 2 and 11, 1940, transferring certain powers from the Civil Aeronautics Authority to the Administration of Civil Aeronautics and abolishing the Air Safety Board." Ann Am Acad

"In so far as the study deals with competition and the regulation of air mail rates in the period begun by the Kelly act of 1925 and ended by the Civil Aeronautics act of 1938, it is a quite competent analysis of the several laws on the subject and their administration. For example, in his evaluation of the policies of Postmaster General Brown, Goodman contributes some additional information and arguments which tend to support this official's actions. However, with a few exceptions of this kind, his study is considerably less searching than others (such as F. A. Spencer's Air Mail Payment and the Government: Brookings, 1941) already published prior to 1944." C. E. Puffer

+ — Am Econ R 35:471 Je '45 650w

"On the period prior to 1934, the book adds little to David's The Economics of Air Mail Transportation (1934). For the period since 1934, Spencer's Air Mail Payment and the Government (1941) is both more complete and more recently written." D. O. Walter

Am Pol Sci R 39:176 F '45 110w

Reviewed by C. C. Rohlfing
Ann Am Acad 238:221 Mr '45 110w

GOODMAN, NATHAN GERSON, ed. See Franklin, B. Benjamin Franklin reader

GOODMAN, PAUL. Facts of life. 261p $2.50 Vanguard
45-6866

A volume of short stories and other pieces by a New York writer. Contents: A cross-country runner at sixty-five; The facts of life; A ceremonial; Iddings Clark; The university in exile; The commodity embodied in bread; Frances; Orpheus in the Underworld; The canoeist; A statue of Nestor; A goat for Azazel; The detective story; Jonah.

"While 'The Facts of Life' (deceptive title!) is not conventional fare for summer hammock or seashore reading, it does reflect a lively, sensitive and probing intelligence. Though for a lazy reader the ideas may often appear to be misted over in obscurity and allusion, the language is always simple and some of the effects are strikingly impressive." Jack Conroy
+ Book Week p7 Jl 15 '45 360w
Library J 70:1089 N 15 '45 50w

"Among writers of the non-realistic persuasion, Mr. Goodman is unusually well-educated, imaginative, and witty, and even though, as we follow him from piece to piece, his unremitting literacy and cleverness become a bit wearing, this virtuosity must be to some extent excused as an excess of virtues. Mr. Goodman's volume contains at least one story, the title story, which is entirely delightful, and a play, Jonah, about the prophet of doom, which is both comic and wise. The fact that the collection as a whole falls short of these two items doesn't of course diminish Mr. Goodman's stature in relation to other writers of his convention. It does, however, tend to confirm an old suspicion that even the method of non-realism cannot forfeit story-telling to disputation and still be sustaining." Diana Trilling
+ — Nation 161:90 Jl 28 '45 1100w

"He is at his best in the shorter pieces, like 'The Facts of Life' and 'The University in Exile' . . . where people are allowed to talk and act for themselves, or in those like 'Frances,' 'Orpheus in the Underworld' and 'The Canoeist,' which reveal serious feelings more nearly appropriate to the seriousness of Mr. Goodman's ideas. For many of his clearly seen human figures are comic and contemptible, and make his work more limited experientially than intellectually. . . It ranges between that of Auden's 'The Orators' and that of Dreiser's 'Dawn.' At its best it has a witty and engaging awkwardness. It is seen at its worst in 'The Commodity Embodied in Bread,' a chirrupy illustrative lesson in transcendental economics which might, except for the style, have been written by Stuart Chase." R. G. Davis
+ — New Repub 113:444 O 1 '45 900w

"In this collection Mr. Goodman's high intelligence and sensibility show up better than in stories individually seen. Though the self-consciousness is crippling—ironic parentheses are everywhere—it is not the irritating self-consciousness of urbanity or exhibitionism. When feeling breaks through, genuine passion illumines the cramped lyricism and the often distorted form. But the combinations are queer and the results unexpected." Marjorie Farber
+ — N Y Times p7 Jl 1 '45 650w

"A volume of mocking, literate, and often witty short pieces by a non-realist of extreme virtuosity. The title story, a brief play called 'Jonah,' and 'University in Exile,' which is a description of a dinner party for a group of ill-assorted refugees, are the best of the collection and are all, in one way or another, delightful."
+ New Yorker 21:70 Ag 11 '45 80w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue
Sat R of Lit 28:10 Ag 11 '45 750w

"Of the stories here, The Facts of Life and The University in Exile are the most effective creations of situation, problem, and character. . . The rewriting of ancient myths, Orpheus in the Underworld and A Statue of Nestor, is poetically and philosophically rewarding. The play, Jonah, is a divertingly colloquial serio-comic reinterpretation of the Biblical narrative."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:9 S '45 160w

"There is an acrid flavor about many of [these stories], but it is pleasing like wood smoke; and, while there is nothing of the 'popular short story' anywhere in the book, there is not one tale that fails to improve, to illuminate a wider area of human feeling, upon re-reading. If the dramatic piece with which the volume closes does have its cryptic elements, as well as propounding the story of Jonah in a novel and ironic manner, the author's brief preface to it is as arresting as it is personal." Iris Barry
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 8 '45 500w

GOODSPEED, EDGAR JOHNSON. Problems of New Testament translation. 215p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press
225.5 Bible. New Testament—Versions
A45-1321

"In this volume, Dr. Goodspeed has selected for study some [115] passages, his practice being to set down first the familiar King James translation of a phrase, together with the original Greek term which it represents. Then he explains the specific problem involved, noting various alternative renderings which have been suggested, and concluding with his own considered judgment in the matter." Christian Science Monitor

Book Week p10 Mr 25 '45 130w
Booklist 41:332 Jl 15 '45
Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 2 '45 420w

Reviewed by M. S. Enslin
Crozer Q 22:284 Jl '45 500w

"Ministers will find this book illuminating in the preparation of sermons and all readers of the Bible would profit by possessing it."
+ Kirkus 13:132 Mr 15 '45 170w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:9 Je '45 200w

GORDON, CAROLINE (MRS ALLEN TATE). Forest of the South. 245p $2.50 Scribner 45-9169

Sixteen short stories all of them about the South. The first story is about a woman captured by the Indians; others are about Civil war times; and some are about Alec Maury, whose great loves were hunting and fishing.

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers
Book Week p17 S 23 '45 70w
Booklist 42:110 D 1 '45

"Although this is the first time that the distinguished novelist, Caroline Gordon, has published a volume of short stories, she has long been recognized as a skilful craftsman of the shorter form of fiction. The late Edward J. O'Brien selected one of her stories as the best of its year and dedicated his annual collection to her. She has received the O. Henry prize award. . . Distinguished as are these stories, they are forgotten almost as soon as the book is closed. It is well to remember that an almost infallible test of greatness is the way a story sticks in the memory." Sister Mariella
+ — Commonweal 43:50 O 26 '45 320w

"Pleasant reading."
+ Kirkus 13:375 S 1 '45 150w

Reviewed by Marjorie Farber
New Repub 113:543 O 22 '45 750w

" 'The Forest of the South' is not a haphazard collection of stories but a carefully arranged exhibit of work by a serious artist in prose. Its first virtue is an almost ponderable integrity. For a book of seventeen short pieces unlinked by plot or character it gives a remarkable impression of completeness. It seems to say, abundantly and precisely, all it means to say; it leaves no gaps. Caroline Gordon's writing is beautifully American." Richard Sullivan

GORDON, CAROLINE—Continued
+ N Y Times p6 O 7 '45 1000w

"Pace has never distinguished Miss Gordon's work, but on the other hand, few writers have so admirable a talent for creating by suggestion, and in these stories she makes you sense a great deal more than she tells about the morals and manners of her Southern gentry."
New Yorker 21:85 S 22 '45 80w

"There is a flowing vividness about grand folk and plain ones in these stories of Caroline Gordon which, even when they are trivial as stories and become mere anecdotes, lifts them into high quality by contrast with most American short stories now being written. . . Only the stories about Alex Maury, Miss Gordon's elderly modern Southern gentleman and sportsman, bored me. There I felt a thinness of character, not of story." Jonathan Daniels
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:40 O 27 '45 360w

Reviewed by Edrie Van Dore
Springf'd Republican p8 O 12 '45 240w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:10 D '45 280w

"Four of the stories in this collection—'The Ice House,' 'The Long Day,' 'The Brilliant Leaves' and 'All Lovers Love the Spring'—are good. 'Her Quaint Honour' is excellent. The others are slight or, more often, exasperating." William Maxwell
+ — Weekly Book Review p4 S 23 '45 900w

GORDON, LELAND JAMES. Economics for consumers. 2d ed 666p $3.75 Am. bk.
339.4 Consumption (economics) 44-8048

"The earlier edition of Professor Gordon's book, published in 1939 [Book Review Digest, 1939], has been brought up-to-date by a discussion of the wartime problems of consumers and expanded by the addition of new material on such topics as weights and measures. Among the new sources on which Professor Gordon has drawn are the Twentieth Century Fund study Does Distribution Cost Too Much?, the Harvard Business School study The Effects of Advertising by Neil Borden, the final findings of the federal government's Consumer Purchases Study, and the 1940 Census. From first-hand knowledge of the Office of Price Administration he has compiled a detailed history of its work." Am Econ R

"Professor Gordon has set out as his main objective 'to discover and point the way to wiser consuming practices calculated to promote human welfare.' He has shown clearly and in detail the pitfalls into which consumers fall when spending money, due to human frailty and to imperfections in the economic system. He gives much valuable advice and information regarding budgeting, buymanship, coöperative purchasing. . . In addition to his practical advice for consumers, Professor Gordon has included a discussion of the rôle of the consumer in the economy. Not many economists today, however, are satisfied with the theories of pure competition which Professor Gordon uses as a working basis for his analysis." H. S. Lathrop
+ — Am Econ R 35:479 Je '45 1100w
School & Society 60:320 N 11 '44 50w

Reviewed by C. E. Warne
Survey 81:245 S '45 500w

GORDON, ROBERT AARON. Business leadership in the large corporation. 369p $3 Brookings 658 Industry—Organization, control, etc. Corporations—U.S. 45-1115

"Big business corporation in terms of its operation, functions, company practices and policies, based on a detailed study to determine who are business leaders and how they exercise their control." Library J

"This book is provocative in content if not in style. The style is straightforward, perhaps somewhat on the heavy side. The content, which is sufficiently indicated by the title, is of great importance to the three classes of readers to whom the book is addressed—economists, business men, and public-spirited members of the general public. Because Dr. Gordon has endeavored to write comprehensively on so broad a topic and to address simultaneously so many different readers, his book will appear sometimes highly technical and sometimes very commonplace. However, the book is a genuine contribution to economic literature, for it will add to knowledge and, more important, will provoke controversy, the life of thought." R. S. Meriam
+ — Am Econ R 35:468 Je '45 1250w

"While this book presents much useful material for the student of business organization, it leaves one with a feeling of superficiality of organization and analysis. Although it deals with a very important aspect of present society, it sheds little light on the nature of business leadership or on the business system in which it operates." B. B. Gardner
Am J Soc 51:349 Ja '46 300w

Reviewed by H. E. Dougall
Ann Am Acad 241:183 S '45 650w
Library J 70:220 Mr 1 '45 50w

Reviewed by Ordway Tead
Survey G 34:299 Je '45 200w

GORIS, JOHANNES ALBERTUS, ed. Belgium; chapters by George W. Carpenter [and others]. (United nations ser) 478p il maps $5 Univ. of Calif.
949.3 Belgium—History. Belgium—Civilization A45-2228

"Fourth volume in the 'United Nations Series.' Small libraries will find the combination history and yearbook, done by the best Belgian and American scholars, answering many questions and furnishing much good reading. Cultural and economic, as well as historical background of Belgium and the Belgian Congo is given by twenty-eight writers." Library J

"This addition to the 'United Nations Series' is both timely and welcome." T. H. Reed
+ Am Hist R 51:112 O '45 700w

"The scholar may make certain objections to the historical parts of the book, but every American who has to deal with Belgian problems of the present and the future will find it to be of unique value." Paul Honigsheim
+ — Am J Soc 51:257 N '45 900w

"The volume is intended to be informational rather than inspirational. Many of the topics contain materials of book length which are perforce condensed to chapter size. The literary style is further impaired by accurate but somewhat dull translations. The work, however, always appears substantial and reliable, lacking the more lurid characteristics of 'enlightenment for a purpose.'" M. D. Irish
+ — Am Pol Sci R 39:828 Ag '45 450w

"Admirable volume. . . Both experts and laymen will derive much profit from the reading of this book." Albert Hyma
+ Ann Am Acad 241:173 S '45 450w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 My 20 '45 270w
Booklist 41:299 Je 15 '45
Current Hist 9:127 Ag '45 50w
Foreign Affairs 23:696 Jl '45 20w
Geog R 35:690 O '45 130w

"Maps and illustrations make the book even more valuable. Good investment for any library." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 70:264 Mr 15 '45 70w

"It is, of course, not easy in a book of this type to strike a happy medium between 'official' and critical presentation of facts. Though the book might have gained by a stronger emphasis of the critical part, it is on the whole by the wealth and diversity of its material and by its high standards of presentation an indispensable guide to the knowledge of present-day Belgium and its background. Perhaps the best single chapter in the whole book is the brief introductory essay on 'Land and People' by the editor himself. In masterful condensation he succeeds in presenting the essence and the flavor of the Belgian scene." Hans Kohn
+ N Y Times p14 Ag 5 '45 480w

"Dr. Goris and his collaborators have avoided the danger of making the book a mere 'tribute to Belgium,' in the sense of a piece of national self-glorification. There should be a wide welcome for this well-designed and competently executed study."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p254 Je 2 '45 1300w

"The authors naturally write with enthusiasm, but their accounts are not unduly patriotic or nationalistic. There is, however, inevitably some repetition or overlapping of material in the chapters, and their separate treatment does not always bring out organic evolution and important relationships. Being intended for the general reader the volume has a few good illustrations, an excellent index, and a very useful up-to-date list of references for further reading."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:27 Je '45 240w

"This latest volume is particularly relevant because, as the editor notes, 'there is no other general book of recent date on Belgium.' To supply this need, Professor Robert J. Kerner as editor for the series, and the distinguished Flemish poet and critic, Jan-Albert Goris, as editor of this volume, have assembled a valuable symposium in thirty chapters, written by leading Belgian statesmen and scholars, with the collaboration of eight American specialists and one from Holland. The pleasing format, clear illustrations, inspired editing, explicit index and compact bibliography augment the value of the work. Only the maps, in scope and number, fall somewhat short of the high standard. There should be at least one more, to show the bounds of Belgian provinces, and supplement that indicating the location of Belgian towns." Geoffrey Bruun
+ — Weekly Book Review p8 My 13 '45 550w

GORIS, JOHANNES ALBERTUS. Strangers should not whisper. 260p $2.75 Fischer, L.B.

940.53493 World war, 1939—Belgium. National characteristics, American 45-2283

"A collection of editorials and short essays written for News from Belgium, the official publication of the Belgian Information Centre in the United States, by the Belgian Government's Commissioner of Information in this country. Mr. Goris, an urbane and intelligent publicist, discusses Europe, America, the case for idealism in international affairs, and the rôle of small nations in the future." New Yorker

---

Reviewed by H. L. Reich
Book Week p4 F 25 '45 550w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 21 '45 450w

Foreign Affairs 23:687 Jl '45 30w

Kirkus 12:557 D 15 '44 150w

"Although material is doubtless interesting and informative in original form the desirability of reprinting in book form is questioned. Not recommended." Margaret Owen
— Library J 70:162 F 15 '45 70w

"M. Goris has not merely information, he has wisdom; he has not merely prose, he has style. He is in a tradition of mellow cynicism that descends from Rabelais and Montaigne. . . The 'spectacle of human lunacy,' in his phrase, saddens him, but it does not embitter him. And so it happens again and again in this charming collection of editorials and articles that one of them begins like an essay by Montaigne—and concludes like a handout from the Belgian OWI. One has every sympathy with M. Goris' patriotism, just as one has every sympathy with the oppressed Belgians, but as a matter of strategy—? Well, M. Goris has charmingly discussed such noteworthy Belgians as Vesalius, Sax, Damien and Cardinal Mercier. But I, for one, venture to believe the best propaganda for his native country would be for M. Goris to give us a collection of essays worthy of his talent." H. M. Jones
N Y Times p7 F 18 '45 450w

New Yorker 21:77 F 24 '45 80w

"After 'Belgium in Bondage' this new book by the Belgian Commissioner of Information in this country is rather disappointing. . . No doubt, M. Goris, though not a scholar of Mr. Brogan's rank, could write a fine study on the intensified interrelations of American and Continental thinking—which, after all, is one of the very few promising by-products of our present world disaster." Robert Pick
Sat R of Lit 28:30 F 17 '45 500w

"These forty-three essay-editorials, now printed in book form, have literary quality in the best tradition of English essays. They are full of grateful memory of his country's past made so alive that his readers may enjoy an avid voyage of discovery. . . As a bedside book, 'Strangers Should Not Whisper' is full of sober thoughts, capsules of wisdom and arguments that count; as a week-end book, it is stimulating as cocktails and as nourishing as soup. 'On Daydreams and Democracy' and the good sideswipe at Beverly Nichols in the chapter that follows are marked in my copy. But then, almost anywhere in the book, as in the Bible or a book of Thurber cartoons, if you open at random, you find yourself the object of a needed lesson, or the butt of observant wit." Ernestine Evans
+ Weekly Book Review p3 F 18 '45 1000w

GORKY, MAXIM, pseud. (ALEXEI MAXIMOVICH PYESHKOFF). Seven plays [tr. by Alexander Bakshy, in collaboration with Paul S. Nathan]. 396p $3.75 Yale univ. press

891.72 A45-2975

This volume contains a short introductory article: The theater of Maxim Gorky, by Alexander Bakshy, and seven plays: The lower depths; Barbarians; Enemies; Queer people; Vassa Zheleznova (Mother); The Zykovs; Yegor Bulychov and the others.

Reviewed by Maurice Gnesin
Book Week p8 Je 10 '45 450w

Booklist 41:336 Jl 15 '45

"In the opinion of his countrymen, Gorky's work more than that of any other Russian writer gives complete expression to the 'Russ soul.' The seven plays in this volume, a cross section of his dramatic output, are worth reading for that reason, as well as for the excellence of their structure and character portrayal."
+ Christian Century 62:709 Je 13 '45 60w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 11 '45 30w

Current Hist 9:327 O '45 50w

"His characterizations stand the test of time and reading. In spite of the fact that in some of his late work he satirized the Soviet, he is accepted today as a classic dramatist whose work is regularly produced by the Soviet theatre."
+ Kirkus 13:123 Mr 15 '45 170w

Reviewed by George Freedley
Library J 70:489 My 15 '45 50w

Reviewed by E. R. Bentley
Nation 161:17 Jl 7 '45 240w

New Yorker 21:79 Je 9 '45 70w

Weekly Book Review p10 S 23 '45 130w

"The extremely difficult problem of translation has been adequately handled in this collection, though the vitality and freshness of Gorky's idiomatic expressions occasionally fall flat in the English. But these versions are a vast improvement over the dull, stilted, hopelessly uniform Victorian renderings that have served, unfortunately, to introduce Americans to the classics of Russian literature." E. J. Simmons
+ Yale R n s 35:155 autumn '45 600w

GORMAN, HERBERT SHERMAN. Wine of San Lorenzo. 472p $3 Farrar

45-2151

Novel of the time of the Mexican war. It opens with the battle of the Alamo and ends shortly after the surrender of Santa Anna's Mexican forces to General Scott. The hero is an American boy, Charley Livingston, adopted after the fall of the Alamo by Santa Anna, rechristened Juan Diego, and brought up in the Mexican fashion.

GORMAN, H. S.—Continued

"Despite—or maybe because of—Gorman's headlong methods, history here flows glowingly before your eyes with all the flash and panoply of Technicolor. And that, I do not need to tell the lighter minded of you, is one very nice way to absorb it. Unless you are too disdainfully intellectual to accept it on its own terms, Gorman's lively account of our Mexican War can give you considerable joy and—more likely than not—a good bit of interesting information." F. H. Bullock

+ Book Week p3 My 27 '45 450w

Booklist 41:301 Je 15 '45

"From a slow start, Mr. Gorman's novel swings into a colorful and dramatic version of the events of the war. To readers who have no liking for military history, and especially to those who shun any portrayal of the horrors of war—for war was no prettier then than now, albeit on a smaller scale—this will not be the most enjoyable book to be found in the spring lists. There is much plain language in it and much unvarnished fact. It deserves attention, however, for its serious study of events and causes and especially of Mexican society in all its strata, for its scope and variety, and the ability of the author to handle a big subject without flagging." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 My 31 '45 650w

"A meaty novel. . . The military aspects make this definitely a book for men primarily."

Kirkus 13:72 F 15 '45 170w

Reviewed by M. P. McKay

Library J 70:488 My 15 '45 70w

"The book is at its best in its battle descriptions. The defense of the Alamo has the breathless immediacy of on-the-spot reporting, and equally vivid are the battles of Buena Vista and Chapultepec: the heat, the sounds and smells, the blood and dirt, the forlorn gallantry of Crockett's men, and the Mexican boy soldiers of Chapultepec, outnumbered and doomed." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p4 My 27 '45 450w

"A story by a writer who combines a respect for history with a lively narrative style."

+ New Yorker 21:77 Je 2 '45 80w

"The ablest parts of the book are the military chapters. Any reader will gain from it a good impression of how the Mexicans rallied under their peacock leader in 1846 to fight a hopeless war. . . Mr. Gorman gives us as good a battle-narrative as we have lately had in fiction." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 28:36 Je 23 '45 550w

"Herbert Gorman has made history very alive, but it's a history of persons not moving masses. Even the glimpse of Scott watching the battle of Buena Vista, the Yanquis' entry in Puebla, the storming of Chapultepec—all are seen in personal terms. Be that as it may; it is a good book full of the acrid smell of battle, richly crowded with drama and beauty. It is Mr. Gorman's best novel." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 3 '45 650w

"One is convinced that the sweeping historical novel simply isn't Mr. Gorman's dish. His talents have been proved in numerous prior books—the novel, 'Gold by Gold' and his studies of James Joyce are examples of a searching and able intelligence. But he is not a Sabatini or a C. S. Forester." J. C. Long

Weekly Book Review p6 Je 10 '45 600w

GOSSET, RENEE PIERRE-. Conspiracy in Algiers, 1942-1943; tr. from the French by Nancy Hecksher. 248p pa $1 Nation, 20 Vesey st, N.Y. 7

940.5322 World war, 1939-1945—Diplomatic history. World war, 1939-1945—Africa, North 46-88

An account of the political aspects of the American invasion of North Africa. The author is a French journalist, a follower of De Gaulle, who regards the American Robert Murphy, as the chief villain of the tragedy of Darlanism.

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 Ag 12 '45 330w

Foreign Affairs 24:162 O '45 100w

"'Conspiracy in Algiers' is a book every friend of democratic freedom should read and not only because of the historical facts it so ably recounts. It is important because Admiral Leahy is now more than ever the éminence grise of American foreign policy, because Robert Murphy is still the chosen instrument of that policy, because the subordination of moral purpose to unprincipled technique of power is still draining the reservoir of American prestige throughout the world." Percy Winner

+ Nation 161:88 Jl 28 '45 1250w

"The Nation has rendered great service in making this excellent book available in English translation." H. E.

+ New Repub 113:230 Ag 20 '45 650w

"The account of the 'conspiracy' in French North Africa vividly captures the play of characters, the plot and counterplot, the frustration, shame, and renascence of France. This is not the definitive work on the politics of expediency; but it is an illuminating report." Frederick Gruin

+ Sat R of Lit 28:34 O 20 '45 470w

"This book, by an enterprising and intelligent French woman journalist who was on the scene at Algiers throughout the incredible happenings, is not the final report by any means. But it is the most complete and informative one we have yet had. And though it reads like a detective story with bizarre plots and counter-plots and as fine an assortment of rogues, double-crossers, traitors, condottieri and ignoramuses as you are likely to find in a dozen books of fiction, Mme. Gosset manages skillfully to keep the emphasis in her book on the political significance of the events she describes." W. L. Shirer

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ag 12 '45 1500w

GOSSIP, ARTHUR JOHN. Experience worketh hope. 208p $2 Scribner [8s Clark, T.]

252 Sermons 45-9299

"A book of twenty sermons . . . Dr. Gossip, one of the greatest of British preachers, does not make programs or map policies to meet the specific emergencies of our time, but he speaks to its condition and helps to restore its soul." Christian Century

"This is really great preaching, arresting without ever being sensational, original but never eccentric."

+ Christian Century 62:734 Je 20 '45 60w

Reviewed by Clifton Macon

Churchman 159:15 Ag '45 150w

Kirkus 13:366 Ag 15 '45 120w

GOTTSCHALK, MAX, and DUKER, ABRAHAM GORDON. Jews in the post-war world. 224p $3 Dryden

296 Reconstruction (1939-)—Jews. Jews—Political and social conditions 45-4299

"This volume represents an effort to set forth the background against which the problems [of the Jewish people in the world of tomorrow] can be realistically understood and to provide some of the ideological materials for their solution." Introd

Reviewed by J. M. Yard

Book Week p2 My 27 '45 270w

Booklist 42:2 S '45

Bookmark 6:3 My '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 24 '45 600w

Foreign Affairs 24:161 O '45 30w

"A sound book for the informed world citizen."

+ Kirkus 13:197 My 1 '45 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p541 N 17 '45 600w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:37 S '45 280w

"If the future of the Jews were to rest on the detachment and indecision of the scholarly authors now under review, it is evident they would have no future whatever. Their book provides valuable information, but little or feeble guidance—much fuel but no light." Marvin Lowenthal

+ — Weekly Book Review p16 My 13 '45 900w

GOULD, JOHN. Farmer takes a wife. 153p $2 Morrow

630.1 Farm life 45-8960

Humorous sketches of life on a Maine farm as they appeared to the farmer's wife, a girl who came from Boston originally but did not want to return, and to the author's salty old uncle.

"Spicy with vernacular anecdote and that inimitable New England humor—humor as independent and flavorful as Boston baked beans and vinegar pie. The book is amusingly illustrated with pen drawings." O. C.

+ Book Week p12 N 18 '45 60w

Booklist 42:105 D 1 '45

"A delightful book, and we recommend it with proprietary pleasure. It will certainly find its way to many a Christmas tree, and charm anybody who enjoys salty, down-East humor and remembers the good old days on the farm. F. Wenderoth Saunders, whose humorous sketches accompany Mr. Gould's dispatches in these columns, has delightfully illustrated the book." E. D. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 9 '45 480w

"Neighborly conversation piece whose good manners are ingratiating, whose effortless humor and perceptions are restful, whose bland innocence covers a wicked appreciation of every situation."

+ Kirkus 13:393 S 1 '45 170w

"There is a theory that New Englanders are sparing with the spoken word. That is true. They are laconic. Mr. Gould's book suggests an explanation. They are saving up their best words for their writing." Charles Poore

+ N Y Times p6 N 25 '45 850w

Reviewed by R. E. Morgan

Springf'd Republican p4d D 23 '45 450w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p20 D 9 '45 310w

GOULD, KENNETH MILLER, and COYNE, MRS JOAN, eds. Young voices; a quarter century of high school student writing selected from the scholastic awards; foreword by Dorothy Canfield Fisher. 401p $3 Harper

810.8 School verse and prose 45-10354

"Some 20 years ago Maurice R. Robinson, publisher of Scholastic Magazine, inaugurated the Scholastic Literary Awards, a series of prizes open to high school students throughout the country. His purpose was to encourage writing among the secondary schools and to offer a tangible reward to the young authors whose contributions were selected by a board of judges. The interest of high school writers in this annual competition has subsequently reached such a peak that from 6,000 to 10,000 manuscripts are submitted every year to the editors of the magazine. 'Young Voices' is the winnowing of 20 years of these contributions, the best of the fiction, the verse and the essays submitted." Book Week

" 'Young Voices' does precisely what its editors no doubt hoped it would accomplish. It presents a cross-section of literary adolescent America. Almost any one of the contributors here represented could develop into a literary professional, and even if the majority do not it is pleasant to think of them swelling the numbers of a literate and intelligent reading audience. Scholastic Magazine deserves to be congratulated for the tangible encouragement it has given the young authors of America." J. T. Flanagan

+ Book Week p6 D 16 '45 600w

School & Society 62:360 D 1 '45 20w

"There have been other collections of high school writing, but none like this—none from which it is possible to come close, not only to articulate youth at high school age, but to successive young folks as they reached that time of life over a quarter-century. Even more important, as Dorothy Canfield Fisher points out in a warmly appreciative foreword, is the tremendous breadth of their geographical distribution." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Ja 13 '46 360w

GOULD, SYLVESTER EMANUEL. Trichinosis. 356p 128il $5 Thomas, C.C.

616.74 Trichina and trichinosis SG45-1

"A detailed, factual text on trichinosis which, with few exceptions, draws upon the entire significant literature on the subject. Each phase is thoroughly and competently dealt with so as to leave a clear impression of the many varied aspects of the disease. The pathology and protean symptomatology are especially well handled." U S Quarterly Bkl

"The excellence of the work leaves little opportunity for criticism. It would have added much of local interest if the epidemiology of the disease in the United States had been discussed at greater length. Likewise, the occurrence of clinical trichinosis in other countries is treated rather sketchily. The chapter on morphology, while adequate for the public health worker, would hardly satisfy the nematologist. . . Issue might be taken with points of a more minor character, but the book is unusually free from error. It is the first good monograph on trichinosis since that of Stäubli in German in 1909 and should be of great value as a reference book to all who have occasion to deal with the subject." W. H. Wright

+ — Am J Pub Health 35:409 Ap '45 450w

"Aside from some minor mistakes in grammar the style is adequate and simple, and the material so subdivided and indexed as to make reference easy. There are numerous illustrations."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 1:41 Je '45 120w

GOVAN, MRS CHRISTINE NOBLE (J. N. DARBY, pseud). Jennifer's house. 337p $2.50 Houghton

45-2275

Character sketch of a beautiful, acquisitive woman. Isabel came to the gracious Southern estate of Riverridge to be companion to its aging mistress. When Jennifer died, Isabel had determined that Riverridge was the thing she desired most in the world, and married twice, without love, to keep possession of it. But to the end. altho Isabel was mistress of Riverridge, it remained in spirit "Jennifer's house."

"When Christine Noble Govan writes of the earth 'with its incessant beauty,' she often captures a moody feeling, pleasantly lulling. When for a brief scene, dogs hold the center of the stage, they come heart-warmingly alive. Her rendering of Negro dialect shows a good ear. And there are touches which indicate a writing talent. But having said as much, praise is exhausted. This novel, which is a muddle of the romantic and the realistic, is shallow stuff. It deals with people and Miss Govan does not write of them with insight or veracity. Her noblest characters speak meanly, her strong people are weak, and there is sloppiness in the handling of her material so that one is left wondering what was intended." Dorsha Hayes

— + Book Week p8 Mr 18 '45 340w

Booklist 41:209 Mr 15 '45

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '45

"Strong, popular elements here, with glamor of period and place (the turn of the century in the South) where the aristocratic colonial estate of the Tremonts was unique in retaining its beauty and dignity in a fast deteriorating milieu. . . No moonlight, roses and honeysuckle this, but full decollete in the portrayal of a regal way of life and substantial romance, tempered by realism, adeptly interwoven and narrated."

GOVAN, C. N.—Continued
+ Kirkus 12:84 F 15 '44 250w

"Acceptable, of minor importance." H. A. Wooster
Library J 70:164 F 15 '45 50w

"The picture of a lovely but doomed way of life with picturesque memories of the early Nineteen Hundreds is pleasantly set forth in a novel for nostalgic, placid and genteel reading." Barbara Bond
+ N Y Times p24 Mr 11 '45 130w
New Yorker 21:89 Mr 10 '45 80w

Reviewed by H. J. Sloan
Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 15 '45 120w

Reviewed by Page Cooper
Weekly Book Review p10 Mr 11 '45 450w
Wis Lib Bul 41:47 Ap '45

GOWEY, HARRIET E. The room behind the mantle. 167p $1.50 Dorrance 45-5596

"When American Don and Dixie, twin brother and sister, came with their mother to spend a summer in Cornwall, they had no idea what exciting holidays lay before them. The mystery began with a white-bearded man whom the twins christened the Ancient Mariner. . . Then Dixie, touching a secret spring by chance in the wall of her room, literally fell into a secret chamber. Nor was that all, for while Don was industriously and somewhat transparently shadowing the wrong person, a real Nazi spy appeared on the scene to be outwitted by Dixie and the pretended old man." N Y Times

Christian Century 62:160 Je 27 '45 20w

"The story moves at top speed, and makes easy and mildly exciting reading—if the reader can reconcile himself to the improbabilities of the plot." A. T. Eaton
+ — N Y Times p18 Jl 8 '45 130w
Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 19 '45 120w

GRAF, MAX. Legend of a musical city. 302p il $3 Philosophical lib.
914.361 Vienna. Music—Vienna

Pictures the city of Vienna and its long heritage as a city of music. The author, once critic and professor of music in Vienna, thinks that Vienna will again become a great music center. He includes reminiscences of musicians he has known.

"Max Graf is known as the man who introduced Freud's psychoanalysis into musical aesthetics. If this is taken into account, a feeling that this book has been 'written down' cannot be denied. Nevertheless, if it offers nothing to the scholars, it will be enjoyed by those who love music, Vienna and the charming reconstruction of the never-to-be-again." D. M. Weil
+ Book Week p7 D 30 '45 550w

"Casual reader will find the book entertaining and informative, while the student will discover interesting details, not supplied in textbooks. Delightful silhouettes by Otto Boehler deserve better reproduction." H. M. Schweiger
+ Library J 70:1087 N 15 '45 140w

GRAFFIS, HERBERT BUTLER, ed. See Esquire (periodical). First sports reader

GRAHAM, FRANK. Al Smith, American; an informal biography. 242p il $2.50 Putnam
B or 92 Smith, Alfred Emanuel 45-10012

A popular anecdotal biography of this New York political leader, four times governor of the State of New York and Democratic candidate for the presidency in 1928.

Reviewed by Clip Boutell
Book Week p2 D 23 '45 270w
Booklist 42:148 Ja 1 '46

"Neither a deft nor penetrating study—although those satisfied with a superficial picture will feel they know New York's favorite son. . . Graham slides over his weaknesses and mistakes, many of which—if brought to the surface—would have strengthened, not weakened the portrait of a good American. Easyreading, but not the book it might have been. That is still to be written."
Kirkus 13:461 O 15 '45 150w

"It is full of stories told by him and about him, but does not give details concerning important bills and commissions of his political career as given in Up From the City Street by Norman Hapgood and Henry Moskowitz, published in 1927. Graham's book has the details of his later life and ends with his death. Recommended." E. F. Kelly
+ Library J 70:1024 N 1 '45 110w

"In the pleasant and engaging style with which Mr. Graham has written biographies of baseball players, he has told in this book the outlines of the story of a man whom many regard as the most fascinating personality of our time. His technique involves the copious use of anecdote, and he has assiduously collected scores of them, of which many are revealing and many quite insignificant." J. M. Proskauer
+ Sat R of Lit 28:10 D 22 '45 750w

"Scholars in years to come will inevitably chronicle the Smith era and make penetrating analyses of the governor and all his activities, but as a brief and informal resume of the subject Mr Graham's understanding little book with its nostalgic illustrations should prove entirely adequate." C. B. Moore
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 6 '46 800w

"The able sports writer, Frank Graham, whose ventures into biography have heretofore been confined to such sports figures as Lou Gehrig and John McGraw, now turns his hand to the life story of Alfred E. Smith—who saw only one prizefight in his life, and who had but little less use for baseball. Yet in Graham's hands the story is perhaps more warm and much more full of little human details than if it had been told by some political expert. There are many omissions, however." Stanley Walker
+ — Weekly Book Review p20 N 25 '45 600w

GRAHAM, FRANK. Brooklyn Dodgers; an informal history. 248p il $2.75 Putnam
796.357 Brooklyn, New York. Baseball club (National league). Baseball

Story of the Brooklyn Dodgers from the beginnings of the club in 1883 to the last hit of the 1944 season.

Reviewed by Warren Brown
Book Week p6 Je 3 '45 370w
Booklist 41:298 Je 15 '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '45

"Any baseball fan will get a kick out of the inside stories that Graham, Sports Editor of the N.Y. Evening Sun tells. Dodger fans will eat it up. Each period of baseball history is made interesting but the McPhail-Durocher period is unbelievably fascinating."
+ Kirkus 13:171 Ap 15 '45 150w

"Authoritative, appreciative, completely readable account of Brooklyn's beloved 'bums.' . . Will appeal to all baseball fans. Recommended for young people's collections." Margaret Scoggin
+ Library J 70:588 Je 15 '45 100w

"After sober and respectful tribute to Lou Gehrig, John McGraw and the New York Yankees in three excellent earlier works, Frank Graham now goes slumming. In electing the Brooklyn Dodgers for appraisal and analysis he has plunged from the sublime to the ridiculous, forsaken the immortal for the inept. His report on these chronic maladroits is temperate and tolerant, painstaking and accurate. There's the rub. I suspect that Mr. Graham is too sane a sports writer, too formal a historian, to give the Bums their delirious due. So raffish a theme demands a satirist, say Dan Parker or Dean Swift, or a paradoxist, say G. K. Chesterton." Richard Maney

N Y Times p7 Je 3 '45 900w

"Mr. Graham writes what is an easily readable book for those who happen to care about reading books on baseball. A few of the anecdotes are amusing, and tend to confirm the spiritual portrait which the late Ring Lardner wrote about baseball players. Judging from Mr. Graham's anecdotes, it is not possible to claim that Lardner exaggerated. In addition, Mr. Graham gives us a sense of the personalities of some of the figures who have played a role in the history of this ball club." J. T. Farrell

+ Sat R of Lit 28:18 Je 23 '45 1250w

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 1 '45 260w

Weekly Book Review p8 Jl 15 '45 230w

GRAHAM, FRANK DUNCAN. Audels power plant engineers guide. 1458p il $4 Audel

621.1 Steam engineering 45-6229

"A practical treatise with examination questions and answers for engineers, mechanics and operators covering theory, construction and operation of power house machinery including steam boilers, engines, turbines, auxiliary equipment, etc. Fully illustrated." Subtitle

Library J 70:891 O 1 '45 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:38 Jl '45

GRAHAM, LLOYD. The desperate people. 195p il $2.50 Foster & Stewart

973.3 U.S.—History—Revolution. U.S.—Politics and government—1783-1865. U.S. Constitutional convention, 1787 45-9273

"Mr. Graham bases his case for the formation of a world government now on the contention that the issues facing the world 'are almost exactly the same' as those that confronted the peoples of the thirteen American States in 1787. Acknowledging that there are greater differences in language, he maintains that these are more than offset by the extraordinary developments in transport and communications, now truly global in scope." N Y Times

"Unfortunately, Mr. Graham ignores the enormous differences of history, political and economic organization, race, religion, cultural levels and world outlook among the peoples of the world today. However admirable his goal may be, his approach to it is hardly realistic in skipping over such seemingly insuperable difficulties."

N Y Times p34 O 7 '45 310w

"This is a well-written book. The historical summaries and conclusions are usually accurate and logical. They offer both a challenging solution to the most serious problems facing the world today and an interesting review of one of the most pregnant periods in our history." R. A. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 S 18 '45 150w

Reviewed by L. B. Hill

Springf'd Republican p4d O 7 '45 650w

"Writing with lively colloquialism, Mr. Graham has made these early struggles readable, even exciting. His real objective, however, has been to give heart of hope to present-day war-sickened men and women the world over, to this day's 'desperate people.' We, too, he says, are in urgent need of political rescue, not in an inadequate UNO. but in a 'Solid coercive union.' And what the men of Philadelphia did, we, too, can accomplish for our time." Frances Witherspoon

+ Weekly Book Review p34 D 2 '45 550w

GRAHAME, KENNETH. First whisper of "The wind in the willows"; ed, with an introd. by Elspeth Grahame. 94p $1.50 Lippincott [6s Methuen]

823 45-2713

The Wind in the Willows was based on bedtime stories told to the author's young son, and on letters which followed the boy to the seashore, for he had refused to leave home until assured that Mr Toad's story would be continued. The letters are given here, with another story of Kenneth Grahame's, and with an introduction by his wife. Some tributes paid to the author at his death are also here reprinted.

"Mrs. Grahame's literary limitations are evident, but her Victorian style with its capitals and underscorings has a quaint, delightful flavor. Her gift for describing incidents enables her to build up the characters of 'Daddy' and 'Mouse' through a series of revealing episodes until we see them both quite clearly as two rare and sensitive people." J. N. North

+ Book Week p4 Ap 1 '45 550w

Booklist 41:223 Ap 1 '45

Reviewed by E. A. Laycock

Boston Globe p17 Mr 28 '45 80w

Reviewed by Frederick Thompson

Commonweal 42:52 Ap 27 '45 140w

"A delightful book for those older readers who love Kenneth Grahame's writing."

+ Horn Bk 21:200 My '45 110w

"Devotees of the book and author will find this delightful reading, and for that special audience, a real 'find'."

+ Kirkus 13:31 Ja 15 '45 90w

"Added memorial to a life too little known. For all libraries in which children are loved or perfect prose appreciated." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 70:264 Mr 15 '45 120w

"There is much interest, as well as pleasure, in this glimpse one gets of the genesis of so well-beloved a book." M. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 16 '44 120w

Reviewed by Margaret Lane

New Statesman & Nation 28:109 Ag 12 '44 850w

Reviewed by Nancy Flagg

N Y Times p8 Ap 1 '45 480w

"An enchanting little book." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:28 Ap 21 '45 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p369 Jl 29 '44 550w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p3 Ap 1 '45 450w

Wis Lib Bul 41:52 My '45

GRAJDANZEV, ANDREW JONAH. Modern Korea [pub. for] Int., secretariat, Institute of Pacific relations. 330p maps $4 Day

915.19 Korea 44-47020

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Reviewed by A. C. Bunce

Am Econ R 35:695 S '45 1300w

"This is a scholarly study." Roy Hillbrook

+ Current Hist 8:155 F '45 110w

"A good book on Korea has long been high on the list of desiderata in the field of international relations. With the appearance of the present work this lacuna has been filled about as satisfactorily as is possible in view of the fact that the author had to depend largely on Japanese sources. Even so, he is able to document the oppression, economic as well as political, to which the Korean people have been subjected by Japanese rule."

+ Foreign Affairs 23:521 Ap '45 80w

Reviewed by Helen Mears

New Repub 113:53 Jl 9 '45 430w

"This is no quickly confected tract for the times. It is a careful research study, begun long before Korea came back into the headlines, and sponsored by that very useful organization, the International Secretariat of the Institute of Pacific Relations. . . Although the book is thick with statistics, it is not written in a spirit of mathematical dispassionateness." M. E. Cameron

+ N Y Times p16 My 27 '45 650w

"The publication of Mr. Grajdanzev's Modern Korea has been expected for some time by everyone interested in Korea. It is a most welcome source of factual material for stu-

GRAJDANZEV, A. J.—Continued
dents of modern Korea, with its up-to-date and comprehensive information on almost all phases of Korean life, data which have heretofore been unavailable except in the Japanese language. That information is conveniently presented by the use of some 250 tables and charts which supplement the analysis of the text. . . . In showing the problems which will confront a new Korean state, Mr. Grajdanzev will probably be criticized for making the situation seem more easy of solution than his evidence in previous chapters indicates. It is undoubtedly true that the Koreans will be faced by critical problems and will need all the support and aid that can be extended them." G. M. McCune
+ — Pacific Affairs 18:103 Mr '45 700w
Scientific Bk Club R 16:4 F '45 120w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:27 Je '45 160w

GRANACH, ALEXANDER. There goes an actor; tr. by Willard Trask. 279p $2.75 Doubleday

B or 92 Actors and actresses—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.

The author of this autobiography was a European actor who came to this country in 1938 and was playing the part of Tomasino in A Bell for Adano when he died. This story of his life covers his boyhood in a small Galician village, son of the Jewish baker, his years in Berlin under Reinhardt, and his service in the Austrian Army in World war I. It closes with his return to Berlin in 1919 and his choice for the role of Shylock.

"The story is told with exuberance, humor and with a sometimes pungent idiom; and like a true character actor, he makes his associates alive and vigorous figures. So much so that the book has more the quality of a novel —though one doesn't doubt its authenticity— than an exercise of the perpendicular pronoun." H. T. Murdock
+ Book Week p9 Je 24 '45 450w
Booklist 42:16 S '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '45
Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt
Commonweal 42:388 Ag 3 '45 1100w
Kirkus 13:121 Mr 15 '45 210w

"Mr. Granach is every bit as fine a writer as he was an actor, so this volume enters the ranks of immortal theatrical autobiographies, which are extremely rare. His early life in his Jewish family in Galicia is every whit as important as the war years, his later acting successes in Germany which led to his ultimate triumph as Shylock. This is brilliantly written. Recommended for literature as well as theater collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 70:529 Je 1 '45 80w

"To good and bad [times] alike Granach brings a strong sense of living and a sense of living his life as best he could. Sometimes, though not often, he is excessive and sentimental, sometimes his sentiments deteriorate into the banal—conceivably because he is not a writer and is expressing himself laxly, or without a knowledge of the traditions in writing. But most often he is warm and dispassionately ironic, and what is omnipresent is a sense of gentleness and compassion and friendliness." Harvey Breit
+ N Y Times p6 Je 10 '45 440w

" 'There Goes an Actor' is a fine book, moving and merry, and full of earthy wisdom." F. C. Weiskopf
+ Sat R of Lit 28:24 Ag 18 '45 550w

"Perhaps not everything that Alexander Granach tells of in this book happened exactly as he said it did. Many of the stories have more the air of fantasy than of fact. But none of this interferes with the essential integrity that shines through the work: the people, their suffering, their loves, their hopes, the meaning of their experiences are true and important."
+ Theatre Arts 29:671 N '45 550w

"Granach's is a story strange enough to most of us, in our easier world, fascinating, crude, and filled with the drive that can lift the human spirit from a peasant's dung hill to the baroque splendors of Reinhardt's Festival Theater." W. P. Eaton
Weekly Book Review p2 Jl 8 '45 360w

GRANT, ELLIOTT MANSFIELD. Career of Victor Hugo. 365p $3.50 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Hugo, Victor Marie, comte
A45-3685

"Though devoted primarily to the great nineteenth century French master's literary career, this sympathetic study introduces sufficient material about his personal and political activities to form a fairly rounded general biography. The many phases of this Romanticist's life are authoritatively set down in a straightforward, yet interesting manner; while the liberal inclusion of selections in French more than support the author's enthusiastic bias." Library J

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Jl 29 '45 450w

"The detailed analyses of the poems, novels, dramas and Hugolian philosophies do not make for popular appeal; the student of French literature will be the more appreciative reader. Extensive bibliography. Recommended." H. G. Kelley
+ Library J 70:529 Je 1 '45 110w

"According to Plato, whoever undertakes to judge another man must have three virtues: Be informed, and bold, and kind. The author of 'The Career of Victor Hugo' is admirably learned and has the full courage of his sometimes quite personal convictions. I do think he is too kind, but probably Professor Grant would retort that I have been too assiduous a reader of a 'maliciously intelligent' Sainte-Beuve." Horatio Smith
— + N Y Times p4 Jl 22 '45 700w

"Apart from its great merits as a scholarly, compact account of Hugo's writings, Dr. Grant's book will do a real service if it sends only a few readers to Hugo's poetry." R. E. Roberts
+ Sat R of Lit 28:39 S 22 '45 750w

"Hugo's ability as a craftsman in poetry is recognized, the power of his satire, his feeling and dignity. Concise and readable, with critical bibliography and index, this scholarly work should be valuable to the general reader and specialist alike."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:4 D '45 340w
Reviewed by Albert Guerard
Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 26 '45 700w

GRANVILLE-BARKER, HARLEY GRANVILLE. Use of the drama. 98p $1.50 Princeton univ. press

809.2 Drama—History and criticism

"Author is veteran playwright-producer-director, associated with famous London Court Theatre seasons, responsible for brilliant new concept of staging offered at Wallack's, New York in its last 1915-16 season. His lectures to American students are herein revised and placed in permanent form. He is concerned with the educational possibilities of the drama and wishes to discourage most college students (except the most brilliant and talented) from aspiring to any position in the theater except that of a trained, cultured and participating audience." Library J

Christian Century 62:1065 S 19 '45 100w

"A series of essays rather for the theorist and student to transfer into reality than for the casual reader of theatrical literature."
Kirkus 13:267 Je 15 '45 150w

"Marred in spots by historical gaffes, it is nonetheless highly recommended for all reference and drama collections." George Freedley
+ — Library J 70:684 Ag '45 110w
Reviewed by Harry Levin
New Repub 113:292 S 3 '45 1600w
School & Society 62:144 S 1 '45 30w
Theatre Arts 29:733 D '45 280w
Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Weekly Book Review p16 S 23 '45 180w

GRAUMONT, RAOUL, and HENSEL, JOHN. Splicing wire and fiber rope. 114p il $2 Cornell maritime

677.7 Knots and splices 45-3379

"This description of the varied methods used in splicing wire and fibre rope, is well illustrated with numerous explanatory diagrams and photographs. The authors have attempted to include every known type of wire and rope splice. There is a short section on the reeving of blocks, and a glossary of knot and rope terms." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 41:296 Je 15 '45

"Recommended."

+ Library J 70:307 Ap 1 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:15 Ja '45

"This new book rightly takes up first the art of handling wire rope. It makes the subject so simple and clear that any amateur in the habit of handling a few tools should be able to get by without personal supervision. This marks quite an advance, since wire rope splicing has always been gingerly set aside as the sole province of an expert rigger. As a matter of fact, a wire job can result in as smooth and pretty a piece of work as an old-fashioned fiber splice." G. W. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 30 '45 360w

GRAVES, GEORGE. Trees, shrubs, and vines for the northeastern United States. 267p il $3 Oxford

635.976 Trees—U.S. Shrubs. Climbing plants 45-10215

The main portion of the book is an alphabetical arrangement by genera of over 600 species of ornamental woody plants of the northeastern United States, with brief descriptive and cultural notes. Other chapters and lists are: Woody plants as landscape material; Deciduous trees; Evergreen trees; Woody plants of shrub-like habit; Climbing and clambering vines; Woody plants for groundcover, banks, and underplantings; Woody plants for rock gardens; How to shop for trees, shrubs, and vines; The problem of pruning.

Booklist 42:180 F 1 '46

"The halftones are excellent. The text is descriptive as well as informative."

+ Commonweal 43:246 D 14 '45 70w

Kirkus 13:216 My 15 '45 100w

"No one questions the horticultural standing of the author and because of this we expected a more original and helpful presentation. The errors are those of omission rather than of commission." E. C. Hall

Library J 70:748 S 1 '45 80w

Springf'd Republican p4 N 17 '45 160w

GRAVES, ROBERT. Hercules, my shipmate [Eng title: Golden fleece]. 464p $3 Creative age [12s 6d Cassell]

45-8179

A retelling of the mythological tale of Jason and the Argonauts, in which the story is told as history, with stress on the two supposed chief emotions of the early Greeks—the love of food and of women.

"Robert Graves tells wonderfully well in 'Hercules, My Shipmate' the rich and ribald story of Jason and the Golden Fleece. In a fitful burst of understatement the publisher describes this as a lusty book. Even a far lustier word than lusty would fall remarkably short of encompassing the exhilarating gamut of mood and magic, of glory and rascality, lying and loving that cascade through these riotous tales within tales. There is enough in 'Hercules, My Shipmate' of everything that storytellers revel in to make a literature." Wendell Johnson

Book Week p1 S 30 '45 1050w

Booklist 42:94 N 15 '45

Reviewed by E. P. Richardson

Commonweal 43:244 D 14 '45 650w

"A tour de force that is more than worthwhile in its panorama of the ancient world where scholarship and ingenuity combine for a richly tapestried epic. . . A new venture for the author of the Claudius books; a work of creative scholarship."

+ Kirkus 13:280 Jl 1 '45 210w

"Richly readable, thoroughly classical yet individually interpreted, this is a labor of love important to students, culture-seekers and readers. Obligatory for all libraries." E. L. Lewis

+ Library J 70:890 O 1 '45 100w

"It is above all as a piece of sheer storytelling that the novel excites enthusiastic admiration. For all the detailed descriptions of people, landscapes, and things, descriptions which to a non-classical reader seem accurate, the story never stands still for a moment, and at the bottom of every serried page you are farther on in time than you were at the top and all agog to learn what happens next. The style of the telling, though dignified enough for the subject, is that of to-day, breaking into colloquialisms when occasion demands." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 8 '44 300w

"How much of 'Hercules, My Shipmate' is sound historical and geographical conjecture I am not in the least competent to judge: such questions as occurred to an untrained reader like myself were satisfactorily answered in the book's fascinating jumble of a historical appendix. As story, however, Mr. Graves's new novel is excellent entertainment, and this despite the moments when it is overburdened with detail." Diana Trilling

+ — Nation 161:472 N 3 '45 300w

Reviewed by James Pope-Hennessy

New Statesman & Nation 28:440 D 30 '44 480w

"Well, it was something while it lasted, that voyage of Jason's. Nobody ever forgot Lemnos or Samothrace, just the way no soldier will ever forget Paris. 'Hercules, My Shipmate' is above all else a swell yarn, a modern virtuoso performance of storytelling that takes off from a Greek legend." Saul Levitt

+ N Y Times p6 N 4 '45 700w

"The book has a marked factual quality, not only because of the painstakingness of the details of the voyage itself but because of some more or less exhausting discussions of the complicated theology of the time. Once Mr. Graves gets the Argo afloat, however, he has a lively story to tell—of violent death, double-dealing, grand larceny, and seduction —that should startle anybody who has considered the ancient Greeks a race of noble athletes. Hercules, who joins the expedition merely to break the tedium of his Labors, is a powerful, credulous, truculent drunkard. A remarkable book, and possibly one of considerable lasting interest."

+ New Yorker 21:104 O 13 '45 230w

"To this epic tale Mr. Graves brings all of his versatile talents—his impressive historical scholarship, his lively historical imagination, his powers of sweeping and vivid narrative." Walter Havighurst

+ Sat R of Lit 28:62 O 13 '45 900w

"At all stages of human history men have been fascinated by stories of travels and adventures; among the histories and legends coming down to us from classic times, few can have reached a wider or more delighted audience in the western hemisphere than that of Jason and the Argonauts and their quest. Robert Graves tells their history once again in The Golden Fleece; tells it with zest and brilliance, so that this ancient tale, first heard in boyhood, still delights, excites and enchants me. . . Each reader will find favourites for himself from the motley throng aboard the galley: among my own are Orpheus the singer, Butes, who knew such a fund of lore about honey, and the jocular, sharp-tongued Idas." John Hampson

+ Spec 173:560 D 15 '44 600w

Reviewed by H. W. Marr

Springf'd Republican p4d O 14 '45 410w

Time 46:102 O 15 '45 700w

GRAVES, ROBERT—Continued

"Mr. Graves has given to scholars much to think about and to query and to the general reader an epic story rich in background and incident and told with great gusto. It is not easy to compare the achievement of this work with that of 'Belisarius,' 'Sergeant Lamb' and the Claudius books, but both as a work of creative scholarship and as a piece of entertainment it deserves to rank highest."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p593 D 9 '44 500w

"For the illiterate, and most of us in this age without classical learning are that, reading this book is like cutting one's way excitedly through a jungle of place names and golden boughs and bushes. The book is a riot, now uproarious, now sad, always full of salt and honey. Nothing one knows of men and marines, the Seabees, the Air Corps or the Navy, guerrillas or the Infantry comes amiss in the pleasure of general recognition of how heroes then, as now, behave, what gallantries they contrive or are forced into, what opportunities for procreation they take advantage of, and what a rug even a golden fleece can be. The present and the past, like two pictures glued to the same cardboard and gazed at through a stereoscope, hold one bound." Ernestine Evans

Weekly Book Review p3 S 30 '45 1050w

GRAY, ARTHUR AMOS. Men who built the West. 220p il maps $3 Caxton printers

978 West—History. Frontier and pioneer life—West 45-7051

The story of the opening of the West, from the Mississippi river to the Pacific coast, written for high school age. Includes brief biographical sketches of some of the leaders of the day. Many illustrations. Index.

"Rough times given somewhat tame treatment for educational rather than entertainment purposes."

Kirkus 13:272 Je 15 '45 90w

"Of particular value to boys and girls of junior high school age; of interest to any history student." Nelle McCalla

+ Library J 70:754 S 1 '45 70w

"Intended for junior high school age, this book seems to talk down to the reader, style is disjointed and it is doubtful that it would hold a young person's attention. . . Not recommended." E. A. Groves

— Library J 70:754 S 1 '45 50w

"School libraries need it in the East; those in the West will be pretty sure to get it. . . Kit Carson has a chapter to himself, so do Uncle Sam's Camels and the pony express. This is a reliable background for dime-novels, Westerns or teen-age lives of pioneers." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 29 '45 360w

GRAY, AUSTIN KAYINGHAM. Teresa; or, Her demon lover. 385p il $3.50 Scribner

B or 92 Guiccioli, Teresa (Gamba) contessa. Byron, George Gordon Noël Byron, 6th baron 45-8879

Story of the life of Teresa Gamba-Ghiselli, whose chief claim to fame is that she was the last inamorata of Lord Byron. "Though this is a story, not academic biography, it is based on the facts as they are recorded in printed books and, to a much lesser extent, in unpublished manuscript. A bibliography of the printed material is attached." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by Bergen Evans

Book Week p2 N 4 '45

Booklist 42:163 Ja 15 '46

"Mr. Gray has done a superb job. To discover a new slant on Byron, to write a scholarly, careful book that smells not of the lamp but of April violets, is no small feat." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 43:337 Ja 11 '46 650w

"A perceptive, authentic biography although Teresa is overshadowed by her illustrious associates. Good reading."

+ Kirkus 13:448 O 1 '45 180w

Reviewed by Eric Bentley

New Repub 114:26 Ja 7 '46 180w

"Mr. Gray's skill as story-teller makes his biography as good as a novel. Readers may ironically be reminded of Strachey's brilliant work on Queen Victoria, but Gray is a kinder man than Strachey. He handles dozens of historical persons with a combination of sympathetic insight and objective wit which brings them nearly all alive. The immense and painstaking research behind this book keeps it from slipping into that anomalous blend of truth and balderdash which vitiates so much romantic biography." Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p1 N 4 '45 700w

"No more fictional, or more scholarly, for that matter, than many of the 'biographies' of the Romantic Period, and considerably less malicious, if you care to take those times that way."

New Yorker 21:104 N 3 '45 160w

"Mr. Gray's study of the strange case of the Countess Guiccioli is thorough, sensible, brightly written, and full of entertainment. Except for a few frankly imaginative passages, it is convincing to the mind and most of these fanciful flights suggest or divert." Leonard Bacon

+ Sat R of Lit 28:64 O 13 '45 1450w

Springf'd Republican p4d N 25 '45 700w

"Mr. Gray's tale is, of course, fascinating, incredible and quite lively. Some of his writing is not too happy and certainly he underestimates Byron. But in this great wealth of gossip about a galaxy of important and celebrated people over a long stretch of time, his very material carries him buoyantly along. Among the dirty linen, the ridiculous husbands, the bickering and household quarrels, the two great figures of Byron and Shelley emerge in all the glory of genius, their human weaknesses notwithstanding. And there is even a certain dignity, too, about this peculiar woman who outlived them both so long and whose reminiscences and memoirs have added so much to what we know of them." Iris Barry

+ Weekly Book Review p12 O 14 '45 550w

GRAY, ELIZABETH JANET. Sandy. 233p $2 Viking

45-3446

Story of Sandy Callam's seventeenth summer, spent in a New Hampshire village. Sandy tried to hold down a job, and made a good many mistakes; she formed some new friends; she fell in love; and finally gave up the idea of college for the UNRRA. For older girls.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p13 Je 3 '45 230w

Booklist 41:257 My 1 '45

Bookmark 6:16 Ag 1 '45

"Here is another spirited seventeen-year-old girl to be added to Elizabeth Janet Gray's fine list of real persons."

+ Horn Bk 21:197 My '45 110w

"There is no attempt to reach any conclusions, but the problem is one that many girls are facing today, and the handling of it is convincingly done."

+ Kirkus 13:66 F 1 '45 150w

"This is an excellent up-to-date story that will be very popular with older girls." E. E. Frank

+ Library J 70:493 My 15 '45 50w

"A story that girls will read with satisfaction and fellow-feeling." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 29 '45 130w

"Better-than-average light fiction for the teen-age girl who is not yet mature enough to prefer adult contemporary novels."

+ New Yorker 21:134 D 8 '45 50w

"It is a sensitive, honest, observant portrait of a young girl in 'our time,' beset by its problems, and facing them with the honesty and courage that young people are showing everywhere. They will be the first to claim it. The most carping critic among their elders can find no fault with it." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:36 My 19 '45 550w

Springf'd Republican p4d My 13 '45 120w

"I went through it without stopping, and so will practically any girl who has read Mrs. Gray's 'Fair Adventure' and knows with what humor, sympathy and sense she can unfold the day as a girl lives it. Even in these troubled times, summer days at seventeen in New England, surrounded by young people you've liked all your life, can be a sort of little paradise. In the story, these things happen to you and make you happy." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 22 '45 400w

"The rippling laughter, the honest good will, the hope and silliness of Sandy's own age in America are in this good story." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 My 20 '45 400w

Wis Lib Bul 41:55 My '45

GRAY, JAMES. Pine, stream and prairie; Wisconsin and Minnesota in profile. (The American scene) 312p map il $3.50 Knopf

917.75 Wisconsin—Description and travel. Minnesota—Description and travel 45-3464

Informal, anecdotal history of Minnesota and Wisconsin from pioneer days to the present.

" 'Pine, Stream and Prairie' is good reading. Despite signs of haste it is a provocative appraisal of two important and interesting commonwealths. Few readers would demand more statistics, and fewer still would quarrel with the complimentary things that James Gray has to say about Minnesota and Wisconsin." J. T. Flanagan

+ Book Week p8 Ap 22 '45 850w

Booklist 41:253 My 1 '45

"Both the people and the land are well worth knowing. This book is a pleasant introduction to both." R. M. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 My 2 '45 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '45

"From general to specific, this offers a composite picture of the region which is vigorous, entertaining and intelligent."

+ Kirkus 13:52 F 1 '45 150w

"Vivid picture of the beauty, natural resources, leading cities, educational institutions and outstanding citizens of the two states. Book ends on a note of optimism concerning the attitude of the citizens of the states concerning world co-operation and international order. Recommended." H. P. Bolman

+ Library J 70:354 Ap 15 '45 100w

Reviewed by Jerome Mellquist

Nation 161:161 Ag 18 '45 330w

"Possibly the best brief introduction to the region now available."

+ New Repub 112:798 Je 4 '45 120w

"Some chapters at the end on the Mayo Clinic, the Lunt's place at Genesee, Wis., and the Villa Louis at Prairie du Chien seem a little tacked on—the clock is obviously running down—and I could wish that he had given us something on the dialect and anecdote of the region. But these are minor quibbles. His book is strong where many regional books are weak—in interpretation and in description of attitude. It is written with charm and grace. It is exciting with ideas." Horace Reynolds

+ — N Y Times p15 Jl 8 '45 700w

"All in all Mr. Gray has written a book that should be a model for all future regional books. He has given us an affectionate portrait (not a photograph) of one section of the United States and has shown us how and why its particular Americans differ from those of other sections. His aim has been that of a good portrait painter, to capture something of the very essence of his subject's personality, and he has succeeded admirably. A series of interesting photographs have been incorporated in the book." M. S. Ulrich

+ Sat R of Lit 28:26 Jl 28 '45 900w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:30 S '45 180w

"The proofreading on this book is bad. The photographs could hardly have been better or of finer selection. And the book covers a lot more ground than its modest subtitle would indicate. It is a grand piece of description and interpretation of an important and fascinating region." Stewart Holbrook

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 15 '45 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 41:53 My '45

GRAYSON, ALICE BARR, pseud. See Grossman, J. S.

GRAYSON, CHARLES, ed. Half-a-hundred; tales by great American writers; with an introduction. 530p $3 Blakiston

Short stories—Collections 45-5278

Included in this volume are short stories by Conrad Aiken, Louis Bromfield, Marc Connelly, William Faulkner, Dashiell Hammett, Ben Hecht, Ernest Hemingway, MacKinlay Kantor, Christopher Morley, S. J. Perelman, Ernie Pyle, Ellery Queen, John Steinbeck, Jesse Stuart, James Thurber, Thornton Wilder, Richard Wright, and others.

Booklist 42:19 S '45

"The stories vary in merit but all are entertaining. If there is a limitation it is that they will appeal more to men than to women, but they are not stories exclusively for men. Twenty-four of the stories never appeared in book form before. The book is definitely a good buy."

+ Boston Globe Je 6 '45 80w

"It would be hard, in fact, to think of any type of modern tale that is not represented here. And if it does seem that Captain Grayson occasionally works too hard to find little-known stories (there are surely a dozen better ones by Nunnally Johnson than 'Twenty Horses,' and by Joseph Hergesheimer than 'Triall by Armes') the weak sisters are few. The over-all effect is of popular entertainment, which is the point of the whole thing, and never mind the subtitle's boast about 'great' writers—as if there were fifty of them functioning at once in this or any country." J. K. H.

+ — N Y Times p8 Je 24 '45 400w

"Mr. Grayson has departed from the time-honored anthology pattern of choosing material from other anthologies by presenting a collection of little-known tales of well-known writers. This is an intelligent and welcome procedure and it has produced a volume of unfamiliar and lively reading. The fact suggests itself, however, that the better-known stories of these fifty writers are better known because they are better stories. There is also the question of whether all these authors deserve that 'Great' in Mr. Grayson's title."

+ — New Yorker 21:78 Je 9 '45 110w

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 1 '45 480w

GRAYSON, DAVID, pseud. See Baker, R. S.

GREEN, CHARLES H. Headwear workers; a century of trade unionism. 269p $2 United hatters, cap & millinery workers int. union, 245 5th av, N.Y. 16

331.881874 Trade unions. United hatters, cap and millinery workers international union 44-47683

"This history of the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers International Union, written by an officer of the union, traces the development of trade unionism among the headwear workers since 1823, when the first union of hatters was convicted of 'conspiracy' in New York because its members refused to work with a hatter who accepted wages below the union standard." Management R

"According to the blurb on the jacket of the book, this history of unionism in the headwear industry was written by a man who spent ten years as a labor reporter and another nine as an official of the union. And from this fact stem the major virtues and deficiencies of the book. It is a well-organized and well-

GREEN, C. H.—Continued
written history of a century and a quarter's struggle to organize and to establish union conditions in an industry which tended to be 'sweated.' Too much of the book, however, is devoted to a description of the day-to-day problems of the union itself; too little to analysis and interpretation and to the economic environment in which the union grew and developed." C. O. Swayzee
+ — Am Econ R 35:742 S '45 500w

"While it was the author's intent to write an objective history of the development of unionism in this industry, this book may be regarded as a cursory survey, in which many important developments are sketched in such broad strokes as to be inadequate to the student of labor relations. . . The left-wing press and other documents emanating from left-wing sources apparently have not been consulted. This work may, therefore, be regarded as a good survey of the rise of trade unions in the headwear industry from the official union standpoint." A. G. Taylor
+ — Ann Am Acad 238:221 Mr '45 650w
Management R 34:158 Ap '45 60w

GREENBERG, DAVID B., and SCHINDALL, HENRY. A small store and independence. 243p $2 Greenberg
658.87 Retail trade 45-6202

A practical book for the owner or potential owner of a small retail store. Partial contents: What kind of store and where?; How much capital do you need?; On signing a lease; Make yours a good-looking store: show windows; How to buy; Budgeting your first year in business; Stock turnover; Control your markdowns; Records—and a simple bookkeeping system. Includes a section of special types of retail stores, by experts in the fields discussed.

"This is likely reading for many a demobilized G.I. who has vague ideas of making himself a postwar livelihood as a retail merchant." L. K.
+ Book Week p8 Jl 8 '45 180w
Booklist 42:7 S '45
Kirkus 13:393 S 1 '45 80w
Library J 70:1090 N 15 '45 60w
Weekly Book Review p16 Ag 5 '45 130w

GREENBERG, LOUIS. Jews in Russia; v. 1, The struggle for emancipation. 210p $3 Yale univ. press [20s Oxford]
296 Jews in Russia (A44-2218)

"This is going to be a very important series, a thorough survey of the fortunes and misfortunes of the Jews in Russia from the earliest days to the present time, to be completed in three volumes. The initial volume gives a very brief summary of the background materials prior to the latter part of the eighteenth century and of the relation of Jewish thought to the French Enlightenment, but begins its more detailed study with the first attempt at Jewish emancipation and the policies of Alexander I and Nicholas I. The cultural, economic and political status of Russian Jews in the mid-nineteenth century is discussed at length. Alexander II's reign began with promise but ended in disappointment, in this as in so many fields of reform, though he must be credited with the emancipation of the serfs. Revolutionary movements, the assassination of the tsar in 1881 and a new stimulus to reaction ended this period." (Christian Century) Index.

"The appearance of this volume in the present state of world Jewish history is most opportune. . . Embodying material widely scattered, it constitutes an essential contribution to the study of modern Russian social history. . . There is an excellent bibliography and index." George Waskovich
+ Am Hist R 50:331 Ja '45 900w
Reviewed by A. G. Mazour
Ann Am Acad 237:218 Ja '45 550w
Christian Century 61:751 Je 21 '44 150w

GREENE, JEAN. Forgetful elephant; pictures by Tibor Gergely. [32p] $1 McKay 45-6997

Picture story book about a loveable little elephant who disgraced his family by forgetting his part in the circus. For ages five to seven.

"Tibor Gergely's pictures are often amusing and go well with this lively story."
+ Kirkus 13:335 Ag 1 '45 80w

"Nice lithographs in color by Tibor Gergely. Rather fragile board binding but good sewing. Good print. Recommended for children from five to eight." F. W. Butler
+ Library J 70:752 S 1 '45 50w

"Max, as drawn by Tibor Gergely in all his apologetic awkwardness, shambles irresistibly into one's affection. This is a volume for the picture-book age which parents will chuckle over too." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p21 Ag 19 '45 130w

GREENE, JOSIAH E. Not in our stars. 588p $3 Macmillan
45-7612

The Weyland Meadows dairy is the real hero of this novel about life on a large Eastern dairy farm. The dairy is young and growing under the management of Ed Thomas whose ideas of expansion sometimes collide with the routemen's demands. The whole picture is made up of smaller pictures featuring all the people on the farm, their personal problems, and their labor difficulties.

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
Book Week p1 S 16 '45 1550w
Booklist 42:56 O 15 '45
Reviewed by Eleanor McNaught
Canadian Forum 25:218 D '45 490w

"Sergeant Greene knows whereof he writes and he writes well. He sees this problem from both sides and contends that the individual worker in our industrial system does not have sufficient responsibility and participation in the business which means his bread and butter."
+ Cath World 162:378 Ja '46 240w

"Sergeant Greene has written a book with a message—a bitter protest against social injustice and more heavily documented than anyone has a right to ask of a story. . . Sergeant Greene has made it seem convincing most of the way." Edward Skillin
Commonweal 42:581 S 28 '45 460w
Kirkus 13:279 Jl 1 '45 250w

"With biting veracity, a meticulous attention to details and a brilliant talent for revealing them, Josiah E. Greene probes into the life-stream of a community and comes up with a hard-hitting, shrewdly perceptive novel." Andrea Parke
+ N Y Times p6 S 16 '45 450w

"Mr. Greene, whose book won the Macmillan Century Award for the best novel submitted by a member of the armed forces, writes with enough dullness and doggedness to suggest that he wants to become another Theodore Dreiser. I can think of worse ambitions." Hamilton Basso
New Yorker 21:82 S 29 '45 140w

"The tangled threads of many lives make up the pattern of this long novel. Some of the threads are of intense interest. . . But other stories in this complex narrative are not interesting because the people are not important. There are episodes in the lives of tired, jaded, or sullen people. There are bickering and resentment, there is a good deal of smarting under small defeats. The business episodes are over-detailed, and the book is a third too long. There remain in this novel an honesty, a verisimilitude, and at times a penetration which take a complete hold of one's belief and one's sympathies." Walter Havighurst
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:14 S 29 '45 650w

"This is more than a thesis on labor relations. All the people involved are real, with individual and personal problems, although these are bound up with their jobs, as they are in most lives. The farm itself, with its rather drab atmosphere, has a depressing effect on them, although, if the novel's title means anything, it would seem to mean that the individuals who go under at Weyland Meadows would be equally unfit for life anywhere else. . . Sergt Greene has presented the facts with honesty and sympathy, and written a good story as well." W. M. W.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 16 '45 650w

Time 46:104 O 15 '45 110w

" 'Not in Our Stars' is a big book in physical size, in the range of its plan and substance, and in its insight into private worlds and the impacts of each on others within its orbit. It is a book to settle into with enjoyment, for there is room to know these people and to follow them through the gamut of events and emotions. One may hope that Sergeant Greene will soon return to civilian life to write another story as original and absorbing." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 16 '45 850w

Wis Lib Bul 41:101 O '45

"One of the notable novels of the year, vital, intense, dramatic, and mature. Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 35:382 winter '46 350w

GREENFIELD, GEORGE CHARLES. Desert episode. 130p $1.75 Macmillan

45-8183

In fiction form describes how two company commanders felt and what they thought about just before and during the battle of El Alamein.

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson

Book Week p3 S 16 '45 400w

Booklist 42:56 O 15 '45

"Within [its] selected frame, an amazing economy of language enables the author to pack more color, action and emotion into 130 pages than is often found in novels four times as long." Edmund Stevens

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 O 18 '45 600w

"Of its kind, well done."

+ Kirkus 13:41 F 1 '45 130w

"Highly recommended." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 70:305 Ap 1 '45 30w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 N 30 '45 150w

"The author, Captain Greenfield, fought at El Alamein and describes with considerable detail the daily troubles and philosophies of the men and officers of A Company and their part in the bloody attack. His story gives a realistic picture of one of the thousands of episodes which, combined, form the complete pattern of World War II." G. H. Copeland

+ N Y Times p6 S 16 '45 550w

"The much-too talky characters are drawn with a shaky hand and do not amount to a great deal."

New Yorker 21:86 S 15 '45 60w

"Has many excellent passages, telling mainly of general, rather than personal, experiences. George Greenfield relates, with vivid lucidity, the ardours of desert campaigning." John Hampson

+ Spec 175:578 D 14 '45 120w

"A very short novel, but its beauty and its importance are inversely proportionate to its length." R. A. Brown

+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 3 '45 240w

Times [London] Lit Sup p569 D 1 '45 360w

"Courage, as shifting and shapeless as African sands, and fear, ubiquitous as its flies, comprise the dual theme of George Greenfield's 'Desert Episode.' . . The answer to the question of Geoffrey Harrison's courage, or lack of it, is balanced so finely, and at the same time so logically, the reader still can give no definite answer. But he knows why he can't, and the subject itself has become a good deal clearer." Kenneth Fearing

+ Weekly Book Review p18 S 23 '45 500w

GREENWOOD, ERNEST. Experimental sociology; a study in method. (King's crown press bk) 163p pa $2.25 Columbia univ. press

307.2 Sociology—Methodology A45-1618

"This book is characteristic of a new trend in methodology—a trend in which the question 'Can sociology be an experimental science?' is waived in favor of the questions 'What forms do sociological experiments take, and by what criteria can they be evaluated?' The author's conception of a model experiment is one in which a causal hypothesis is tested through the comparison of two contrasting situations in which all but one relevant factor have been controlled." Am Soc R

Reviewed by Jessie Bernard

Am J Soc 51:72 Jl '45 2500w

"Students and teachers both will find in this book a valuable discussion of the basic problems of experimental design, resting on a critical examination of recent major efforts in sociological and social psychological experimentation." P. L. Kendall

+ Am Soc R 10:441 Je '45 900w

"The author has performed a real service in reconciling and equating different terminologies so that the basic logic of experimental method is revealed and clearly stated. . . This little volume will be a useful addition to the library of all research sociologists." F. S. Chapin

+ Ann Am Acad 239:223 My '45 400w

Social Studies 36:332 N '45 20w

Reviewed by Read Bain

Survey 81:277 O '45 600w

Wis Lib Bul 41:111 N '45

GREET, WILLIAM CABELL. World words; recommended pronunciations. 402p $3 Columbia univ. press

411.5 English language—Pronunciation. Names, Geographical. Names, Personal. World war, 1939- A44-2039

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"The material in World Words is as up to date as can be expected. Personages and places mentioned in the news since the outbreak of the war and up to the time the book was published may usually be found. The format of the book is satisfactory. Because it is limited in the number and types of words included, this book will not take the place of the more extensive pronouncing gazetteers; nor will it answer all types of pronunciation questions. It will, however, be a definite help to the general reader, or library, needing material on the current pronunciation of words, particularly personal and geographical names. Large libraries having many pronunciation questions will find the book a worthwhile quick reference work as well as a useful addition to their collection on pronunciation. It is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 16:31 Ap '45 850w

GREGG, RICHARD BARTLETT. Power of non-violence; with an introduction by Rufus M. Jones. new rev ed 253p $1.50 Fellowship of reconciliation (N Y)

172 Evil, Non-resistance to. Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand. Peace 45-15484

"This is a new edition of Mr. Gregg's book which was first published [a decade ago. Book Review Digest, 1934]. In view of the Second World War he has cut several chapters (among them . . . The Class Struggle), and written three new chapters on Persuasion, Discipline, and The Need for Discipline." Canadian Forum

---

Reviewed by Gwenyth Grube

Canadian Forum 25:50 My '45 300w

Foreign Affairs 24:161 O '45 40w

GRELLE, MRS LEONE (RICE). Country road. 81p $1.50 Macmillan

811 45-6865

"These seasonal lyrics deal with the Connecticut countryside, with such ordinary matters as pastures, walls, hills, roads, weather, plants, reservoirs, auctions and occasionally people." Springf'd Republican

Booklist 42:125 D 15 '45

"This small volume of poetry has a curious charm. . . These simple aloof lyrics have an insistence of their own, and will, I believe, give this volume an appreciative audience."

+ Kirkus 13:288 Jl 1 '45 70w

"Of a certainty the lover of New England's woods, fields, seasons and homes will enjoy these pastoral poems and find himself turning to them again and again in relaxing moments." C. M. Sauer

+ Springf'd Republican p4 S 15 '45 360w

Wis Lib Bul 41:99 O '45

GREVE, MRS ALICE WHEELER. Shadow on the plains; a novel of the wagon train of 1847 and the Whitman mission. 272p $2.50 Binfords

44-41890

"A story of the Old Oregon Trail and the tragic Whitman Mission at Waiilatpu. . . The episodes of the trail, the depredations of the Indians and the gruesome wholesale massacre are drawn from research. In comparison, the fictional events involving David Allison, Julie Cameron and the carefully drawn figure of the young Indian Five Crows seem almost quiet and tranquil." N Y Times

" 'Shadow on the Plains' combines Western adventure, romance and horror with interesting historical fact. . . Mrs. Greve, from early childhood a resident of Oregon, has strong feelings about several of the subjects touched upon in the book, and she expresses them. Many will agree with her opinions of the white men's treatment of the Indians, but her thinly veiled partisanship in the 'war' between the Catholic and Protestant missions may seem overly one-sided to some readers." Eleanor Gould

N Y Times p28 Ja 28 '45 160w

"The story is grim but inspiring—a worthy addition to the archives of the West." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p14 Ja 14 '45 100w

GREY, ROBIN. Puzzle in porcelain. 288p $2.50 Duell

45-9822

Detective story.

Kirkus 13:460 O 15 '45 60w

"The story has an ingenious plot well worked out." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p27 N 18 '45 140w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p43 N 11 '45 100w

GRIFFIN, ALEXANDER R. Out of carnage. 327p $3 Howell, Soskin

940.5475 World war, 1939-1945—Medical and sanitary affairs. Medicine, Military SG45-23

Popularly written articles on various aspects of the fight to heal the wounded, cure the sick and rescue the lost in World war II. Contents: The humane spirit in war; Soul surgery; Saving the wounded by air; Ice therapy; Treatment of war burns; Penicillin; Blood plasma; War on malaria; Typhus and DDT; Inventors and the war; Body armor; The rescue of men; How to survive.

"For anyone who hasn't followed closely the medical and technical developments during the war, there will be a great deal of interesting information in the book. The writing is mediocre." Will O'Neil

Book Week p11 S 16 '45 310w

Booklist 42:34 O 1 '45

"An informing and thrilling account of every life-saving technique in modern war."

+ Christian Century 62:1164 O 10 '45 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '45

"An encouraging book, written for, but never down to, the layman, it will appeal to any civilian who's interested either in one special service man or in the general welfare of all of them."

+ Kirkus 13:306 Jl 15 '45 150w

Library J 70:891 O 1 '45 40w

Reviewed by A. H. Weiler

N Y Times p12 S 23 '45 450w

"There is little that is new in the material and the book is rather like a number of others on the subject of medicine at war."

New Yorker 21:87 S 8 '45 40w

"Except as a somewhat lopsided bibliography of technical military-medical articles, 'Out of Carnage' fails to live up to its promising title, even if we accept it as an unfortunate victim of the conflict between printing schedules and the Jap's haste to surrender. As a post-war study of medicine's achievements in the war its value is, of course, virtually nil." A. Q. Maisel

Sat R of Lit 28:24 N 3 '45 700w

"In many ways this is an uneven book, indicating, perhaps, that it was hurriedly written. Some chapters are less well organized than others, in some the author seems entangled in a maze of data, a few are so technical as to be almost deadly to the general reader. Yet this is, from the scope and variety of its context, a valuable book. Parts of it make fascinating reading. Incidentally, it is a book in which many high school students will enjoy browsing." R. A. Brown

+ — Social Studies 37:40 Ja '46 360w

Reviewed by C. B. Moore

Springf'd Republican p4d N 4 '45 600w

"Mr. Griffin's stories are full of color and intimate personal detail, in the best style of a successful magazine writer. But his judgment is not always authoritative." Gerald Wendt

+ — Weekly Book Review p24 S 23 '45 900w

GRIFFIN, MARJORIE. How to cook. 223p il $1.98 Garden City pub. co.

641.5 Cookery

Not a book of recipes, but rather a compendium of methods, varying from how to mix cake batter to how to wash dishes and arrange food in a refrigerator.

Booklist 41:221 Ap 1 '45

"An excellent book for a beginning foods class." A. R. Neylan

+ J Home Econ 37:362 Je '45 100w

GRINKER, ROY RICHARD, and SPIEGEL, JOHN PAUL. Men under stress. 484p $5 Blakiston

616.85 Psychology, Pathological SG45-237

"[This work] is based on the authors' experiences with 'several thousand cases' of combat soldiers of the Army Air Forces and returnees suffering from war neuroses, hospitalized for rehabilitation. The book gives descriptions of the psychological aspects of war flying and fliers. It contains 65 case histories." New Repub

"Men Under Stress is an exceptionally well written and well organized book on the psychoneuroses precipitated by the stress associated with military life and aerial combat. The material for it was obtained through the personal experience of the authors in the treatment of many cases in the combat area and at a convalescent hospital in this country. . . The style and terminology are such that the intelligent layman as well as the physician should be able to read and enjoy one of the most significant books to come out of the war." J. M. Cunningham

+ Am J Pub Health 35:1229 N '45 360w

Booklist 42:91 N 15 '45

Reviewed by F. N. Trager

Nation 161:600 D 1 '45 300w

Reviewed by Frederic Wertham
New Repub 113:578 O 29 '45 420w

"The facts which Colonel Grinker and Major Spiegel have laid before us are of sovereign interest. They will be valued alike by flight surgeons, Army officers, psychiatrists, educators, parents and wives." Carl Binger
+ N Y Times p3 S 9 '45 1500w

"The authors present certain views on anxiety, which will interest their psychiatric colleagues, but which need checking. Other points will provoke discussion too, but essentially the main theses will seem sound and convincing." B. D. Lewin
+ — Sat R of Lit 28:36 N 3 '45 700w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:45 S '45 240w

GRINSTEAD, FRANCES. High road. 214p $2.50 Doubleday
45-1559

Regional novel, describing life in a Missouri backwoods region some thirty or forty years ago. It begins with the rivalry of two of the neighborhood young men, continues thru their marriages, the founding of their two families, and ends with Rove's conversion of his rival, Abner, at the point of a pistol.

"The novel is Miss Grinstead's first, and she has done well with it." F. N. Litten
+ Book Week p7 F 25 '45 500w
Booklist 41:322 Jl 1 '45
Bookmark 6:15 My '45

"The final clean, clear line which would make this novel stand above others of its kind is missed, but it takes its rightful place with a host of other very good 'firsts.'"
+ — Boston Globe p15 F 28 '45 110w
Kirkus 12:538 D 1 '44 170w

"Quietly entertaining with some of the appeal of the Chapman books. Recommended for older high school people and large collections." Eleanor Kidder
+ Library J 70:309 Ap 1 '45 70w

Reviewed by Richard Match
N Y Times p14 Mr 4 '45 180w

"Some relief is wanted from the narrow regionalism, especially when, as in 'The High Road' there is not much compulsion in the plot. Miss Grinstead's characters have superficial differences, true, but even the hero and his antagonist are essentially not far apart; they have the same underlying stubbornness, resentment, and fear. They stand out only in proportion to the amount of treatment received. . . The after-image of the story is not satisfaction but a blurred impression of Ozarkness." A. H. Fuller
— + Springf'd Republican p4d Mr 25 '45 480w

"A slight but colorful description of Ozark manners, with humor and charm for the sympathetic reader."
+ Time 45:100 F 19 '45 80w

"Without being either patronizing or naive, the author introduces primitive prejudices and intolerance into the picture keeping them in proper proportion. The story as a whole achieves a certain timeless quality in keeping with the life it portrays." Jennings Rice
+ Weekly Book Review p10 F 18 '45 350w

GRINSTEIN, HYMAN BOGOMOLNY. Rise of the Jewish community of New York, 1654-1860. 645p il $3 Jewish pub.
296 Jews in New York (city) 45-9927

First volume in a series on the social history of the beginnings of Judaism in New York. The period covered here is from 1654 to 1860. Contains chapters or sections on intermarriage, social welfare, synagogue organizations, culture, religious practice, dissent. Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Grinstein's book is furnished with maps and illustrations and contains numerous notes, an ample bibliography and an index. The author promises another volume, covering the nine decades from the Civil War to the Second World War. No future historian of New York will be able to overlook Dr. Grinstein's authoritative and colorful evaluation of Jewry's contributions to the rise of America's largest city." Alfred Werner
+ Christian Century 63:16 Ja 2 '46 850w

"This unimpassioned cyclopedia is written for Jews. Christians would have benefited by a glossary of such terms as Hazzanim, Shamash, Shoset, Alenu, etc." E. L. Keyes
Commonweal 43:316 Ja 4 '46 260w

GRINTER, LINTON ELIAS, and others. See Engineering preview

GRISCOM, LUDLOW. Modern bird study. 190p il maps $2.50 Harvard univ. press
598.2 Birds. Birds—Migration A45-3135

"In 1944 Ludlow Griscom, Harvard ornithologist and chairman of the board of the National Audubon Society, presented a series of lectures at the Lowell Institute. . . These lectures now have been expanded into a book. The emphasis is on modern. In streamlined form, the author presents the latest concepts of ornithology, often illustrating his points with specific instances recalled from his own vast experience as a field-observer of the birds. The different chapters of the book cover the capacity and intelligence of birds, their adaptability, their migrations and distribution, the basis of their classification and the rise of present-day field identification." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Jl 22 '45 200w
Booklist 42:33 O 1 '45
Bookmark 6:5 N '45
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '45

"The author of this compact study of certain aspects of bird life in the Western Hemisphere is authoritatively regarded as our foremost expert in field identification and one of the outstanding ornithologists of our time. The publication of a book by him is, therefore, a major event for bird students, and no reader of its pages will be disappointed." R. T. Bond
+ N Y Times p18 S 16 '45 650w

"Thoughtful and stimulating book."
+ Weekly Book Review p8 Jl 8 '45 180w

GRODZINSKI, PAUL. Diamond tools. 379p il $4.50 A. Smit & co, inc, 333 W 52 st, N.Y. 19
621.9 Diamonds. Tools 44-46548

"This work treats such topics as the use of diamonds and other precious stones in bearings, the use of the diamond in hardness testing, the truing of grinding wheels with diamond tools, the machining of glass and stone with diamond tools, rock drilling with diamond boring crowns, the drawing of fine wires in diamond dies, and the use of diamond dust as an abrasive. The discussion is semi-technical and is intended for engineers and others interested in the technical uses of diamonds and diamond tools. The text is based on the author's Diamant-Werkzeuge, Berlin, Krayn, 1936." N Y New Tech Bks

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '45
Library J 70:34 Ja 1 '45 90w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:6 Ja '45

GRONOWICZ, ANTONI. The Piasts of Poland [tr. by Joseph Vetter]. 199p il maps $2.50 Scribner
943.8 Poland—History 45-9938

A short history of Poland's struggle for independence, as told to his children by one Stephen Piast, who bears the name of the first dynasty of Polish kings. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Christian Century 62:1449 D 26 '45 70w

"A much needed book for reference shelves as well as current history reading."
+ Kirkus 13:439 O 1 '45 70w
Sat R of Lit 28:72 N 10 '45 40w

GRONOWICZ, ANTONI—Continued
"It is written in an easy informal style and aims at creating a sympathetic understanding of Poland's culture and of the enormous difficulties that have stood in the way of her becoming a strong and unified nation. The book is illustrated with attractive photographs." W. H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p6 N 13 '45 300w

"The feature of this history of Poland for young people—one that will keep them reading, once caught by the first chapter—is that it is uncompromisingly, burningly Polish. An American can never hope to understand this subject on intellectual grounds alone: he must feel the emotions involved, and the more he knows about the background of history on which they began to blaze, and the tenacity with which the various ideals that inspire them are maintained, the clearer his idea may be of what now goes on." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 N 18 '45 350w

GROSS, FELIKS. Crossroads of two continents; a democratic federation of east-central Europe. 162p maps $2 Columbia univ. press
321.021 International federation. Central Europe A45-1797

"A federal solution to the problems of Central and Eastern Europe has been advocated by such diverse personalities as Thomas G. Masaryk, Edward Benes, General Sikorski. . . Dr. Gross presents in detail the important current plans for a democratic federation of East-Central Europe and a European union, including the full text of thirteen documents dating from the Declaration of Common Aims of the Mid-European Nations, issued in 1918, down to present-day programs of the Danubian Club, the Central and Eastern European Planning Board, and other groups." Publisher's note

"An admirable and provocative study, based on wide research, which presents a clear and straightforward picture of its subject; it is also a history written by a man of sincerity of mind, from first-hand contact whenever possible, and where that was not possible the writing has been based on authentic documentary material." J. S. Roucek
+ Am Soc R 10:442 Je '45 400w

"Dr. Gross's volume is concise, and the student of postwar problems will find it of distinct value, particularly as it delineates the thinking of various European groups with respect to the 'crossroads of two continents'—the region of east-central Europe." H. N. Howard
+ Ann Am Acad 240:151 Jl '45 410w
Booklist 41:281 Je 1 '45
Christian Century 62:464 Ap 11 '45 210w
Christian Science Monitor p17 O 6 '45 90w
Foreign Affairs 23:697 Jl '45 50w

"Recommended for scholarly libraries." F. L. D. Goodrich
+ Library J 70:68 Ja 15 '45 110w

"The author makes a really valuable contribution to the understanding of the problem and the need for its early solution by the peoples themselves, with the cooperation of the great powers." B. J. Vlavianos
+ Nation 160:392 Ap 7 '45 490w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
N Y Times p17 Jl 8 '45 650w
Times [London] Lit Sup p579 D 8 '45 700w

GROSS, FELIKS. The Polish worker; a study of a social stratum [tr. Norbert Guterman]. 274p $3 Roy pubs.
331.8 Labor and laboring classes—Poland. Poland—Social conditions. World war, 1939—Economic aspects—Poland 45-5734

"Feliks Gross [was] for many years a labor lawyer and lecturer for Polish labor organizations. . . After tracing the origin and structure of the Polish proletariat, the author describes the standard of living of the Polish worker, which was among the lowest in Europe, and the surprisingly progressive Polish labor legislation inaugurated after the first World War. Excerpts from Polish workers' autobiographical notes, which convey a vivid picture of their life, and an analysis of the history and structure of the Polish labor movement offer valuable material to the student. A full account of the Nazi treatment of Polish workers and of the Polish underground struggle is added." N Y Times

Am Hist R 51:158 O '45 40w
Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 21 '45 130w

"This book is well written, well documented and partial. . . The final section of the book is a study of the Polish proletariat in its European framework. The historical facts presented are disappointingly meager and doctrinaire. As usual the Socialist philosophy of history screens out as useless and reactionary all human activities not infra-red. This makes the record simple, the author says it is sociological; certainly it is not history." John Monaghan
+ — Commonweal 43:76 N 2 '45 420w

"The author's attachment to the defunct London Polish Government is evident. In fact, despite his efforts for detachment, parts of 'The Polish Worker' read like an apology for Polish government policies. But it does valuable spadework in acquainting the non-Polish student with the essential factual background of the tragic history of Poland's workers." E. M. Vandenhaag
+ — N Y Times p24 Ag 12 '45 500w

"The several chapters of 'Polish Labor Under the Nazis' describe sorrows and sufferings of the Polish worker with the sternest objectivity. The author's recitation of one of the cruelest chapters of our time is as unemotional as a surgeon's clinical report. Yet one is stirred deeply by his description of suffering and tragedy. One leaves these chapters with the hope that this martyred country will find in the post-war world the peace and stability which its cruel sufferings have more than earned." Philip Taft
Weekly Book Review p24 O 14 '45 500w

GROSS, MILT. Dear dollink; momma writes to her Frankie at the front. 160p il $2 Putnam
817 Humor A45-5411

Letters written in the Bronx English of Momma to her son in training camp. In them she discusses the love affairs of Shoiley, Uncle Pincus and his foibles, and Mister Popkin who is so "epsom-minded."

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p5 S 2 '45 310w
Kirkus 13:264 Je 15 '45 90w

"With a glossary and a 'pony' persevering readers will get hearty belly laughs out of Momma's epistles. As for me, I prefer books written in a language that I can easily understand. I missed the poetic import of the Odyssey because my Greek was not fluent. Even swift-footed Achilles lost his speed by the time I found out what his ever accompanying adjective meant. Horace was odious to me because I was ignorant. This is precisely what happened when I sat down expecting to enjoy 'Dear Dollink.' I like my humor spontaneous." S. J. Woolf
Sat R of Lit 28:32 S 22 '45 300w
Weekly Book Review p16 O 14 '45 110w

GROSSMAN, JEAN SCHICK (ALICE BARR GRAYSON, pseud). Do you know your daughter? a discussion of the difficulties of growing up. 306p $3.50 Appleton-Century
136.775 Girls. Adolescence 44-47920

"A book based on the letters received by the department which the author conducts in the magazine Calling all girls. The response to this department (about 500 letters are received each month) has revealed the need girls feel for some one to confide in outside the family circle and has brought to light the rather universal nature of their problems." Wis Lib Bul

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p4 Ja 21 '45 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '45

"The letters are charming, humorous, pathetic, and they bring out the doubts, fears, and confusion of this age group. Mrs. Grayson's discussion is clear and intelligible. While she is gentle with parents, she is firm in pointing out their weaknesses in the treatment of their daughters. She gives an excellent presentation of the adolescent character, yet throughout the book she stresses individual differences and the importance of looking back to the needs and experiences of earlier childhood." G. H. Taylor
+ Survey 81:198 Jl '45 300w
Wis Lib Bul 41:16 Ja '45

GROSZ, GEORGE. Drawings, with an introd. by the artist. 14p 52pl $12 Bittner, H.

741.91 Drawings 44-51230

"Fifty-two plates, most of them from the artist's recent production, but, to some extent illustrating his development. They include cartoons, portraits, landscapes, nudes and studies and pages from his sketchbooks. Three plates were handcolored by the Charlize Brakely Studio under George Grosz's personal supervision." (Publisher's Weekly) The author is a modern German artist, who came to this country in 1932.

"All but seven [of the drawings] are among the work done in this country since 1932. Now a soft, even fuzzy, pencil has replaced the earlier exasperated pen, and with this increasing technical gentleness goes an amelioration of content. The apocalyptic visions of contemporary society have disappeared in favor of studies of landscape, foliage, drapery, of the model and the lay figure which are, to say the least, placid. Only in an occasional study of the dummy, as in the clothed figure whose lifeless hands hold a cocked revolver and shotgun, is there a hint of the implications lurking behind the most ordinary manifestation. Almost one might be persuaded that Grosz was here merely providing exercises for his students in the variety of pencil surface change of texture and direction of massed lines." G. H. Hamilton
+ N Y Times p3 Ap 29 '45 1800w

"The introduction is brief and a little didactic, but the fifty-two plates (three handcolored) are extremely fine reproductions."
+ — New Yorker 20:71 Ja 27 '45 30w
U S Quarterly Bkl 1:4 Mr '45 60w

"George Grosz was famous for several reasons: for his drawings of World War I, the most remarkable works of their kind since Goya; for his murderous attacks on the rising Nazis, and for his portrayal, in line and color, of the social degradation of Germany, perhaps the most appalling and dreadful indictment of the leaders of a nation ever rendered in the language of art. . . In referring to the abstract quality of his more recent work, Grosz does not mean that he had reduced objects to geometrical patterns after the modernist formula; he simply means that his drawings are devoid of political and satirical implications. . . The book shows the effects of a peaceful environment on an artist whose fame was originally founded on violence and despair." Thomas Craven
+ Weekly Book Review p3 D 24 '44 550w

GROTH, JOHN. Studio: Europe; il. by the author; with an introduction by Ernest Hemingway. 282p $3.50 Vanguard

940.548 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 45-9898

In text and drawings this American magazine artist describes his experiences in Europe from the landing in Normandy a few days after D-Day, to the arrival in Berlin. At the liberation of Paris Mr Groth found himself the first correspondent present, so he filed the first story and thus became a writer.

"For the most part the book is simply and colorfully written. High spots are his visit to Picasso and a romantic interlude with the young French student, Anne-Marie. Though some of the drawings for the book have the perfunctory look which sometimes comes of hasty on-the-spot work, the bulk of his sketches are carried by the power of the artist's line and characterization and his fine feeling for action. There are enough of these drawings scattered through it to make of 'Studio: Europe' a handsome piece of book manufacture." Aaron Bohrod
+ Book Week p4 N 18 '45 450w
Booklist 42:125 D 15 '45
Kirkus 13:354 Ag 15 '45 210w

"His enthusiasm to produce a good story has led him to introduce some highly questionable passages and to deviate, perhaps, from the strict truth. Handsomely illustrated with author's sketches. Important war book." L. R. Etzkorn
+ — Library J 70:977 O 15 '45 140w

"He tells the story as the observer of a dark and evil adventure, lightened frequently by humor and pleasure but still macabre. He tells it as a man of simple good-will but a man having also a degree of sophistication. . . Never was there more motion in the figures of men dashing for shelter or for an objective, never more dull fatigue in huddled groups of soldiers or refugees waiting for whatever was next. In both prose and drawings Mr. Groth has produced a warm and vigorous view of Americans at war." C. B. Palmer
+ N Y Times p6 D 30 '45 450w

"As a writer, Mr. Groth is not precisely first-rate, but there is a certain artlessness about him . . . that is rather charming. The pictures are vivid and evocative when the slap-dash doesn't spill over."
+ — New Yorker 21:124 N 17 '45 90w

"I have often repeated that all my artist friends say that I write well while my writer friends prefer my drawings. Perhaps that is why I like the text of John Groth's 'Studio: Europe' better than I do his sketches which illustrate it. And that may also be the reason why Ernest Hemingway in his Introduction to the book stresses the excellence of the pictures." S. J. Woolf
Sat R of Lit 28:93 D 1 '45 600w

"It would, indeed, be hard to name anything yet written which gives a better idea of actual warfare as it occurs to the small individuals involved in it, whether as soldier or civilian. A few of the best anecdotes concern animals, a mother donkey under shellfire, the rabbit hiding in a church, and a preposterous cow whose carcass we see incredibly pendant in a tree. But the volume is, especially, a tribute to and a portrait of the soldier, of all sorts of soldiers, shown with candor and respect as they really are." Iris Barry
+ Weekly Book Review p3 N 18 '45 700w

GRUBER, FRANK. Silver Tombstone. 185p $2 Farrar

45-8409

Detective story.

Book Week p35 N 11 '45 150w
Kirkus 13:382 S 1 '45 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p30 N 4 '45 130w

"A story which jumps between Los Angeles and Tombstone, Arizona, and apparently isn't intended to make much sense. Mr. Gruber has his audience, though, no doubt about it."
New Yorker 21:108 N 3 '45 80w

"Grade-A Gruber."
+ Sat R of Lit 28:37 O 27 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p20 O 21 '45 130w

GRUMBINE, E. EVALYN (MRS ANDREW MCNALLY). Patsy succeeds in advertising. 264p $2 Dodd

44-47310

Sequel to Patsy Breaks Into Advertising (Book Review Digest, 1940). Patsy comes to New York from Chicago as advertising director of a national magazine. She leaps joyously into her work, meets setbacks and survives them. Later comes a trip to Arizona, California, Oregon and Washington. As the book closes she is assistant publisher of her magazine. Vocational story for older girls.

GRUMBINE, E. E.—Continued

"Author knows her field and in her desire to draw on her own experiences has sacrificed her story and style to her zeal to share the information and her advertising philosophy. Will be read by those really interested in advertising as a career. Secondary purchase." E. A. Groves
+ Library J 70:71 Ja 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 29 '45 270w

GUERARD, ALBERT JOSEPH. Maquisard; a Christmas tale. 165p $2 Knopf 45-35196

When the story opens liberation has already come to France, but there are still Germans in isolated sections of the country. A brigade of Maquis is holding out in one such section. The central character is Jean, whose wife has been shot as a hostage, and whose children have become a dim memory. On a bleak Christmas in a little village an American officer who had joined the brigade managed to bring Jean's four children to him. Jean's salvation is assured.

Booklist 42:76 N 1 '45

"A nice job, with much that is touching and appealing, though the foreign derivate is apt to predicate against its popularity."
+ Kirkus 13:323 Ag 1 '45 170w

"I do not know whether 'Maquisard' was actually written on the scene, but certainly it was written with no time or space for reflection, and I take it to be either a literary exercise—that is, an effort on Mr. Guerard's part to keep his hand in, to remember that he was a writer—or else a tribute exacted by association so personally felt that it denies one proper literary distance; or perhaps it was both. At any rate, the context and obviously modest intent of the performance demand that we suspend conventional judgment on it." Diana Trilling
Nation 161:474 N 3 '45 240w

"In surprising contrast with The Hunted, Guerard's somber and violent novel of peacetime America, this tale of war-torn France is quietly written and light in spirit."
+ New Repub 113:877 D 24 '45 60w

"A story that is not so much a novel as a tender and heart-felt salute to the gallant. . . The story of [Jean's] salvation is not, it might as well be said, a very original or vigorous piece of narrative. The pieces are pushed into place with the neatness of the sentimental novel, and, excepting Jean, the people in it are rather types than characters. . . But about the character of Jean and the life from which he and his fellow-maquisards briefly emerge between battles, there is, one suspects, nothing at all contrived, and therein is the appeal of Mr. Guerard's unpretentious tribute." J. K. Hutchens
+ — N Y Times p6 O 21 '45 500w

"An authentic and compact narrative, a little stolid but as earnest and deserving as its subject."
+ New Yorker 21:97 O 27 '45 110w

"[The] atmosphere and the plot's exposition are done magnificently by Mr. Guerard. There is never one grain too much, in these opening chapters, of his personal sympathies, and never one grain too little. The directness of such first-hand experience as was his is never directly apparent in his writing. He knows his Frenchmen as very few non-French writers do these days." Robert Pick
+ Sat R of Lit 28:14 N 10 '45 800w

Springf'd Republican p4d D 16 '45 300w

"It is no small achievement to maintain so strong a sense of ultimate rightness in an atmosphere so turbulent, shot through as it is with flashes of remembered pain—the unendurable pain of the beloved. To do so calls not only for conviction. It demands the delicate and disciplined art of nothing-too-much, of words that are the bony structure of thought, of simplicity that holds emotion lightly, firmly, in control. It calls for gifts that France has long held in store for her writers. Writing in France in her hour of trial and of judgment, the younger Gúerard draws upon an ancient heritage—the power of so saying something that though it may be quoted it cannot be said easily in any other way." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p3 O 21 '45 750w

GUERARD, ALBERT LEON. Europe free and united. 206p $2.50 Stanford univ. press 940.531444 Reconstruction (1939-)—Europe. Europe—Politics A45-1804

"An American citizen for many years, with a background of European training and experience, Guerard is peculiarly qualified to analyze European problems for American readers. His proposal for European union rests on a concept of nationalism as a thing of the spirit, not of geography. He uses the example of the United States to prove that people of diverse geographical, ethnic and religious background can live together helpfully as friends: an ideal only partially realized, but one few Americans would care to disavow. . . Guerard believes that a united Europe built on a broad conception of nationalism—divorced from imperialism in all its forms—is not only possible but necessary." (Book Week) Partial contents: The European problem and American policy; Can nationalism learn the ways of peace?; Divided we fall; The European nation and a people's peace; The three great problems: first, Is England in Europe?; The three great problems; second, Is the Soviet Union in Europe?; The three great problems: third, Germany and the European commonwealth; The future of the European union.

Reviewed by D. B. McCown
Am Pol Sci R 39:1218 D '45 550w

"Professor Guérard neglects few problems of social import in this book. Its broad scope, the wealth of suggestions, and the boldness of the author's approach are stimulating. Unfortunately, the impression cannot be dismissed that the author is working in a vacuum and not in a world of complex realities." Emil Lengyel
+ — Ann Am Acad 240:147 Jl '45 350w

"The most suggestive and compelling discussion of postwar European problems I have yet read. Its proposals are revolutionary, as the proposals embodied in the Declaration of Independence and the Federal Constitution were revolutionary. They are also concrete, carefully considered, and as Guerard presents them eminently sensible and persuasive." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 Mr 25 '45 550w

Booklist 41:252 My 1 '45

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek
Commonweal 42:77 My 4 '45 450w

Foreign Affairs 23:688 Jl '45 60w

Reviewed by G. A. Borgese
Nation 160:654 Je 9 '45 1450w

"The first criticism that must be made of Mr. Guérard's analysis lies in the observation that political solutions do not flow inevitably or easily from the fact—if fact it be—of cultural unity. . . Then, too, it is possible that Mr. Guérard has over-simplified the nature of nationalism. . . Mr. Guérard admits that Toryism possesses one great advantage: 'it exists,' whereas 'democracy has not yet thought out a definite doctrine,' but nowhere does he give sufficient weight to the orneriness of human nature and never does he seem dismayed by the magnitude of the task before us. May we not properly ask: If Europe is sick unto death, and if democracy is without definite doctrine and therefore without a single will, whence will come the moral and political resources, in Europe or in America, to provide fulcrum and leverage powerful enough to move the world toward health and sanity? . . It should not be inferred that Mr. Guérard is a simple-minded

Utopian. He is an internationalist in a hurry, and impatience has tempted him to take a dim view of the mess we are in. Nevertheless, despite marginal eccentricity, his book is witty, readable and provocative." R. N. Kelly

— + New Repub 112:560 Ap 23 '45 1100w

"'This is an eccentric book. Mr. Guerard flits from subject to subject with breath-taking pace. Yet at the same time, if one can have patience with the nervous style, it is a stimulating, provocative book. Mr. Guérard presents his point of view with great force and on occasion with brilliance and charm. Sometimes the humor becomes thin." L. L. Snyder

+ — Pol Sci Q 60:589 D '45 750w

"This challenging book represents the crystallization in one volume of ideas expressed by the author, over a period of several years, in numerous articles. Written with an awareness of the political, psychological, and sociological differences between America and Europe, for the American reader, it combines journalistic liveliness with solid scholarship."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:28 Je '45 200w

"Professor Guérard is wise. He is an American, but with roots struck deep in French, British and European culture. He writes with thoughtful insight and a persuasive felicity of style. There is much that is true in his analysis of nationalism—the core of the dilemma—as a creative force which, properly directed, can serve the ends of peace no less than those of war. Unfortunately, one can only regret that there is so little in the contemporary scene to suggest that there is even a remote chance of his moderate and civilized counsel being accepted." Walter Millis

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 15 '45 1100w

GUGGENHEIMER, RICHARD HENRY. Sight and insight; a prediction of new perceptions in art. 246p pl $3 Harper

701 Esthetics 45-4033

"The main thesis of this work is that, since our major sentiency is ocular, we should bestir ourselves to a livelier, fuller, more mature capacity for the visual arts. There are many ways of seeing, as there are many ways of being. There are ways of learning to see more and to see better as there are ways of learning to be more and be better. . . If a man can learn to see more than he now sees, and see further, and see more beauty, and see more clearly the shape of his own nature and destiny, then he should not hesitate to start learning. . . It is expected of most works on aesthetics that they will seek to define the beautiful. . . What this work does seek to define are the human virtues which it considers essential to the creation and appreciation of fine art." Pref

Reviewed by T. C. Petersen
Cath World 162:86 O '45 750w

Reviewed by Arnold Isenberg
New Repub 113:28 Jl 2 '45 550w

GUMPERT, MARTIN. Hahnemann, the adventurous career of a medical rebel [tr. by Claud W. Sykes]. 251p $3 Fischer, L.B.

B or 92 Hahnemann, Samuel

Biography of Samuel Hahnemann, founder of the school of homeopathy. Born in 1755 and educated at Leipzig and Vienna, Dr Hahnemann passed most of his life wandering from one German city to another, always in trouble with the orthodox members of his profession. In his old age he married a second time, a French woman many years his junior, and passed his last years in France, covered with honors. Bibliography.

Reviewed by Israel Davidsohn
Book Week p12 Ja 13 '46 270w

"This is a sound and solid piece of work."

+ Kirkus 13:329 Ag 1 '45 190w

"Interesting and well-written biography. . . Of limited appeal, but an important contribution to the history of medicine. Recommended for large libraries." S. E. Sherman

+ Library J 70:819 S 15 '45 110w

New Repub 113:813 D 10 '45 120w

"Dr. Gumpert is fascinated by the personality and experiences of his persecuted and ostracized medical rebel. His enthusiasm for his subject is both contagious and easily understandable. . . The readers of Dr. Gumpert's book—and they should be many—will get most out of it only if they themselves supply what the author has largely omitted, a constant comparison between the events of a hundred years ago and those which are occurring under our eyes." A. Q. Maisel

+ Sat R of Lit 29:16 Ja 19 '46 850w

"A painstaking biography of the eccentric, brilliant scholar, doctor and linguist who fathered homeopathy. Unfortunately, Dr Gumpert's style is far from stimulating and the long story of 50-odd years of medical pioneering and research, as well as actual persecution, lacks the high lighting which would have imparted vigor to what should have been a dramatic and interesting biography." L. S. Munn

— + Springf'd Republican p4 N 10 '45 440w

GUNN, NEIL MILLER. Silver darlings. 384p $3 Stewart [10s 6d Faber]

45-35123

Novel based on the life of the fishing villages on the uppermost part of the Scottish mainland, where some of the displaced crofters went to live and attempt to earn their living fishing for herring—the silver darlings of the title. It is the story of Catrine whose husband was killed by a press gang, and her son Finn, and of Roddie who loved Catrine for many years.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p3 Je 24 '45 600w
Booklist 41:340 Jl 15 '45
Bookmark 6:15 N '45

"Mr. Gunn has put his heart and his special knowledge into this book, so that it is full-packed with hazards and adventures, with much that is unfamiliar and much of simple daily living." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 28 '45 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '45

"There's some rarely beautiful writing—Neil Gunn writes from inner knowing of his people and his soil."

+ Kirkus 13:140 Ap 1 '45 250w

"The glitter and stir of this activity, the exploits of the men venturing into dangerous waters to trap the 'silver darlings,' are epic material. Mr. Gunn comes close to making the most of it, writing in a fluent, vivid style, covering a long tract of time with easy narrative power, describing the effects of the plague, the sea, the press-gang on people whose emotions he understands and records with sensitivity." William Poster

+ New Repub 113:506 O 15 '45 700w

"It is all good stuff, this writing, and of remarkably even quality. It is honest, sound, sturdy, like the men and women of the tale. Successful as it is in all its parts, however, it seems to me that it is less successful as a whole. Incident after incident claims the reader's interest, without contributing materially to the development of a larger pattern; the minor rhythms do not join and swell into major rhythms, as they do, for example, in 'The Growth of the Soil,' to which 'The Silver Darlings' has been favorably compared by one London critic." B. R. Redman

+ — Sat R of Lit 28:28 Ag 4 '45 550w

"The story strides from one exciting episode to the next, and in describing life on the open sea the author is really a master. In addition he has written with loving accuracy the details of life ashore. His account of the Great Plague which devastated the coast is frightening realism. Whether writing of sea or land, he has given to his subject an affection and insight which bring added pleasure to an extremely readable book." H. J. Sloan

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 24 '45 330w
Wis Lib Bul 41:101 O '45

GUNN, NEIL MILLER. Young Art and Old Hector. 255p $2.50 Stewart
44-40219

A small Scottish highland community is the scene of these short stories about a small boy, aged eight, and his greatest friend, Hector, a kindly and understanding Scot, aged eighty.

Booklist 41:140 Ja 1 '45
Bookmark 6:18 Ja '45

"Neil Gunn has had an erratic career and never won the recognition his unique power deserves. He's not everyman's meat—but for those who enjoy the slightly fey quality, the intangible charm of his writing, there should be at least some portion of the Nathan market."
+ — Kirkus 12:471 O 15 '44 170w

"It would appeal to the unusually imaginative child, but, on the whole, would be more appreciated by adults than by children. Recommended only for large collections." G. E. Joline
+ Library J 70:120 F 1 '45 50w

"Young Art and Old Hector is a rather light work about the relationship between an eight-year-old farm boy and an eighty-year-old sage. This slight subject is supplemented by folklore and descriptions of some of the highlights in the humdrum existence of the crofting community. Nevertheless, Gunn manages to pierce far enough into his material to be interesting, to write engagingly and to reward his readers with frequent flashes of insight into perennial conflicts."
+ — New Repub 112:366 Mr 12 '45 120w

"There is the fine breath of the Scotch Highlands in the novel. The telling has the feeling of Scotch speed, without being cumbered with dialect. It is a grand story of a few months in the life of a small boy whose shyness, sensibility, ambition and heart are cannily understood and revealed. The dedication of the book is 'For the Woman of the House.' But there's no good reason why the man of the house shouldn't be equally enchanted with it. Young Art will linger long and cozily in the memory." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p26 Ja 28 '45 320w

" 'Young Art and Old Hector' is not for the many, perhaps; but for readers who delight in the Scottish character, its dour humor, its independence, its forthrightness and especially its scorn of laws which impinge on individual rights, it is a book to treasure and reread." M. D.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 21 '45 330w

"Through episodes so closely woven that while each could be separately printed they make together a continuous narrative, one comes closer to two human beings than real life permits, and if on the last page they must be left, it is well to leave them utterly happy." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 28 '45 500w
Wis Lib Bul 41:29 F '45

GUNN, SELSKAR MICHAEL, and PLATT, PHILIP SKINNER. Voluntary health agencies; an interpretive study. 364p $3 Ronald 361.1 Medical social work. U.S.—Sanitary affairs
SG45-296

"An authoritative and inclusive survey in summary of the more than 20,000 private health agencies throughout the U.S., which is the result of a study in progress since 1941. Local, state, and national agencies are appraised, the role of boards, executives, and voluntary workers is examined, and a set of strong recommendations for greater unity of organization and purpose is advanced." Booklist

Booklist 42:105 D 1 '45
Reviewed by R. P. Lane
Nation 161:470 N 3 '45 400w

GUNTHER, JOHN. Troubled midnight. 298p $2.50 Harper
45-1394

Romance of the present, involving Leslie, a beautiful American woman, who goes to Constantinople as a member of the Lend-lease commission, after the break-up of her marriage. In Constantinople two men fall in love with her: an attractive Nazi agent, and a dependable English intelligence officer. After the death of one of them, the other is badly wounded, and it is only then that Leslie discovers where her real happiness lies.

"It is a book which you will read with avid interest from beginning to end, if only to confirm an early suspicion that Gunther's latest project is just another spy thriller, and a cheesy one at that." Russell Maloney
Book Week p6 F 18 '45 500w
Booklist 41:197 Mr 1 '45

" 'The Troubled Midnight' is no ordinary spy story, even if it does exercise your old-fashioned credulity—the one with the two-way stretch. . . Gunther's book is rather a compound of passion and politics in equal parts, often so piping hot as to be read with a pot-holder on each hand." R. M.
Boston Globe p13 F 7 '45 330w
Cath World 161:91 Ap '45 180w
Reviewed by R. S. Myers
Churchman 159:15 Ap 15 '45 180w

"Needless to say there is quite a bit of what can best be described as automatic sex in 'The Troubled Midnight.' The characters are both strangely pure and strangely impure, and we fail to recognize in them any of our own humanity. What is it which irresistibly leads newspapermen to want to be novelists? The urge must be very strong. In Mr. Gunther's case, it is a downright drag, since this is his second 'first novel.' His first—now seemingly forgotten by everyone including himself—was published in 1927 and was called 'The Red Pavilion.' For this information I am indebted to Mr. Christopher Morley, who assures me that the first first novel was something awful too." H. L. Binsse
— Commonweal 41:525 Mr 9 '45 330w

"Shock technique for main plot—contradicted by rather old-fashioned handling of the flashbacks for successive characters—makes this, in the final analysis, rather a machine-made product. We prefer Gunther in his normal role."
Kirkus 12:537 D 1 '44 210w

"Good Grade 'B' movie material." H. G. Kelley
Library J 70:117 F 1 '45 90w
Reviewed by J. D. Beresford
Manchester Guardian p3 S 28 '45 120w
Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 160:284 Mr 10 '45 90w

"Despite its grab-bag plot and its incredible purples, it manages to be nearly always readable—and even engrossing." William Du Bois
— + N Y Times p7 F 4 '45 750w

"I'm afraid that most adult readers will find 'The Troubled Midnight' somewhat less moving than 'The Night Before Christmas.' It is also much less agreeable to read." Hamilton Basso
— New Yorker 20:81 F 10 '45 700w

"With all his great gifts of observation, imagination, and narration, Mr. Gunther has written a novel which lacks the traits of mature expertness and independence so characteristic, for instance, of his 'Inside Europe.' This does not mean that 'The Troubled Midnight' will not satisfy and even enrapture a vast number of readers. When you don't care too much about a strictly original plot but relish, instead, fast action and melodramatic suspense and a colorful background . . . then Mr. Gunther has written the book for you, and it would be unfair to disclose the turns of the plot. Go out and get your copy today!" F. C. Weiskopf
— + Sat R of Lit 28:9 F 10 '45 700w
Time 45:98 Mr 5 '45 30w
Times [London] Lit Sup p449 S 22 '45 380w

"Free, tolerant Americans, brave, rigid Englishmen, quick-witted French, highly trained, but essentially stupid Germans, not to speak of the Turks, Poles, Greeks and Hungarians—all these nationalities are herded together in the pages of a book which combines turgid romance with an enlightened political philosophy." Virgilia Sapieha
Weekly Book Review p4 F 4 '45 700w

GUSTAFSON, RALPH. Flight into darkness; poems. 96p $2 Pantheon bks.
811 44-47939

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

Reviewed by F. W. Dupee
Nation 161:210 S 1 '45 210w

"Mr. Gustafson has Hopkins a little too much on his mind, he is determined to make things very hard for himself, and here we have tortured syntax, tortured order, tortured everything—anything, almost, if only to avoid the merely straightforward and formal and simple. But Mr. Gustafson has an eye, and he loves words and the feel of language, and for all its strainings after effect, this is an unusual first book." Conrad Aiken
— + New Repub 112:453 Ap 2 '45 100w

"In general I like his clearest poems least; and I find a steady rise in quality in reading back from the latter end of his book to its beginning. . . Throughout his best poems the fascination of their content depends upon the controlled clash and resolution of these inter-relevant possibilities. The future of this Canadian poet should be well worth watching." F. C. Flint
+ N Y Times p10 F 25 '45 550w

"The embarrassing lack of something to say is more noticeable in poems on general themes—death, the nobility of Man, etc.—than in poems on experience of nature, events of the war, and such specific topics. Indeed, his poems about the war are the excellently pointed and finely sympathetic observations of an imaginative bystander. He has a poignant and well controlled elegiac note, perhaps the most pleasing strain in these poems. I look forward with pleasure to the poems which he will write when he has achieved more artistic self-reliance." Darrel Abel
+ — Poetry 66:100 My '45 420w

"'Flight Into Darkness' contains a sensitive Canadian's reactions to this present day chaotic world—reactions passionately, ironically and realistically expressed. This is a volume for readers who delight in discovering modern poetry with singing strength, original phrasing, excellent technic and fullness of vocabulary." C. M. Sauer
Springf'd Republican p4 F 19 '45 400w

GUTKIND, E. A. Creative demobilisation. (Int. lib. of sociology and social reconstruction) 2v 331;280p il maps $12 Oxford [ea 21s Routledge]
338.91 Economic policy. Social conditions. Regional planning. City planning [43-9043]

"These two volumes, the first written and the second edited by Gutkind, attempt to set forth principles and a program of national planning for Great Britain after the war. Volume I deals with the meaning of national planning, its importance in the demobilization period, and the consequent planned reorganization of agriculture, industry, the community, and ecological aspects of population in England, Wales, and Scotland. . . Volume II contains case studies for problems and areas." Ann Am Acad

Am Soc R 10:576 Ag '45 60w

"Volume I is not well thought out, showing the influence of war conditions on scientific work. Volume II is much more concrete and helpful. Volume I repeatedly contrasts planning to its alleged opposite, laissez faire, overlooking the fact that the real problem is not of those alternatives but of efficient versus inefficient publication." C. C. Zimmerman
Ann Am Acad 240:168 Jl '45 650w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Mr 11 '45 270w

"Unlikely to gain general acceptance even among hard-pressed journalists. There is about it an abstract pretentiousness which unhappily pervades much of the text covered by the title and which thereby mars what might otherwise have been a useful guide to a still inadequately charted tract of social science." D. S.
Manchester Guardian p3 Je 16 '43 360w

"Vast questions are raised, immense terms are used, but it is very difficult to extract from the book any other conclusions than that ill-balanced communities do harm, and well-balanced communities good, and that, if we have the will to do so, we can plan a well-balanced community which enjoys open spaces, healthy dwellings, clean air and a good job. I am not convinced that it ought to take two rather large volumes to arrive at these results." H. J. Laski
New Statesman & Nation 25:342 My 22 '43 420w

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman
Survey 81:275 O '45 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p232 My 15 '43 1000w

H

HAAS, LOUIS JAMES. Art metal work and jewelry. 3d ed rev & enl 59p il pa $2 The author, 3 Gedney terrace, White Plains, N.Y.
739.2 Metal work. Jewelry 45-6904

